It is the power of him who has the right of judging', Gliptis v. Fifteen Oil Co., 204 La. 896, 16 So.2d 471, 477; the power of judicatories and courts, McGowin v. MCGowin, 122 Fla. 394, 165 So. 274, 275, 276; 'Arganbright v. Good, 46 Cal.App.2d Supp. 877, 116 P.2d 186; Shaffer v. Bank, 201 N.C. 415, 160 S.E. 481, 482. It is power conferred by the Constitution or by law, Corby v. Dooley, 313 Ill. App. 509, 40 N.E.2d 581, 584; National Life Co. v. Rice, 140 Tex. 315, 167 S.W.2d 1021, 1024; State ex rel. Andrews v. Superior Court of Maricopa County, 39 Ariz. 242, 5 P. 2d 192, 194.

It is of three kinds, of the subject-matter, of the person, and to render particular judgment which was given. City of Phcenix v. Rodgers, 44 Ariz. 40, 34 P.2d 385, 388. The word may include or refer to jurisdiction of particular case, Brown v. State, 219 Ind. 251, 37 N.E.2d 73, 78, 137 A.L.R. 679; or jurisdiction of subject matter, Manning v. Baxter, 281 Ky. 659, 136 S.W.2d 1074, 1076; jurisdiction of subject matter and of the person, Stewart v. Sampson, 285

Ky. 447, 148 S.W.2d 278, 280, 281; Moffatt v. Cassimus, 28 Ala.App. 582, 190 So. 297, 298; State Board of Dental Examiners v. Savelle, 90 Colo. 177, 8 P.2d 693, 695; jurisdiction of subject matter, of the person, and to render the particular judgment which was given, Wall v. Superior Court of Yavapai County, 53 Ariz. 344, 89 P.2d 624, 628. Or it may mean only venue, Fiolat v. Minnesota-Atlantic Transit Co., D.C.Minn., 31 F.Supp. 219, 220. It does not depend either upon the regularity of exercise of power to hear and determine or upon correctness or rightfulness of decision made, Mattice v. Kingston Trust Co., 33 N.Y.S.2d 799, 801, 178 Misc. 256; Thompson v. Terminal Shares, C.C.A.Mo., 89 F.2d 652, 655; Klancher v. Anderson, 113 Colo. 478, 158 P.2d 923, 925; or on the ability of the judge to reason correctly or to act incorruptibly, In re Gardiner's Estate, 45 Cal.App.2d 559, 114 P.2d 643, 645.

The amount claimed in good faith is the test of jurisdiction, Gray v. Blight, C.C.A.Colo., 112 F.2d 696, 700; Schwartz v. California Claim Service, 52 Cal.App.2d 47, 125 P.2d 883, 889.

"Jurisdiction of subject-matter" means jurisdiction of class of cases to which particular case belongs. Honea v. Graham, Tex.Civ.App., 66 S.W.2d 802, 804; McFarlin v. McFarlin, 384 Ill. 428, 51 N.E.2d 520, 521; Ferree v. Ferree, 285 Ky. 825, 149 S.W.2d 719, 721; the nature of the cause of action and relief sought, Mid-City Bank & Trust Co. v. Myers, 343 Pa. 465, 23 A.2d 420, 423; Wilson v. State Highway Commissioner, 174 Va. 82, 4 S.E.2d 746, 751; or the amount for which a court of limited jurisdiction is authorized to enter judgment, Moffatt v. Cassimus, 28 Ala. App. 582, 190 So. 297, 298. It is power to: adjudge concerning general question involved, Parker Bros. v. Fagan, C.C.A.Fla., 68 F.2d 616, 617; Balzer v. Pyles, 350 Ill. 344, 183 N.E. 215, 217; In re Gibson's Will, Sur., 40 N.Y.S.2d 727, 733; adjudge whether facts make proper case for jurisdictional consideration by judge, Behee v. Beem, 156 Kan. 115, 131 P.2d 675, 677: Montgomery v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A.I11., 83 F.2d 758, 761; deal with general abstract question, to hear particular facts in any case relating to such question, and to determine whether they are sufficient to invoke exercise of power, Melton v. Jenkins, 50 Ga.App. 615, 178 S.E. 754; State ex rel. Campbell v. Chapman, 145 Fla. 647, 1 So.2d 278, 281; City of Phoenix v. Greer, 43 Ariz. 214, 29 P.2d 1062, 1064; decide rightly or wrongly, Montgomery v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 83 F.2d 758, 761; determine every justiciable issue involved, Spencer v. Gypsy Oil Co., C.C.A. Okl., 142 F.2d 935, 937; hear and determine cases of general class to which proceeding belongs, Noxon Chemical Products Co. v. Leckie, C.C.A.N.J., 39 F.2d 318, 320; Brown v. Jacobs, 367 Ill. 545, 12 N.E.2d 10, 12.

"Jurisdiction of the person" is power to subject parties in a particular case to decisions and rulings made in such case, Collins v. Powell, 224 Iowa 1015, 277 N.W. 477, 481.

For "Appellate Jurisdiction," "Concurrent Jurisdiction," "Contentious Jurisdiction," "Co-Ordinate Jurisdiction," "Criminal Jurisdiction," "Excess of Jurisdiction," "Exclusive Jurisdiction," "Foreign Jurisdiction," "General Jurisdiction," "Limited Jurisdiction," "Pendent Jurisdiction," "Probate Jurisdiction," "Special Jurisdiction," "Summary Jurisdiction," "Territorial Jurisdiction," and "Voluntary Jurisdiction," see those titles. For equity jurisdiction, see "Equity." For original jurisdiction, see "Original."

JURISDICTION CLAUSE. In equity practice. That part of a bill which is intended to give jurisdiction of the suit to the court, by a general averment that the acts complained of are contrary to equity, and tend to the injury of the complainant, and that he has no remedy, or not a complete remedy, without the assistance of a court of equity, is called the "jurisdiction clause." Mitf. Eq.P1. 43.

JURISDICTIONAL. Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction; conferring jurisdiction; showing or disclosing jurisdiction; defining or limiting jurisdiction; essential to jurisdiction.

JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT. Amount involved in the particular case, Shabotzky v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., D.C.N.Y., 21 F.Supp. 166, 167; sum of all claims that are properly joined, Gray v. Blight, C.C.A.Colo., 112 F.2d 696, 700; value of the object sought to be attained in the litigation, Mountain States Power Co. v. City of Forsyth, D.C.Mont., 41 F.Supp. 389, 390; Ronzio v. Denver & R. G. W. R. Co., C.C.A.Utah, 116 F.2d 604, 606.

JURISDICTIONAL FACTS. Those matters of fact which must exist before the court can properly take jurisdiction of the particular case, as, that the defendant has been properly served with process, that the amount in controversy exceeds a certain sum, that the parties are citizens of different states, etc. Noble v. Railroad Co., 147 U.S. 165, 13 S.Ct. 271, 37 L.Ed. 123.

JURISDICTIONAL PLEA. While all dilatory pleas are sometimes referred to as "jurisdictional pleas," yet, strictly speaking, only those pleas to the jurisdiction of the court are "jurisdictional." Howe v. Lisbon Sa^{y}. Bank & Trust Co., 111 Vt. 201, 14 A.2d 3, 10.

JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT. A statement in appellant's brief that concisely and clearly informs the Supreme Court of the exact ground on which the Supreme Court's jurisdiction is claimed to rest, and refers briefly to the constitutional provisions and decided cases sustaining such claim of jurisdiction. Andrew County v. Maxwell, 347 Mo. 156, 146 S.W.2d 621, 623.

JURISINCEPTOR. Lat. A student of the civil law.

JURISPERITUS. Lat. Skilled or learned in the law.

JURISPRUDENCE. The philosophy of law, or the science which treats of the principles of positive law and legal relations.

"The term is wrongly applied to actual systems of law, or to current views of law, or to suggestions for its amendment, but is the name of a science. This science is a formal, or analytical, rather than a material, one. It is the science of actual or positive law. It is wrongly divided into 'general' and 'particular,' or into 'philosophical' and 'historical.' It may therefore be defined as the formal science of positive law." Holl.Jur. 12.

In the proper sense of the word, "jurisprudence" is the science of law, namely, that science which has for its function to ascertain the principles on which legal rules are based, so as not only to classify those rules in their proper order, and show the relation in which they stand to one another, but also to settle the manner in which new or doubtful cases should be brought under the appropriate rules. Jurisprudence is more a formal than a material science. It has no direct concern with questions of moral or political policy, for they fall under the province of ethics and legislation; but, when a new or doubtful case arises to which two different rules seem, when taken literally, to be equally applicable, it may be, and often is, the function of jurisprudence to consider the ultimate effect which would be produced if each rule were applied to an indefinite number of similar cases, and to choose that rule which, when so applied, will produce the greatest advantage to the community. Sweet.

For "Comparative Jurisprudence" and "Medical Jurisprudence," see those titles. For equity jurisprudence, see "Equity."

JURISPRUDENTIA. Lat. In the civil and common law. Jurisprudence, or legal science.

JURISPRUDENTIA EST DIVINARUM ATQUE HUMANARUM RERUM NOTITIA, JUST! ATQUE INJUSTI SCIENTIA. Jurisprudence is the knowledge of things divine and human, the science of what is right and what is wrong. Dig. 1, 1, 10, 2; Inst. 1, 1, 1. This definition is adopted by Bracton, word for word. Bract. fol. 3.

JURISPRUDENTIA LEGIS COMMUNIS ANGLUE EST SCIENTIA SOCIALIS ET COPIOSA. The jurisprudence of the common law of England is a science social and comprehensive. 7 Coke, 28a.

JURIST. One who is versed or skilled in law; answering to the Latin "jurisperitus," (q. v.).

One who is skilled in the civil law, or law of nations. The term is now usually applied to those who have distinguished themselves by their writings on legal subjects.

JURISTIC. Pertaining or belonging to, or characteristic of, jurisprudence, or a jurist, or the legal profession.

JURISTIC ACT. One designed to have a legal effect, and capable thereof.

An act of a private individual directed to the origin, termination, or alteration of a right. Webster, Dict., citing T. E. Holland.

JURNEDUM. In old English law. A journey; a day's traveling. Cowell.

JURO. In Spanish law. A certain perpetual pension, granted by the king on the public revenues, and more especially on the salt-works, by favor, either in consideration of meritorious services, or in return for money loaned the government, or obtained by it through forced loans. Escriche.

JUROR. One member of a jury.

The term is not inflexible, and besides a person who has been accepted and sworn to try a cause "juror" may also mean a person selected for jury service. Green v. Smither, Ky., 199 S.W. 1056; People v. Newmark, 312 Ill. 625, 144 N.E. 338, 340. The term may apply to special jurors as well as members of regular panel. Beavers v. State, 187 Ark. 722, 61 S.W.2d 1113. Sometimes, one who takes an oath; as in the term "non-juror," a person who refuses certain oaths.

JUROR DESIGNATE. A juror who has been drawn as a juror. Summers v. State ex rel. Boykin, 66 Ga.App. 648, 19 S.E.2d 28, 31.

JUROR'S BOOK. A list of persons qualified to serve on juries.

JURY. In practice. A certain number of men, selected according to law, and sworn (jurati) to inquire of certain matters of fact, and declare the truth upon evidence to be laid before them. This definition embraces the various subdivisions of juries; as grand jury, petit jury, common jury, special jury, coroner's jury, sheriff's jury, (q. v.)

A jury is a body of men temporarily selected from the citizens of a particular district, and invested with power to present or indict a person for a public offense, or to try a question of fact. Code Civil Proc.Cal. § 190.

As understood at common law and as used in constitutional provision, "jury" imports body of twelve men. State v. Dalton, 206 N.C. 507, 174 S.E. 422, 424; People ex rel. Cooley v. Wilder, 255 N.Y.S. 218, 222, 234 App.Div. 256; Hall v. Brown, 129 Kan. 859, 284 P. 396.

"Jury trial" is not merely a trial by twelve men, but by twelve men selected by law, with judge who passes on many legal questions and has limited supervision over trial. Universal Truck Loading Co. v. Taylor, 178 Miss. 143, 172 So. 756, 757.

The right to "jury trial" guaranteed by Federal Constitution is the right of trial by jury as it existed at common law. Diederich v. American News Co., C.C.A.Okl., 128 F.2d 144, 145, 146.

The right to "jury trial" of controverted issues implies a trial by an impartial and qualified jury. Alexander v. R. D. Crier & Sons Co., 181 Md. 415, 30 A.2d 757, 759.

The "jury trial" guaranteed by Federal Constitution means trial by jury of 12 men in presence and under superintendence of judge empowered to instruct them on the law and advise them on the facts and, except on acquittal of criminal charge, to set aside their verdict if in judge's opinion it is contrary to law or evidence. Diederich v. American News Co., C.C.A.Okl., 128 F.2d 144, 145, 146.

The terms "jury" and "trial by jury," as used in the constitution, mean twelve competent men, disinterested and impartial, not of kin, nor personal dependents of either of the parties, having their homes within the jurisdictional limits of the court, drawn and selected by officers free from all bias in favor of or against either party, duly impaneled and sworn to render a true verdict according to the law and the evidence. State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39; H. Wagman & Co. v. Schafer Motor Freight Service, 4 N.Y.S.2d 526, 529, 167 Misc. 681.

Common Jury

In practice. The ordinary kind of jury by which issues of fact are generally tried, as distinguished from a special jury, (q. v.).

Fair and Impartial Jury

See Fair and Impartial Jury.

Foreign Jury

A jury obtained from a county other than that in which issue was joined.

Grand Jury

A jury of inquiry who are summoned and returned by the sheriff to each session of the criminal courts, and whose duty is to receive complaints and accusations in criminal cases, hear the evidence adduced on the part of the state, and find bills of indictment in cases where they are satisfied a trial ought to be had. They are first sworn, and instructed by the court.

This is called a "grand jury" because it comprises a greater number of jurors than the ordinary trial jury or "petit jury." At common law, a grand jury consisted of not less than twelve nor more than twenty-three men, and this is still the rule in many of the states, though in some the number is otherwise fixed by statute; thus in Oregon and Utah, the grand jury is composed of seven men; in South Dakota, not less than six nor more than eight; in Texas, twelve; in Idaho, sixteen; in Washington, twelve to seventeen; in North Dakota, sixteen to twenty-three; in California, nineteen; in New Mexico, twenty-one. See Ex parte Bain, 121 U.S. 1, 7 S.Ct. 781, 30 L. Ed. 849; In re Gardiner, 64 N.Y.S. 760, 31 Misc. 364; Finley v. State, 61

Ala. 204; People v. Duff, 65 How.Prac., N.Y., 365; English v. State, 31 Fla. 340, 12 So. 689; Jones v. McClaughry, 169 Iowa, 281, 151 N.W. 210, 216.

Mixed Jury

A bilingual jury; a jury of the half-tongue. See De Medietat Linguae. Also a jury composed partly of negroes and partly of white men.

Petit Jury

The ordinary jury of twelve men for the trial of a civil or criminal action. So called to distinguish it from the grand jury.

A petit jury is a body of twelve men impaneled and sworn in a district court, to try and determine, by a true and unanimous verdict, any question or issue of fact, in any civil or criminal action or proceeding, according to law and the evidence as given them in the court. Gen.St. Minn.1878, c. 71, § 1 (M.S.A. § 593.01).

Pix Jury

See Pix.

Special Jury

A jury ordered by the court, on the motion of either party, in cases of unusual importance or intricacy. Called, from the manner in which it is constituted, a "struck jury." 3 Bl.Comm. 357. A jury composed of persons above the rank of ordinary freeholders; usually summoned to try questions of greater importance than those usually submitted to common juries. Brown.

Struck Jury

See Striking A Jury.

Trial Jury

The jury participating in the trial of a given case; or a jury summoned and impaneled for the trial of a case, and in this sense a petit jury as distinguished from a grand jury.

A body of men returned from the citizens of a particular district before a court or officer of competent jurisdiction, and sworn to try and determine, by verdict, a question of fact. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 193.

JURY ACTION. What was before adoption of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure an action at law is a "jury action", Ryan Distributing Corporation v. Caley, D.C.Pa., 51 F.Supp. 377, 379; Ransom v. Staso Milling Co.,\ D.C.Vt., 2 F.R.D. 128, 131.

JURY SOX. The place in court (strictly an inclosed place) where the jury sit during the trial of a cause. 1 Archb.Pr.K.B. 208; 1 Burrill, Pr. 455.

JURY COMMISSIONER. An officer charged with the duty of selecting the names to be put into the jury wheel, or of drawing the panel of jurors for a particular term of court.

JURY-LIST. A paper containing the names of jurors impaneled to try a cause, or it contains the names of all the jurors summoned to attend court.

JURY OF GOOD AND LAWFUL MEN. A jury of 12 good and lawful men. State v. Emery, 224 N.C. 581, 31 S.E.2d 858, 861, JURY OF MATRONS. See Matrons, Jury Of.

JURY PROCESS. The process by which a jury is summoned in a cause, and by which their attendance is enforced.

JURY WHEEL. A machine containing the names of persons qualified to serve as grand and .petit jurors, from which, in an order determined by the hazard of its revolutions, are drawn a sufficient number of such names to make up the panels for a given term of court.

JURYMAN. A juror; one who is impaneled on a jury.

JURYWOMAN. One member of a jury of matrons; a woman juror.

JUS. Lat. In Roman law. Right; justice; law; the whole body of law; also a right. The term is used in two meanings:

1. "Jus" means "law," considered in the abstract; that is, as distinguished from any specific enactment, the science or department of learning, or quasi personified factor in human history or conduct or social development, which we call, in a general sense, "the law." Or it means the law taken as a system, an aggregate, a whole ; "the sum total of a number of individual laws taken together." Or it may designate some one particular system or body of particular laws; as in the phrases "jus civile," "jus gentium," "jus prcetorium."

2. In a second sense, "jus" signifies "a right;" that is, a power, privilege, faculty, or demand inherent in one person and incident upon another; or a capacity residing in one person of controlling, with the assent and assistance of the state, the actions of another. This is its meaning in the expressions "jus in rem," "jus accrescendi," "jus possessionis."

It is thus seen to possess the same ambiguity as the words "droit," "recht," and "right," (which see.)

Within the meaning of the maxim that "ignorantia juris non excusat" (ignorance of the law is no excuse), the word "jus" is used to denote the general law or ordinary law of the land, and not a private right. Churchill v. Bradley, 58 Vt. 403, 5 A. 189, 56 Am.Rep. 563; Cooper v. Fibbs, L.R. 2 H.L. 149; Freichnecht v. Meyer, 39 N.J.Eq. 561.

The continental jurists seek to avoid this ambiguity in the use of the word "jus," by calling its former signification "objective," and the latter meaning "subjective." Thus Mackeldey (Rom.Law, § 2) says : "The laws of the first kind [compulsory or positive laws] form law [jus] in its objective sense, [jus est norma agendi, law is a rule of conduct.] The possibility resulting from law in this sense to do or require another to do is law in its subjective sense, [jus est facultas agendi, law is a license to act.] The voluntary action of man in conformity with the precepts of law is called 'justice,' [justitia.J"

Some further meanings of the word are:

An action. Bract. fol. 3. Or, rather, those proceedings in the Roman action which were conducted before the praetor.

Power or authority. Sui juris, in one's own power; independent. Inst. 1, 8, pr. ; Bract. fol. 3. Alieni juris, under another's power. Inst. 1, 8, pr.

The profession (ars) or practice of .the law. Jus ponitur pro ipsa arte. Bract. fol. 2b.

A court or judicial tribunal, (locus in quo redditur jus.) Id. fol. 3.

JUS ABSTINENDI. The right of renunciation; the right of an heir, under the Roman law, to renounce or decline the inheritance, as, for example, where his acceptance, in consequence of the necessity of paying the debts, would make it a burden to him. See Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 733.

JUS ABUTENDI. The right to abuse. By this phrase is understood the right to do exactly as one likes with property, or having full dominion over property. 3 Toullier, no. 86.

JUS ACCRESCENDI. The right of survivorship. In re Brogan's Estate, 165 Misc. 111, 300 N.Y.S. 447, 455. The right of the survivor or survivors of two or more joint tenants to the tenancy or estate, upon the death of one or more of the joint tenants. In re Capria's Estate, 89 Misc. 101, 151 N.Y.S. 385, 386.

JUS ACCRESCENDI INTER MERCATORES, PRO BENEFICIO COMMERCII, LOCUM NON HABET. The right of survivorship has no place between merchants, for the benefit of commerce. Co.Litt. 182a; 2 Story, Eq.Jur. § 1207; ' Broom, Max. 455. There is no survivorship in cases of partnership, as there is in joint-tenancy. Story, Partn. § 90.

JUS ACCRESCENDI PRZEFERTUR ONERIBUS. The right of survivorship is preferred to encumbrances. 185a. Hence no dower or curtesy can be claimed out of a joint estate. 1 Steph. Comm. 316.

JUS ACCRESCENDI PRIEFERTUR ULTIMAE VOLUNTATI. The right of survivorship is preferred to the last will. Co.Litt. 185b. A devise of one's share of a joint estate, by will, is no severance of the jointure; for no testament takes effect till after the death of the testator, and by such death the right of the survivor (which accrued at the original creation of the estate, and has therefore a priority to the other) is already vested. 2 Bl.Comm. 186; 3 Steph.Comm. 316.

JUS ACTUS. In Roman law. A rural servitude giving to a person a passage for carriages, or for cattle.

JUS AD REM. A term of the civil law, meaning "a right to a thing;" that is, a right exercisable by one person over a particular article of property in virtue of a contract or obligation incurred by another person in respect to it, and which is enforceable only against or through such other person. It is thus distinguished from jus in re, which is a complete and absolute dominion over a thing available against all persons.

The disposition of modern writers is to use the term "jus ad rem" as descriptive of a right without possession, and "jus in re" as descriptive of a right accompanied by possession. Or, in a somewhat wider sense, the former denotes an inchoate or incomplete right to a thing ; the latter, a complete and perfect right to a thing. See The Carlos F. Roses, 177 U.S. 655, 20 S.Ct. 803, 44 L.Ed. 929; The Young Mechanic, 30 Fed.Cas. 873.

In canon law. A right to a thing. An inchoate and imperfect right, such as is gained by nomination and institution; as distinguished from jus in re, or complete and full right, such as is acquired by corporal possession. 2 Bl.Comm. 312.

JUS ZELIANUM. A body of laws drawn up by Sextus IElius, and consisting of three parts, wherein were explained, respectively: (1) The laws of the Twelve Tables; (2) the interpretation of and decisions upon such laws; and (3) the forms of procedure. In date, it was subsequent to the jus Flavianum, (q. v.). Brown.

JUS ZEQUUM. Equitable law. A term used by the Romans to express the adaptation of the law to the circumstances of the individual case as opposed to jus strictum (q. v.).

JUS 1ESNECLE. The right of primogeniture (q. v.).

JUS ALBINATUS. The droit d'aubaine (q. v.). See Albinatus Jus.

JUS ANGARLE. See Angaria; Angary, Right of.

JUS ANGLORUM. The laws and customs of the West Saxons, in the time of the Heptarchy, by which the people were for a long time governed, and which were preferred before all others. Wharton.

JUS AQUAE HAUSTUS. In Roman law. A rural servitude giving to a person a right of watering cattle on another's field, or of drawing water from another's well.

JUS AQUIEDUCTUS. In the civil law. The name of a servitude which gives to the owner of land the right to bring down water through or from the land of another.

JUS BANCI. In old English law. 'The right of bench.

The right or privilege of having an elevated and separate seat of judgment, anciently allowed only to the king's judges, who hence were said to administer high justice, (summam administrant justitiam.) Blount.

JUS BELLI. The law of war. The law of nations as applied to a state of war, defining in particular the rights and duties of the belligerent powers themselves, and of neutral nations.

The right of war; that which may be done without injustice with regard to an enemy. Gro. de Jure B. lib. 1, c. 1, § 3.

JUS BELLUM DICENDI. The right of proclaiming war.

JUS CANONICUM. The canon law.

JUS CIVILE. Civil law. The system of law peculiar to one state or people. Inst. 1, 2, 1. Particularly, in Roman law, the civil law of the Roman people, as distinguished from the jus gentium. The term is also applied to the body of law called, emphatically, the "civil law."

The jus civile and the jus gentium are distinguished in this way. All people ruled by statutes and customs use a law partly peculiar to themselves, partly common to all men. The law each people has settled for itself is peculiar to the state itself, and Is called "jus civile," as being peculiar to that very state. The law, again, that natural reason has settled among all men,—the law that is guarded among all peoples quite alike,—is called the "jus gentium," and all nations use it as if law. The Roman people, therefore, use a law that is partly peculiar to itself, partly common to all men. Hunter, Rom. Law, 38.

But this is not the only, or even the general, use of the words. What the Roman jurists had chiefly in view, when they spoke of "jus civile," was not local as opposed to cosmopolitan law, but the old law of the city as contrasted with the newer law introduced by the praetor, (jus prcetorium, jus honorarium.) Largely, no doubt, the jus gentium corresponds with the jus prcetorium; but the correspondence is not perfect. Id. 39.

JUS CIVILE EST QUOD SIBI POPULUS CONSTITUIT. The civil law is what a people establishes for itself. Inst. 1, 2, 1; Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns., N.Y., 424, 426.

JUS CIVITATUS. The right of citizenship; the freedom of the city of Rome. It differs from jus quiritium, which comprehended all the privileges of a free native of Rome. The difference is much the same as between "denization" and "naturalization" with us. Wharton.

JUS CLOACAE. In the civil law. The right of sewerage or drainage. An easement consisting in the right of having a sewer, or of conducting surface water, through the house or over the ground of one's neighbor. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317.

JUS COMMUNE.

In the Civil law. Common right; the common and natural rule of right, as opposed to jus singulars, (q. v.). Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 196.

In English law. The common law, answering to the Saxon "folcright." 1 Bl.Comm. 67.

JUS CONSTITUI OPORTET IN HIS QU1E UT PLURIMUM ACCIDUNT NON QUIE EX INOPINATO. Laws ought to be made with a view to those cases which happen most frequently, and not to those which are of rare or accidental occurrence. Dig. 1, 3, 3; Broom, Max. 43.

JUS CORONAE. In English law. The right of the crown, or to the crown; the right of succession to the throne. 1 Bl.Comm. 191; 2 Steph. Comm. 434.

JUS CUDENDJE MONETZE. In old English law. The right of coining money. 2 How. State Tr. 118.

JUS CURIALITATIS. In English law. The right of curtesy. Spelman.

JUS DARE. To give or to make the law; the function and prerogative of the legislative department.

JUS DELIBERANDI. In the civil law. The right of deliberating.

A term granted by the proper officer at the request of him who is called to the inheritance, (the heir,) within which he has the right to investigate its condition and to consider whether he will accept or reject it. Mackeld.Rom. Law, § 742; Civ.Code La. art. 1026 (Civ.Code, art. 1033).

JUS DESCENDIT, ET NON TERRA. A right descends, not the land. Co. Litt. 345.

JUS DEVOLUTUM. The right of the church of presenting a minister to a vacant parish, in case the patron shall neglect to exercise his right within the time limited by law.

JUS DICERE. To declare the law; to say what the law is. The province of a court or judge. 2 Eden, 29; 3 P.Wms. 485.

JUS DICERE, ET NON JUS DARE. To declare the law, not to make it. 7 Term 696; Arg. Barry v. Mandell, 10 Johns., N.Y., 563, 566; 7 Exch. 543; 2 Eden 29; 4 C.B. 560, 561; Broom, Max. 140.

JUS DISPONENDI. The right of disposing.

An expression used either generally to signify the right of alienation, as when we speak of depriving a married woman of the jus disponendi over her separate estate, or specially in the law relating to sales of goods, where it is often a question whether the vendor of goods has the intention of reserving to himself the jus disponendi; e., of preventing the ownership from passing to the purchaser, notwithstanding that he (the vendor) has parted with the possession of the goods. Sweet.

JUS DISTRAHENDI. The right of sale of goods pledged in case of non-payment. See Pledge; Distress.

JUS DIVIDEND!. The right of disposing of realty by will. Du Cange.

JUS DUPLICATUM. A double right; the right of possession united with the right of property; otherwise called "droit-droit." 2 Bl.Comm. 199.

JUS EDICERE, JUS EDICENDI. The right to issue edicts. It belonged to all the higher magistrates, but special interest is attached to the prwtorian edicts in connection with the history of Roman law. See Praetor.

JUS EST ARS BONI ET i'EQUI. Law is the science of what is good and just. Dig. 1, 1, 1, 1; Bract. fol. 2b.

JUS EST NORMA RECTI; ET QUICQUID EST CONTRA NORMAM RECTI EST INJURIA. Law is a rule of right; and whatever is contrary to the rule of right is an injury. 3 Bulst. 313.

JUS ET FRAUS NUNQUAM COHABITANT. Right and fraud never dwell together. 10 Coke, 45a. Applied to the title of a statute. Id.; Best, Ev. p. 250, § 205.

JUS EX INJURIA NON ORITUR. A right does (or can) not rise out of a wrong. Broom, Max. 738, note; 4 Bing. 639.

JUS EX NON SCRIPTO. Law constituted by custom or such usage as indicates the tacit consent of the community.

JUS FALCANDI. The right of mowing or cutting. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 27, § 1. The right of cutting wood. Bract. fol. 231.

JUS FECIALE. In Roman law. The law of arms, or of heralds. A rudimentary species of international law founded on the rites and religious ceremonies of the different peoples.

JUS FIDUCIARIUM. In the civil law. A right in trust; as distinguished from jus legitimum, a legal right. 2 Bl.Comm. 328.

JUS FLAVIANUM. In old Roman law. A body of laws drawn up by Cneius Flavius, a clerk of Appius Claudius, from the materials to which he had access. It was a popularization of the laws. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 39.

JUS FLUMINUM. In the civil law. The right to the use of rivers. Locc. de Jure Mar. lib. 1, c. 6.

JUS FODIENDI. In the civil and old English law. A right of digging on another's land. Inst. 2, 3, 2; Bract. fol. 222.

JUS FUTURUM. In the civil law. A future right; an inchoate, incipient, or expectant right, not yet fully vested.

It may be either "jus delatum," when the subsequent acquisition or vesting of it depends merely on the will of the person in whom it is to vest, or "jus nondum delatum," when it depends on the future occurrence of other circumstances or conditions. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 191.

JUS GENTIUM. The law of nations. That law which natural reason has established among all men is equally observed among all nations, and is called the "law of nations," as being the law which all nations use. Inst. 1, 2, 1; Dig. 1, 1, 9; 1 Bl.Comm. 43; 1 Kent, Comm. 7; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 125.

Although this phrase had a meaning in the Roman law which may be rendered by our expression "law of nations," it must not be understood as equivalent to what we now call "international law," its scope being much wider. It was originally a system of law, or more properly equity, gathered by the early Roman lawyers and magistrates from the common ingredients in the customs of the old Italian tribes,—those being the nations, gentes, whom they had opportunities of observing,—to be used in cases where the jus civile did not apply ; that is, in cases between foreigners or between a Roman citizen and a foreigner. The principle upon which they proceeded was that any rule of law which was common to all the nations they knew of must be intrinsically consonant to right reason, and therefore fundamentally valid and just. From this it was an easy transition to the converse principle, viz., that any rule which instinctively commended itself to their sense of justice and reason must be a part of the jus gentium. And so the latter term came eventually to be about synonymous with "equity," (as the Romans understood it,) or the system of praetorian law.

Modern jurists frequently employ the term "jus gentium privatum" to denote private international law, or that subject which is otherwise styled the "conflict of laws;" and "jus gentium publicum" for public international law, or the system of rules governing the intercourse of nations with each other as persons.

JUS GLADIL The right of the sword; the executory power of the law; the right, power, or prerogative of punishing for crime. 4 Bl.Comm. 177.

JUS HABENDI. The right to have a thing. The right to be put in actual possession of property. Lewin, Trusts, 585.

JUS HABENDI ET RETINENDI. A right to have and to retain the profits, tithes, and offerings, etc., of a rectory or parsonage.

JUS HIEREDITATIS. The right of inheritance.

JUS HAURIENDI. In the civil and old English law. The right of drawing water. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 27, § 1.

JUS HONORARIUM. The body of Roman law, which was made up of edicts of the supreme magistrates, particularly the pra2tors.

JUS HONORUM. In Roman law. The right of holding offices. See Jus Suffragii.

JUS IMAGINIS. In Roman law. The right to use or display pictures or statues of ancestors; somewhat analogous to the right, in English law, to bear a coat of arms.

JUS IMMUNITATIS. In the civil law. The law of immunity or exemption from the burden of public office. Dig. 50, 6.

JUS IN PERSONAM. A right against a person; a right which gives its possessor a power to oblige another person to give or procure, to do or not to do, something.

JUS IN RE. A right in a thing. Denver Joint Stock Land' Bank of Denver v. Dixon, 57 Wyo. 523, 122 P.2d 842, 847, 140 A.L.R. 1270. A right existing in a person with respect to an article or subject of property, Inherent in his relation to it, implying complete ownership with possession, and available against all the world. See Jus ad Rem.

JUS IN RE ALIENA. An easement on servitude, or right in, or arising out of, the property of another.

JUS IN RE INHERIT OSSIBUS USUFRUCTUARII. A right in the thing cleaves to the person of the usufructuary.

JUS IN RE PROPRIA. The right of enjoyment which is incident to full ownership or property, and is often used to denote the full ownership or property itself. It is distinguished from jus in re aliend, which is a mere easement or right in or over the property of another.

JUS INCOGNITUM. An unknown law. This term is applied by the civilians to obsolete laws. Bowyer, Mod.Civil Law, 33.

JUS INDIVIDUUM. An individual or indivisible right; a right incapable of division. 36 Eng.Law & Eq. 25.

JUS ITAILICUM. A term of the Roman law descriptive of the aggregate of rights, privileges, and franchises possessed by the cities and inhabitants of Italy, outside of the city of Rome, and afterwards extended to some of the colonies and provinces of the empire, consisting principally in the right to have a free constitution, to be exempt from the land tax, and to have the title to the land regarded as Quiritarian property. See Gibbon, Rom.Emp. c. xvii; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 43.

JUS ITINERIS. Iri Roman law. A rural servitude giving to a 'person the right to pass over an adjoining field, on foot or horseback.

JUS JURANDI FORMA VERBIS DIFFERT, RE CONVENIT; HUNC ENIM SENSUM HABERE DEBET: UT DEUS -INVOCETUR. Grot. de Jur. B., 1. 2, c. 13, § 10. The form of taking an oath differs in language, agrees in meaning; for it ought to have this sense: that the Deity is invoked.

JUS LATH. In Roman law. The right of Latium or of the Latins.

The principal privilege of the Latins seems to have been the use of their own laws, and their not being subject to the edicts of the praetor, and that they had occasional access to the freedom of Rome, and a participation in her sacred rites. Butl.Hor.Jur. 41.

.TUS LATIUM. In Roman law. A rule of law applicable to magistrates in Latium.

It was either majus Latium or minus Latium,—the majus Latium raising to the dignity of Roman citizen not only the magistrate himself, but also his wife and children; the minus Latium raising to that dignity only the magistrate himself. Brown.

JUS LEGITIMUM. A legal right. In the civil law. A right which was enforceable in the ordinary course of law. 2 B1.Comm. 328.

JUS LIBERORUM. In Roman law. The privilege conferred upon a woman who had three or four children.

Another author defines this privilege as one by which exemption was given from all troublesome offices. Brown, L.Dict.

In order that she should be able to take all the property given her by will, she must have had this privilege conferred upon her. Sohm, Inst.Rom.L. § 86. In the time of Hadrian, a decree was made conferring upon ft mother, as such, who, being an ingenua, had the jus trium liberorum, or being a libertina, the jus quettuor liberorum, a civil law right to succeed her intestate children; id. § 98.

JUS MARITI. The right of a husband; especially the right which a husband acquires to his wife's movable estate by virtue of the marriage. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 1, p. 63.

JUS MERUM. In old English law. Mere or bare right; the mere right of property in lands, without either possession or even the right of possession. 2 Bl.Comm. 197; Bract. fol. 23.

JUS MORIBUS CONSTITUTUM, See Jus Ex Non Scripto.

JUS NATURE. The law of nature. See Jus Naturale.

JUS NATURALE. The natural law, or law of nature; law, or legal principles, supposed to be discoverable by the light of nature or abstract reasoning, or to be taught by nature to all nations and men alike; or law supposed to govern men and peoples in a state of nature, i. e., in advance of organized governments or enacted laws.

This concept originated with the philosophical jurists of Rome, and was gradually extended until the phrase came to denote a supposed basis or substratum common to all systems of positive law, and hence to be found, in greater or less purity, in the laws of all nations. And, conversely, they held that if any rule or principle of law was observed in common by all peoples with whose systems they were acquainted, it must be a part of the jus naturale, or derived from it. Thus the phrases "jus naturale" and "jus gentium" came to be used interchangeably.

JUS NATURALE EST QUOD APUD HOMINES EANDEM HABET POTENTIAM. Natural right is that which has the same force among all mankind. 7 Coke, 12.

JUS NAVIGANDI. The right of navigating or navigation; the right of commerce by ships or by sea. Locc. de Jure Mar. lib. 1, c. 3.

JUS NECIS. In Roman law. The right of death, or of putting to death. A right which a father anciently had over his children.

See Jus Vitae Necisque.

JUS NON HABENTI TUTE NON PARETUR. One who has no right cannot be safely obeyed. Hob. 146.

JUS NON PATITUR UT IDEM BIS SOLVATUR. Law does not suffer that the same thing be twice paid.

JUS NON SACRUM. In Roman law. That portion of the jus publicum which regulated the duties of magistrates.

Non-sacred law; that which dealt with the duties of civil magistrates, the preservation of public order, and the rights and duties of persons in their relation to the state. Morey, Rom.L. 223. It was analogous to that which would now be called the police power.

JUS NON SCRIPTUM. The unwritten law. 1 Bl. Comm. 64.

JUS OFFERENDI. In Roman law, the right of subrogation, that is, the right of succeeding to the lien and priority of an elder creditor on tendering or paying into court the amount due to him. See Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 355.

JUS ONERIS FERENDI. An urban servitude in the Roman Law, the owner of which had the right of supporting and building upon the house wall of another.

JUS PAPIRIANUM. The civil law of Papirius.

The title of the earliest collection of Roman leges curiatce, said to have been made in the time of Tarquin, the last of the kings, by a pontifex maximus of the name of Sextus or Publius Papirius. Very few fragments of this collection now remain, and the authenticity of these has been doubted. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 21.

JUS PASCENDI. In the civil and old English law. The right of pasturing cattle. Inst. 2, 3, 2; Bract. fols. 53b, 222.

JUS PATRONATUS. In English ecclesiastical law. The right of patronage; the right of presenting a clerk to a benefice. Blount.

A commission from the bishop, where two presentations are offered upon the same avoidance, directed usually to his chancellor and others of competent learning, who are to summon a jury of six clergymen and six laymen to inquire into and examine who is the rightful patron. 3 Bl.Comm. 246; 3 Steph.Comm. 517.

JUS PERSONARUM. Rights of persons. Those rights which, in the civil law, belong to persons as such, or in their different characters and relations; as parents and children, masters and servants, etc.

JUS PCENITENDI. In Roman law, the right of rescission or revocation of an executory contract on failure of the other party to fulfill his part of the agreement. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 444.

JUS PORTUS. In maritime law. The right of port or harbor.

JUS POSSESSIONIS. The right of possession.

JUS POSSIDENDI. The right of possessing, which is the legal consequence of ownership. It is to be distinguished from the jus possessionis (q. v.), which is a right to possess which may exist without ownership.

JUS POSTLIMINII. In the Civil law. The right of postliminy; the right or claim of a person who had been restored to the possession of a thing, or to a former condition, to be considered as though he had never been deprived of it. Dig. 49, 15, 5; 3 Bl.Comm. 107, 210.

In International law. The right by which property taken by an enemy, and recaptured or rescued from him by the fellow-subjects or allies of the original owner, is restored to the latter upon certain terms. 1 Kent, Comm. 108.

JUS PRIESENS. In the civil law. A present or vested right; a right already completely acquired. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 191.

JUS PRJETORIUM. In the civil law. The discretion of the prtor, as distinct from the leges, or standing laws. 3 Bl.Comm. 49. That kind of law which the prators introduced for the purpose of aiding, supplying, or correcting the civil law, for the public benefit. Dig. 1, 1, 7. Called, also, "jus honorarium," (q. v.).

JUS PRECARIUM. In the civil law. A right to a thing held for another, for which there was no remedy by legal action, but only by entreaty or request. 2 Bl.Comm. 328.

JUS PRESENTATIONIS. The right of presentation.

JUS PRIVATUM. Private law; the law regulating the rights, conduct, and affairs of individuals, as distinguished from "public" law, which relates to the constitution and functions of government and the administration of criminal justice. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 124.

Also private ownership, or the right, title, or dominion of a private owner, as distinguished from "jus publicum," which denotes public ownership, or the ownership of property by the government, either as a matter of territorial sovereignty or in trust for the benefit and advantage of the general public. In this sense, a state may have a double right in given property, e. g., lands covered by navigable waters within its boundaries, including both "jus publicum," a sovereign or political title, and "jus privatum," a proprietary ownership. See Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 160, 50 P. 277; G. L. Webster Co. v. Steelman, 172 Va. 342, 1 S.E.2d 305, 311.

JUS PROJICIENDI. In the civil law. The name of a servitude which consists in the right to build a projection, such as a balcony or gallery, from one's house in the open space belonging to one's neighbor, but without resting on his house. Dig. 50, 16, 242; Id. 8, 2, 2; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317.

JUS PROPRIETATIS. The right of property, as distinguished from the jus possessionis or right of possession. Bract. fol. 3. Called by Bracton "jus merum," the mere right. Id.; 2 Bl.Comm. 197; 3 Bl.Comm. 19, 176.

JUS PROTEGENDI. In the civil law. The name of a servitude. It is a right by which a part of the roof or tiling of one house is made to extend over the adjoining house. Dig. 50, 16, 242, 1; Id. 8, 2, 25; Id. 8, 5, 8, 5.

JUS PROTIMESEOS. The right of pre-emption of a landlord in case the tenant wishes to dispose of his rights as a perpetual lessee. Sohm. Inst. Rom.L. § V. Pactum protimeseos was the right of pre-emption to the seller; i. e. in case the buyer should sell, he must sell to the former seller. Hunter. Rom. L., 503.

JUS PROVINCIARUM. A franchise conferred upon provincials much more limited than that conferred upon the people of Italy.

It has been described as "equivalent to the jus italicum minus the freedom from land taxation which the latter right involved. In short, the provincials possessed no status as Roman citizens; and even their capacity of ownership in their own land was qualified by their tributary obligations to Rome. The civil incapacity of the provincials had reference, however, merely to their exclusion from the strictly legal rights sanctioned by the jus civile." Morey, Rom.L. 55.

JUS PUBLICUM. Public law, or the law relating to the constitution and functions of government and its officers and the administration of criminal justice. Also public ownership, or the paramount or sovereign territorial right or title of the state or government. See Jus Privatum.

It implies a right in a sovereign or public capacity to be exercised for the interest or benefit of the state or the public, as distinguished from the exercise in a proprietary capacity of a right of the sovereign or a right possessed by an individual in common with the public. G. L. Webster Co. v. Steelman, 172 Va. 342, 1 S.E.2d 305, 311.

Sovereign's right of jurisdiction and dominion for governmental purposes over all lands and waters within its territorial limits, including tidal waters and their bottoms, is sometimes termed "jus publicum." Commonwealth v. City of Newport News, 158 Va. 521, 164 S.E. 689, 696.

JUS PUBLICUM ET PRIVATUM QUOD EX NATURALIBUS PR2ECEPTIS AUT GENTIUM AUT CIVILIBUS EST COLLECTUM; ET QUOD IN JURE SCRIPTO JUS APPELLATUR, ID IN LEGE ANGLIZE RECTUM ESSE DICITUR. Co. Litt. 185. Public and private law is that which is collected from natural principles, either of nations or in states; and that which in the civil law is called "jus," in the law of England is said to be "right."

JUS PUBLICUM PRIVATORUM PACTIS MUTARI NON POTEST. A public law or right cannot be altered by the agreements of private persons.

JUS QUIESITUM. A right to ask or recover; for example, in .an obligation there is a binding of the obligor, and a jus qucesitum in the obligee. 1 Bell, Comm. 323.

JUS QUIRITIUM. The old law of Rome, that was applicable originally to patricians only, and, under the Twelve Tables, to the entire Roman people, was so called, in contradistinction to the jus prcetorium, (q. v.,) or equity. Brown.

JUS QUO UNIVERSITATES UTUNTUR EST IDEM QUOD HABENT PRIVATI. The law which governs corporations is the same which governs individuals. Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 265, 8 Am.Dec. 135.

JUS RECUPERANDI. The right of recovering [lands.]

JUS RELICTIE, In Scotch law. The right of a relict; the right or claim of a relict or widow to her share of her husband's estate, particularly the movables. 2 Kames, Eq. 340; 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 1, p. 67.

JUS REPRESENTATION'S. The right of representing or standing in the place of another, or of being represented by another.

JUS RERUM. The law of things. The law regulating the rights and powers of persons over things; how property is acquired, enjoyed, and transferred.

JUS RESPICIT ?EQUITATEM. Law regards equity. Co. Litt. 24b; Broom, Max. 151.

JUS SACRUM. In Roman law. That portion of the public law which was concerned with matters relating to public worship and including the regulation of sacrifices and the appointment of priests. There was a general division of the jus publicum into jus sacrum and jus non sacrum (q. v.).

JUS SANGUINIS. The right of blood. See Jus Soli.

JUS SCRIPTUM, In English law. Written law, or statute law, otherwise called "lex scripta," as distinguished from the common law, "lex non scripta." 1 Bl.Comm. 62.

In Roman law. Written law. Inst. 1, 2, 3. All law that was actually committed to writing, whether it had originated by enactment or by custom, in contradistinction to such parts of the law of custom as were not committed to writing. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 126.

After stating that the Roman law was written and unwritten just as it was among the Greeks, Justinian adds "The written part consists of laws, plebiscite, senatusconsulte, enactments of emperors, edicts of magistrates, and answers of jurisprudents." Sand.Inst.Just. 1, 2, 3. See Jus Ex Non Scripto.

JUS SINGULARE. In the civil law. A peculiar or individual rule, differing from the jus commune, or common rule of right, and established for some special reason. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 196.

JUS SOLI. The law of the place of one's birth as contrasted with jus sanguinis, the law of the place of one's descent or parentage. It is of feudal origin. Hershey, Int. L. 237.

JUS SPATIANDI. A right of way over land by the public by uses merely for the purposes of recreation and instruction.

It is usually limited to the cases of highways, parks, and squares. The public were denied any right in the grounds containing the ancient druidical monuments at Stonehenge; Attorney-General V. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 188. See 19 Harv.L.Rev. 55. See Du Cange, Glossarium, for a definition under the word spatiare.

JUS STAPULAE. In old European law. The law of staple; the right of staple. A right or privilege of certain towns of stopping imported merchandise, and compelling it to be offered for sale in their own markets. Locc. de Jure Mar. lib. 1, c. 10.

JUS STILLICIDII VEL FLUMINIS RECIPIENDI, In Roman law. An urban servitude giving the owner a right to project his roof over the land of another or to open a house drain upon it.

JUS STRICTUM. Strict law; law interpreted without any modification, and in its utmost rigor.

JUS SUFFRAGII. In Roman law. The right of voting. This and the jus honorum (q. v.) were the public rights of the Roman citizen.

JUS SUPERVENIENS AUCTORI ACCRESCIT SUCCESSORI. A right growing to a possessor accrues to the successor. Halk. Lat. Max. 76.

JUS TERTII. The right of a third party.

A tenant, bailee, etc., who pleads that the title is in some person other than his landlord, bailor, etc., is said to set up a jus tertii. Dempsey Oil & Gas Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 110 Oki. 39, 235 P. 1104, 1107.

JUS TESTAMENTORUM PERTINET ORDINARIO. Y. B. 4 Hen. VII., 13b. The right of testaments belongs to the ordinary.

JUS TIGNI IMMITTENDI. In Roman law. An urban servitude which gave the right of inserting a beam into the wall of another.

JUS TRIPERTITUM. In Roman law. A name applied to the Roman law of wills, in the time of Justinian, on account of its three-fold derivation, viz., from the praetorian edict, from the civil law, and from the imperial constitutions. Maine, Anc. Law, 207.

JUS TRIPLEX EST,—PROPIETATIS, POSSESSION'S, ET POSSIBILITATIS. Right is threefold,—of property, of possession, and of possibility.

JUS TRIUM LIBERORUM. In Roman law. A right or privilege allowed to the parent of three or more children. 2 Kent, Comm. 85; 2 Bl.Comm. 247. These privileges were an exemption from the trouble of guardianship, priority in bearing offices, and a treble proportion of corn. Adams, Rom. Ant. (Am. Ed.) 227.

JUS UTENDI. The right to use property without destroying its substance. It is employed in contradistinction to the jus abutendi. 3 Toullier, no. 86.

JUS VENANDI ET PISCANDI. The right of hunting and fishing.

JUS VENDIT QUOD USUS APPROBAVIT. Ellesm. Postn. 35. The law dispenses what use has approved.

JUS VIT1E NECISQUE. In Roman law. The right of life and death.

Originally a father, or his pater-familias if he was himself in domestic subjection, could decide-not arbitrarily, but judicially-whether or not to rear his child; and while this right became subject to certain restrictions, yet when the child had grown up, the father, in the exercise of his domestic jurisdiction, might visit his son's misconduct, both in private and public life, with such punishment as he though fit, even banishment, slavery, or death. In the early Empire these rights became relaxed, and they disappeared in the Justinian law. Murihead, Roman Law, 28, 346, 417. See Patria Potestas.

JUSJURANDI FORMA VERBIS DIFFERT, RE CONVENIT; HUNC ENIM SENSUM HABERE DEBET, UT DEUS INVOCETUR. The form of taking an oath differs in language, agrees in meaning; for it ought to have this sense, that the Deity is invoked. Grotius, b. 2, c. 13, s. 10.

JUSJURANDUM. Lat. An oath.

JUSJURANDUM INTER ALIOS FACTUM NEC NOCERE NEO PRODESSE DEBET. An oath made between others ought neither to hurt nor profit. 4 Inst. 279.

JUST. Conforming to or consonant with, what is legal or lawful, legally right, lawful. National Surety Corporation v. Mullins, 262 Ky. 465, 90 S. W.2d 707, 708. Correct, true, due. Wisdom v. Board of Sup'rs of Polk County, 236 Iowa 669, 19 N.W.2d 602, 606. Equitable. Carter v. Carter, 181 Okl. 204, 73 P.2d 404, 405. Reasonable. National Surety Corporation v. Mullins, 262 Ky. 465, 90 S.W.2d 707, 708; Wisdom v. Board of Sup'rs of Polk County, 236 Iowa 669, 19 N.W.2d 602, 606. Right; in accordance with law and justice. McKeon v. National Casualty Co., 216 Mo.App. 507, 270 S.W. 707, 712; New Haven Water Co. v. City of New Haven, 106 Conn. 562, 139 A. 99, 105; Lake Hancock & C. R. Co. v. Stinson, 77 Fla. 333, 81 So. 512.

"The words 'just' and 'justly' do not always mean 'just' and 'justly' in a moral sense, but they not unfrequently, in their connection with other words in a sentence, bear a very different signification. It is evident, however, that the word 'just' in the statute [requiring an affidavit for an attachment to state that plaintiff's claim is just] means 'just' in a moral sense; and from its isolation, being made a separate subdivision of the section, it is intended to mean 'morally just' in the most emphatic terms. The claim must be morally just, as well as legally just, in order to entitle a party to an attachment." Robinson v. Burton, 5 Kan. 300.

JUST BEYOND. Will directing erection of chapel "just beyond" the basin means barely beyond, scarcely beyond, or closely beyond, with the least practical space between it and the basin. Carroll v. Cave Hill Cemetery Co., 172 Ky. 204, 189 S.W. 186, 189.

JUST CAUSE. A cause outside legal cause, which must be based on reasonable grounds, and there must be a fair and honest cause or reason, regulated by good faith. Dubois v. Gentry, 182 Tenn. 103, 184 S.W.2d 369, 371; Quick v. Southern Churchman Co., 171 Va. 403, 199 S.E. 489, 494, 495. Fair, adequate, reasonable cause. In re Municipal Garage in and for City of Utica, 141 Misc. 15, 252 N.Y.S. 18, 32. Legitimate cause; legal or lawful ground for action; such reasons as will suffice in law to justify the action taken. State v. Langford, 90 Or. 251, 176 P. 197, 202; State v. Donzi, 133 La. 925, 63 So. 405, 406; State v. Wohlfort, 123 Kan. 62, 254 P. 317, 320; Boston Elevated Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 310 Mass. 528, 39 N.E.2d 87, 112, 124.

Under provision that no license shall be revoked without "just cause," the words imply that charges should be made and notice of hearing given and an opportunity to be heard afforded, Carroll v. California Horse Racing Board, 16 Ca1.2d 164, 105 P.2d 110, 111.

JUST CAUSE OF PROVOCATION. That which will constitute the homicide murder in the second degree, as distinguished from a lawful provocation, which will reduce it to manslaughter. State v. McCracken, 341 Mo. 697, 108 S.W.2d 372, 376.

JUST COMPENSATION. As regards property taken for public use, the term is comprehensive and includes all elements. Jacobs v. U. S., Ala., 290 U.S. 13, 54 S.Ct. 26, 78 L.Ed. 142, 96 A.L.R. 1; Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern California v. Adams, 16 Ca1.2d 676, 107 P.2d 618, 621. But does not exceed market value. Sigurd City v. State, 105 Utah 278, 142 P.2d 154, 158; U. S. v. Waterhouse, C.C.A.Hawaii, 132 F.2d 699, 703. It means a settlement which leaves one no poorer or richer than he was before the property was taken. U. S. ex rel. Tennessee Valley Authority v. Indian Creek Marble Co., D.C.Tenn., 40 F.Supp. 811, 818, 819; adequate compensation, State v. Hale, Tex.Civ.App., 96 S.W.2d 135, 141; In re Board of Sup'rs of Chenango County, Co. Ct., 6 N.Y.S.2d 732, 739; fair market value, Cameron Development Co. v. United States, C.C.A.Fla., 145 F.2d 209, 210; U. S. ex rel. and for Use of Tennessee Valley Authority v. Davis, D.C.Tenn., 41 F.Supp. 595, 597, 598; United States v. Certain Parcels of Land in City of Baltimore, Parcel No. 12, D.C.Md., 43 F.Supp. 687, 689. Full and perfect equivalent of the property taken. Housing Authority of Shreveport v. Green, 200 La. 463, 8 So.2d 295, 298; U. S. v. 2.4 Acres of Land, More or Less, in Lake County, Ill., C.C.A.I11., 138 F.2d 295, 297. It is the value of property taken at time of taking. United States v. 813.96 Acres of Land in Ouachita County, Ark., D.C.Ark., 45 F. Supp. 535, 538; Danforth v. U. S., Mo., 308 U.S. 271, 60 S.Ct. 231, 236, 84 L.Ed. 240; plus compensation for delay in payment. Kieselbach v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 317 U.S. 399, 63 S. Ct. 303, 305, 87 L.Ed. 358; or consequential damages to the owner. In re Board of Water Supply of City of New York, 277 N.Y. 452, 14 N.E.2d 789; or value of use of property from date of taking possession to date of judgment if possession is taken by condemnor prior to judgment. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. v. Hansen, 48 Cal.App.2d 314, 119 P.2d 734, 735. It requires that the owner be put in as good position pecuniarily as he would otherwise have been. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 52 F.2d 372, 379; In re Gratiot Ave., City of Detroit, 294 Mich. 569, 293 N.W. 755, 757; U. S. ex rel. and for Use of Tennessee Valley Authority v. Powelson, C.C.A.4, 118 F.2d 79, 87.

To arrive at fair indemnity, the interests of the public and of the owner, and all the circumstances of the particular appropriation, should be taken into consideration. Lewis, Em.Dorn. § 462. And see Butler Hard Rubber Co. v. Newark, 61 N.J.L. 32, 40 A. 224; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U.S. 548, 17 S.Ct. 966, 42 L.Ed. 270; Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N.Y. 623, 23 N.E. 901, 7 L.R.A. 289. Evidence of reproduction cost of structures affected by condemnation, less depreciation, improvements made on the property, consequential damage to portions not appropriated, and the fair market value of the property taken as of the date of the appropriation, may be relevant in determining "just compensation," according to the situation in a particular case. In re Board of Water Supply of City of New York, 277 N.Y. 452, 14 N.E.2d 789.

"Just compensation" is synonymous with "due process of law." Simms v. Dillon, 119 W.Va. 284, 193 S.E. 331, 337, 113 A.L.R. 787.

As regards public utility, just compensation is fair return on value of property. Fort Worth Gas Co. v. City of Fort Worth, D.C.Tex., 35 F.2d 743, 747; New York Edison Co. v. Maltbie, 150 Misc. 200, 270 N.Y.S. 409; State v. Tri-State Telephone & Telegraph Co., 204 Minn. 516, 284 N.W. 294, 306.

On government's cancellation of contract, "just compensation" recoverable consists of such sum as in court's judgment will fairly compensate contractor, Enright v. U. S., Ct.C1., 54 F.2d 182, 190; it is the value of contract at time of cancellation, not profits which it would have produced. De Laval Steam Turbine Co. v. U. S., Ct.C1., 284 U.S. 61, 52 S.Ct. 78, 79, 76 L.Ed. 168.

JUST DEBTS. As used in a will or a statute, this term means legal, valid, and incontestable obligations, not including such as are barred by the statute of limitations or voidable at the election of the party. See Burke v. Jones, 2 Ves. & B. 275; Peck v. Botsford, 7 Conn. 176, 18 Am.Dec. 92; Collamore v. Wilder, 19 Kan. 82; Smith v. Mayo, 9 Mass. 63, 6 Am.Dec. 28; Jones' Ex'r v. Jones, 275 Ky. 753, 122 S.W.2d 779, 780.

JUST PRIOR. "Immediately preceding", "just before", without appreciable lapse of time before. Jackson v. McCrary, Tex.Civ.App., 148 S.W.2d 942, 944. It means before the time and connotes nearness in point of time. Salmons v. Dun & Bradstreet, Mo.App., 153 S.W.2d 556, 562, modified on other grounds 349 Mo. 498, 162 S.W.2d 245, 141 A.L.R. 674. It means some period of time before. Hoelzel v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 337 Mo. 61, 85 S.W.2d 126, 129.

JUST TITLE. By the term "just title," in cases of prescription, is meant a title which the possessor may have received from any person whom he honestly believed to be the real owner, provided the title were such as to transfer the ownership of the property. Civ.Code La. art. 3484; Davis v. Gaines, 104 U.S. 400, 26 L.Ed. 757; Johnson v. Sugar, 163 La. 785, 112 So. 721, 722; B. Fernandez & Bros. v. Ayllon, 266 U.S. 144, 45 S.Ct. 52, 69 L. Ed. 209. One good against all the world. Virginia & West Virginia Coal Co. v. Charles, C.C.A. Va., 254 F. 379, 387.

JUST VALUE. In taxation, the fair, honest, and reasonable value of property, without exaggeration or depreciation; its actual market value. State v. Smith, 158 Ind. 543, 63 N.E. 214, 63 L.R.A. 116; Winnipiseogee Lake, etc., Co. v. Gilford, 67 N.H. 514, 35 A. 945. Correct, honest and true value. Fruit Growers Express Co. v. Brett, 94 Mont. 281, 22 P.2d 171.

JUSTA. In old English law. A certain measure of liquor, being as much as was sufficient to drink at once. Mon. Angl. t. 1, c. 149.

JUSTA CAUSA. In the civil law. A just cause; a lawful ground; a legal transaction of some kind. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 283.

JUSTICE, v. In old English practice. To do justice, to see justice done; to summon one to do justice.

JUSTICE, n. In common law. The title given in England to the judges of the king's bench and the common pleas, and in America to the judges of the supreme court of the United States and of the appellate courts of many of the states.

It is said that this word in its Latin form (justitia) was properly applicable only to the judges of common-law courts, while the term "judex" designated the judges of ecclesiastical and other courts. See Leg.Hen. I, §§ 24, 63; Co. Litt. 71b.

The same title is also applied to some of the judicial officers of the lowest rank and jurisdiction, such as police justices and justices of the peace.

A term used in the United States and England to designate judicial officers and magistrates of every grade. School Dist. No. 18 v. Grubbs Special School Dist., 184 Ark. 863, 43 S.W.2d 765, 766.

In Feudal law. Jurisdiction; judicial cognizance of causes or offenses.

High justice was the jurisdiction or right of trying crimes of every kind, even the highest. This was a privilege claimed and exercised by the great lords or barons of the middle ages. 1 Robertson's Car. V., appendix, note 23. Low justice was jurisdiction of petty offenses.

In Jurisprudence. The constant and perpetual disposition to render every man his due. Inst. 1, 1, pr.; 2 Inst. 56. See Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 528, 44 Am.Dec. 217; Collier v. Lindley, 203 Cal. 641, 266 P. 526, 530; The John E. Mulford, D.C. N.Y., 18 F. 455. The conformity of our actions and our will to the law. Toull. Droit Civil Fr. tit. prel. no. 5; Livingston Oil Corporation v. Henson, 90 Okl. 76, 215 P. 1057, 1059.

Commutative justice is that which should govern contracts. It consists in rendering to every man the exact measure of his dues, without regard to his personal worth or merits, i. e., placing all men on an equality. Distributive justice is that which should govern the distribution of rewards and punishments. It assigns to each the rewards which his personal merit or services deserve, or the proper punishment for his crimes. It does not consider all men as equally deserving or equally blameworthy, but discriminates between them, observing a just proportion and comparison. This distinction originated with Aristotle. (Eth.Nic. V.) See Fonbl.Eq. 3; Toull.Droit Civil Fr. tit. pre. no. 7.

In the most extensive sense of the word "justice" differs little from "virtue;" for it includes within itself the whole circle of virtues. Yet the common distinction between them is that that which, considered positively and in itself, is called "virtue," when considered relatively and with respect to others has the name of "justice." But "justice," being in itself a part of "virtue," is confined to things simply good or evil, and consists in a man's taking such a proportion of them as he ought. Bouvier.

"Equity" and "Justice" are substantially equivalent terms, if not synonymous. In re Lessig's Estate, 6 N.Y. S.2d 720, 721, 168 Misc. 889.

Under constitutional provision guaranteeing right to obtain justice, the "justice" to be administered by courts is not an abstract justice as conceived of by the judge but justice according to law or, as it is phrased in the constitution, "conformably to the laws". State ex rel. Department of Agriculture v. McCarthy, 238 Wis. 258, 299 N.W. 58, 64.

In Norman French. Amenable to justice. Kelham.

JUSTICE AYRES (or AIRES). In Scotch law. Circuits made by the judges of the justiciary courts, through the country, for the distribution of justice. Bell.

JUSTICE IN EYRE. From the old French word "eire," e., a journey. Those justices who in ancient times were sent by commission into various counties, to hear more especially such causes as were termed "pleas of the crown," were called "justices in eyre."

They differed from justices in oyer and terminer, inasmuch as the latter were sent to one place, and for the purpose of trying only a limited number of special causes; whereas the justices in eyre were sent through the various counties, with a more indefinite and general commission. In some respects they resembled our present justices of assize, although their authority and manner of proceeding differed much from them. Brown.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE. In American law. A judicial officer of inferior rank having (usually) civil jurisdiction limited to that prescribed by statute in civil cases and in criminal proceedings, prosecutions and commitments of offenders. See Com. v. Frank, 21 Pa.Co.Ct.R. 120; Weikel v. Cate, 58 Md. 110; Smith v. Abbott, 17 N.J.L. 366; People v. Mann, 97 N.Y. 530, 49 Am.Rep. 556; Commonwealth, for Use and Benefit of Warren County, v. Cox's Adm'r, 264 Ky. 327, 94 S.W.2d 632.

In English law. Judges of record appointed by the crown to be justices within a certain district, (e. g., a county or borough,) for the conservation of the peace, and for the execution of divers things, comprehended within their commission and within divers statutes, committed to their charge. Stone, J. Pr. 2.

JUSTICE SEAT. In English law. The principal court of the forest, held before the chief justice in eyre, or chief itinerant judge or his deputy; to hear and determine all trespasses within the forest, and all claims of franchises, liberties, and privileges, and all pleas and causes whatsoever therein arising. 3 Bl. Comm. 72; 4 Inst. 291; 3 Steph. Comm. 440.

JUSTICEMENTS. An old general term for all things appertaining to justice.

JUSTICER. The old form of justice. Blount.

JUSTICE'S CLERK. An amanuensis of the justice. A justice of the peace is regarded as his own clerk, and, in making entries on his docket, he acts in a ministerial capacity. State ex rel. Morris Bldg. & Inv. Co. v. Brown, 228 Mo.App. 760, 72 S.W.2d 859, 862, JUSTICE'S COURTS. Inferior tribunals, not of record, with limited jurisdiction, both civil and criminal, held by justices of the peace. There are courts so called in many of the states. See Searl v. Shanks, 9 N.D. 204, 82 N.W. 734; Brownfield v. Thompson, 96 Mo.App. 340, 70 S.W. 378.

JUSTICES OF APPEAL. The title given to the ordinary judges of the English court of appeal. The first of such ordinary judges are the two former lords justices of appeal in chancery, and one other judge appointed by the crown by letters patent.

JUSTICES OF ASSIZE. These justices, or, as they are sometimes called, "justices of nisi prius," are judges of the superior English courts, who go on circuit into the various counties of England and Wales for the purpose of disposing of such causes as are ready for trial at the assizes. See Assize.

JUSTICES OF GAOL DELIVERY. Those justices who are sent with a commission to hear and determine all causes appertaining to persons, who, for any offense, have been cast into gaol.

Part of their authority was to punish those who let to mainprise those prisoners who were not bailable by law, and they seem formerly to have been sent into the country upon this exclusive occasion, but afterwards had the same authority given them as the justices of assize. Brown.

JUSTICES OF LABORERS. In old English law. Justices appointed to redress the frowardness of laboring men, who would either be idle or have unreasonable wages. Blount.

JUSTICES OF NISI PRIUS. In English law. This title is now usually coupled with that of justices of assize; the judges of the superior courts acting on their circuits in both these capacities. 3 Bl. Comm. 58, 59.

JUSTICES OF OYER AND TERMINER. Certain persons appointed by the king's commission, among whom were usually two judges of the courts at Westminster, and who went twice in every year to every county of the kingdom, (except London and Middlesex,) and, at what was usually called the "assizes," heard and determined all treasons, felonies, and misdemeanors. Brown.

JUSTICES OF THE BENCH. The justices of the court of common bench or common pleas.

JUSTICES OF THE FOREST. In old English law. Officers who had jurisdiction over all offenses committed within the forest against vert or venison. The court wherein these justices sat and determined such causes was called the "justice seat of the forest." They were also sometimes called the "justices in eyre of the forest." Brown.

JUSTICES OF THE HUNDRED. Hundredors; lords of the hundreds; they who had the jurisdiction of hundreds and held the hundred courts.

JUSTICES OF THE JEWS. Justices appointed by Richard I. to carry into effect the laws and orders which he had made for regulating the money contracts of the Jews. Brown.

JUSTICES OF THE PAVILION. In old English law. Judges of a pyepowder court, of a most transcendant jurisdiction, anciently authorized by the bishop of Winchester, at a fair held on St. Giles' Hills near that city. Cowell; Blount.

JUSTICES OF THE QUORUM. See Quorum.

JUSTICES OF TRAIL-BASTON. See Trail-Baston.

JUSTICESHIP. Rank or office of a justice.

JUSTICIABLE. Proper to be examined in courts of justice. subject to action of court of justice. International Harvest Hat Co. v. Caradine Hat Co., D.C.Mo., 17 F.Supp. 79, 80.

JUSTICIABLE CONTROVERSY. A controversy in which a claim of right is asserted against one who has an interest in contesting it. State ex rel. La Follette v. Dammann, 230 Wis. 17, 264 N.W. 627, 629, 103 A.L.R. 1089. A question as may properly come before a tribunal for decision. Duart Mfg. Co. v. Philad Co., D.C.Del., 30 F.Supp. 777, 779, 780.

JUSTICIAR. In old English law. A judge or justice. One of several persons learned in the law, who sat in the aula regis, and formed a kind of court of appeal in cases of difficulty. Also spelled justicier.

High Justicier

In old French and Canadian law. A feudal lord who exercised the right called "high justice." Guyot, Inst. Feod. c. 26.

JUSTICIARII ITINERANTES. In English law. Justices in eyre, who formerly went from county to county to administer justice. They were so called to distinguish them from justices residing at Westminster, who were called "justicii residentes." Co. Litt. 293.

JUSTICIARII RESIDENTES. In English law. Justices or judges who usually resided in Westminster. They were so called to distinguish them from justices in eyre. Co. Litt. 293.

JUSTICIARY. An old name for a judge or justice. The word is formed on the analogy of the Latin "justiciarius" and French "justicier," and is a variant of justiciar (q. v.).

JUSTICIARY COURT. The chief criminal court of Scotland, consisting of five lords of session, added to the justice general and justice clerk; of whom the justice general, and in his absence, the justice clerk, is president. This court has a jurisdiction over all crimes, and over the whole of Scotland. Bell.

JUSTICIATUS. Judicature; prerogative.

The proceeding by which bail establish their ability to perform the undertaking of the bond or recognizance.

JUSTICIER. Fr, See Justiciar.

JUSTICIES. In English law. A writ directed to the sheriff, empowering him, for the sake of dispatch, to try an action in his county court for a larger amount than he has the ordinary power to do. It is so called because it is a commission to the sheriff to do the party justice, the word itself meaning, "You may do justice to _____" 3 Bl.Comm. 36; 4 Inst. 266.

JUSTIFIABLE. Rightful; defensible; warranted or sanctioned by law; that which can be shown to be sustained by law; as justifiable homicide. See Homicide.

JUSTIFIABLE CAUSE. "Justifiable cause" for prosecution is well-founded belief of person of ordinary caution, prudence, and judgment in existence of facts essential to prosecution. Dickerson v. Atlantic Refining Co., 201 N.C. 90, 159 S.E. 446, 449.

JUSTIFICATION. A maintaining or showing a sufficient reason in court why the defendant did what he is called upon to answer, particularly in an action of libel.

A defense of justification is a defense showing the libel to be true, or in an action of assault showing the violence to have been necessary. See Steph.P1. 184. A sufficient lawful reason for acting or failing to act. Mercardo v. State, 86 Tex.Cr.R. 559, 218 S.W. 491, 492; State v. Rish, 104 S.C. 250, 88 S.E. 531, 534; Townsend v. U. S., 68 App. D.C. 223, 95 F.2d 352, 358.

Just cause or excuse. State v. Williams, 166 S.C. 63, 164 S.E. 415, 424. Just, lawful excuse for act. Louis Kamm, Inc., v. Flink, 113 N.J.L. 582, 175 A. 62, 67, 99 A.L.R. 1. Reasonable excuse. State v. Mueller, 208 Wis. 543, 243 N.W. 478, 479.

JUSTIFICATORS. A kind of compurgators, (q. v.,) or those who by oath justified the innocence or oaths of others; as in the case of wager of law.

JUSTIFIED. Done on adequate reasons sufficiently supported by credible evidence, when weighed by unprejudiced mind, guided by common sense and by correct rules of law. Selectmen of Wakefield v. Judge of First Dist. Court of Eastern Middlesex, 262 Mass. 477, 160 N.E. 427, 430.

JUSTIFYING BAIL consists in proving the sufficiency of bail or sureties in point of property, etc.

The production of bail in court, who there justify themselves against the exception of the plaintiff.

JUSTINIANIST. A civilian; one who studies the civil law.

KILLYTH-STALLION. A custom by which lords of manors were bound to provide a stallion for the use of their tenants' mares. Spelman.

KIN. Relation or relationship by blood or consanguinity. "The nearness of kin is computed according to the civil law." 2 Kent, Comm. 413. See Keviston v. Mayhew, 169 Mass. 166, 47 N.E. 612; Lusby v. Cobb, 80 Miss. 715, 32 So. 6; State v. Bielman, 86 Wash. 460, 150 P. 1194; Poff v. Pennsylvania R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 57 F.Supp. 625, 626. As to "next of kin," see Next.

The primary and ordinary meaning of the word "kin" is related by ties of consanguinity, but the word "kin" is sometimes used in a general sense to include relationship by blood or by marriage. State v. Hooper, 140 Kan. 481, 37 P.2d 52.

KIND. Class, grade, or sort. City of St. Louis v. James Braudis Coal Co., Mo.App., 137 S.W.2d 668, 670. Genus; generic class; description. See In Kind.

KINDRED. Relation by birth or consanguinity. Relatives by blood. Next of kin. "Kindred of the whole blood, preferred to kindred of the half blood." 4 Kent, Comm. 404, notes. See In re Carroll's Estate, 153 Misc. 649, 275 N.Y.S. 911; Butler v. Elyton Land Co., 84 Ala. 384, 4 So. 675;

Wetter v. Walker, 62 Ga. 144; O'Connell v. Powers, 291 Mass. 153, 197 N.E. 162, 163; Frank v. Frank, 180 Tenn. 114, 172 S.W.2d 804, 806.

KING. The sovereign, ruler, or chief executive magistrate of a state or nation whose constitution is of the kind called "monarchical" is thus named if a man; if it be a woman, she is called "queen."

The word expresses the idea of one who rules singly over a whole people or has the highest executive power; but the office may be either hereditary or elective, and the sovereignty of the king may or may not be absolute, according to the constitution of the country.

See Emperor.

KING CAN DO NO WRONG. This maxim means that the king is not responsible legally for aught he may please to do, or for any omission. Aust. Jur. sect. VI.

It does not mean that everything done by the government is just and lawful, but that whatever is exceptionable in the conduct of public affairs is not to be imputed to the king, 2 Steph.Com., 11th ed. 486.

KING-CRAFT. The art of governing.

KINGDOM. A country where an officer called a "king" exercises the powers of government, whether the same be absolute or limited. Wolff, Inst. Nat. § 994. In some kingdoms, the executive officer may be a woman, who is called a "queen."

KING-GELD. A royal aid; an escuage (q. v.).

KING'S ADVOCATE. An English advocate who holds, in the courts in which the rules of the canon and civil law prevail, a similar position to that which the attorney general holds in the ordinary courts, i. e., he acts as counsel for the crown in ecclesiastical, admiralty, and probate cases, and advises the crown on questions of international law. In order of precedence it seems that he ranks after the attorney general. 3 Steph. Comm. 275n.

KINGS-AT-ARMS. The principal herald of England was of old designated "king of the heralds," a title which seems to have been exchanged for "king-at-arms" about the reign of Henry IV.

The kings-at-arms at present existing in England are three—Garter, Clarencieux, and Norroy, besides Bath, who Is not a member of the college. Scotland is placed under an officer called "Lyon King-at-Arms," and Ireland is the province of one named "Ulster." Wharton.

KING'S BENCH. The supreme court of common law in England, being so called because the king used formerly to sit there in person, the style of the court being "coram ipso rege."

It was called the "queen's bench" in the reign of a queen, and during the protectorate of Cromwell it was styled the "upper bench." It consisted of a chief justice and three puisne justices, who were by their office the sovereign conservators of the peace and supreme coroners of the land. It was a remnant of the aula regis, and was not originally fixed to any certain place, but might follow the king's person, though for some centuries past it usually sat at Westminster. It had a very extended jurisdiction both in criminal and civil causes; the former in what was called the "crown side" or "crown office," the latter in the "plea side," of the court. Its civil jurisdiction was gradually enlarged until it embraced all species of personal actions. Since the judicature acts, this court constitutes the "king's bench division" of the "high court of justice." See 3 Bl.Comm. 41-43.

KING'S CHAMBERS. Those portions of the seas, adjacent to the coasts of Great Britain, which are inclosed within headlands so as to be cut off from the open sea by imaginary straight lines drawn from one promontory to another.

KING'S CORONER AND ATTORNEY. An officer of the court of king's bench, usually called "the master of the crown office," whose duty it is to file informations at the suit of a private subject by direction of the court. 4 Bl. Comm. 308, 309; 4 Steph. Comm. 374, 378.

KING'S COUNSEL. Barristers or serjeants who have been called within the bar and selected to be the king's counsel. They answer in some measure to the advocati fisci, or advocates of the revenue, among the Romans. They must not be employed against the crown without special leave, which is, however, always granted, at a cost of about nine pounds. 3 Bl. Comm. 27.

KING'S EVIDENCE. When several persons are charged with a crime, and one of them gives evidence against his accomplices, on the promise of being granted a pardon, he is said to be admitted king's or (in America) state's evidence. 4 Steph. Comm. 395; Sweet.

KING'S PROCTOR. A proctor or solicitor representing the crown in the former practice of the courts of probate and divorce.

In petitions for dissolution of marriage, or for declarations of nullity of marriage, the king's proctor may, under the direction of the attorney general, and by leave of the court, intervene in the suit for the purpose of proving collusion between the parties. Mozley & Whitley.

KING'S REMEMBRANCER. An officer of the central office of the English supreme court.

Formerly he was an officer of the exchequer, and had important duties to perform in protecting the rights of the crown; e. g., by instituting proceedings for the recovery of land by writs of intrusion, (q. v.,) and for the recovery of legacy and succession duties; but of late years administrative changes have lessened the duties of the office. Sweet.

He was at the head of the department which had charge of all revenue suits, and of matters pertaining to the office of sheriff. He attended as the officer of the king's bench when the lord mayor made his appearance on November 9th, and as representing the old court of exchequer when the city of London did suit and service in discharge of quit-rents for certain lands anciently held under the crown. He presided at the Trial of the Pyx, the assaying and weighing of the coins of the realm. See Remembrances of Sir F. Pollock.

KING'S SILVER. In old English practice. A fine due the king pro licentia concordandi, (for leave to agree,) in the process of levying a fine. 5 Coke, 39, 43; 2 Inst. 511; 2 Bl. Comm. 350.

KING'S WIDOW. In feudal law. A widow of the king's tenant in chief, who was obliged to take oath in chancery that she would not marry without the king's leave.

KINSFOLK. Relations; those who are of the same family.

KINSHOTE. In Saxon law. A composition or satisfaction paid for killing a kinsman. Spelman.

KINSMAN. A man of the same race or family. Wood v. Mitcham, 92 N.Y. 379.

KINSWOMAN. A female relation.

KINTAL, or KINTLE. A hundred pounds In weight. See Quintal.

KINTLIDGE. A ship's ballast. See Kentlage.

KIPPER-TIME. In old English law. The space of time between the 3d of May and the Epiphany, in which fishing for salmon in the Thames, between Gravesend and Henley-on-Thames, was forbidden. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. III.

KIRBY'S QUEST. In English law. An ancient record remaining with the remembrancer of the exchequer, being an inquisition or survey of all the lands in England, taken in the reign of Edward I. by John de Kirby, his treasurer. Blount; Cowell.

KIRK. In Scotch law. A church; the church; the established church of Scotland.

KIRK-MOTE. A meeting of parishioners on church affairs.

KIRK-OFFICER. The beadle of a church in Scotland.

KIRK-SESSION. A parochial church court in Scotland, consisting of the ministers and elders of each parish.

KISSING THE BOOK. The ceremony of touching the lips to a copy of the Bible, used in administering oaths. It is the external symbol of the witness' acknowledgment of the obligation of the oath.

KIST. In Hindu law. A stated payment; installment of rent.

KLEPTOMANIA. In medical jurisprudence. A species (or symptom) of mania, consisting in an irresistible propensity to steal. Looney v. State, 10 Tex.App. 525, 38 Am.Rep. 646; State v. Reidell, 9 Houst., Del., 470, 14 A. 550; Lowe v. State, 70 S.W. 206, 44 Tex.Cr.R. 224 (citing Hurst v. State, 40 Tex.Cr.R. 378, 46 S.W. 635, 50 S.W. 719).

It is said to be often shown in cases of women, laboring under their peculiar diseases or of those far advanced in pregnancy. A sharp distinction is made between kleptomania and the tendency to steal so commonly observed in the well defined forms of insanity; the former is a defective mental characteristic approaching the confines of insanity on one subject alone, while the individual, on all other subjects, is perfectly sane. It differs from shoplifting in that the shoplifter steals for a purpose, and only those articles which are of value, while the kleptomaniac takes goods of any description, often of no use to herself and with no motive for their possession; 4 Am.Lawy. 533.

KNACKER. One who slaughters useless or diseased animals or deals in such. Cent. Dict. A regular occupation in London and other large cities, regulated by act of parliament August 18, 1911.

KNAVE. A rascal; a false, tricky, or deceitful person. The word originally meant a boy, attendant, or servant, but long-continued usage has given it its present signification.

KNAVESHIP. A portion of grain given to a mill-servant from tenants who were bound to grind their grain at such mill.

KNEEL. To bend the knees in worship without resting on them is to kneel. 36 L.J.Ecc. 10.

KNIGHT. In English law. The next personal dignity after the nobility.

Of knights there are several orders and degrees. The first in rank are knights of the Garter, instituted by Richard I. and improved by Edward III. in 1344; next follows' a knight banneret; then come knights of the Bath, instituted by Henry IV., and revived by George I.; and they were so called from a ceremony of bathing the night before their creation. The last order are knights bachelors, who, though the lowest, are yet the most ancient, order of knighthood; for we find that King Alfred conferred this order upon his son Athelstan. 1 Bl.Comm. 403.

KNIGHTENGUILD. An ancient guild or society formed by King Edgar.

KNIGHTHOOD. The rank, order, character, or dignity of a knight.

KNIGHT-MARSHAL. In English law. An officer in the royal household who has jurisdiction and cognizance of offenses committed within the household and verge, and of all contracts made therein, a member of the household being one of the parties. Wharton.

KNIGHTS BACHELORS. In English law. The most ancient, though lowest, order of knighthood. 1 Bl. Comm. 404.

KNIGHTS BANNERET. In English law. Those created by the sovereign in person on the field of battle. They rank, generally, after knights of the Garter. 1 Bl. Comm. 403.

KNIGHT'S FEE. The determinate quantity of land, (held by an estate of inheritance,) or of annual income therefrom, which was sufficient to maintain a knight.

In the time of Henry II. the estate was estimated at £20 a year; but Lord Coke in his time it to be an estate of 680 acres. See 1 Bl.Comm. 404, 410; 2 Bl.Comm. 62; Co.Litt. 69a; 1 Poll. & Malt'. 232.

KNIGHTS OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE. An English order of knighthood, instituted in 1818.

KNIGHTS OF ST. PATRICK. Instituted in Ireland by George III., A. D. 1763. They have no rank in England.

KNIGHTS OF THE BATH. An order supposed to have been instituted by Henry IV., and revived by George I. in 1725 to consist of the sovereign, a grand master and 36 knights companions. In 1815 the order was instituted in three classes. In 1847 the civil knights, commanders and companions were added. They are so called from the ceremony formerly observed of bathing the night before their creation.

KNIGHTS OF THE CHAMBER. Those created in the sovereign's chamber in time of peace, not in the field. 2 Inst. 666.

KNIGHTS OF THE GARTER. See Garter.

KNIGHTS OF THE POST. A term for hireling witnesses.

KNIGHTS OF THE SHIRE. In English law. Members of parliament representing counties .or shires, in contradistinction to citizens or burgesses, who represent boroughs or corporations.

A knight of the shire is so called, because, as the terms of the writ for election still require, it was formerly necessary that he should be a knight. This restriction was coeval with the tenure of knight-service, when every man who received a knight's fee immediately of the crown was constrained to be a knight; but at present any person may be chosen to fill the office who is not an alien. The money qualification is abolished by 21 Vict. c. 26. Wharton.

KNIGHTS OF THE THISTLE. A Scottish order of knighthood.

This order is said to have been instituted by Achalus, king of Scotland, A. D. 819. The better opinion, however, is that it was instituted by James V. in 1534, was revived by James VII. (James II. of England) in 1687, and reestablished by Queen Anne in 1703. They have no rank in England. Wharton.

KNIGHT'S SERVICE. Upon the Norman conquest, all the lands in England were divided into knight's fees, in number above sixty thousand.

For every knight's fee, a knight was bound to attend the 'king in his wars forty days in• a year, in which space of time a campaign was generally finished. If a man only held half a knight's fee, he was only bound to attend twenty days; and so in proportion. But this personal service, in process of time, grew into pecuniary commutations, or aids; until at last, with the military part of the feudal system, it was abolished at the restoration, by the statute of 12 Car. II. c. 24. 1 Bla.Com. 410; 2 id. 62; Will. Real Pr. 144; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 230.

KNOCK DOWN. To assign to a bidder at an auction by a knock or blow of the hammer.

Property is said to be "knocked down" when the auctioneer, by the fall of his hammer, or by any other audible or visible announcement, signifies to the bidder that he is entitled to the property on paying the amount of his bid, according to the terms of the sale. "Knocked down" and "struck off" are synonymous terms. Sherwood v. Reade, 7 Hill, N.Y., 439.

KNOT. In seamen's language, a "knot" is a division of the log-line serving to measure the rate of the vessel's motion.

The number of knots which run off from the reel in half a minute shows the number of miles the vessel sails in an hour. ' Hence when a ship goes 8 nautical miles an hour she is said to go "8 knots." Webster.

KNOW. • To have knowledge; to possess information, instruction, or wisdom. State v. Ransberger, 106 Mo. 135, 17 S.W. 290. Horne v. Lewis, 160 Ga. 824, 129 S.E. 95; To perceive or apprehend, to understand. International-Great Northern R. Co. v. Pence, Tex.Civ.App., 113 S.W.2d 206, 210.

The word "familiar" is equivalent. Smiley v. Lenane, 363 Ill. 66, 1 N.E.2d 213, 216.

KNOW ALL MEN. In conveyancing. A form of public address, of great antiquity, and with which many written instruments, such as bonds, letters of attorney, etc., still commence.

KNOWINGLY. With knowledge; consciously; intelligently; willfully; intentionally. Atkinson v. State, 133 Ark. 341, 202 S.W. 709, 710; People v. Calvert, 93 Cal.App. 568, 269 P. 969, 971; Hutchman v. State, 61 Okl.Cr. 117, 66 P.2d 99, 102; Gottlieb v. Commonwealth, 126 Va. 807, 101 S.E. 872, 873; Cheffer v. Eagle Discount Stamp Co., 348 Mo. 1023, 156 S.W.2d 591, 595; and knowledge must be actual, not merely constructive, Parsons v. Rinard Grain Co., 186 Iowa 1017, 173 N.W. 276, 280.

The word imports a perception of facts requisite to make up crime, Commonwealth v. Altenhaus, 317 Mass. 270, 57 N.E.2d 921, 922; knowledge of act or thing done as well as evil intent or bad purpose, Erby v. state, 181 Tenn. 64'l, 184 S.W.2d 14, 16; a knowledge that facts exist which bring act or omission within provisions of Code. People v. Forbath, 5 Cal.App.2d Supp. 767, 42 P.2d 108, 109.

The use of the word in an indictment is equivalent to an averment that the defendant knew what he was about to do, and, with such knowledge, proceeded to do the act charged. U. S. y. Claypool, D.C.Mo,, 14 F. 128; State v. Wilson, 41 Idaho 598, 242 P. 787, 788, KNOWINGLY ,AND WILLFULLY. This phrase, in reference to violation of a statute, means consciously and intentionally. U. S: v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., C.C.A.N.J., 204 F. 705, 708; Oregon-Washington R. & Na^{y}. Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Idaho, 205 F. 337, 339; U. S. v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co., D.C. Pa., 238 F. 428, 430.

KNOWLEDGE. Acquaintance with fact or truth, United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Smith, 231 Ala. 169, 164 So. 70, 82, 103 A.L.R. 1468; People v. Henry, 23 Cal.App.2d 155, 72 P.2d 915, 921.

It has also been defined as act or state of knowing or understanding, Witters v. U. S., 70 App.D.C. 316, 106 F.2d 837, 840, 125 A.L.R. 1031; People v. Henry, 72 P.2d 915, 921, 23 Cal.App.2d 155; actual knowledge, notice or information, New York Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Central Union Bank of South Carolina, C.C.A.S.C., 65 F.2d 738, 739; Howard v. Independent Transfer & Storage Co., 19 P.2d 1057, 1058, 52 Idaho 747; assurance of fact or proposition founded on perception by senses, or intuition, Brooks v. Sessoms, 47 Ga.App. 554, 171 S.E. 222, 224; clear perception of that which exists, or of truth, fact or duty, People v. Steele, 179 Misc. 587, 37 N.Y.S.2d 199, 200; United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Smith, 231 Ala. 169, 164 So. 70, 82, 103 A.L.R. 1468; credible or reliable information, Sackett v. Farmers' State Bank of Boone, 209 Iowa 487, 228 N.W. 51, 54; Guardian Life Ins. Co. v. Weiser, Sup., 51 N.Y.S.2d 771, 773; firm belief, Witters v. U. S., 70 App.D.C. 316, 106 F. 2d 837, 840, 125 A.L.R. 1031; guilty knowledge, Goldsworthy v. Anderson, 92 Colo. 446, 21 P.2d 718, 87 A.L.R. 1396; information of fact, Green v. Stewart, 106 Cal. App. 518, 289 P. 940, 944; means of mental impression, Howard v. Whittaker, 250 Ky. 836, 64 S.W.2d 173; miscellaneous information and circumstances which engender belief to moral certainty or induce state of mind that one considers that he knows, .Merritt v. American Stevedores, 15 N.J.Misc. .710, 195 A. 382; notice, Lally v. Cronen, 247 N. Y. 58, 159 N.E. 723, 725; Wise v. Curdes, 219 Ind. 606, 40 N.E.2d 122, 126; notice or knowledge sufficient to excite attention and put person on guard and call for inquiry, Iberville Land Co. v. Amerada Petroleum Corporation, C. C.A.La., 141 F.2d 384, 389; Hayward Lumber & Investment Co. v. Orondo Mines, 34 Cal.App.2d 697, 94 P.2d 380, 382, 383; Reynolds v. Moseley, C.C.A.Ark., 32 F.2d 979, 981; personal cognizance or knowledge or means of knowledge, The Chickie, D.C.Pa., 54 F.Supp. 19, 20; Taylor v. Moore, 87 Utah 493, 51 P.2d 222, 229; In re Eastern Transp. Co., D.C.Md., 37 F.2d 355, 363; state of being or having become aware of fact or truth; United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Smith, 231 Ala. 169, 164 So. 70, 82, 103 A.L.R. 1468; Howard v. Whittaker, 250 Ky. 836, 64 S.W.2d 173.

"Knowledge" consists in the perception of the truth of affirmative or negative propositions, while "belief" admits of all degrees, from the slightest suspicion to the fullest assurance. State v. Godette, 188 N.C. 497, 125 S.E. 24, 28; Franken v. State, 190 Wis. 424, 209 N.W. 766, 769. The difference between them is ordinarily merely in the degree, to be judged of by the court, when addressed to the court; by the jury, when addressed to the jury. Hatch v. Carpenter, 9 Gray, Mass., 271. See Utley v. Hill, 155 Mo".

Knowledge may be imputed, when the means of knowledge exists, known and accessible to the party, and capable of communicating positive information. Smith v. Industrial Acc. Commission of California, 174 Cal. 199, 162 P. 636, 637; Scheckells v. Ice Plant Mining Co., Mo.App., 180 S.W. 12, 15; Hopkins v. McCarthy, 121 Me. 27, 115 A.. 513, 515. However closely actual notice may, in many instances, approximate knowledge, and constructive notice may be its equivalent in effect, there may be actual notice without knowledge; and, when constructive notice is made the test to determine priorities of right, it may fall far short of knowledge. Cleveland Woolen Mills v. Sibert, 21 Ala. 140, 1 So. 773; Dodge v. Grain Shippers' Mut. Fire Ins. Ass'n, 176 Iowa 316, 157 N.W. 955, 961; Stanton v. Hawkins, 41 R.I. 501, 103 A. 229, 230. Thus, oral notice to employer by employe of injury is not "knowledge" of the injury, excusing employe's failure to give notice of injury required by Workmen's Compensation Act. In re Brown, 228 Mass. 31, 116 N.E. 897, 898; In re Simmons, 117 Me. 175, 103 A. 68.

"Knowledge" of contents of an instrument must include understanding of its actual contents. Mitchell v. Slye, 137 Md. 89, 111 A. 814, 819.

Law regards as "knowledge" reckless misrepresentation, with intent to deceive, about that which party pretended to know but knew nothing. Holt v. Gloer, 44 Ga.App. 685, 162 S.E. 663, 664.

Carnal knowledge. See Carnal Knowledge.

Knowledge of another's peril. One has "knowledge of peril of another," within doctrine of discovered peril, whenever it reasonably appears from the known facts and circumstances that the latter is pursuing a course which will probably terminate in serious bodily injury to him, and that he probably will pursue it to the end. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wagner, Tex.Com. App., 298 S.W. 552, 554.

Knowledge of law includes knowledge of the decisions of the courts, which are part of the law. Spitzer v. Board of Trustees for Regina Public School Dist. No. 4, of Saskatchewan, C.C.A.Ohio, 267 F. 121, 126.

Personal knowledge. Knowledge of the truth in regard to a particular fact or allegation, which is original, and does not depend on information or hearsay. Personal knowledge of an allegation in an answer is personal knowledge of its truth or falsity; and if the allegation is a negative one, this necessarily includes a knowledge of the truth or falsity of the allegation denied. West v. Home Ins. Co., C.C.Or., 18 F. 622.

KNOWN. Familiar; perceived; recognized; understood; especially, when used absolutely, familiar to all; generally understood or perceived, and term may, according to context, refer to both actual and constructive knowledge. Wolf v. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, 336 Mo. 746, 81 S.W.2d 323, 333; McCullough v. National Bank of Union City, 127 Pa.Super. 452, 193 A. 65, 66.

KNOWN HEIRS. In a statute relating to the sale of property of unknown heirs, it has been held to mean those persons who are known, and whose right to inherit, or the extent of whose right, to inherit, is dependent on the non-existence of other persons nearer or as near as the ancestor in the line of descent. People v. Ryder, 65 Hun 175, 19 N.Y.S. 977.

KORAN. The Mohammedan book of faith. It contains both ecclesiastical and secular laws.

KOSHUBA. The Jewish "Koshuba" is a marriage contract or marriage settlement. Hurwitz v. Hurwitz, 216 App.Div. 362, 215 N.Y.S. 184, 185.

KULEANA. The Hawaiian term "kuleana" means a small area of land, such as were awarded in fee by the Hawaiian monarch, about the year 1850, to all Hawaiians who made application therefor. De Fries v. Scott, C.C.A.Hawaii, 268 F. 952, 953.

KUT-ItUBALA. In Hindu law. A mortgage-deed or deed of conditional sale, being one of the customary deeds or instruments of security in India as declared by regulation of 1806, which regulates the legal proceedings to be taken to enforce such a security. It is also called "Byebil-Wuffa." Wharton.

KYMORTHA. A Welsh term for a waster, rhymer, minstrel, or other vagabond who makes assemblies and collections. Barring. Ob. St. 360.

KYTH. Sax. Kin or kindred.

L

L. This letter, as a Roman numeral, stands for the number "fifty." It is also used as an abbreviation for "law," "liber," (a book,) "lord," and some other words of which it is the initial.

L. 5. An abbreviation of "Long Quinto," one of the parts of the Year Books.

L. C. An abbreviation which may stand either for "Lord Chancellor," "Lower Canada," or "Leading Cases."

"Limitations" and "laches" are not synonymous; but "limitations" signifies the fixed statutory period within which an action may be brought for some act done to preserve a right, while "laches" signifies delay independent of statute. In re Van Tassell's Will, 119 Misc. 478, 196 N.Y.S. 491, 494.

LACHES, ESTOPPEL BY. A failure to do something which should be done or to claim or enforce a right at a proper time. Hutchinson v. Kenney, C.C.A.N.C., 27 F.2d 254, 256. A neglect to do something which one should do, or to seek to enforce a right at a proper time. Jett v. Jett, 171 Ky. 548, 188 S.W. 669, 672. A species of "equitable estoppel" or "estoppel by matter in pais." See titles "Equitable Estoppel" and "In Pais, Estoppel In".

An element of the doctrine is that the defendant's alleged change of position for the worse must have been induced by or resulted from the conduct, misrepresentation, or silence of the plaintiff. Croyle v. Croyle, 184 Md. 126, 40 A.2d 374, 379. Delay in enforcement of rights until condition of other party has become so changed that he cannot be restored to his former state. Wisdom's Adm'r v. Sims, 284 Ky. 258, 144 S.W.2d 232, 235, 236; Oak Lawn Cemetery of Baltimore County v. Baltimore County Com'rs, 174 Md. 356, 198 A. 600, 605, 115 A.L.R. 1478. Essence of "laches" is estoppel. Burke v. Gunther, 128 N.J.Eq. 565, 17 A.2d 481, 487. Laches is a species of estoppel. Bankers' Trust Co. v. Rood, 211 Iowa 289, 233 N.W. 794, 802, 73 A.L.R. 1421; Stewart v. Pelt, 198 Ark. 776, 131 S.W.2d 644, 648. To create "estoppel by laches" party sought to be estopped must with knowledge of transaction have done something to mislead other party to his prejudice. Wisdom's Adm'r v. Sims, 144 S.W.2d 232, 235, 236, 284 Ky. 258.

LACK OF JURISDICTION. The phrase may mean lack of power to act in a particular manner or to give certain kinds of relief. In re Rowe's Estate, 66 Cal.App.2d 594, 152 P.2d 765, 770. It may consist in court's total want of power to act at all, or lack of power to act in particular case because conditions essential to exercise of jurisdiction have not been complied with. State v. Williams, 209 Wis. 541, 245 N.W. 663, 665.

LAND, in the most general sense, comprehends any ground, soil, or earth whatsoever; as fields, meadows, pastures, woods, moors, waters, marshes, furies, and heath. Co. Litt. 4a; Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 296; Holmes v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 53 F.2d 960, 963.

In its more limited sense, "land" denotes the quantity and character of the interest or estate which the tenant may own in land. Holmes v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 53 F.2d 960, 963. "Land" may include any estate or interest in lands, either legal or equitable, easements, incorporeal hereditaments. Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 297; Jones v. Magruder, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 193, 198; Lynch v. Cunningham, 131 Cal. App. 164, 21 P.2d 154; Petition of Burnquist, 220 Minn. 48, 19 N.W.2d 394, 401; Cuff v. Koslosky, 165 Okl. 135, 25 P.2d 290. The land is one thing, and the estate in land is another thing, for an estate in land is a time in land or land for a time. Plowd. 555.

Technically land signifies everything which may be holden; and the term is defined as comprehending all things of a permanent and substantial nature, and even of an unsubstantial, provided they be permanent. Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 296.

Ordinarily, the term is used as descriptive of the subject of ownership and not the ownership. Southern Pac. Co. v. Riverside County, 35 Cal.App.2d 380, 95 P.2d 688, 692.

"Land" includes not only the soil or earth, but also things of a permanent nature affixed thereto or found therein, whether by nature, as water, trees, grass, herbage, other natural or perennial products, growing crops or trees, mineral under the surface, or by the hand of man, as buildings, fixtures, fences, bridges, as well as works constructed for use of water, such as dikes, canals, etc. Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 296; City of Newport News v. Warwick County, 159 Va. 571, 166 S.E. 570, 580; Morris Plan Bank of Fort Worth v. Ogden, Tex.Civ.App., 144 S.W.2d 998, 1002; 2 Bl.Comm. 16, 17; Sox v. Miracle, 35 N.D. 458, 160 N.W. 716, 719; Wynn v. Margate City, 9 N.J.Misc. 1324, 157 A. 565, 566. It embraces not only the surface of the earth, but everything under or over it. Gas Products Co. v. Rankin, 63 Mont. 372, 207 P. 993, 997, 24 A.L.R. 294; Garnsey Coal Co. v. Mudd, C.C.A.Ala., 281 F. 183, 184; Jones v. Vermont Asbestos Corporation, 108 Vt. 79. 182 A. 291, 303; Holloway's Unknown Heirs v. Whatley, Tex.Civ.App., 104 S.W.2d 646, 648. It has in its legal signification an indefinite extent upward and downward. Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 296; Bituminous Casualty Corporation v. Walsh & Wells, Mo.App., 170 S.W.2d 117, 121. It may include a franchise connected with land. Delaney v. Lowery, 25 Ca1.2d 561, 154 P.2d 674, 679.

Land is or includes the solid material of the earth, whatever may be the ingredients of which it is composed, whether soil, rock, or other substance. Civ.Code Cal. § 659; Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 296.

Philosophically, it seems more correct to say that the word "land" means, in law, as in the vernacular, the soil, or portion of the earth's crust; and to explain or justify such expressions as that "whoever owns the land owns the buildings above and the minerals below," upon the view, not that these are within the extension of the term "land," but that they are so connected with it that by rules of law they pass by a conveyance of the land. This view makes "land," as a term, narrower in signification than "realty ;" though it would allow an instrument speaking of land to operate co-extensively with one granting realty or real property by either of those terms. But many of the authorities use the expression "land" as including these incidents to the soil. Abbott.

The term "land" may be used interchangeably with "property ;" it may include anything that may be classed as real estate or real property. Reynard v. City of Caldwell, 55 Idaho 342, 42 P.2d 292, 297.

The term "lands" designates all real estate. Enzor v. State, 167 So. 336, 338, 27 Ala.App. 60.

The word "lands" is ordinarily synonymous with "real estate" or "real property". Lincoln Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Fort Wayne v. Nathan, 215 Ind. 178, 19 N.E.2d 243. 247; Southern Pac. Co. v. Riverside County, 35 Cal.App.2d 380, 95 P.2d 688, 692.

LAND CERTIFICATE. An obligation of government entitling owner to secure designated quantity of land by following the requirements of law. State v. Balli, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 522, 538.

Upon the registration of freehold land under the English land transfer act, 1875, a certificate is given to the registered r-onrietor. and similarly upon every transfer of registered land. This registration supersedes the necessity of any further registration in the register counties. Sweet.

It contains a description of the land as it appears on the register and the name and address of the proprietor, and is prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein set forth.

LAND COP. The sale of land which was evidenced in early English law by the transfer of a rod or festuca (q. v.) as a s^{y}mbol of possession which was handed by the seller to the reeve and by the reeve to the purchaser. The conveyance was made in court, it is supposed, for securing better evidence of it, and barring the claims of expectant heirs; Maitl. Domesd. B. 323.

LAND COURT. In American law. A court formerly existing in St. Louis, Mo., having a limited territorial jurisdiction over actions concerning real property, and suits for dower, partition, etc.

LAND DAMAGES. See Damages.

LAND DEPARTMENT, That office of the United States government which has jurisdiction and charge of the public lands, including the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office and their subordinate officers, and being in effect the department of the interior considered with reference to its powers and duties concerning the public lands. See U. S. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., Minn., 67 F. 956, 15 C.C.A. 96; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Barden, C.C.Mont., 46 F. 617.

LAND DISTRICT. A division of a state or territory, created by federal authority, in which is located a United-States land office, with a "register of the land office" and a "receiver of public money," for the disposition of the public lands within the district. See U. S. v. Smith, C.C.Or., 11 F. 491.

LAND GABEL. A tax or rent issuing out of land.

Spelman says it was originally a penny for every house. This land-gabel, or land-gavel, in the register of Domesday, was a quit-rent for the site of a house, or the land whereon it stood; the same with what we now call "ground-rent." Wharton.

LAND GRANT. A donation of public lands to a subordinate government, a corporation, or an individual; as, from the United States to a state, or to a railroad company to aid in the construction of its road.

LAND, LAW OF. See Law of the Land.

LAND OFFICES. Government offices, subordinate to the general land office, established in various parts of the United States, for the transaction of local business relating to the survey, location, settlement, pre-emption, and sale of the public lands. See General Land Office.

LAND—POOR. The term generally means that a man has a great deal of unproductive land, and perhaps is obliged to borrow money to pay taxes; but a mai "land-poor" may be largely responsible. Matteson v. Blackmer, 46 Mich. 397, 9 N.W. 445.

LAND—REEVE. A person whose business it is to overlook certain parts of a farm or estate; to attend not only to the woods and hedge-timber, but also to the state of the fences. gates, buildings, private roads, driftways, and water-courses; and likewise to the stocking of commons, and encroachments of every kind, as well as to prevent or detect waste and spoil in general, whether by the tenants or others; and to report the same to the manager or land steward. Enc. Lond.

These lands have been so largely granted away to subjects that they are now contracted within very narrow limits. The crown was so much improverished in this manner by William III, that the stat. 1 Anne, c. 7, § 5, was passed, which, with stat. 34 George III, c. 75, which amends and continues it, makes void all grants or leases from the ground of royal manors or other possessions connected with land for a period exceeding thirty-one years, or three lives. Long prior to this a Scottish stat. 1445, c. 41, had made necessary the consent of parliament in case of the alienation of crown property. It is said that none of these statutes have succeeded in checking the practice. Early at the beginning of the reign of George III. the hereditary crown revenues derived from escheats, manors held in capite, estrays, fines, etc., were surrendered by the king to the general funds, and in the place of them he received a specified sum annually for the civil list.

LAND STEWARD. A person who overlooks or has the management of a farm or estate.

LAND TAX. A tax laid upon the legal- or beneficial owner of real property, and apportioned upon the assessed value of his land. A tax on land. Texas Co. v. Moynier, 129 Cal.App. 738, 19 P.2d 280, 282.

LAND TENANT. The person actually in possession of land; otherwise styled the "terre-tenant."

LAND TITLES AND TRANSFER ACT. An English statute (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87) providing for the establishment of a registry for titles to real property, and making sundry provisions for the transfer of lands and the recording of the evidences thereof. It presents some analogies to the recording laws of the American states.

LAND WAITER. In English law. An officer of the customhouse, whose duty is, upon landing any merchandise, to examine, taste, weigh, or measure it, and to take an account thereof.

In some ports they also execute the office of a coast waiter. They are likewise occasionally styled "searchers" and are to attend and join with the patent searcher in the execution of all cockets for the shipping of goods to be exported to foreign parts; and, in cases where drawbacks on bounties are to be paid to the merchant on the exportation of any goods, they, as well as the patent searchers, are to certify the shipping thereof on the debentures. Enc. Lond.

LAND WARRANT. A warrant issued at the local land offices of the United States to purchasers of public lands, on the surrender of which at the general land office at Washington, they receive a conveyance from the general government.

The evidence which the state, on good consideration. gives that the person therein named is entitled to the quantity of land therein specified, the bounds and description of which the owner of the warrant may fix by entry and survey, in the section of country set apart for its location and satisfaction. Neal v. President, etc., of East Tennessee College, 6 Yerg., Tenn., 205.

LANDEA. In old English law. A ditch or trench for conveying water from marshy grounds. Spelman.

LANDED. As used in a revenue act levying tolls on goods, the clear meaning and purport is "substantially imported." L. R. 4 Ex. 260.

Consisting in real e§tate or land; having an estate in land.

LANDED ESTATE OR PROPERTY. A colloquial or popular phrase to denote real property. Landed estate ordinarily means an interest in and pertaining to lands. Police Jury of Parish of St. Mary v. Harris, 10 La.Ann. 676.

In a tax law it "clearly embraces not only the land, but all houses, fixtures, and improvements of every kind thereon, and all machinery, neat cattle, horses, and mules, when attached to and used on a plantation or farm." A. person holding such an estate is termed a landed proprietor. 10 La.Ann. 676. A devise of "all my landed property" carries the fee; Fogg v. Clark, 1 N.H. 163; and so does "my landed estate"; Bradstreet v. Clarke, 12 Wend., N.Y., 602.

Real estate in general, or sometimes, by local usage, suburban or rural land, as distinguished from real estate situated in a city. See Electric Co. v. Baltimore, 93 Md. 630, 49 A..655, 52 L.R.A. 772; Sindall v. Baltimore, 93 Md. 526, 49 A. 645.

LANDED ESTATES COURT. In English law. Tribunals established by statute for the purpose of disposing more promptly and easily than could be done through the ordinary judicial machinery, of incumbered real estate.

These courts were first established in Ireland by the act of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 48, which being defective was followed by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 77. The purpose of these was to enable the owner, or a lessee for any less than 63 years unexpired, of land subject to incumbrance, to apply to commissioners who constituted a court of record to direct a sale. This court was called the Incumbered Estates Court. A new tribunal called the Landed Estates Court was created by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 72, which abolished the former court and established a permanent tribunal.

LANDED PROPRIETOR. Any person having an estate in lands whether highly improved or not. Police Jury of Parish of St. Mary v. Harris, 10 La.Ann. 677.

LANDED SECURITIES. Mortgages or other incumbrances affecting land. 3 Atk. 805, 808.

LANDEFRICUS. A landlord; a lord of the soil.

LANDEGANDMAN. Sax. In old English law. A kind of customary tenant or inferior tenant of a manor. Spelman.

LANDGRAVE. A name formerly given to those who executed justice on behalf of the German emperors, with regard to the internal policy of the country. It was applied, by way of eminence, to those sovereign princes of the empire who possessed by inheritance certain estates called "landgravates," of which they received investiture from the emperor. Enc. Lond.

LANDHLAFORD. A proprietor of land; lord of the soil. Anc. Inst. Eng.

LANDIMER. In old Scotch law. A measurer of land. Skene.

LANDING. A place on a river or other navigable water for lading and unlading goods, or for the reception and delivery of passengers; the terminus of a road on a river or other navigable water, for the use of travelers, and the loading and unloading of goods. State v. Randall, 1 Strob., S.C., 111, 47 Am.Dec. 548; State v. Louisiana Terminal Co., 179 La. 671, 154 So. 731.

A place for loading or unloading boats, but not a harbor for them. Hays v. Briggs, 74 Pa. 373.

A place laid out by a town as a common landing place and used as such, but not designated as for the particular benefit of the town, is a public landing place.

LANDIRECTA. In Saxon law. Services and duties laid upon all that held land, including the three obligations called "trinoda necessitas," (q. v.;) quasi land rights. Cowell.

LANDLOCKED. An expression sometimes applied to a piece of land belonging to one person and surrounded by land belonging to other persons, so that it cannot be approached except over their land. L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 798; Sweet.

LANDLORD. He of whom lands or tenements are holden. He who, being the owner of an estate in land, has leased it for a term of years, on a rent reserved, to another person, called the "tenant." Jackson v. Harsen, 7 Cow., N.Y., 326, 17 Am.Dec. 517; Becker v. Becker, 13 App.Div. 342, 43 N.Y.S. 17. Person letting land. Stone v. City of Los Angeles, 114 Cal.App. 192, 299 P. 838, 841.

When the absolute property in or fee-simple of the land belongs to a landlord, he is then sometimes denominated the "ground landlord," in contradistinction to such a one as is possessed only of a limited or particular interest in land, and who himself holds under a superior landlord. Brown.

"Landlord" is ordinarily referred to as owner of tenement, to whom tenant pays rent, but is also defined as master or proprietor of inn or of lodging or boarding house. Murray v. Hagens, La.App., 143 So. 505, 506.

LANDLORD AND TENANT. A phrase used to denote the familiar legal relation existing between lessor and lessee of real estate.

The relation is contractual, Renshaw v. Sullivan, Tex. Civ. App., 14 S.W.2d 919, 921; Story v. Lyon Realty Corporation, 308 Mass. 66, 30 N.E.2d 845, 847; Smith v. Royal Ins. Co., C.C.A.Cal., 111 F.2d 667, 670, 671, 130 A.L.R. 812. A lease (or agreement therefor) of lands for a term of years, from year to year, for life, or at will creates the relation. Dutton v. Dutton, 122 Kan. 640, 253 P. 553, 554; Minneapolis Iron Store Co. v. Branum, 36 N.D. 355, 162 N. W. 543, 545, L.R.A.1917E, 298. The relation exists where one person occupies premises of another in subordination to other's title or rights and with his permission or consent. Gates v. Herberger, 202 Minn. 610, 279 N.W. 711, 712; Wood v. Homelvig, 68 N.D. 735, 283 N.W. 278, 282; Marden v. Radford, 229 Mo.App. 789, 84 S.W.2d 947, 954; Coggins v. Gregoris, C.C.A.N.M., 97 F.2d 948, 950, 951. There must be reversion in landlord, an estate in tenant, transfer of possession and control of premises, and, generally, a contract, express or implied. Marden v. Radford, 229 Mo.App. 789, 84 S.W.2d 947, 954, 955; Coggins v. Gregorio, C.C.A.N.M., 97 F.2d 948, 950, 951.

LANDLORD'S WARRANT. A distress warrant; a warrant from a landlord to levy upon the tenant's goods and chattels, and sell the same at public sale, to compel payment of the rent or the observance of some other stipulation in the lease.

LANDMARK. A monument or erection set up on the boundary line of two adjoining estates, to fix such boundary. The removing of a landmark is a wrong for which an action lies. Collins v. Brittingham, 90 A. 420, 5 Boyce (Del.) 89.

LANDS. This term, the plural of "land," is said, at common law, to be a word of less extensive signification than either "tenements" or "hereditaments." But in some of the states it has been provided by statute that it shall include both those terms.

LANDS CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION ACTS. The name given to certain English statutes, (8 Vict. c. 8, amended by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 106, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 18,) the object of which was to provide legislative clauses in a convenient form for incorporation by reference in future special acts of parliament for taking lands, with or without the consent of their owners, for the promotion of railways, and other public undertakings. Mozley & Whiteley.

LANDS, PUBLIC. See Public Lands.

LANDS, TENEMENTS, AND HEREDITAMENTS. The technical and most comprehensive description of real property, as "goods and chattels" is of personalty. Williams, Real Prop. 5.

The term refers to property in land. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank of Denver v. Dixon, 57 Wyo. 523, 122 P.2d 842, 846, 140 A.L.R. 1270. Under ancient law, the words comprehended only freehold estate and did not apply to easements or other incorporeal hereditaments. Hester v. Sawyers, 41 N.M. 497, 71 P.2d 646, 649, 112 A.L.R. 586.

LANDSLAGH. In Swedish law. A body of common law, compiled about the thirteenth century, out of the particular customs of every province; being analogous to the common law of England. 1 Bl.Comm. 66.

LANDWARD. In Scotch law. Rural. 7 Bell, App. Cas. 2.

LANGEMAN. A lord of a manor. 1 Inst. 5.

LANGEMANNI. The lords of manors. 1 Co. Inst. 5.

LANGEOLUM. An undergarment made of wool, formerly worn by the monks, which reached to their knees. Mon. Angl. 419.

LANGUAGE. Any means of conveying or communicating ideas; specifically, human speech, or the expression of ideas by written characters. The letter, or grammatical import, of a document or instrument, as distinguished from its spirit; as "the language of the statute." See Behling v. State, 110 Ga. 754, 36 S.E. 85; Stevenson v. State, 90 Ga. 456, 16 S.E. 95; Cavan v. Brooklyn, City Ct. Brook., 5 N.Y.S. 759. As to "offensive language," see Offensive Language.

LANGUIDUS. (Lat., sick.) In practice. The name of a return made by the sheriff when a defendant, whom he has taken by virtue of process, is so dangerously sick that to remove him would endanger his life or health. 3 Chit. Pr. 249, 358.

LANIS DE CRESCENTIA WALLIIE TRADUCENDIS ABSQUE CUSTUMA, etc. An ancient writ that lay to the customer of a port to permit one to pass wool without paying custom, he having paid it before in Wales. Reg, Orig. 279.

LANNS MANUS (Old Fr.). A lord of the manor. Kelham.

LANO NIGER. A sort of base coin, formerly current in England. Cowell.

LANZAS. In Spanish law. A commutation in money, paid by the nobles and high officers, in lieu of the quota of soldiers they might be required to furnish in war. Trevino v. Fernandez, 13 Tex. 660.

LAPIDATION. The act of stoning a person to death.

LAPIDICINA. Lat. In the civil law. A stone-quarry. Dig. 7, 1, 9, 2.

LAPILLI. Lat. In the civil law. Precious stones. Dig. 34, 2, 19, 17. Distinguished from "gems," (gemmce.) Id.

LAPIS MARMORIUS. A marble stone about twelve feet long and three feet broad, placed at the upper end of Westminster Hall, where was likewise a marble chair erected on the middle thereof, in which the English sovereigns anciently sat at their coronation dinner, and at other times the lord chancellor. Wharton.

LAPPAGE. A term synonymous with "interference," "conflict," "interlock," "lap" and "overlap" as regards adverse possession. It applies to a situation existing when a deed under which one party claims and grant under which another claims cover in large part the same land. Turk v. Wilson's Heirs, 265 Ky. 78, 98 S.W.2d 4, 8; Berry v. Coppersmith, 212 N.C. 50, 193 S.E. 3, 6.

LAPSE, v. To glide; to pass slowly, silently, or by degrees. To slip; to deviate from the proper path. Webster. To fall or fail. Life & Casualty Ins. Co. of Tennessee v. Wheeler, 265 Ky. 269, 96 S.W.2d 753, 755, 106 A.L.R. 1270.

LAPSE, n. The termination or failure of a right or privilege through neglect to exercise it within some limit of time, or through failure of some contingency. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Wilmington Trust Co., 25 Del.Ch. 204, 15 A.2d 830, 834.

In criminal proceedings. "Lapse" is used, in England, in the same sense as "abate" in ordinary procedure; i. e., to signify that the proceedings came to an end by the death of one of the parties or some other event.

In ecclesiastical law. The transfer, by forfeiture of a right to present or collate to a vacant benefice from a person vested with such right to another, in consequence of some act of negligence by the former. Ayl.Par. 331.

In the law of wills. The failure of a testamen• tary gift. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Wilmington Trust Co., 25 Del.Ch. 204, 15 A.2d 830, 834; Gredig v. Sterling, C.C.A.Tex., 47 F.2d 832, 834.

LAPSE PATENT. A patent for land issued in substitution for an earlier patent to the same land, which was issued to another party, but has lapsed in consequence of his neglect to avail himself of it. Wilcox v. Calloway, 1 Wash., Va., 39.

LAPSED DEVISE, See Devise.

LAPSED LEGACY. See Legacy.

LAPSED POLICY. A policy on which there has been default in payment of premiums; policy remaining in force according to statutory provisions after such default. Metcalf v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 1 Cal.App.2d 481, 37 P.2d 115.

LARBOARD. The left side of a ship or boat when one stands with his-face towards the bow.

The opposite term is starboard, which is the right-hand side looking forward. The word is now, however, no longer used, the term port having been substituted for it. The change was made by order of the English admiralty, for the very obvious reason that larboard was apt to be confused with the opposite term.

LARCENOUS. Having the character of larceny; as a "larcenous taking." Contemplating or intending larceny; as a "larcenous purpose."

LARCENOUS INTENT. A larcenous intent exists where a man knowingly takes and carries away the goods of another without any claim or pretense or right, with intent wholly to deprive the owner of them or convert them to his own use. Wilson v. State, 18 Tex.App. 274, 51 Am.Rep. 309.

LARCENY. Felonious stealing, taking and carrying, leading, riding, or driving away another's personalty, 4 Bl.Comm. 229; People v. Brickey, 346 Ill. 273, 178 N.E. 483, 485; State v. Miller, 170 La. 51, 127 So. 361, 362; with intent to convert it or to deprive owner thereof, Ledbetter v. State, 24 Ala.App. 447, 136 So. 430; Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. House, 163 Tenn. 585, 45 S.W.2d 55, 56; Commonwealth v. Estes, 265 Ky. 186, 96 S.W. 2d 578, 580.

Larceny is fraudulent taking and carrying away of a thing without claim of right, with intention of converting it to a use other than that of the owner, without his consent. Thomas v. Kessler, 334 Pa. 7, 5 A.2d 187, 188; Fitch v. State, 135 Fla. 361, 185 So. 435, 437, 439, 440, 125 A.L.R. 360; Hanes Funeral Home v. Dixie Fire Ins. Co., 216 N: C. 562, 5 S.E.2d 820, 821, 822; receiving possession of personalty with intent to convert it to own use, and with intent of person parting with It to part merely with his possession, Hagan v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 127, 134 P.2d 1042, 1047, 1048, 1050; taking and removing, by trespass, of personal property which trespasser knows to belong either generally or specially to another, with intent to deprive him of his ownership, State v. Broom, 135 Or. 641, 297 P. 340, 342; State v. Levy, 113 Vt. 459, 35 A.2d 853, 854, and, perhaps it should be added, for the sake of some advantage to the trespasser,-a proposition on which the decisions are not harmonious, .2 Bish.Crim.Law, §§ 757, 758; taking of personalty by fraud or stealth, and with intent to deprive another thereof, Pen. Code Dak. § 580 (Comp.Laws N.D. 1913, § 9913 Rev. Code S.D.1919, § 4210); Hughes v. State, 61 Okl.Cr. 40, 65 P.2d 544, 546; Bussart v. State, 128 Fla. 891, 176 So. 32, 33; unlawful acquisition of property with intent to convert to taker's use and appropriation by taker, State v. Smith, 2 Wash.2d 118, 98 P.2d 647, 648, 649; unlawful or felonious taking and carrying away of things personal with intent to deprive rightful owner of it, 4 Steph.Comm. 152; Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. House, 163 Tenn. 585, 45 S.W.2d 55, 56; Bowling v. Hamblen County Motor Co., 16 Tenn.App. 52, 66 S.W.2d 229; wrongful and fraudulent taking and carrying away by one of personal goods of another with felonious intent to convert them to his own use and make them his own property, or to deprive the owner permanently of his property, without owner's consent, Commonwealth v. Estes, 265 Ky. 186, 96 S.W.2d 578. 580; State v. Savage. Del.. 7 W.W.Harr. 509, 188 A. 738, 739; State v. Delk, 212 N.C. 631, 194 S.E. 94; Hickman v. State, 25 Ala.App. 279, 145 So. 167, 168; wrongful or felonious taking property of another, without his consent and against his will, with intent to convert it to use of the taker, Hammon's Case, 2 Leach, 1089, State v. Boswell, 195 N.C. 496, 142 S.E. 583, 584; State v. Fulks, 114 W.Va. 785, 173 S.E. 888, 889.

Obtaining possession of property by fraud, trick or device with preconceived design or intent to appropriate, convert or steal is "larceny." John v. United States, 65 App.D.C. 11, 79 F.2d 136, People v. Cook, 10 Cal.App.2d 54, 51 P.2d 169. 171; State v. Wisman, 111 W.Va. 183, 161 S.E. 437, 438; Nugent v. Union Automobile Ins. Co., 140 Or. 61, 13 P.2d 343, 344.

Common-law distinctions between obtaining money under false pretenses, embezzlement, and larceny no longer exist in l.Tew York, but all such crimes are embraced within definition of "larceny." People v. Krumme, 161 Misc. 278, 292 N.Y.S. 657, 660.

Generally, one who unlawfully takes another's personal property, not intending to steal, and afterwards converts it, intending to steal, is guilty of "larceny". Calhoun v. State, 191 Miss. 82, 2 So.2d 802, 804, 805.

Every act of thief in the removal of property is in itself a complete "larceny". Schultz v. Lainson, 234 Iowa 606, 13 N.W.2d 326, 327, 156 A.L.R. 858.

Common Law Larceny

Felonious taking and carrying away of personal goods of another, Fowler v. Firth, 163 Misc. 942, 298 N.Y.S. 723, 726, with intent to convert it to taker's use. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, C.C.A.N.J., 79 F.2d 642, 644.

It is obtaining possession of another's property by fraudulent trick or device, with intent to convert it to own use. Powers v. State, 31 Ala.App. 614, 21 So.2d 282, 285; removal of personalty which trespasser knows to belong to another, with felonious intent to deprive him of his ownership, U. S. v. Patton, C.C.A.Pa., 120 F.2d 73, 75, 76; Austin v. State, 65 Ga.App. 733, 16 S.E.2d 497, 499; taking and carrying away personal property of another without his consent, feloniously, with intent to deprive owner of his property permanently, and to convert it to use of taker, or of some person other than the owner, Fowler v. Firth, 163 Misc. 942, 298 N.Y.S. 723, 72Q; trespassory taking and asportation, Crabb v. Zerbst, C.C.A.Ga., 99 F.2d 562, 564; unpermitted obtaining of possession of another's chattel and removal thereof, Crabb v. Zerbst, C.C.A.Ga., 99 F.2d 562, 564; wrongful or fraudulent taking and carrying away of the personal goods of another with felonious intent to convert them to the taker's own use and make them his own property without owner's consent. Riley v. State, 64

Okl.Cr. 183, 78 P.2d 712, 715, 716; Hatfield v. Guay, C.C.A. N.H., 87 F.2d 358, 363; Fowler v. Firth, 163 Misc. 942, 298 N.Y.S. 723, 726.

Compound Larceny

Larceny or theft accomplished ny taking the thing stolen either from one's person or from his house; otherwise called "mixed" larceny, and distinguished from "simple" or "plain" larceny, in which the theft is not aggravated by such an intrusion either upon the person or the dwelling. Anderson v. Winfree, 85 Ky. 597, 4 S.W. 351; State v. Chambers, 22 W.Va. 786, 46 Am.Rep. 550.

Constructive Larceny

One where the felonious intent to appropriate the goods to his own use, at the time of the asportation, is made out by construction from the defendant's conduct, although, originally, the taking was not apparently felonious. 2 East, P.C. 685; 1 Leach, 212

False Pretense and Larceny Distinguished

See False Pretenses.

Grand Larceny

In criminal law. In England, simple larceny, was originally divided into two sorts,—grand larceny, where the value of the goods stolen was above twelve pence, and petit larceny, where their value was equal to or below that sum. 4 Bl. Comm. 229.

The distinction was abolished in England by St. 7 & Geo. IV. c. 29, and is not generally recognized in the United States, although in a few states there is a statutory offense of grand larceny, one essential element of which is the value of the goods stolen, which value varies. See State v. Bean, 74 Vt. 111, 52 A. 269; People v. Murray, 8 Cal. 520; State v. Kennedy, 88 Mo. 343.

Larceny by Bailee

In Pennsylvania law. The crime of larceny committed where any person, being a bailee of any property, shall fraudulently take or convert the same to his own use, or to the use of any other person except the owner thereof, although he shall not break bulk or otherwise determine the bailment. Brightly's Purd. Dig. p. 436, § 177 (18 P.S. § 4816). And see Welsh v. People, 17 Ill. 339; State v. Skinner, 29 Or. 599, 46 P. 368.

Larceny from the Person

Act of taking property from the person by merely lifting it from the person or pocket. State v. Stanton, Mo., 68 S.W.2d 811, 812.

Larceny committed where the property stolen is on the person or in the immediate charge or custody of the person from whom the theft is made, but without such circumstances of force or violence as would ccnstitute robbery, including pocket-picking and such crimes. Williams v. U. S., 3 App.D.C. 345; State v. Eno, 8 Minn. 220, Gil. 190.

Mixed Larceny

Otherwise called "compound" or "complicated larceny;" that which is attended with circumstances of aggravation or violence to the person, or taking from a house.

Petit Larceny

The larceny of things whose value was below a certain arbitrary standard, at common law twelve pence. See Ex parte Bell, 19 Fla. 612; Barnhart v. State, 154 Ind. 177, 56 N.E. 212; People v. Righetti, 66 Cal. 184, 4 P. 1185,

Simple Larceny

Felonious or wrongful taking and carrying away of personal goods of another. People v. Pace, 2 Cal.App.2d 464, 38 P.2d 202, 203. With intent to steal, Belmas v. State, 15 Ga.App. 288, 82 S.E. 819, unattended by acts of violence.

Larceny which is not complicated or aggravated with acts of violence. Larceny from the person, or with force and violence, is called "compound" larceny. See State v. Chambers, 22 W.Va. 786, 46 Am.Rep. 550; Anderson v. Winfree, 4 S.W. 351, 85 Ky. 597.

LARD. The clarified semi-solid oil of hog's fat. Cent. Dict. The pure fat of healthy swine. State v. Snow, 81 Iowa 642, 47 N.W. 777, 11 L.R.A. 355.

LARDARIUS REGIS. The king's larderer, or clerk of the kitchen. Cowell.

LARDING MONEY. In the manor of Bradford, in Wilts, the tenants pay to their lord a small yearly rent by this name, which is said to be for liberty to feed their hogs with the masts of the lord's wood, the fat of a hog being called "lard;" or it may be a commutation for some customary service of carrying salt or meat to the lord's larder. Mon. Angl. t. 1, p. 321.

LARGE. L. Fr. Broad; the opposite of "estreyte," strait or strict. Pures et larges. Britt. c. 34.

LARONS. In old English law. Thieves.

LAS PARTIDAS. In Spanish law. The name of a code of laws, more fully described as "Las Siete Partidas," ("the seven parts," from the number of its divisions,) which was compiled under the direction of Alphonso X., about the year 1250.

Its sources were the customary law of all the provinces, the canon law as there administered, and (chiefly) the Roman law. This work has always been regarded as of the highest authority in Spain and in those countries and states which have derived their jurisprudence from Spain.

LASCAR. A native Indian sailor; the term is also applied to tent pitchers, inferior artillery-men, and others.

LASCIVIOUS. Tending to excite lust; lewd; indecent; obscene; sexual impurity; tending to deprave the morals in respect to sexual relations; licentious. See Swearingen v. U. S., 161 U.S. 446, 16 S.Ct. 562, 40 L.Ed. 765; People on Complaint of Sumner v. Dial Press, 182 Misc. 416, 48 N.Y.S.2d 480, 481; Dunlop v. U. S., 165 U.S. 486, 17 S.Ct. 375, 41 L.Ed. 799; Purvis v. State, 117 Neb. 377, 220 N.W. 599, 600. Conduct which is wanton, lewd, and lustful, and tending to produce voluptuous or lewd emotions. Zeiner v. Zeiner, 120 Conn. 161, 179 A. 644, 646.

LASCIVIOUS CARRIAGE, In Connecticut. A term including those wanton acts between persons of different sexes that flow from the exercise of lustful passions, and which are not otherwise punished as crimes against chastity and public decency. 2 Swift, Dig. 343. It includes, also, indecent acts by one against the will of another. Fowler v. State, 5 Day, Conn., 81.

LASCIVIOUS COHABITATION. The offense committed by two persons (not married to each other) who live together in one habitation as man and wife and practice sexual intercourse.

LASHITE, or LASHLITE. A kind of forfeiture during the government of the Danes in England. Enc. Lond.

LAST, n. In old English law, signifies a burden; also a measure of weight used for certain commodities of the bulkier sort.

LAST, adj. Latest; ultimate; final; most recent.

LAST ANTECEDENT RULE. A canon of statutory construction that relative or qualifying words or phrases are to be applied to the words or phrases immediately preceding, and as not extending to or including other words, phrases, or clauses more remote, unless such extension or inclusion is clearly required by the intent and meaning of the context, or disclosed by an examination of the entire act. Stevens v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 306 Ill. 370, 137 N.E. 859, 861; Nebraska State Ry. Commission v. Alfalfa Butter Co., 104 Neb. 797, 178 N.W. 766, 768; Wisconsin Power & Light Co. v. Public Service Commission of Wisconsin, 224 Wis. 286, 272 N.W. 50, 52.

LAST CLEAR CHANCE. The "last clear chance doctrine" is that a party who has last clear chance to avoid damage or injury to another is liable. Johnston v. Brewer, 40 Cal.App.2d 583, 105 P.2d 365, 367; Miami Beach Ry. Co. v. Dohme, 131 Fla. 171, 179 So. 166, 169; Virginia Electric & Power Co. v. Whitehurst, 175 Va. 339, 8 S.E.2d 296, 299; that negligence of party having last opportunity of avoiding accident is sole proximate cause of injury, Malfetano v. United Electric Rys. Co., 58 R.I. 129, 191 A. 491, 498; Gregory v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 317 Miss. 636, 59 N.E.2d 471, 476, 159 A.L.R. 714; that if one has opportunity of avoiding inj uring another he must at his peril exercise the opportunity. Ferran v. Southern Pac. Co., 3 Cal. 2d 350, 44 P.2d 533, 534. It places liability upon him who commits the last proximate negligent act. Davis v. Cuesta, 146 Fla. 471, 1 So.2d 475, 476.

The doctrine is inapplicable unless injured party was guilty of negligence, Yellow Cab Corporation of Abingdon v. Henderson, 178 Va. 207, 16 S.E.2d 389, 393; Washam v. Peerless Automatic Staple Mach. Co., 45 Cal.App.2d 174, 113 P.2d 724, 728; and unless injured person is in an apparently helpless condition, Battle v. Southern Ry. Co., 223 N.C. 395, 26 S.E.2d 859.

The doctrine means that an injured party may recover, notwithstanding negligence: if defendant could have avoided injury after discovering or knowing of peril, Sprinkle v. Davis, C.C.A.Va., 111 F.2d 925, 928, 128 A.L.R. 1101; Weddle v. Virginian Ry. Co., 125 W.Va. 41, 22 S.E.2d 698, 701; Jones v. Yuma Motor Freight Terminal, 45 Cal.App.2d 497, 114 P.2d 438, 439, 440; Shea v. Pilette, 108 Vt. 446, 189 A. 154, 158, 109 A.L.R. 933, Stelter v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 71 N.D. 214, 299 N.W. 310, 313, 314; if injuring party, seeing or knowing or aware of peril, fails to use ordinary or due care and thereby causes injury, 'Underhill v. Peterson, 110 Cal.App. 221, 293 P. 861, 864; Groves v. Webster City, 222 Iowa 849, 270 N.W. 329, 332; Caplan v. Arndt, 123 Conn. 585, 196 A. 631, 633, 119 A.L.R. 1037; Kurn v. McCoy, 187 Okl. 210, 102 P.2d 177; if injury might have been avoided by exercise of reasonable care by defendant, Harstick v. Beckenhauer, 143 Neb. 179, 8 N.W.2d 834, 837; General Exchange Ins. Corporation v. Carp, La.App., 176 So. 145, 147; Kelley Furniture Co. v. Washington Ry. & Electric Co., 64 App.D.C. 215, 76 F.2d 985; Srogi v. New York Cent. R. Co., 247 App.Div. 95, 286 N.Y.S. 215; Mullins v. Cincinnati, N. & C. Ry. Co., 253 Ky. 156,.68 S.W.2d 790; Lovett v. Sandersville R. Co., 72 Ga.App. 692, 34 S.E.2d 664, 666; if, with knowledge of peril to plaintiff or plaintiff's property, another acts or omits to act and injury results, Parsons v. Berry, 130 Neb. 264, 264 N.W. 742, 744.

The doctrine implies thought, appreciation, mental direction, and a lapse of sufficient time to effectually act upon impulse to save another from injury, Colwell v. Nygaard, 8 Wash.2d 462, 112 P.2d 838, 845; Merchants' Transp. Co. v. Daniel, 109 Fla. 496, 149 So. 401, 403; or proof of circumstances which will put the one charged on implied notice of the situation, Schoen v. Western Union Telegraph Co., C.C.A.Fla., 135 F.2d 967, 968.

The doctrine imposes duty upon a party to exercise ordinary care in avoiding injury to another who has negligently placed himself in a situation of danger, Morris v. Seashore Transp. Co., 208 N.C. 807, 182 S.E. 487, duty to act when helpless peril is known and duty to exercise vigilance to discover helpless peril, if duty of vigilance exists toward class of which one in peril is member, Leinbach v. Pickwick Greyhound Lines, 138 Kan. 50, 23 P. 2d 449, 92 A.L.R. 1.

The doctrine is limited, according to some decisions, to cases in which defendant actually discovered person injured and his peril. Walker v. East St. Louis & Suburban Ry. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 25 F.2d 579, 580, Gauthier v. Foote, La. App., 12 So.2d 9, 11; or in which defendant had actual knowledge of plaintiff's peril or inability to extricate himself. Sarkise v. Boston & M. R. R., 88 N.H. 178, 186 A. 332, 334. But other decisions hold that the doctrine applies if defendant, aware of plaintiff's peril or unaware of it only through carelessness, has later opportunity than plaintiff to avert the accident, Cheek v. Thompson, D.C.La., 28 F. Supp. 391, 394; Linde Air Products Co. v. Cameron, C.C.A. W.Va., 82 F.2d 22, 24; or if defendant knew or could or should have known of peril, Arthur v. Rose, 289 Ky. 402, 158 S.W.2d 652, 653, 654; Ward v. City Fuel Oil Co., 147 Fla. 320, 2 So.2d 586, 587; Smith v. Pacific Greyhound Corporation, 139 Cal.App. 696, 35 P.2d 169, 172; or if defendant saw or discovered or should have seen or discovered the danger, Young v. Thompson, La.App., 189 So. 487, 489, 490, 491; Hartman v. Dyer, 298 Ky. 173, 182 S.W.2d 646, 647; Evansville Container Corporation v. McDonald, C.C.A. Tenn., 132 F.2d 80, 85; Harry v. Thompson, Mo.App., 166 S.W.2d 795, 798; or if injuring party was aware of peril or by reasonable care should have known of danger, Gardini v. Arakelian, 18 Cal.App.2d 424, 64 P.2d 181, 184; or if peril is realized by defendant or through culpable carelessness he is oblivious to it, Pedigo v. Osborne, 279 Ky. 85, 129 S.W.2d 996, 999; Johnson v. Southwestern Engineering Co., 41 Cal.App.2d 623, 107 P.2d 417, 418.

The doctrine is predicated, according to some decisions, upon the theory that negligence of injured party has ceased. Baltimore & 0. R. Co. v. Joseph, C.C.A.Ohio, 112 F.2d 518, 521, 522; Cohen v. Smith, 26 Ohio App. 32, 159 N. E. 329, 333; Claggett v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 150 Kan. 191, 92 P.2d 52, 57; Becker v. Blum, 142 Fla. 60, 194 So. 275, 276.

Other decisions hold that, although plaintiff's negligence continued until accident he may recover if the defendant, after knowing of plaintiff's danger, or by exercise of ordinary care could have known, could have avoided injury by ordinary care, McLeod v. Charleston Laundry Co., 106 W.Va. 361, 145 S.E. 756, 757; Newbern v. Leary, 215 N.C. 134, 1 S.E.2d 384, 389, 393; Young v. Thompson, La.App., 189 So. 487, 489, 490, 491; that the doctrine applies where plaintiff's negligence continues up to time of injury, if defendant actually sees the peril, or if plaintiff's negligence has terminated and defendant should have seen it. Chadwick v. Ek, .1 Wash.2d 117, 95 P.2d 398, 404; that the doctrine applies where negligence of defendant with actual knowledge of situation stands over against continuing negligence of plaintiff without actual knowledge of situation, but not where plaintiff's negligence with knowledge of situation stands over against defendant's negligence also with such knowledge, Iverson v. Knorr, 68 S.D. 23, 298 N. W. 28, 31.

The doctrine is sometimes designated as the humanitarian doctrine, Blashfield's Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 2841; Gilbert v. Mississippi River & B. T. R. Co., Mo.App., 226 S.W. 263, 264; Iglesias v. Campbell, La. App., 175 So. 145, 147; and also the doctrine of discovered peril, Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Skipper, 174 Ark. 1083, 298 S.W. 849, 854; Hines v. Foreman, Tex.Civ.App., 229 S.W. 630, 635; Soards v. Shreveport Rys. Co., La.App., 8 So.2d 343, 344. In Maryland, it is equivalent to "negligence in the third degree." State v. New York, P. & N. R. Co., 127 Md. 651. 96 A. 809, 811. The term "last fair chance" is synonymous. Nagel v. Bretthauer, 230 Iowa 707, 298 N. W. 852, 854.

LAST COURT. A court held by the twenty-four jurats in the marshes of Kent, and summoned by the bailiffs, whereby orders were made to lay and levy taxes, impose penalties, etc., for the preservation of the said marshes. Enc. Lond.

LAST HEIR. In English law. He to whom lands come by escheat for want of lawful heirs; that is, in some cases, the lord of whom the lands were held; in others, the sovereign. Cowell.

LAST ILLNESS. The illness terminating in person's death. Long v. Northrup, 225 Iowa 132, 279 N.W. 104, 106, 116 A.L.R. 1475; Proto v. Chenoweth, 40 Ariz. 312, 11 P.2d 950, 951.

LAST RESORT. A court from which there is no appeal is called the "court of last resort."

LAST SICKNESS. That illness of which a person dies is so called. Huse v. Brown, 8 Me: 169; Harrington v. Stees, 82 Ill. 54, 25 Am.Rep. 290; McVoy v. Percival, Dud. Law (S.C.) 337; Prince v. Hazelton, 20 Johns., N.Y., 513, 11 Am.Dec. 307.

LAST WILL. This term, according to Lord Coke, is most commonly used where lands and tenements are devised, and "testament" where it concerns chattels. Co. Litt. 111a. Both terms, however, are now generally employed in drawing a will either of lands or chattels. See Reagan v. Stanley, 11 Lea, Tenn., 322; Hill v. Hill, 7 Wash. 409, 35 P. 360.

The common usage the world over is to employ the words "will," "testament," and "last will and testament" as exactly synonymous. Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Powers, 192 Wash. 475, 74 P.2d 27, 32, 114 A.L.R. 531.

LASTAGE. A custom exacted in some fairs and markets to carry things bought whither one will. But it is more accurately taken for the ballast or lading of a ship. Also custom paid for wares sold by the last, as herrings, pitch, etc. Wharton.

LATA CULPA. Lat. In the law of bailment. Gross fault or neglect; extreme negligence or carelessness (nimia negligentia). Dig. 50, 16, 213, 2.

LATA CULPA DOLO ZEQUIPARATUR. Gross negligence is equivalent to fraud.

LATCHING. An under-ground survey.

LATE. Defunct; existing recently, but now dead. Pleasant v. State, .17 Ala. 190. Formerly; recently; lately.

LATELY. This word has been held to have "a very large retrospect, as we say 'lately deceased' of one dead ten or twenty years." Per. Cur. 2 Show. 294.

LATENS. Lat. Latent; hidden; not apparent. See Ambiguitas.

LATENT. Hidden; concealed; dormant; that does not appear upon the face of a thing; as, a latent ambiguity. See Ambiguity.

LATENT DEFECT. A hidden defect. Ross v. Tynes, La.App., 14 So.2d 80, 83. A defect in an article sold, which is known to the seller, but not to the purchaser, and is not discoverable by mere observation. See Hoe v. Sanborn, 21 N.Y. 552, 78 Am.Dec. 163. A defect which reasonably careful inspection will not reveal. Schaff v. Ellison, Tex.Civ.App., 255 S.W. 680, 682; Roberts v. Rogers, 129 Neb. 298, 261 N.W. 354; a defect which could not have been discovered by inspection. Roberts v. Rogers, 129 Neb. 298, 261 N.W. 354. A defect that could not be discovered by any known and customary test. The Bill, D.C.Md., 47 F.Supp. 969, 978. So, a latent defect in the title of a vendor of land is one not discoverable by inspection made with ordinary care. Newell v. Turner, 9 Port., Ala., 422.

LATENT EQUITY. See Equity.

LATERA. In old records. Sidesmen; companions; assistants. Cowell.

LATERAL RAILROAD. A lateral road is one which proceeds from some point on the main trunk between its termini; it is but another name for a branch road, both being a part of the main road. Newhall v. Railroad Co., 14 Ill. 273. An offshoot from main line of railroad. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Anderson, 167 Or. 687, 120 P.2d 578, 588.

LATERAL SUPPORT. The right of lateral and subjacent support is the right to have land supported by the adjoining land or the soil beneath. Stevenson v. Wallace, 27 Grat., Va., 77; Foley v. Wyeth, 2 Allen., Mass., 131, 79 Am.Dec. 771; In re Locust St. Subway, 117 Pa.Super. 86, 177 A. 599, 605; 12 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 933.

LATERARE. To lie sideways, in opposition to lying endways; used in descriptions of lands.

LATH, LATHE. The name of an ancient civil division in England, intermediate between the county or shire and the hundred. Said to be the same as what, in other parts of the kingdom, was termed a "rape." 1 Bl.Comm. 116; Cowell; Spelman.

LATHREVE. An officer under the Saxon government, who had authority over a lathe. Cowell; 1 Bl.Comm. 116.

LATIFUNDIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Great or large possessions; a great or large field; a common. A great estate made up of smaller ones, (fundis,) which began to be common in the latter times of the empire.

LATIFUNDUS. A possessor of a large estate made up of smaller ones. Du Cange.

LATIMER. A word used by Lord Coke in the sense of an interpreter. 2 Inst. 515. Supposed to be a corruption of the French "latinier," or "latiner." Cowell; Blount.

LATIN. The language of the ancient Romans.

There are three sorts of law Latin : (1) Good Latin, allowed by the grammarians and lawyers; (2) false or incongruous Latin, which in times past would abate original writs, though it would not make void any judicial writ, declaration, or plea, etc. ; (3) words of art, known only to the sages of the law, and not to grammarians, called "Lawyers' Latin." Wharton.

LATINARIUS. An interpreter of Latin.

LATINI JUNIANI. Lat. In Roman law. A class of freedmen (libertini) intermediate between the two other classes of freedmen called, respectively, "Cives Romani" and "Dediticii."

Slaves under thirty years of age at the date of their manumission, or manumitted otherwise than by vindicta, census, or testamentum, or not the quiritary property of their manumissors at the time of manumission, were called "Latini." By reason of one or other of these three defects, they remained slaves by strict law even after their manumission, but were protected in their liberties first by equity, and eventually by the Lex Junia Norbana, A. D. 19, from which law they took the name of "Juniani" in addition to that of "Latini." Brown.

LATITAT. In old English practice. A writ which issued in personal actions, on the return of non est inventus to a bill of Middlesex; so called from the emphatic word in its recital, in which it was "testified that the defendant lurks [latitat] and wanders about" in the county. 3 Bl.Comm. 286. Abolished by St. 2 Wm. IV. c. 39.

LATITATIO. Lat. In the civil law and old English practice. A lying hid; lurking, or concealment of the person. Dig. 42, 4, 7, 5; Bract. fol. 126.

LATROCINATION. The act of robbing; a depredation.

LATROCINIUM. The prerogative of adjudging and executing thieves; also larceny; theft; a thing stolen.

LATROCINY. Larceny.

LATTER-MATH. A second mowing; the aftermath.

LAUDARE. Lat.

In Civil law. To name; to cite or quote; to show one's title or authority. Calvin.

In Feudal law. To determine or pass upon judicially. Laudamentum, the finding or award of a jury. 2 Bl.Comm. 285.

LAUDATIO. Lat. In Roman law. Testimony delivered in court concerning an accused person's good behavior and integrity of life. It resembled the practice which prevails in our trials of calling persons to speak to a prisoner's character. The least number of the laudatores among the Romans was ten. Wharton.

LAUDATOR. Lat. An arbitrator; a witness to character.

LAUDEMEO. In Spanish law. The tax paid by the possessor of land held by quit-rent or emphyteusis to the owner of the estate, when the tenant alienates his right in the property. Escriche.

LAUDEMIUM. Lat. In the civil law, a sum paid by a new emphyteuta (q. v.) who acquires the emphyteusis, not as heir, but as a singular successor, whether by gift, devise, exchange, or sale.

It was a sum equal to the fiftieth part of the purchase money, paid to the dominus or proprietor for his acceptance of the new emphyteuta. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 328. Called, in old English law, "acknowledgment money." Cowell.

LAUDUM. Lat. An arbitrament or award.

In Old Scotch law. Sentence or judgment; dome or doom. 1 Pitc. Crim. Tr. pt. 2, p. 8.

LAUGHE. Frank-pledge. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 17.

LAUNCEGAY. A kind of offensive weapon, now disused, and prohibited by 7 Rich. II. c. 13.

LAUNCH. The act of launching a vessel; the movement of a vessel from the land into the water, especially the sliding on ways from the stocks on which it is built. Homer v. The Lady of the Ocean, 70 Me. 352.

A boat of the largest size belonging to a ship of war; an open boat of large size used in any service; a lighter.

LAUREATE. In English law. An officer of the household of the sovereign, whose business formerly consisted only in composing an ode annually, on the sovereign's birthday, and on the new year; sometimes also, though rarely, on occasion of any remarkable victory.

LAURELS. Pieces of gold, coined in 1619, with the king's head laureated; hence the name.

See Jacobus.

LAUS DEO. Lat. Praise be to God. An old heading to bills of exchange.

LAVATORIUM. A laundry or place to wash in; a place in the porch or entrance of cathedral churches, where the priest and other officiating ministers were obliged to wash their hands before they proceeded to divine service.

LAVOR NUEVA. In Spanish law. A new work. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 32, 1. 1.

LAW. That which is laid down, ordained, or established. A rule or method according to which phenomena or actions co-exist or follow each other. That which must be obeyed and followed by citizens, subject to sanctions or legal consequences, is a "law." Koenig v. Flynn, 258 N.Y. 292, 179 N. E. 705.

In old English jurisprudence, "law" is used to signify an oath, or the privilege of being sworn; as in the, phrases "to wage one's law," "to lose one's law."

The term is also used in opposition to "fact." Thus questions of law are to be decided by the court, while it is the province of the jury to solve questions of fact.

The earliest notion of law was not an enumeration of a principle, but a judgment in a particular case. When pronounced in the early ages, by a king, it was assumed to be the result of direct divine inspiration. Afterwards came the notion of a custom which a judgment affirms, or punishes its breach. In the outset, however, the only authoritative statement of right and wrong is a judicial sentence rendered after the fact has occurred. It does not presuppose a law to have been violated, but is enacted for the first time by a higher form into the judge's mind at the moment of adjudication. Maine, Anc.Law, (Dwight's Ed.) pp. xv, 5.

The word may mean or embrace:

A concurrent or joint resolution of legislature is not "a law", Koenig v. Flynn, 179 N.E. 705, 707, 258 N.Y. 292; Ex parte Hague, 105 N.J.Eq. 134, 147 A. 220, 222; Ward v. State. 176 Okl. 368, 56 P.2d 136, 137; Scudder v. Smith, 331 Pa. 165, 200 A. 601, 604; a resolution of the house of representatives is not a "law", State ex rel. Todd v. Yelle, 7 Wash.2d 443, 110 P.2d 162, 165; an unconstitutional statute is not a "law", John F. Jelke Co. v. Hill, 208 Wis. 650, 242 N.W. 576, 581; Flournoy v. First Nat. Bank of Shreveport, 197 La. 1067, 3 So.2d 244, 248.

When a statute is passed in violation of law, that is, of the fundamental law or constitution of a state, it is the prerogative of courts to declare it void, or, in other words, to declare it not to be law. Burrill.

When the term "law" is used to denote enactments of the legislative power, it is frequently confined, especially by English writers, to permanent rules of civil conduct, as distinguished from other acts, such as a divorce act, an appropriation bill, an estates act. Rep.Eng.St.L.Com.Mar. 1856.

With reference to its origin, "law" is derived either from judicial precedents, from legislation, or from custom. Sweet.

LAW OF THE CASE. The decision, judgment, opinion or rulings on former appeal or writ of error become "law of the case." Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. v. Bankers' Surety Co., 96 Ind.App. 250, 179 N.E. 329, 332; City of Shreveport v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., 193 La. 277, 190 So. 404, 406; Nolan v. Nolan's Adm'rs, 234 Ky. 50, 27 S.W.2d 408, 409; Machenheimer v. Falknor, 151 Wash. 447, 276 P. 297, 298; Tressler Coal Min. Co. v. Klefeld, 125 W.Va. 301, 24 S.E.2d 98, 100; so, too, a holding of an appellate court on writ of certiorari. Goodkind v. Wolkowsky, 147 Fla. 415, 2 Scii2d 723, 725; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Sperry Flour Co., 63 Ga.App. 611, 11 S.E.2d 809, 811; binding on subsequent appeal or writ of error. George v. Atlanta & C. A. L. Ry. Co., 210 N.C. 58, 185 S.E. 431, 432; Elliott v. Moffet, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W.2d 911, 912, 913; Moran v. Lecconv Smokeless Coal Co., 124 W.Va. 54, 18 S.E.2d 808, 813; Hill v. Chappel Bros. of Montana, 97 Mont. 305, 33 P.2d 819, 820; or on subsequent proceedings or trials in trial court, Oliver v. Muncy, 271 Ky. 15, 111 S.W.2d 392, 393; Sarson v. Mueller, 105 N.J.L. 212, 143 A. 428; State of Kansas ex rel. Beck v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Kan., 95 F.2d 935, 936; or in subsequent suit between same parties, Oglethorpe University v. City of Atlanta, 180 Ga. 152, 178 S.a 156.

The doctrine expresses practice of courts generally to refuse to reopen what has been decided. White v. Higgins, C.C.A.Mass., 116 F.2d 312, 317, 318; Perkins v. Vermont Hydro-Electric Corporation, 106 Vt. 367, 177 A. 631, 653; Fleming v. Campbell, 148 Kan. 516, 83 P.2d 708, 709; it expresses the rule that final judgment of highest court is final determination of parties' rights. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Railroad Commission of California, 209 Cal. 460, 288 P. 775, 779.

The doctrine has reference to decisions on legal questions and principles of law announced. Haynes Drilling Co. v. Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co., 185 Okl. 122, 90 P.2d 639, 640; and does not embrace questions of fact or decisions on questions of fact. McNeely v. Connell, 87 Cal. App. 87, 261 P. 754, 755. (But see holding that the decision of appellate court on facts proved becomes "law of the case". Cauldwell-Wingate Co. v. State, Ct.C1., 31 N.Y.S.2d 211, 213).

The doctrine includes all errors relied on for reversal, whether mentioned in court's opinion or not, and all errors lurking in record on first appeal, which might have been, but were not, expressly relied on, Sowders v. Coleman, 223 Ky. 633, 4 S.W.2d 731, (but see holding that doctrine does not extend to facts or points of law which might have been but were not presented and determined on prior appeal, Steelduct Co. v. Henger-Seltzer Co., Cal., 26 Ca1.2d 634, 160 P.2d 804, 809) ; all matters, issues or questions actually decided on former appeal. Fleming v. Buerkli, 164 Wash. 136, 1 P.2d 915; all questions involved in judgment, Helper State Bank v. Crus, 95 Utah 320, 81 P.2d 359, 361, 363; all questions involved on former appeal. whether or not expressly mentioned in opinion, unless expressly reserved, Martin v. Commonwealth, 265 Ky. 292, 96 S.W.2d 1011; all questions open expressly or by necessary implication decided on former appeal, Brown v. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, 186 Okl. 275, 97 P.2d 62; Miller v. Sisters of St. Francis, 5 Wash.2d 204, 105 P.2d 32, 33; Kuhns v. Live Stock Nat. Bank of Omaha, 138 Neb. 797, 295 N.W. 818, 819, 820; decision on sufficiency of evidence. Wells v. Lloyd, 21 Ca1.2d 452, 132 P.2d 471, 474; every applicable proposition of law actually applied to facts and pleadings involved, Union Central Life Ins. Co. v. Trundle, 65 Ga.App. 553, 15 S.E.2d 909, 913; only facts appearing in original opinion, Timm v. McCartney, 30 Cal.App.2d 241, 85 P.2d 920, 922; points presented on former appeal, lEtna Life Ins. Co. v. Wharton, C.C.A.Ark., 63 F.2d 378, 379: City of Sedalia ex rel. and to Use of Ferguson v. Shell Petroleum Corporation, C.C.A.Mo., 81 F.2d 193, 196, 106 A.L.R. 1327; ruling on point distinctly made on former appeal, People v. Marshall, 209 Cal. 540, 289 P. 629, 631: statements in opinion on former appeal, if necessary to decision of questions presented, Miller Cattle Co. v. Francis, Ariz., 298 P. 631, 632. It bars further adjudication in identical proceeding or on same or substantially identical facts or identical question, In re Norman's Estate, 161 Or. 450, 88 P.2d 977, 987.

The doctrine is generally deemed applicable whether former determination is right or wrong. Wells v. Lloyd, 21 Ca1.2d 452, 132 P.2d 471, 474. But some cases hold that doctrine is inapplicable where prior decision is unsound, Standard Oil Co. of California v. Johnson, 56 Cal. App.2d 411, 132 P.2d 910, 913; Atchison T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ballard, C.C.A.Tex., 108 F.2d 768, 772; or incorrect

The doctrine may be invoked unless evidence differs substantially, Chicago, St. P., M. & 0. Ry. Co. v. Kulp, C.C.A. Minn., 102 F.2d 352, 354, 133 A.L.R. 1445; City of Louisville v. Redmon, 282 Ky. 1, 137 S.W.2d 350, 351; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Golightly, C.C.A.Ark., 94 F.2d 316, 319; new pleadings and new evidence adduced on subsequent trial call for different judgment, Maze v. Bennett, 117 W.Va. 165, 184 S.E. 564, 565; there has been a material change in record, Reynolds v. Virginian Ry. Co., 117 W.Va. 359, 185 S.E. 568, 569; there has been a substantial change in issues or evidence, Royal Collieries Co. v. Wells, 244 Ky. 303, 50 S.W.2d 948, 949.

It may be invoked where evidence or facts on subsequent appeal or subsequent trial is substantially the same, American Railway Express Co. v. Cole, 185 Ark. 532, 48 S.W.2d 223; State v. Loveless, 62 Nev. 312, 150 P.2d 1015, 1016, 1018; Clark v. Los Angeles & Salt Lake R. Co., 73 Utah, 486, 275 P. 582, 584; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Ittner, 62 Ga.App. 31, 8 S.E.2d 582, 586; Amerada Petroleum Corporation v. Elliff, 171 Okl. 38, 41 P.2d 850. General principle of law is declared as applicable to the facts of the case, Creason v. Harding, 344 Mo. 452, 126 S.W.2d 1179, 1183; pleadings and evidence were substantially the same, Lober v. Kansas City, 339 Mo. 1087, 100 S.W.2d 267, 268; questions of law and fact are the same. Helper State Bank v. Crus, 95 Utah 320, 81 P.2d 359, 361, 363; record is substantially identical with that in prior proceeding, Louisville Trust Co. v. National Bank of Kentucky, C.C.A.Ky., 102 F.2d 137, 139; City of San Antonio v. McKenzie Const. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 138 S.W.2d 568, 576; Stuart C. Irby Co. v. Smith, 205 Ark. 183, 168 S.W.2d 618, 619, 620.

The effect of "law of the case" is limited to court of co-ordinate jurisdiction. Walker v. Gerli, 12 N.Y.S.2d 942, 944, 257 App.Div. 249.

Where appeal is not pursued, decision of intermediate court is the "law of the case". State ex rel. Anderson Motor Service Co. v. Public Service Commission, 234 Mo. App. 470, 134 S.W.2d 1069, 1075.

"Law of the case" may signify, or be constituted by, other matters or things.

It has been held that "law of the case" may include, or be constituted by an agreement of arbitration, Acme Cut Stone Co. v. New Center Development Corporation, 281 Mich. 32, 274 N.W. 700, 706, 112 A.L.R. 865; allegation of complaint where not challenged below. King, 65 Ga.App. 44, 14 S.E.2d 760, 763; findings of fact or of law by an auditor unless excepted to, Brothers and Sisters of Charity v. Renfroe, 57 Ga.App. 646, 196 S.E. 135; finding on first hearing affirmed on appeal. Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. Price, C.C.A. W.Va., 116 F.2d 618, 621; grant of temporary injunction and continuance by Appellate Division, Walker Memorial Baptist Church v. Saunders, 17 N.Y.S.2d 842, 847, 173 Misc. 455; holding in case not appealed from, Schul v. Clapp, 154 Kan. 372, 118 P.2d 570, 573; intention of testator as expressed in will, Clauss v. Rohde, 133 N.J.Eq. 105, 30 A.2d 695; judgment which remains unreversed or to which no exception has been taken, Palmer v. Jackson, 188 Ga. 336, 4 S.E.2d 28, 30; mandates of Supreme Court, People ex rel. McLaren v. DeBoice, 377 Ill. 634, 37 N.E.2d 337, 340; order not appealed, Foley v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the United States, 33 N.Y.S.2d 917, 918, 263 App.Div. 605; Long v. Carolina Baking Co., 193 S.C. 225, 8 S.E.2d 326, 330, 331; order of trial court requiring amendment to petition, Martin v. Mayer, 63 Ga.App. 387, 11 S.E.2d 218, 226; order requiring judgment debtor to make monthly payments on judgment, Ryan v. Edgerton, 30 N.Y.S.2d 941, 942, 177 Misc. 421; order that case automatically stand dismissed unless plaintiff amends petition, Smith v. Atlanta Gas-Light Co., 181 Ga. 479, 182 S.E. 603; ordinance admitted by parties to be in force and to be accurately pleaded, with defendant reserving only the question of admissibility. Pane v. Wieland. 137 Ohio St. 198, 28 N.E.2d 583, 585; plaintiffs' theory where adopted by trial justice, Ferrier v. City of White Plains, 28 N.Y.S.2d 218, 220, 262 App. Div. 94; portion of decree not appealed, Dawson County Irr. Co. v. Stuart, 142 Neb. 428, 8 N.W.2d 507, 508; prior decision of another judge of same court, United States Industrial Chemicals v. Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 52 F.Supp. 164, 165; referee's conclusions where no exceptions taken, Cooper v. Baxley, 194 S.C. 270, 9 S.E.2d 721, 722; ruling upon demurrer, Sanik v. Shryock Realty Co., 156 Kan. 641, 135 P.2d 545, 548; . Darling stores Corporation v. Beatus, 197 Ga. 125, 28 S.E.2d 124, 126; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 192 S.C. 497, 7 S.E.2d 447, 449, 450; ruling of trial court as to applicable statute, Beck v. Vermont Hydro-Electric Corporation, 106 Vt. 367, 177 A. 631, 654; ruling on motions to dismiss, Pathe Exchange v. International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, Local No. 306, D.C.N.Y., 3 F.Supp. 63, 64; ruling striking amendments to answer, Ford v. Jones, 66 Ga.App. 238, 17 S.E.2d 756, 757; stipulation, Mann v. R. Simpson & Co., 286 N.Y. 450, 36 N.E.2d 658, 662; theory acquiesced in by parties and court, Cote v. Boise, 111 Vt. 343, 16 A.2d 175, 177.

Instructions are the "law of the case." Douglas v. Manfree Realty Corporation, 263 App.Div. 998, 33 N.Y.S.2d 423, 424; Selfe v. Fuller, 179 Va. 30, 18 S.E.2d 254, 256; whether right or wrong, Rogers v. Jefferson, 223 Iowa 718, 272 N.W. 532, 533; McClelland v. Interstate Transit Lines, 142 Neb, 439, 6 N.W.2d 384, 391; Buckin v. Long Island R. Co., 286 N.Y. 146, 36 N.E.2d 88, 89.

It has been held that instructions are the "law of the case" where appealing defendant accepted instructions as correct, 'Etna Life Ins. Co. v. McAdoo, C.C.A.Ark., 115 F.2d 369, 370; approved on former appeal and given at second trial, Whitehead v. Stith, 279 Ky. 556, 131 S.W.2d 455, 460; instruction given on first trial is corrected to meet criticism made by Court of Appeals, Waddle v. Williams, 294 Ky. 66, 170 S.W.2d 886, 888. Instruction is unappealed from, Stephenson v. W. R. Grimshaw Co., 148 Kan. 466, 83 P.2d 655, 656; instructions not challenged in any manner or in any particular, Madison v. Hood, 207 Iowa 495, 223 N.W. 178, 179; no exception is made and they are not assigned as error, New York Life Ins. Co. v. Stone, C.C.A.Mass., 80 F.2d 614, 616; ' Codd v. New York Underwriters Ins. Co., 19 Wash.2d 671, 144 P.2d 234, 237; no exceptions are taken, Miller v. Mohr, 198 Wash. 619, 89 P.2d 807, 814; Chancellor v. Hines Motor Supply Co., 104 Mont. 603, 69 P.2d 764, 769; Johnson v. Narragansett Filling Stations, R.I., 148 A. 901; no instructions are requested nor exceptions taken, U. S. v. Hossmann, C.C.A. Mo., 84 F.2d 808, 810; no objections are made, Brown v. Bank, 40 N.M. 270, 58 P.2d 1186, 1188; only exception pressed before Supreme Court was exception to denial of motion for new trial based on usual grounds, Couture v. Industrial Trust Co., 66 R.I. 395, 19 A.2d 772, 775. An instruction excepted to by plaintiff is "law of the case" for purpose of trial only. Klimaszewski v. Herrick, 32 N.Y. S.2d 441, 442, 263 App.Div. 235. An instruction given at request of defendant is "law of the case" on defendant's appeal. Wood Towing Corporation v. West, 181 Va. 151, 23 S.E.2d 789, 791. Oral charge of court and special charges given at request of parties constitute "law of case". Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Slaton, 240 Ala. 560, 700 So. 564, 566. Portion of charge to which no exception was made became the "law of the case." Morrison v. Bitting, 60 R.I. 325, 198 A. 355, 359.

LAW OF THE FLAG. See Flag, Law of.

LAW OF THE LAND. Due process of law (q. v.). By the law of the land is most clearly intended the general law which hears before it condemns, which proceeds upon inquiry, and renders judgment only after trial. Dupuy v. Tedora, 204 La. 560, 15 So.2d 886, 891. The meaning is that every citizen shall hold his life, liberty, property, and immunities under the protection of general rules which govern society. Rich Hill Coal Co. v. Bra-shore, 334 Pa. 449, 7 A.2d 302, 316; In re Stobie's Estate, 30 Cal.App.2d 525, 86 P.2d 883, 885.

Everything which may pass under the form of an enactment is not the law of the land. Sedg.St. & Const.Law, (2d Ed.) 475. When first used in Magna Charta, the phrase probably meant the established law of the kingdom, in opposition to the civil or Roman law. It is now generally regarded as meaning general public laws binding on all members of the community. Janes v. Reynolds, 2 Tex. 251; Beasley v. Cunningham, 171 Tenn. 334, 103 S.W.2d 18, 20, 110 A.L.R. 306. It means due process of law warranted by the constitution, by the common law adopted by the constitution, or by statutes passed in pursuance of the constitution. Mayo v. Wilson, 1 N.H. 53.

LAW WORTHY. Being entitled to, or having the benefit and protection of, the law.

LAWFUL. Legal; warranted or authorized by the law; having the qualifications prescribed by law; not contrary to nor forbidden by the law. Ohio Automatic Sprinkler Co. v. Fender, 108 Ohio St. 149, 141 N.E. 269, 275; McDonnell v. Murnan Shipbuilding Corporation, 210 Ala. 611, 98 So. 887, 889; Hafner Mfg. Co. v. City of St. Louis, 262 Mo. 621, 172 S.W. 28, 33.

The principal distinction between the terms "lawful" and "legal" is that the former contemplates the substance of law, the latter the form of law. To say of an act that it is "lawful" implies that it is authorized, sanctioned, or at any rate not forbidden, by law. To say that it is "legal" implies that it is done or performed in accordance with the forms and usages of law, or in a technical manner. In this sense "illegal" approaches the meaning of "invalid." For example, a contract or will, executed without the required formalities, might be said to be invalid or illegal, but could not be described as unlawful. Further, the word "lawful" more clearly implies an ethical content than does "legal." The latter goes no further than to denote compliance, with positive, technical, or formal rules; while the former usually imports a moral substance or ethical permissibility. A further distinction is that the word "legal" is used as the synonym of "constructive," which "lawful" is not. Thus "legal fraud" is fraud implied or inferred by law, or made out by construction. "Lawful fraud" would be a contradiction of terms. Again, "legal" is used as the antithesis of "equitable." Thus, we speak of "legal assets," "legal estate," etc., but not of "lawful assets," or "lawful estate." But there are some connections in which the two words are used as exact equivalents. Thus, a "lawful" writ, warrant, or process is the same as a "legal" writ, warrant, or process.

LAWFUL AGE. Full age; majority; generally the age of twenty-one years, though sometimes eighteen as to a female. See McKim v. Handy, 4 Md.Ch. 237.

LAWFUL AUTHORITIES. The expression "lawful authorities," used in our treaty with Spain, re-. fers to persons who exercised the power of making grants by authority of the crown. Mitchel v. U. S., 9 Pet. 711, 9 L.Ed. 283.

LEAD. The counsel on either side of a litigated action who is charged with the principal management and direction of the party's case, as distinguished from his juniors or subordinates, is said to "lead in the cause," and is termed the "leading counsel" on that side.

LEADING A USE. Where a deed was executed before the levy of a fine of land, for the purpose of specifying to whose use the fine should inure, it was said to "lead" the use. If executed after the fine, it was said to "declare" the use. 2 Bl.Comm. 363.

LEADING CASE. Among the various cases that are argued and determined in the courts, some, from their important character, have demanded more than usual attention from the judges, and from this circumstance are frequently looked upon as having settled or determined the law upon all points involved in such cases, and as guides for subsequent decisions, and from the importance they thus acquire are familiarly termed "leading cases." Brown.

LEADING COUNSEL. That one of two or more counsel employed on the same side in a cause who has the principal management of the cause.

LEADING QUESTION. One which instructs witness how to answer or puts into his mouth words to be echoed back, People v. Hamilton, Gen.Sess., 30 N.Y.S.2d 155, 158; one which suggests to witness answer desired. Little v. State, 79 Okl.Cr. 285, 154 P.2d 772, 777; State v. Scott, 20 Wash. 2d 696, 149 P.2d 152, 153, 154; Landers v. State, 118 Tex.Cr.R. 608, 39 S.W.2d 43, 44.

Questions are leading which suggest to the witness the answer desired, or which embody a material fact, and may be answered by a mere negative or affirmative, or which involve an answer bearing immediately upon the merits of the cause, and indicating to the witness a representation which will best accord with the interests of the party propounding them. Turney v. State, 8 Smedes & M., Miss., 104, 47 Am.Dec. 74.

A question is leading which puts into a witness' mouth the words that are to be echoed back, or plainly suggests the answer which the party wishes to get from him. People v. Mather, 4 Wend., N.Y., 229, 247, 21 Am.Dec. 122.

That question may be answered either yes or no does not necessarily make it leading, Foster v. Sol Greisler & Sons, 150 Pa.Super. 509, 29 A.2d 103, 106; Osterloh v. San Antonio Public Service Co., Tex.Civ.App., 77 S.W.2d 290, 292.

LEAGUE. 1. A treaty of alliance between different states or parties.

2. A measure of distance, varying in different countries.

It may be offensive or defensive, or both. It is offensive when the contracting parties agree to unite in attacking a common enemy; defensive when the parties agree to act in concert in defending each other against an enemy. Wharton.

The marine league, marking the limit of national jurisdiction on the high seas, is equal to three geographical (or marine) miles of 6,075 feet each.

In Spanish and Mexican law, the league, as a legal measure of length, consisted of 5,000 varas, and a vara was equivalent to 33% English inches, making the league equal to a little more than 2.63 miles, and the square league equal to 4,428 acres. This is its meaning as used in Texas land grants. United States v. Perot, 98 U.S. 428, 25 L.Ed. 251; Hunter v. Morse, 49 Tex. 219. "League and labor," an area of land equivalent to 4,605 acres. Ammons v. Dwyer, 78 Tex. 639, 15 S. W. 1049. See Labor.

LEAKAGE. The waste or diminution of a liquid caused by its leaking from the cask, barrel, or other vessel in which it was placed.

Also an allowance made to an importer of liquids, at the custom-house, in the collection of duties, for his loss sustained by the leaking of the liquid from its cask or vessel.

LEAL. L. Fr. Loyal; that which belongs to the law.

LEALTE. L. Fr. Legality; the condition of a legalis homo, or lawful man.

LEAN. To incline in opinion or preference.

A court is sometimes said to "lean against" a doctrine, construction, or view contended for, whereby it is meant that the court regards it with disfavor or repugnance, because of its inexpedience, injustice, or inconsistency.

LEAP-YEAR. See Bissextile.

LEARN. To gain knowledge or information of; to ascertain by inquiry, study, or investigation. Fletcher Savings & Trust Co. v. American Surety Co. of New York, 92 Ind.App. 651, 175 N.E. 247, 251; Rambo v. Rambo, 245 Ala. 98, 16 So.2d 4, 5.

LEARNED. Possessing learning; erudite; versed in the law; informed.

In statutes prescribing the qualifications of judges, "learned in the law" designates one who has received a regular legal education, the almost invariable evidence of which is the fact of his admission to the bar. See Jamieson v. Wiggin, 12 S.D. 16, 80 N.W. 137, 46 L.R.A. 317, 76 Am.St.Rep. 585; O'Neal v. McKinna, 116 Ala. 620, 22 So. 905; Potter v. Robbins, 155 Tenn. 1, 290 S.W. 396, 399; Heard v. Moore, 154 Tenn. 566, 290 S. W. 15, 16, 50 A.L.R. 1152.

LEARNING. Legal doctrine. 1 Leon. 77.

LEASE. Any agreement which gives rise to relationship of landlord and tenant. Smith v. Royal Ins. Co., C.C.A.Cal., 111 F.2d 667, 671. Any grant of permissive use. People v. City of Chicago, 349 Ill. 304, 182 N.E. 419, 434.

Contract for exclusive possession of lands or tenements for determinate period. Barnett v. Lincoln, 162 Wash. 613, 299 P. 392, 394. Contract for possession and profits of lands and tenements either for life, or for certain period of time, or during the pleasure of the parties, Femmer v. City of Juneau, C.C.A.Alaska, 97 F.2d 649, 657; Smith v. Royal Ins. Co., D.C.Cal., 5 F.Supp. 435, 437; Intermountain Realty Co. v. Allen, 60 Idaho 228, 90 P.2d 704, 706, 122 A.L.R. 647. Contract for possession and profits of property for a recom• pense. White v. City of Grand Rapids, 244 N.W. 469, 260 Mich. 267; Stone v. City of Los Angeles, 114 Cal.App. 192, 299 P. 838, 840; Clark v. Harry, 182 Va. 410, 29 S.E.2d 231, 233. Conveyance, grant or devise of realty for designated period with reversion to grantor. Becker v. Manufacturers Trust Co., 262 App.Div. 525, 30 N.Y.S. 2d 542, 544; Moore v. Brandenberg, 234 Ky. 400, 28 S.W.2d 477, 478; Lewes Sand Co. v. Graves, Del., 1 Terry 189, 8 A.2d 21, 24. Conveyance of interest in real property for specified period or at will, Minneker v. Gardiner, 47 Ohio App. 203, 191 N.E. 793. Conveyance or grant of estate in real property for limited term with conditions attached, State ex rel. St. Louis County v. Evans, 246 Mo. 209, 139 S.W.2d 967, 969; Holcombe v. Lorino, 124 Tex. 446, 79 S.W.2d 307, 310; Dean v. Brower, 119 Cal.App. 412, 6 P.2d 580, 581. Conveyance, usually in consideration of rent or other recompense, for life, years, or at will. Smith v. Royal Ins. Co., C.C.A.Cal., 111 F.2d 667, 671; Clark v. Harry, 182 Va. 410, 29 S.E.2d 231, 233; but always for a less time than lessor has in the premises, Leonard v. Autocar Sales & Service Co., 325 Ill.App. 375, 60 N.E.2d 457, 462; Union Central Life Ins. Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, v. Goode, 222 Iowa 716, 269 N.W. 762, 764. Grant of use and possession, in consideration of something to be rendered, Ottman v. Albert Co., 327 Pa. 49, 192 A. 897, 899.

A contract in writing, under seal, whereby a person having a legal estate in hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal, conveys a portion of his interest to another, in consideration of a certain annual rent or render, or other recompense. Archb.Landl. & Ten. 2.

Instrument granting exclusive possession or control of premises, or portion, though use be restricted by reservations, will be considered lease, Barnett v. Lincoln, 162 Wash. 613, 299 P. 392, 394.

"Lease" or "hire" is a synallagmatic contract, to which consent alone is sufficient, and by which one party gives to the other the enjoyment of a thing, or his labor, at a fixed price. Civil Code La. art. 2669.

Oral agreement whereby property owner for fixed consideration gave another trapping privileges on his lands for trapping season held contract of "lease." Defelice v. Autin, La.App., 159 So. 648, 649.

The person who conveys is termed the "lessor," and the person to whom they are conveyed, the "lessee;" and when the lessor conveys lands or tenements to a lessee, he is said to lease, demise, or let them. 4 Cruise, Dig. 58: U. S. Nat. Bank of La Grande v. Miller, 122 Or. 285, 258 P. 205, 207, 58 A.L.R. 339; Howard v. Manning, 79 Okl. 165, 192 P. 358, 360, 79 A.L.R. 819. The word when used as verb, means to transfer for term specified therein from lessor to lessee property therein demised, also to let, to farm out, to rent; and there is authority for view that word "lease" may properly be used in two senses, first, in describing act of lessor in giving lease, and again in describing act of lessee in taking lease. Stone v. City of Los Angeles, 114 Cal.App, 192, 299 P. 838, 841.

The term embraces what are described as the covenants of the lease. Goldberg v. Grossman, 105 Pa.Super. 50, 160 A. 138, 139.

Whatever is sufficient to show that one party shall divest himself of possession and the other party shall come into it for a determinate time and for a fixed rental amounts to a lease. General American Life Ins. Co. v. North American Mfg. Co., 320 Ill.App. 488, 51 N.E.2d 619.

When the contract is bipartite the one part is called the "lease", the other the "counterclaim."

Concurrent Lease

One granted for a term which is to commence before the expiration sr other determination of a previous lease of the same premises made to another person; or, in other words, an assignment of a part of the reversion, entitling the lessee to all the rents accruing on the previous lease after the date of his lease and to appropriate remedies against the holding tenant. Cargill v. Thompson, 57 Minn. '534, 59 N.W. 638.

Farm Lease

See Farm Lease.

Lease and Release

A species of conveyance much used in England, said to have been invented by Serjeant Moore, soon after the enactment of the statute of uses. It is thus contrived: A. lease, or rather bargain and sale upon some pecuniary consideration for one year, is made by the tenant of the freehold to the lessee or bargainee. This, without any enrolment, makes the bargainor stand seised to the use of the bargainee, and vests in the bargainee the use of the term for one year, and then the statute immediately annexes the possession. Being thus in possession, he is capable of receiving a release of the freehold and reversion, which must be made to the tenant in possession, and accordingly the next day a release is granted to him. The lease and release, when used as a conveyance of the fee, have the joint operation of a single conveyance. 2 Bl. Comm. 339; 4 Kent, Comm. 482; Co.Litt. 207; Cruise, Dig. tit. 32, c. 11.

Mining Lease

See Mining.

Parol Lease

A lease of real estate not evidenced by writing, but resting in an oral agreement.

Perpetual Lease

A lease of lands which may last without limitation as to time; a grant of lands in fee with the reservation of a rent in fee; a fee-farm. Edwards v. Noel, 88 Mo.App. 434.

Sublease, or Underlease

One executed by the lessee of an estate to a third person, conveying the same estate for a shorter term than that for which the lessee holds it. The distinction between an assignment of a term for years and a sublease or subletting is that if the lessee parts with his entire interest in the term, it constitutes an assignment and not a subletting, although the transfer is in form a sublease; but if the lessee reserves to himself a reversionary interest in the term, it constitutes a sublease, whatever the form of the transfer. Johnson v. Thompson, 185 Ala. 666, 64 So. 554, 555; Weigle v. Rogers, 202 Mo.App. 520, 213 S.W. 501, 502; Holden v. Tidwell, 37 Okl. 553, 133 P. 54, 55, 49 L.R.A., N.S., 369, Ann.Cas.1915C, 394; Davis v. First Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 258 S.W. 241, 242.

For "Extension of lease," see Extension.

LEASEHOLD. An estate in realty held under a lease; an estate for a fixed term of years. See Stubbings v. Evanston, 136 Ill. 37, 26 N.E. 577, 11 L.R.A. 839, 29 Am.St.Rep. 300; Washington F. Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 32 Md. 421, 3 Am.Rep. 149; Greene Line Terminal Co. v. Martin, 122 W.Va. 483, 10 S.E. 2d 901, 903. Right of tenant at will is "leasehold." Public Service Co. of New Hampshire v. Voudoumas, 84 N.H. 387, 151 A. 81, 83, 70 A.L.R. 480.

LEASING, or LESING. Gleaning.

LEASING-MAKING. In old Scotch criminal law. An offense consisting in slanderous and untrue speeches, to the disdain, reproach, and contempt of the king, his council and proceedings, etc. Bell.

LEAVE. Give. Grimes v. Crouch, 175 Va. 126, 7 S.E.2d 115, 117.

To allow or cause to remain; to let remain unmoved or undone; to refrain from or neglect taking, doing, or changing; to let stay or continue; to let be without interference; to suffer to remain subject to another's action, control, or the like; to suffer to be undisturbed in action. Collins v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 178 Va. 501, 17 S.E.2d 413, 418.

To give or dispose of by will; to bequeath or devise. Townsend v. Gordon, 308 Mich. 438, 14 N.W.2d 57, 60; Williams v. McPherson, 216 N.C. 565, 5 S.E.2d 830, 831. "The word 'leave,' as applied to the subject-matter, prima facie means a disposition by will." Thorley v. Thorley, 10 East, 438; Carr v. Effinger, 78 Va. 203.

Willful departure with intent to remain away, and not temporary absence with intention of returning. Landreth v. Casey, 340 Ill. 519, 173 N.E. 84, 85.

LEAVE AND LICENSE. A defense to an action in trespass setting up the consent of the plaintiff to the trespass complained of.

LEAVE NO ISSUE. Not survived by a child or children or their descendants. A spouse of a deceased child is not "issue" (q. v.). In re Vigil's Estate, 38 N.M. 383, 34 P.2d 667, 668, 93 A.L.R. 1506.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE. Temporary absence from duty with intention to return during which time remuneration is suspended, State ex rel. McGaughey v. Grayston, 349 Mo. 700, 163 S.W.2d 335, 341.

LEAVE OF COURT. Permission obtained from a court to take some action which, without such permission, would not be allowable; as, to sue a receiver, to file an amended pleading, to plead several pleas. See Copperthwait v. Dummer, 18 N.J. L. 258.

LEAVE TO DEFEND. The bills of exchange act 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 67) allowed actions on bills and notes commenced within six months after being due to be by writ of summons in a form provided by the act, and unless the defendant should within twelve days obtain leave to appear and defend the action, allowed the plaintiff to sign judgment on proof of service. This procedure was retained by the judicature act, but abolished in 1880. Whart. Lex.

LECHERWITE, LAIRWITE, or LEGERWITE. A fine for adultery or fornication, anciently paid to the lords of certain manors. 4 Inst. 206.

LECTOR DE LETRA ANTIQUA. In Spanish law. A person appointed by competent authority to read and decipher ancient writings, to the end that they may be presented on the trial of causes as documents entitled to legal credit. Escriche.

LECTORES. A term applied to notaries in the Middle Ages. So.Afr.Law Dict.

LECTRINUM. A pulpit. Mon.Angl. tom. iii. p. 243.

LECTURER. An instructor; a reader of lectures; also a clergyman who assists rectors, etc., in preaching, etc.

LEDGE. In mining law. This term, as used in the mining laws of the United States (Rev.St. § 2322, 30 U.S.C.A. § 26) and in both legal and popular usage in the western American states, is synonymous with "lode," which see. Myers v. Lloyd, 4 Alaska, 263, 265.

LEDGER. A book of accounts in which a trader enters the names of all persons with whom he has dealings; there being two parallel columns in each account, one for the entries to the debit of the person charged, the other for his credits. Into this book are posted the items from the day-book or journal.

A "ledger" is the principal book of accounts of a business establishment in which all the transactions of each day are entered under appropriate heads so as to show at a glance the debits and credits of each account. Foothill Ditch Co. v. Wallace Ranch Water Co., 25 Cal.App.2d 555, 78 P.2d 215, 220.

LEDGER-BOOK. In ecclesiastical law. The name of a book kept in the prerogative courts in England. It is considered as a roll of the court, but, it seems, it cannot be read in evidence. Bac.Abr.

LEDGREVIUS. In old English law. A lathereeve, or chief officer of a lathe. Spelman.

LEDO. The rising water or increase of the sea.

LEE3IAN'S ACTS. Acts 30 Vict. c. 29 and 35 & 36 Vict. c. 91, by which contracts for the sale of bank shares are void unless the number of the shares are set forth in the contract. 9 Q.B.D. 546; and by which are authorized the application of the funds of municipal corporations and other governing bodies under certain conditions towards promoting or opposing parliamentary and other proceedings for the benefit or protection of the inhabitants.

LEET. In English law. The name of a court of criminal jurisdiction, formerly of much importance, but latterly fallen into disuse. See Court-Leet.

LEETS. Meetings which were appointed for the nomination or election of ecclesiastical officers in Scotland. Cowell.

LEFT. To let remain or have remaining at death; to transmit, bequeath or give by will. Grimes v. Crouch, 175 Va. 126, 7 S.E.2d 115, 117.

LEGA, or LACTA. The alloy of money. Spelman.

LEGABILIS. In old English law. That which may be bequeathed. Cowell.

LEGACY. A disposition of personally by will. In re Johnson's Estate, 220 Iowa 424, 262 N.W. 811; Hill v. Van Sant, 133 N.J.Eq. 133, 30 A.2d 904, 906; Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 858; State, for Use of Woodlands Cemetery Co. of Philadelphia v. Lodge, 2 Terry 125, 16 A.2d 250.

"Legacy" and "bequest" are equivalent terms. But in strict common-law terminology "legacy" and "devise" do not mean the same thing and are not interchangeable, latter being properly used only in relation to real estate. But by construction the word "legacy" may be so extended as to include realty or interests therein. See In re Ross's Estate, 140 Cal. 282, 73 P. 976; Bacon v. Bacon, 55 Vt. 247; Roth's Appeal, 94 Pa. 191; Williams v. McComb, 38 N.C. 455; In re Stuart's Will, 115 Wis. 294, 91 N.W. 688.

Absolute Legacy

One given without condition and intended to vest immediately.

Accumulative Legacy

A second, double, or additional legacy; a legacy given in addition to another given by the same instrument, or by another instrument.

Additional Legacy

One given to the same legatee in addition to (and not in lieu of) another legacy given before by the same will or in a codicil thereto.

Alternate Legacy

One by which the testator gives one of two or more things without designating which.

Conditional Legacy

One which is liable to take effect or to be defeated according to the occurrence or non-occurrence of some uncertain event. Harker v. Smith, 41 Ohio St. 238, 52 Am. Rep. 80; Markham v. Hufford, 123 Mich. 505, 82 N.W. 222, 48 L.R.A. 580, 81 Am.St.Rep. 222.

Contingent Legacy

A legacy given to a person at a future uncertain time, that may or may not arrive; as "at his age of twenty-one," or "if" or "when he attains twenty-one." 2 Bl. Comm. 513; 2 Steph.Comm. 259. A legacy made dependent upon some uncertain event. 1 Rop.Leg. 506. A legacy which has not vested. In re Engles' Estate, 166 Pa. 280, 31 A. 76; Andrews v. Russell, 127 Ala. 195, 28 So. 703; Rubencane v. McKee, 6 Del.Ch. 40, 6 A. 639.

Cumulative Legacies

These are legacies so called to distinguish them from legacies which are merely repeated. In the construction of testamentary instruments, the question often arises whether, where a testator has twice bequeathed a legacy to the same person, the legatee is entitled to both, or only to one of them; in other words, whether the second legacy must be considered as a mere repetition of the first, or as cumulative, i. e., additional. In determining this question, the intention of the testator, if it appears on the face of the instrument, prevails. Wharton.

Demonstrative Legacy

A bequest of a certain sum of money, with a direction that it shall be paid out of a particular fund. It differs from a specific legacy in this respect : that, if the fund out of which it is payable fails for any cause, it is nevertheless entitled to come on the estate as a general legacy. And it differs from a general legacy in this: that it does not abate in that class, but in the class of specific legacies. Kenaday v. Sinnott, 179 U.S. 606, 21 S.Ct. 233, 45 L.Ed. 339; Spinney v. Eaton, 111 Me. 1, 87 A. 378, 380, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 535; In re Douglas' Estate, 149 Minn. 276, 183 N.W. 355, 356; In re Wilson's Estate, 260 Pa. 407, 103 A. 880, 6 A.L.R. 1349; Baker v. Baker, 319 Ill. 320, 150 N.E. 284, 285, 42 A.L.R. 1514. A legacy of quantity is ordinarily a general legacy; but there are legacies of quantity in the nature of specific legacies, as of so much money, with reference to a particular fund for payment. This kind of legacy is called by the civilians a "demonstrative legacy," and it is so far general and differs so much in effect from one properly specific that, if the fund be called in or fail, the legatee will not be deprived of his legacy, but be permitted to receive it out of the general assets; yet the legacy is so far specific that it will not be liable to abate with general legacies upon a deficiency of assets. 2 Williams, Ex'rs, 1078.

General Legacy

A pecuniary legacy, payable out of the general assets of a testator. 2 Bl.Comm. 512; Ward.Leg. 1, 16. One so given as not to amount to a bequest of a particular thing or particular money of the testator, distinguished from others of the same kind; one of quantity merely, not specific. Evans v. Hunter, 86 Iowa 413, 53 N.W. 277, 17 L.R.A. 308, 41 Am.St.Rep. 503; Gardner v. Viall, 36 R.I. 436, 90 A. 760, 762; Spinney v. Eaton, 111 Me. 1, 87 A. 378, 380, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 535; Guthie v. Guthrie's Ex'r, 168 Ky. 805, 183 S.W. 221, 224; School Dist. No. 1 in City and County of Denver v. International Trust Co., 59 Colo. 486, 149 P. 620, 623.

Indefinite Legacy

One which passes property by a general or collective term, without enumeration of number or quantity; as, a bequest of "all" the testator's "goods," or his "bank stock." Lown.Leg. 84.

Lapsed Legacy

Where the legatee dies before the testator, or before the legacy is payable, the bequest is said to lapse, as it then falls into the residuary fund of the estate.

Modal Legacy

A bequest accompanied by directions as to the mode or manner in which it 'shall be applied for the legatee's benefit, e. g., a legacy to A. to buy him a house or a commission in the army. See Lown.Leg. 151.

Pecuniary Legacy

A bequest of a sum of money, or of an annuity. It may or may not specify the fund from which it is to be drawn. It is not the less a pecuniary legacy if it comprises the specific pieces of money in a designated receptacle, as a purse or chest. See Humphrey v. Robinson, 52 Hun, 200, 5 N.Y.S. 164; Lang v. Ropke, 10 N.Y.Leg.Obs. 75; Mathis v. Mathis, 18 N.J.L. 66.

Residuary Legacy

A bequest of all the testator's personal estate not otherwise effectually disposed of by his will; a bequest of "all the rest, residue, and remainder" of the personal property after payment of debts and satisfaction of the particular legacies. See In re Williams' Estate, 112 Cal. 521, 44 P. 808, 53 Am.St.Rep. 224; Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 857.

Special Legacy

A "specific legacy" (q. v.) is sometimes so called.

Specific Legacy

One which operates on property particularly designated. Hart v. Brown, 145 Ga. 140, 88 S.E. 670, 671; Spinney v. Eaton, 111 Me. 1, 87 A. 378, 380, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 535; Bales v. Murray, 186 Iowa 649, 171 N.W. 747, 749; Baker v. Baker, 319 Ill. 320, 150 N.E. 284, 285, 42 A.L.R. 1514; School Dist. No. 1 in City and County of Denver v. International Trust Co., 59 Colo. 486, 149 P. 620, 623. A legacy or gift by will of a particular specified thing, as of a horse, a piece of furniture, a term of years, and the like. Morriss v. Garland, 78 Va. 222. In a strict sense, a legacy of a particular chattel, which is specified and distinguished from all other chattels of the testator of the same kind; as of a horse of a certain color. A legacy of a quantity of chattels described collectively; as a gift of all the testator's pictures. Ward, Leg. 16-18. A legacy is specific, when it is limited to a particular thing, subject, or chose in action, so identified as to render the bequest inapplicable to any other; as the bequest of a horse, a picture, or jewel, or a debt due from a person named, and, in special cases, even of a sum of money. In re Daniels' Estate, 192 Iowa 326, 184 N.W. 647, 650; Baker v. Baker, 319 Ill. 320, 150 N.E. 284, 285, 42 A.L.R. 1514; Carpenter's Estate v. Wiley, 166 Iowa, 48, 147 N.W. 175, 177; Langdon v. Astor, 3 Duer, N.Y., 477, 543.

Trust Legacy

A bequest of personal property to trustees to be held upon trust; as, to pay the annual income to a beneficiary for life.

Universal Legacy

In the civil law. A testamentary disposition by which the testator gives to one or several persons the whole of the property which he leaves at his decease. Civ.Code La., art. 1606.

LEGACY DUTY. A duty imposed in England upon personal property (other than leaseholds) devolving under any will or intestacy. Brown.

LEGACY OR SUCCESSION TAX. An excise, on privilege of taking property by will or inheritance or by succession on death of owner. In re Rosing's Estate, 337 Mo. 544, 85 S.W.2d 495, 496; State Tax Commission v. Backman, 88 Utah 424, 55 P.2d 171, 174.

LEGAL. 1. Conforming to the law; according to law; required or permitted by law; not forbidden or discountenanced by law; good and effectual in law. Freeman v. Fowler Packing Co., 135 Kan. 378, 11 P.2d 276, 277; General Motors Acceptance Corporation v. Schwartz, 118 N.J.L. 25, 190 A. 625, 627.

2. Proper or sufficient to be recognized by the law; cognizable in the courts; competent or adequate to fulfill the requirements of the law.

3. Cognizable in courts of law, as distinguished from courts of equity; construed or governed by the rules and principles of law, in contradistinction to rules of equity.

4. Posited by the courts as the inference or imputation of the law, as a matter of construction, rather than established by actual proof; e. g., legal malice. See Lawful.

5. Created by law. De Vita v. Pianisani, 127 Misc. 611, 217 N.Y.S. 438, 440.

6. Lawful; of or pertaining to law. Kinsley v. Herald & Globe Ass'n, 113 Vt. 272, 34 A.2d 99, 101, 148 A.L.R. 1164.

As to legal "Consideration," "Damages," "Day," "Debts," "Demand," "Defense," "Disability," "Discretton," "Estate," "Incapacity," "Irregularity," "Memory," "Mortgage," "Process," "Relevancy," "Remedy," "Reversion," and "Tender," see those titles.

LEGAL ACUMEN. The doctrine of legal acumen is that if a defect in, or invalidity of, a claim to land is such as to require legal acumen to discover it, whether it appears upon the face of the record or proceedings, or is to be proved aliunde, then the powers or jurisdiction of a court of equity may be invoked to remove the cloud created by such defect or invalidity. Schwab v. City of St. Louis, 310 Mo. 116, 274 S.W. 1058, 1060.

LEGAL AGE. The age at which the person acquires full capacity to make his own contracts and deeds and transact business generally (age of majority) or to enter into some particular contract or relation, as, the "legal age of consent" to marriage. See Capwell v. Capwell, 21 R.I. 101, 41 A. 1005; Perkins v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, 138 Md. 299, 113 A. 877, 880.

Legal age may be full or partial. As respects the former, the common law fixes the beginning of such period on the day preceding the twenty-first anniversary of birth. as respects the latter, a person may be of legal age for certain purposes before arriving at the age of 21 years both at the common law and under the statutes. Montoya de Antonio v. Miller, 7 N.M. 289, 34 P. 40, 21 L.R.A. 699. Legal age to consent to marriage means age of consent to marriage at common law, to wit, 14 years in case of males, and 12 years in case of females. Capwell v. Capwell, 21 R.I. 101, 41 A. 1005. That age, when under the law duties imposed on trustees which were practically those of guardians were no longer regarded as necessary and when the beneficiaries could by their releases duly acquit the trustees for payments made to them, which in the case of boys is upon their arrival at the age of 21 years, and in the case of girls at the age of 18 years. Perkins v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, 138 Md. 299, 113 A. 877, 880. The expression "scholars of legal school age" includes all members of the schools under the age of 21 years. Needham v. Wellesley, 139 Mass. 372, 31 N.E. 732, 733.

LEGAL ASSETS. Such property of a testator in the hands of his executor as is liable to debts in temporal courts and to legacies in the spiritual, by course of law; equitable assets are such as are liable only by help of a court of equity. 2 Will.Ex. 1408-1431. The distinction is not important in the United States; In re Sperry's Estate, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 347. That portion of the assets of a deceased party which by law is directly liable, in the hands of his executor or administrator, to the payment of debts and legacies. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 551. Such assets as can be reached in the hands of an executor or administrator, by a suit at law against him.

LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE. Right to come into court, MacAffer v. Boston & M. R. R., 273 N.Y.S. 679, 242 App.Div. 140; American Home Benefit Ass'n v. United American Benefit Ass'n, 63 Idaho 754, 125 P.2d 1010, 1016.

LEGAL CAPITAL. Property sufficient to balance capital stock liability. Crocker v. Waltham Watch Co., 315 Mass. 397, 53 N.E.2d 230, 238.

LEGAL CAUSE. Proximate cause (q. v.). Substantial factor in bringing about harm. Krauss v. Greenbarg, C.C.A.Pa., 137 F.2d 569, 572; Giles v. Moundridge Milling Co., 351 Mo. 568, 173 S.W.2d 745, 750.

LEGAL CONCLUSION. A statement of legal duty without stating fact from which duty arises. Burton-Lingo Co. v. Morton, Tex.Civ.App., 126 S.W.2d 727, 733.

LEGAL CRUELTY. Such as will warrant the granting of a divorce to the injured party; as distinguished from such kinds or degrees of cruelty as do not, under the statutes and decisions, amount to sufficient cause for a decree. Such conduct on the part of a husband as will endanger the life, person, or health of his wife, or create a reasonable apprehension of bodily hurt; such acts as render cohabitation unsafe, or are likely to be attended with injury to the person or to the health of the wife; Odom v. Odom, 36 Ga. 286; 2 Curt. Eccl. 281; Singewald v. Singewald, 165 Md. 136, 166 A. 441, 446; the willful infliction of pain, bodily or mental, upon the complaining party, such as reasonably justified the apprehension of danger to life, limb, or health; Skellie v. Skellie, 152 Ga. 707, 111 S.E. 22, 24.

If acts of violence are not of frequent repetition, they must endanger life, limb, or health to constitute "cruelty." McKane v. McKane, 152 Md. 515, 137 A. 288, 289. To constitute "cruelty," within the divorce law, where there is no personal violence, the misconduct must be such as will impair the health or create a reasonable apprehension of bodily harm. Humber v. Humber, 109 Miss. 216, 68 So. 161, 163. The term is broad enough to include outrages upon the feelings inflicting mental pain and an anguish, where the conduct has been studied, willful, and deliberate. McNabb v. McNabb, Tex.Civ.App., 207 S.W. 129, 130. See, also, as to "extreme cruelty" as a ground for divorce. Finnell v. Finnell, 113 Okl. 164, 240 P. 62, 63; Cavileer v. Cavileer, 94 N.J.Eq. 160, 119 A. 101, 103; Maloof v. Maloof, 175 Cal. 571, 166 P. 330, 331.

LEGAL DEPENDENT. Dependent according to law, Beard v. Rickert Rice Mills, La.App., 164 So. 636, 638. The term imports right to invoke aid of law to require support. National Council Junior Order United American Mechanics v. Tate, 193 S.E. 397, 212 N.C. 305, 399, 400, 113 A.L.R. 1514; Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Soc. v. Irick, D.C. S.C., 58 F.Supp. 202, 206.

LEGAL DETRIMENT. "Legal detriment" to promisee means that promisee changes his legal position, or assumes duties or liabilities not theretofore imposed on him. State ex rel. Kansas City v. State Highway Commission, 349 Mo. 865, 163 S.W.2d 948, 953.

LEGAL DISCRETION, See Discretion.

LESSEE. He to whom a lease is made. He who holds an estate by virtue of a lease. Viterbo v. Friedlander, 7 S.Ct. 962, 120 U.S. 707, 30 L.Ed. 776; Lang v. Hitt, 149 Ga. 667, 101 S.E. 795, 796; Dutton v. Dutton, 253 P. 553, 554, 122 Kan. 640; Boston Fish Market Corp. v. City of Boston, 224 Mass. 31, 112 N.E. 616, 617, one who has been given posses. sion of land which is exclusive even of the landlord, except as the lease permits his entry, and except right to enter to demand rent or to make repairs. Seabloom v. Krier, 219 Minn. 362, 18 N. W.2d 88, 91.

LESSER OFFENSE. Though the term is used as synonymous with a "less serious offense" or a "minor offense" when one is considering quality of criminal act or severity of penalty imposed, such term as used in statute providing that defendant charged with one of offenses enumerated cannot be convicted or sentenced for lesser offense, means any offense necessarily included in offense charged, where offense charged is one of offenses defined in act. Witt v. State, 205 Ind. 499, 185 N.E. 645, 647.

LESSOR. He who grants a lease. Viterbo v. Friedlander, 7 S.Ct. 962, 120 U.S. 707, 30 L.Ed. 776; Dutton v. Dutton, 122 Kan. 640, 253 P. 553, 554.

One who has leased land for a definite or indefinite period, by a written or parol lease, irrespective of whether a statute of fraud requires the lease to be in writing. City of Tyler v. Ingram, 139 Tex. 600, 164 S.W.2d 516, 520. When a lessee subleases the res, he becomes "lessor" for purposes of sublease. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. Carter, La.App., 2 So.2d 680, 682.

LESSOR OF THE PLAINTIFF. In the action of ejectment, this was the party who really and in effect prosecuted the action and was interested in its result.

The reason of his having been so called arose from the circumstance of the action having been carried on in the name of a nominal plaintiff, (John Doe,) to whom the real plaintiff had granted a fictitious lease, and thus had become his lessor.

LEST. Fr. In French maritime law. Ballast. Ord. Mar. liv. 4, tit. 4, art. 1.

LESTAGE, LASTAGE. A custom for carrying things in fairs and markets. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 47; Termes de la Ley.

LESTAGEFRY. Lestage free, or exempt from the duty of paying ballast money. Cowell.

LESTAGIUM. Lastage or lestage; a duty laid on the cargo of a ship. Cowell.

LESWES. Pastures. Domesday; Co. Litt. 4b. A term often inserted in old deeds and convey. ances. Cowell.

LET, v.

In contracts. To award to one of several persons, who have submitted proposals therefor, the contract for erecting public works or doing some part of the work connected therewith, or rendering some other service to government for a stipulated compensation.

Letting the contract is the choosing one from among the number of bidders, and the formal making of the contract with him. The letting, or putting out, is a different thing from the invitation to make proposals; the letting is subsequent to the invitation. It is the act of awarding the contract to the proposer, after the proposals have been received and considered. See Eppes v. Railroad Co., 35 Ala. 33, 55.

In conveyancing. To demise or lease. "To let and set" is an old expression.

In judicial orders and decrees. The word "let" (in the imperative) imports a positive direction or command.

Thus the phrase "let the writ issue as prayed" is equivalent to "it is hereby ordered that the writ issue," etc. See Ingram v. Laroussini, 50 La.Ann. 69, 23 So. 498.

In Practice. To deliver. "To let to bail" is to deliver to bail on arrest.

LET, n. In old conveyancing. Hindrance; obstruction; interruption. Still occasionally used in the phrase "without any let, suit, trouble," etc. Gustafson v. Ursales, 3 Ohio App. 136, 139.

LET IN. In practice. To admit a party as a matter of favor; as to open a judgment and "let the defendant in" to a defense.

LETHAL. Deadly, mortal, fatal. Vaughn v. Kansas City Gas Co., 236 Mo.App. 669, 159 S.W. 2d 690, 698.

LETHAL WEAPON. In Scotch law. A deadly weapon. See State v. Godfrey, 17 Or. 300, 20 P. 625, 11 Am.St.Rep. 830.

LETRADO. In Spanish law. An advocate. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 1, c. 1, § 3, note.

LETTER. One of the arbitrary marks or characters constituting the alphabet, and used in written language as the representatives of sounds or articulations of the human organs of speech.

A dispatch or epistle; a written or printed message; a communication in writing from one person to another at a distance. Buchwald v. Buchwald, 199 A. 795, 799, 175 Md. 103.

In the imperial law of Rome, "letter" or "epistle" was the name of the answer returned by the emperor to a question of law submitted to him by the magistrates.

A communication inclosed, sealed, and stamped' and being carried as first-class mail. Hyney v. U. S., C.C.A.Mich., 44 F.2d 134, 136; Wolpa v. U. S., C.C.A.Neb., 86 F.2d 35, 39.

A commission, patent, or written instrument containing or attesting the grant of some power, authority, or right.

The word appears in this generic sense in many compound phrases known to commercial law and jurisprudence; e. g., letter of attorney, letter missive, letter of credit, letters patent. The plural is frequently used.

Metaphorically, the verbal expression; the strict literal meaning.

The letter of a statute, as distinguished from its spirit, means the strict and exact force of the language employed, as distinguished from the general purpose and policy of the law.

He who, being the owner of a thing, lets it out to another for hire or compensation. Story, Bailm. § 369.

As to letters of "Administration," "Advice," "Attorney," "Credit," "Horning," "Recommendation," see those titles. As to "Letters Patent," see Patent.

LETTER-BOOK. A book in which a merchant or trader keeps copies of letters sent by him to his correspondents.

LETTER-CARRIER. An employe of the post-office, whose duty it is to carry letters from the post-office to the persons to whom they are addressed.

LETTER MISSIVE. In English law. A letter from the king or queen to a dean and chapter, containing the name of the person whom he would have them elect as bishop. 1 Steph.Comm. 666. A request addressed to a peer, peeress, or lord of parliament against whom a bill has been filed desiring the defendant to appear and answer to the bill. In civil-law practice. The phrase "letters missive," or "letters dimissory," is sometimes used to denote the papers sent up on an appeal by the judge or court below to the superior tribunal, otherwise called the "apostles," (q. v.).

LETTER OF ADVOCATION. In Scotch law. The process or warrant by which, on appeal to the supreme court or court of session, that tribunal assumes to itself jurisdiction of the cause, and discharges the lower court from all further proceedings in the action. Ersk. Inst. 732.

LETTER OF CREDENCE. In international law. The document which accredits an ambassador, minister, or envoy to the court or government to which he is sent; e., certifies to his appointment and qualification, and bespeaks credit for his official actions and representations.

LETTER OF EXCHANGE. A bill of exchange (q. v.).

LETTER OF LICENSE. In English law, a written instrument in the nature of an agreement, signed by all the creditors of a failing or embarrassed debtor in trade, granting him an extension of time for the payment of the debts, allowing him in the meantime to carry on the business in the hope of recuperation, and protecting him from arrest, suit, or other interference pending the agreement.

This form is not usual in America; but something similar to it is found in the "composition" or "extension agreement," by which all the creditors agree to fund their claims in the form of promissory notes, concurrent as to date and maturity, sometimes payable serially and sometimes extending over a term of years. Provision is often made for the supervision or partial control of the business, in the meantime, by a trustee or a committee of the creditors, in which case the agreement is sometimes called a "deed of inspectorship," though this term is more commonly used in England than in the United States.

LETTER OF MARQUE. A commission given to a private ship by a government to make reprisals on the ships of another state; hence, also, the ship thus commissioned. U. S. v. The Ambrose Light, D.C.N.Y., 25 F. 408; Gibbons v. Livingston, 6 N.J.Law, 255.

LETTER OF RECALL. A document addressed by the executive of one nation to that of another, informing the latter that a minister sent by the former has been recalled.

LETTER OF RECREDENTIALS. A document embodying the formal action of a government upon a letter of recall of a foreign minister. It, in effect, accredits him back to his own government. It is addressed to the latter government, and is delivered to the minister by the diplomatic secretary of the state from which he is recalled.

LETTERS AD COLLIGENDUM BONA DEFUNCTI. In Practice. In default of the representatives and creditors to administer to the estate of an intestate, the officer entitled to grant letters of administration may grant to such person as he approves, letters to collect the goods of the deceased, which neither make him executor nor administrator; his only business being to collect the goods and keep them in his safe custody. 2 Bla.Com. 505.

LETTERS CLOSE. In English law. Close letters are grants of the king, and, being of private concern, they are thus distinguished from letters patent.

LETTERS OF ABSOLUTION. Absolvatory letters, used in former times, when an abbot released any of his brethren ab omnia sub jectione et obedientia, etc., and made them capable of entering into some other order of religion. Jacob.

LETTERS OF CORRESPONDENCE. In Scotch law. Letters are admissible in evidence against the panel, i. e., the prisoner at the bar, in criminal trials. A letter written by the panel is evidence against him; not so one from a third party found in his possession. Bell.

LETTERS OF FIRE AND SWORD. See Fire and Sword.

LETTERS OF GUARDIANSHIP. A commission placing ward's property in the care of officer of court as custodian. Walker v. Graves, 174 Tenn. 336, 125 S.W.2d 154, 157.

LETTERS OF REQUEST. A formal instrument by which an inferior judge of ecclesiastical jurisdiction requests the judge of a superior court to take and determine any matter which has come before him, thereby waiving or remitting his own jurisdiction. This is a mode of beginning a suit originally in the court of arches, instead of the consistory court.

LETTERS OF SAFE CONDUCT. No subject of a nation at war with England can, by the law of nations, come into the realm, nor can travel himself upon the high seas, or send his goods and merchandise from one place to another, without danger of being seized, unless he has letters of safe conduct.

By divers old statutes these must be granted under the great seal, and enrolled in chancery, or else are of no effect; the sovereign being the best judge of such emergencies as may deserve exemption from the general law of arms. But passports or licenses from the ambassadors abroad are now more usually obtained, and are allowed to be of equal validity. Wharton.

LETTERS OF SLAINS, OR SLANES. Letters subscribed by the relatives of a person who had been slain, declaring that they had received an assythment, and concurring in an application to the crown for a pardon to the offender. These or other evidences of their concurrence were necessary to found the application. Bell.

LETTERS ROGATORY. A request by one court of another court in an independent jurisdiction, that a witness be examined upon interrogatories sent with the request. Magdanz v. District Court in and for Woodbury County, 222 Iowa 456, 269 N.W. 498, 499, 108 A.L.R. 377. The medium whereby one country, speaking through one of its courts, requests another country, acting through its own courts and by methods of court procedure peculiar thereto and entirely within the latter's control, to assist the administration of justice in the former country. The Signe, D.C.La., 37 F.Supp. 819, 820.

A formal communication in writing, sent by a court in which an action is pending to a court or judge of a foreign country, requesting that the testimony of a witness resident within the jurisdiction of the latter court may be there formally taken under its direction and transmitted to the first court for use in the pending action.

This process was also in use, at an early period, between the several states of the Union. The request rests entirely upon the comity of courts towards each other. See Union Square Bank v. Reichmann, 41 N.Y.S. 602, 9 App.Div. 596.

LETTERS TESTAMENTARY. The formal instrument of authority and appointment given to an executor by the proper court, empowering him to enter upon the discharge of his office as executor. It corresponds to letters of administration granted to an administrator.

LETTING. Leasing. City and County of San Francisco v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 106 F.2d 569, 576.

LETTING OUT. The act of awarding a contract; e. g., a construction contract, or contract for carrying the mails.

LETTRE. Fr. In French law. A letter. It is used, like our English "letter," for a formal instrument giving authority.

LETTRES DE CACHET. Letters issued and signed by the kings of France, and countersigned by a secretary of state, authorizing the imprisonment of a person.

Under them, persons were imprisoned for life or for a long period on the most frivolous pretexts, for the gratification of private pique or revenge, and without any reason being assigned for such punishment. They were also granted by the king for the purpose of shielding his favorites or their friends from the consequences of their crimes ; and thus were as pernicious in their operation as the protection afforded by the church to criminals in a former age. Abolished during the Revolution of 1789. Wharton.

LEUCA.

In old French law. A league, consisting of fifteen hundred paces. Spelman.

In old English law. A league or mile of a thousand paces. Domesday; Spelman. A privileged space around a monastery of ' a league or mile in circuit. Spelman.

LEVANDIE NAVIS CAUSA. Lat. For the sake of lightening the ship; denotes a purpose of throwing overboard goods, which renders them subjects of general average.

LEVANT ET COUCHANT. L. Fr. Rising up and lying down.

A term applied to trespassing cattle which have remained long enough upon land to have lain down to rest and risen up to fed; generally the space of a night and a day, or, at least, one night.

LEVANTES ET CUBANTES. Rising up and lying down. A term applied to cattle. 3 Bl.Comm. 9. The Latin equivalent of "levant et couchant."

LEVARI FACIAS. Lat. A writ of execution directing the sheriff to cause to be made of the lands and chattels of the judgment debtor the sum recovered by the judgment. Pentland v. Kelly, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 484.

Also a writ to the bishop of the diocese, commanding him to enter into the benefice of a judgment debtor, and take and sequester the same Into his possession, and hold the same until he shall have levied the amount of the judgment out of the rents, tithes, and profits thereof.

LEVARI FACIAS DAMNA DE DISSEISITORIBUS. A writ formerly directed to the sheriff for the levying of damages, which a disseisor had been condemned to pay to the disseisee. Cowell.

LEVARI FACIAS QUANDO VICECOMES RE-, TURNAVIT QUOD NON HABUIT EMPTORES. An old writ commanding the sheriff to sell the goods of a debtor which he had already taken, and had returned that he could not sell them; and as much more of the debtor's goods as would satisfy the whole debt. Cowell.

LEVARI FACIAS RESIDUUM DEBITI. An old writ directed to the sheriff for levying the remnant of a partly-satisfied debt upon the lands and tenements or chattels of the debtor. Cowell.

LEVATO VELO. Lat. An expression used in the Roman law, and applied to the trial of wreck and salvage. Commentators disagree about the origin of the expression; but all agree that its general meaning is that these causes shall be heard summarily.

The most probable solution is that it refers to the place where causes were heard. A sail was spread before the door and officers employed to keep strangers from the tribunal. When these causes were heard, this sail was raised, and suitors came directly to the court, and their causes were heard immediately. As applied to maritime courts, its meaning is that causes should be heard without delay. These causes require dispatch, and a delay amounts practically to a denial of justice. (See Cod. 11, 4, 5.) Bouvier.

LEVEE. An embankment or artificial mound of earth constructed along the margin of a river, to confine the stream to its natural channel or prevent inundation or overflow. State v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co., 7 So. 226, 42 La.Ann. 138; Royse v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co., 67 N.E. 446, 160 Ind. 592.

Also (probably by an extension of the foregoing meaning) a landing place on a river or lake; a place on a river or other navigable water for lading and unlading goods and for the reception and discharge of passengers to and from vessels lying in the contiguous waters, which may be either a wharf or pier or the natural bank. See Coffin v. Portland, C.C.Or., 27 F. 415; People v. Allen, 317 Ill. 92, 147 N.E. 479, 481.

LEVEE DISTRICT. A municipal subdivision of a state (which may or may not be a public corporation) organized for the purpose, and charged with the duty, of constructing and maintaining such levees within its territorial limits as are to be built and kept up at public expense and for the general public benefit. See People v. Levee Dist. No. 6, 131 Cal. 30, 63 P. 676.

LEVEL RATE, LEGAL RESERVE POLICY. Insurance which seeks to build up a reserve which will equal face value of policy at the end of insured's life. Helmer v. Equitable Reserve Ass'n, 214 Wis. 270, 252 N.W. 728.

LEVEL ROAD. Road with uniform grade, regardless of whether it is horizontal, up grade, or down grade. O'Rourke v. City of Washington, 304 Pa. 78, 155 A. 100, 102, 78 A.L.R. 811.

LEVIABLE. That which may be levied. That which is a proper or permissible subject for a levy; as, a "leviable interest" in land. See Bray v. Ragsdale, 53 Mo. 172.

LEVIR. In Roman law. A husband's brother; a wife's brother-in-law. Calvin.

LEVIS. Lat. Light; slight; trifling. Levis culpa, slight fault or neglect. Levissima culpa, the slightest neglect. Levis nota, a slight mark or brand. See Brand v. Schenectady & T. R. Co., 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 378.

LEVITICAL DEGREES. Degrees of kindred within which persons are prohibited to marry. They are set forth in the eighteenth chapter of Leviticus.

LEVITY. A term used in connection with collusion in a Pennsylvania divorce act. Lyon v. Lyon, 30 Pa.C.C. 359. See Collusion.

LEVY, v. To assess; raise; execute; exact; collect; gather; take up; seize. Thus, to levy (assess, exact, raise, or collect) a tax; to levy (raise or set up) a nuisance; to levy (acknowledge) a fine; to levy (inaugurate) war; to levy an execution, i. e., to levy or collect a sum of money on an execution.

LEVY, n. A seizure. Farris v. Castor, 186 Okl. 668, 99 P.2d 900, 902; McBrien v. Harris, 39 Ga. App. 41, 145 S.E. 919; Radford v. Kachman, 27 Ohio App. 86, 160 N.E. 875, 877; Plaxico v. Webster, 175 S.C. 69, 178 S.E. 270. An actual making the money out of the property; the obtaining of money by seizure and sale of property. Farris 'v. Castor, 99 P.2d 900, 902, 186 Okl. 668. The mental act of determination to sell. Parker v. MacCue, 54 R.I. 270, 172 A. 725, 727. The raising of the money for which an execution has been issued. Plaxico v. Webster, 175 S.C. 69, 178 S.E. 270.

As used in Uniform Conditional Sales Act, "levy of execution" means the setting aside of specific property from the general property of the debtor and placing it in the custody of the law until it can be sold and applied to the payment of the execution. Bent v. H. W. Weaver, Inc., 106 W.Va. 164, 145 S.E. 594, 595.

In reference to taxation, the word may mean the legislative function and declaration of the subject and rate or amount of taxation, People v. Mahoney, 13 Cal.2d 729, 91 P.2d 1029; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Amos, 94 Fla. 588, 115 So. 315, 320; City of Richmond v. Eubank, 179 Va. 70, 18 S.E.2d 397, 403; or the rate of taxation rather than the physical act of applying the rate to the property, Lowden v. Texas County Excise Board, 187 Okl. 365, 103 P.2d 98, 100; or the formal order, by proper authority declaring property subject to taxation at fixed rate at its assessed)'aluation, State v. Davis, 335 Mo. 159, 73 S.W.2d 406, 407; or the ministerial function of assessing, listing and extending taxes, City of Plankinton v. Kieffer, 70 S.D. 329, 17 N.W.2d 494, 495, 496; or the extension of the tax, Syracuse Trust Co. v. Board of Sup'rs of Oneida County, 13 N.Y.S. 2d 390, 394; People ex rel. Oswego Falls Corporation v. Foster, 295 N.Y.S. 891, 895, 251 App.Div. 65; Day v. Inland Steel Co., 185 Minn. 53, 239 N.W. 776, 777; or the doing of whatever is necessary in order to authorize the collector to collect the tax, Syracuse Trust Co. v. Board of Sup'rs of Oneida County, 13 N.Y.S.2d 390, 394. The qualified electors "levy" a tax when they vote to impose it. Parker v. MacCue, 54 R.I. 270, 172 A. 725, 727.

Equitable levy. The lien in equity created by the filing of a creditors' bill to subject real property of the debtor, and of a lis pendens, is sometimes so called. Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 249, 17 L.Ed. 827; Mandeville v. Campbell, 61 N.Y.S. 443, 45 App.Div. 512. The right to an equitable lien is sometimes called an "equitable levy." Hudson v. Wood, C.C.Ky., 119 F. 764, 776, 777.

It was a body charged with the administration of the ministerial and financial duties of Washington county. It was charged with the duty of laying out and repairing roads, building bridges, providing poor-houses, laying and collecting the taxes necessary to enable it to discharge these and other duties, and to pay the other expenses of the county. It had capacity to make contracts in reference to any of these matters, and to raise money to meet such contracts. It had perpetual succession, and its functions were those which, in the several states, are performed by "county commissioners," "overseers of the poor," "county supervisors," and similar bodies with other designations. Levy Court v. Coroner, 2 Wall. 507, 17 L.Ed. 851.

In Delaware, the "levy court" is an administrative board.

The board is elected and organized in each county, composed of from five to thirteen "commissioners," who, in respect to taxation, per form the functions of a board of equalization and review and also of a board to 'supervise the assessors and collectors and audit and adjust their accounts, and who also have certain powers and special duties in respect to the administration of the poor laws, the system of public roads and the officers in charge of them, the care of insane paupers and convicts, the government and administration of jails, school districts, and various other matters of local concern. See Rev.St.Del. 1893, c. 8; Mealey v. Buckingham, 22 A. 357, 6 Del.Ch. 356.

LEVYING WAR. In criminal law. The assembling of a body of men for the purpose of effecting by force a treasonable object; and all who perform any part, however minute, or however remote from the scene of action, and who are leagued in the general conspiracy, are considered as engaged in levying war, within the meaning of the constitution. Const. art. 3, § 3; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 75, 2 L.Ed. 554.

The words include forcible opposition, as the result of a combination of individuals, to the execution of any public law of the United States; and to constitute treason within the Federal Constitution, there must be a combination of individuals united for the common purpose of. forcibly preventing the execution of some public law and the actual or threatened use of force by the combination to prevent its execution. Kegerreis v. Van Zile, 167 N.Y.S. 874, 876, 180 App.Div. 414.

LEWD. Obscene. People on Complaint of Sumner, v. Dial Press, Mag.Ct., 48 N.Y.S.2d 480, 481. Lustful, indecent, lascivious, lecherous. City of Shreveport v. Wilson, 145 La. 906, 83 So. 186, 188. The term imports a lascivious intent. It signifies that form of immorality which has relation to moral impurity. United States v. Barlow, D.C.Utah, 56 F.Supp. 795, 796, 797, or that carried on in a wanton manner. State v. Barnes, Mo.App., 256 S.W. 496, 498; Rebhuhn v. Cahill, D.C.N.Y., 31 F.Supp. 47, 49. Lewd and lascivious behavior of wife to authorize a divorce must be such conduct as proves the wife unchaste. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 294 Ky. 312, 171 S.W.2d 457.

LEWD AND LASCIVIOUS COHABITATION. Within statutes, the living together of a man and woman not married to each other, in the same house or apartment, as husband and wife. State v. Bridgeman, 88 W.Va. 231, 106 S.E. 708, 711. Habitual acts .of illicit intercourse are necessary elements. State v. Tuttle, 129 Me. 125, 150 A. 490, 491; State v. Davenport, 225 N.C. 13, 33 S.E.2d 136, 139. See, also, Lewdness.

LEWD HOUSE. House may be a "lewd house," though chiefly devoted to carrying on business of boarding house or hotel, if lewd women are accustomed to frequent house and carry on their practices therein. Smith v. State, 52 Ga.App. 88, 182 S.E. 816, 818.

LEWD PERSON. One who is lawless, bad, vicious, unchaste. State v. Harlowe, 174 Wash. 227, 24 P.2d 601.

State, 163 Tenn. 384, 43 S.W.2d 211, 212. Licentiousness; that form of immorality which has relation to sexual impurity. U. S. v. Males, D.C. Ind., 51 F. 41. Moral turpitude. Lane ex rel. Cronin v. Tillinghast, C.C.A.Mass., 38 F.2d 231, 232. Open and public indecency. State v. Brenner, 132 N.J.L. 607, 41 A.2d 532, 534, 535. Sensuality; debauchery. State v. Sullivan, 187 Iowa, 385, 174 N. W. 225. An offense against the public economy, when of an open and notorious character; as by frequenting houses of ill fame, which is an indictable offense, or by some grossly scandalous and public indecency, for which the punishment at common law is fine and imprisonment. Wharton. See Brooks v. State, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 483; State v. Bauguess, 106 Iowa, 107, 76 N.W. 508.

The term includes prostitution and assignation and other immoral or degenerate conduct or conversation between persons of opposite sexes, People v. Bay Side Land Co., 48 Cal.App. 257, 191 P. 994, 995. As well as between persons of the same sex, and signifies both illicit sexual intercourse and the irregular indulgence of lust, whether public or private, Commonwealth v. Porter, 2.37 Mass. 1, 129 N.E. 298, 299; State v. Rayburn, 170 Iowa 514, 153 N.W. 59, 60, L.R.A.1915F, 640. Holding that the living together of a man and woman unmarried, when generally known throughout the neighborhood, constitutes open and gross lewdness. Contra: City of Shreveport v. Wilson, 145 La. 906, 83 So. 186, 188.

Lewd or lascivious behavior practised without disguise, secrecy, or concealment. The adjective relates to the quality of the act, not to the place nor to the number of spectators. State v. Juneau, 88 Wis. 180, 59 N.W. 580, 24 L.R.A. 857, 43 Am.St.Rep. 877; Corn. v. Wardell, 128 Mass. 52, 35 Am.Rep. 357. There must be present elements making the act shameless, aggressive, and defiant, rather than furtive and hiding away in shame; lewdness being deemed open when committed in the presence of another person, or in a place open to public view. State v. Pedigo, 190 Mo.App. 293, 176 S. W. 556, 557.

LEX. Lat.

In medieval jurisprudence. A body or collection of various laws peculiar to a given nation or people; not a code in the modern sense, but an aggregation or collection of laws not codified or systematized. See Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 98.

Also, a similar collection of laws relating to a general subject, and not peculiar to any one people.

In modern American and English jurisprudence. A system or body of laws, written or unwritten, or so much thereof as may be applicable to a particular case or question, considered as being local or peculiar to a given state, country, or jurisdiction, or as being different from the laws or rules relating to the same subject-matter which prevail in some other place.

In old English law. A body or collection of laws, and particularly the Roman or civil law.

Also a form or mode of trial or process of law, as the ordeal or battel, or the oath of a party with compurgators, as in the phrases legem facere, legem vadiare, etc. Also used in the sense of legal rights or civil rights or the protection of the law, as in the phrase legem amittere.

In Roman law. Law; a law; the law.

This term was often used as the synonym of jus, in the sense of a rule of civil conduct authoritatively prescribed for the government of the actions of the members of an organized jural society.

Lex is used in a purely juridical sense, law, and not also right; while jus has an ethical as well as a juridical meaning, not only law, but right. 15 L.Q.R. 367 (by Salmond). Lex is usually concrete, while jus is abstract. In English we have no term which combines the legal and ethical meanings, as do jus and its French equivalent, droit. Pollock, First Book of Jurispr. 14-18.

In a more limited and particular sense, it was a resolution adopted by the whole Roman "populus" (patricians and plebeians) in the comitia, on the motion of a magistrate of senatorial rank, as a consul, a praetor, or a dictator. Such a statute frequently took the name of the proposer ; as the lex Falcidia, lex Cornelia, etc.

A rule of law which magistrates and people had agreed upon by means of a solemn declaration of consensus. Sohm, Inst.R.L. 28.

In a somewhat wider and more generic sense, a law (whatever its origin) or the aggregate of laws, relating to a particular subject-matter, thus corresponding to the meaning of the word "law" in some modern phrases, such as the "law of evidence," "law of wills," etc.

Other specific meanings of the word in Roman Jurisprudence were as follows : Positive law, as opposed to natural. That system of law which descended from the Twelve Tables, and formed the basis of all the Roman law. The terms of a private covenant; the condition of an obligation. A form of words prescribed to be used upon particular occasions.

LEX IEBUTIA. A statute which introduced and authorized new and more simple methods of instituting actions at law.

The law which, with the leges Julice, In part abolished the legis actiones. It provided that a judicium could be instituted in a city court without legis actio, merely by means of the formula or prwtorian decree of appointment, and placed the legis actio and the formula, so far as the civil law was concerned, on a footing of equality. Sohm, Rom. L. 173.

LEX "ELIA SENTIA. The 2Elian Sentian law, respecting wills, proposed by the consuls JElius and Sentius, and passed A. U. C. 756, restraining a master from manumitting his slaves in certain cases. Calvin.

LEX 1EMILIA. A law which reduced the official term of the censors at Rome from five years to a year and a half, and provided for the discharge of their peculiar functions by the consuls in the interim until the time for a new census. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 29.

LEX APOSTATA. A thing contrary to law. Jacob.

LEX APPARENS. In old English and Norman law. Apparent or manifest law.

A term used to denote the trial by battel or duel, and the trial by ordeal, "lex" having the sense of process of law. Called "apparent" because the plaintiff was obliged to make his right clear by the testimony of witnesses, before he could obtain an order from the court to summon the defendant. Spelman.

LEX APULEJA, or APULEIA. A law giving to one of several joint sureties or guarantors, who had paid more than his proportion of the debt secured, a right of action for reimbursement against his co-sureties as if a partnership existed between them. See Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 454, note 2; Inst. 3, 20.

LEX AQUILIA, The Aquilian law; a celebrated law passed on the proposition of the tribune C. Aquilius Gallus, A. U. C. 672, superseding the earlier portions of the Twelve Tables, and regulating the compensation to be made for that kind of damage called "injurious," in the cases of killing or wounding the slave or beast of another. Inst. 4, 3; Calvin.

LEX ATILIA. The Atilian law. A law of Rome proposed by the tribune L. Atilius Regulus, A. U. C. 443, which conferred upon the magistrate the right of appointing guardians. It applied only to the city of Rome; Sohm, Inst.Rom.L. 400.

LEX ATINIA. The Atinian law. A law declaring that the property in things stolen should not be acquired by prescription, (usucapione.) Inst. 2, 6, 2; Adams, Rom.Ant. 207.

A law promulgated by Julius Caesar, and again published with additions by Augustus, comprehending all the laws before enacted to punish transgressors against the state. Calvin.

LEX JUNIA NORBANA. The law conferring legal freedom on all such freedmen as were tuitione prcetoris. See Latini Juniani.

Lex Junia Velleja conferred the same right on posthumous children born in the lifetime of the testator, but after the execution of the will, as were enjoyed by those born after the death of the testator. Sohm, Rom.L. 463.

LEX JUNIA VELLEJA. A law providing that descendants who became sui heredes of the testator otherwise than by birth, as by the death of their father, must be disinherited or instituted heirs in the same way as posthumous children. Campbell, Rom.L. 77.

LEX KANTIIE. The body of customs prevailing in Kent during the time of Edward I.

A written statement of these customs was sanctioned by the king's justices in Byre. They were mainly concerned with the maintenance of a form of land tenure known as gavelkind (q. v.). 1 Poll. & Maitl. 166.

LEX LOCI. The law of the place. This may be of several descriptions but, in general, lex loci is only used for lex loci contractus.

The "lex loci" furnishes the standard of conduct, Russ v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 220 N. C. 715, 18 S.E.2d 130, 131; it governs as to all matters going to the basis of the right of action itself, State of Maryland, for Use of Joynes, v. Coard, 175 Va. 571, 9 S.E.2d 454, 458.

The substantive rights of parties to action are governed by "lex loci" or law of place where rights were acquired or liabilities incurred. Sullivan v. McFetridge, Sup., 55 N. Y.S.2d 511, 516; Gray v. Blight, C.C.A.Colo., 112 F.2d 696, 699.

LEX LOCI ACTUS. The law of the place where the act was done.

LEX LOCI CELEBRATIONIS. The law of the place where a contract is made.

LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS. Used sometimes to denote the law of the place where the contract was made, and at other times to denote the law by which the contract is to be governed, which may or may not be the same as that of the place where it was made. The earlier cases do not regard this distinction. See Pritchard v. Norton, 1 S.Ct. 102, 106 U.S. 124, 27 L.Ed. 104; Pickering v. Fisk, 6 Vt. 102; Speed v. May, 17 Pa. 91, 55 Am.Dec. 540; Hayward v. Le Baron, 4 Fla. 404; Scudder v. Bank, 91 U.S. 406, 23 L.Ed. 245. See an elaborate collection of cases on conflict of laws, 5 Eng.Rul.Cas. 703-975. The phrase is used, in a double sense, to mean, sometimes, the law of the place where a contract is entered into; sometimes that of the place of its performance. Security Trust & Savings Bank of Charles City, Iowa v. Gleichmann, 50 Oki. 441, 150 P. 908, 911, L.R.A.1915F, 1203; Farm Mortgage & Loan Co. v. Beale, 113 Neb. 293, 202 N.W. 877, 878; Bullington v. Angel, 220 N.C. 18, 16 S.E.2d 411, 412, 136 A.L.R. 1054; it is the place of acceptance. Sterrett v. Stoddard Lumber Co., 150 Or. 491, 46 P.2d 1023, 1029.

LEX LOCI DELICTUS. The law of the place where the crime or wrong took place. More fully expressed by the words lex loci delicti commissi (law of the place where a tort is committed), usually written more briefly as lex loci delicti, or, sometimes, simply lex delicti.

LEX LOCI DOMICILII. The law of the place of domicile.

LEX LOCI REI SITIE. The law of the place where a thing or subject-matter is situated.

"It is equally settled in the law of all civilized countries that real property, as to its tenure, mode of enjoyment, transfer, and descent, is to be regulated by the lex loci rei sitce." 2 Kent, Comm. 429. The title to realty or question of real estate law can be affected only by the law of the place where the realty is situated. Colden v. Alexander, 171 S.W.2d 328, 335, 141 Tex. 134; United States v. Becktold Co., C.C.A.Mo., 129 F.2d 473, 477.

LEX LOCI SOLUTIONIS. The law of the place of solution; the law of the place where payment or performance of a contract is to be made.

LEX LONGOBARDORUM. The law of the Lombards. The name of an ancient code of laws among that people, framed, probably, between the fifth and eighth centuries. It continued in force after the incorporation of Lombardy into the empire of Charlemagne, and traces of its laws and institutions are said to be still discoverable in some parts of Italy.

LEX MANIFESTA. Manifest or open law; the trial by duel or ordeal.

The same with lex apparens, (q. v.). In King John's charter (chapter 38) and the articles of that charter (chapter 28) the word "manifestam" is omitted.

LEX MERCATORIA. The law-merchant.

Writing that discredits plaintiff in minds of any considerable and respectable class in the community. Streeter v. Eldridge, 311 Mass. 180, 40 N.E.2d 254, 255.

Libels have been classified according to their objects: (1) Libels which impute to a person the commission of a crime; (2) libels which have a tendency to injure_ him in his office, profession, calling, or trade; (3) libels which hold him up to scorn and ridicule and to feelings of contempt or execration, impair him in the enjoyment of general society, and injure those imperfect rights of friendly intercourse and mutual benevolence which man has with respect to man. Newell, Sian. & L. 67.

Criminal libel. See Criminal.

Seditious libel. See Seditious Libel.

LIBEL OF REVIEW. New proceeding instituted to attack final decree after expiration of term and right to appeal. The Astorian, C.C.A.Cal., 57 F.2d 85, 87.

LIBELANT. The complainant or party who files a libel in an ecclesiastical or admiralty case, corresponding to the plaintiff in actions at law.

LIBELEE. A party against whom a libel has been filed in an ecclesiastical court or in admiralty, corresponding to the defendant in a common-law action.

LIBELLUS. Lat.

In civil law. A little book.

Libellus supplex, a petition, especially to the emperor, all petitions to whom must be in writing. Libellum rescribere, to mark on such petition the answer to it. Libellum agere, to assist or counsel the emperor in regard to such petitions. Libellus accusatorius, an information and accusation of a crime. Libellus divortii, a writing of divorcement. Libellus rerum, an inventory. Calvin. Libellus or oratio consultoria, a message by which emperors laid matters before the senate. Calvin. Libellus appellaterius, an appeal. Calvin.

A writing in which are contained the names of the plaintiff (actor) and defendant, (reus,) the thing sought, the right relied upon, and name of the tribunal before which the action is brought. Calvin.

In Feudal law. An instrument of alienation or conveyance, as of a fief, or a part of it.

Also, a bill. Bracton, fol. 112. Sometimes called libellus conventionis (q. v.).

LIBELLUS CONVENTIONIS. In the civil law. The statement of a plaintiff's claim in a petition presented to the magistrate, who directed an officer to deliver it to the defendant.

LIBELLUS FAMOSUS. In the civil law. A defamatory publication; a publication injuriously affecting character; a libel. Inst. 4, 4, 1; Dig. 47, 10; Cod. 9, 36.

LIBELOUS. Defamatory; of the nature of a libel; constituting or involving libel. See, also, Libel.

LIBELOUS PER QUOD. Expressions "libelous per quod" are such as require that their injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof. Talbot v. Mack, 41 Nev. 245, 169 P. 25, 32. They are those expressions which are not actionable upon their face, but which become so by reason of the peculiar situation or occasion upon which the words are written. Oliveros v. Henderson, 116 S.C. 77, 106 S.E. 855, 857; Norton v, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 184 S.C. 525, 193 S.E. 126, 128. Publications which are susceptible of two reasonable interpretations, one of which is defamatory and the other is not, or publications which are not obviously defamatory, but which become so when considered in connection with innuendo, colloquium, and explanatory circumstances, Flake v. Greensboro News Co., 212 N.C. 780, 195 S.E. 55, 59.

LIBELOUS PER SE. A publication is libelous per se when the words are of such a character that an action may be brought upon them without the necessity of showing any special damage, the imputation being such that the law will presume that any one so slandered must have suffered damage. See Mayrant v. Richardson, 1 Nott. & McC. (S.C.) 349, 9 Am.Dec. 707; Woolworth v. Star Co., 97 App.Div. 525, 90 N.Y.S. 147; Morse v. Times-Republican Printing Co., 124 Iowa 707, 100 N.W. 867. To render words "libelous per se," the words must be of such character that a presumption of law will arise therefrom that the plaintiff has been degraded in the estimation of his friends or of the public or has suffered some other loss either in his property, character, reputation, or business or in his domestic or social relations. Whitaker v. Sherbrook Distributing Co., 189 S.C. 243, 200 S.E. 848, 849. See, also, Actionable Words.

Publications or words have been held libelous per se which charge a public officer with a crime or misdemeanor in office, Sweeney v. Philadelphia Record Co., C.C.A.Pa., 126 F.2d 53, 54, 55; disparage a man in his profession, office, trade or occupation, De Pasquale v. Westchester Newspapers, 8 N.Y.S.2d 829, 831, 170 Misc, 268; Washer v, Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n, 21 Ca1.2d 822, 136 P.2d 297, 301, 155 A.L.R. 1338; dishonor or discredit a man in estimate of the public or his friends and acquaintances, or expose him to ridicule, or have a reasonable tendency to do so, O'Leary v, Hearst Magazines, 4 N.Y.S.2d 79, 167 Misc. 481; expose a person to hatred, distrust, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy, or tend to cause him to be shunned or avoided, or to injure him in office, occupation, business, or employment. Layne v. Tribune Co., 108 Fla. 177, 146 So, 234, 236, 86 A.L.R. 466; Harris v. Curtis Pub, Co., 49 Cal.App.2d 340, 121 P.2d 761, 763, 764; impute crime, Martin v. Markley, 202 La. 291, 11 So.2d 593, 596, 597; Le Moine v. Spicer, 146 Fla. 758, 1 So.2d 730, 731, 732; impute dishonesty, Ripps v. Herrington, 241 Ala. 209, 1 So.2d 899, 902; impute infectious disease, Flake v. Greensboro News Co., 212 N.C. 780, 195 S.E. 55; impute insolvency, Kirkman v. Westchester Newspapers, 24 N,.Y.S. 2d 860, 864, 261 App.Div. 181; Impute to public officer misconduct in office, want of official integrity or fidelity to public trust, Ziebell v. Lumbermens Printing Co., 14 Wash.2d 261, 127 P.2d 677, 680, 681; may well lead right thinking people to believe public official unworthy of public trust and confidence, Sweeney v, Schenectady Union Pub. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 122 F.2d 288, 290, 291; tend either to blacken the memory of one dead or the reputation of one who is alive and expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, Flake v. Greensboro News Co., 212 N.C. 780, 195 S.E. 55; tend to alienate from a business the good will and patronage of a large class of its customers, Emde v. San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, Cal.App., 132 P.2d 279, 286, 287; tend to degrade or disgrace plaintiff or to subject him to public distrust, ridicule, or contempt, Judevine v. Benzies-Montanye Fuel & Warehouse Co., 222 Wis. 512, 269 N.W. 295, 298, 299, 106 A.L.R. 1443; Towles v. Travelers Ins. Co., 282 Ky. 147, 137 S.W.2d 1110, 1111; tend to expose one to public hatred, shame, obloquy, contumely, odium, contempt, ridicule, aversion, ostracism, degradation, or disgrace, or to induce an evil opinion of one in the minds of right-thinking persons, and to deprive one of their confidence and friendly intercourse, Harris v. Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 43 F.Supp. 119, 121, 122; Adle v. Herald Co., Sup., 36 N.Y.S.2d 905, 907; tend to injure plaintiff in his business and occupation and to ruin his name and reputation for honesty, integrity and virtue, and thereby expose him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule, Browder v. Cook, D.C.Idaho, 59 F. Supp. 225, 231, 232; tend to injure reputation and to expose to public hatred, contempt, or shame, Hall v. Binghamton Press Co., Sup., 29 N.Y.S.2d 760, 769, 772.

LIBER, adj. Lat. Free; open and accessible, as applied to courts, places, etc.; of the state or condition of a freeman, as applied to persons. Exempt from the service or jurisdiction of another.

LIBERTATIBUS EXIGENDIS IN ITINERE. An ancient writ whereby the king commanded the justices in eyre to admit of an attorney for the defense of another's liberty. Reg. Orig. 19.

LIBERTI, LIBERTINI. Lat. In Roman law. Freedmen. The condition of those who, having been slaves, had been made free. 1 Brown, Civ. Law 99.

There seems to have been some difference in the use of these two words; the former denoting the manumitted slaves considered in their relations with their former master, who was now called their "patron;" the latter term applying to them in their status in the general social economy of Rome subsequent to manumission. Lee. El. Dr. Rom. § 93. See Morey, Rom.L. 236.

LIBERTICIDE. A destroyer of liberty.

LIBERTIES. Privileged districts exempt from the sheriff's jurisdiction; as, "gaol liberties." See Gaol.

In colonial times, laws, or legal rights resting upon them. The early colonial ordinances in Massachusetts were termed laws and liberties, and the code of 1641 the "Body of Liberties." Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 70.

Formerly, political subdivisions of Philadelphia; as, Northern Liberties.

"Liberties" referred to in statute concerning indecent liberties with female child are such as common sense of society would regard as indecent and improper. People v. Lakin, 286 Mich. 282, 282 N.W. 149, 150.

LIBERTINUM INGRATUM LEGES CIVILES IN PRISTINAM SERVITUTEM REDIGUNT; SED LEGES ANGLIZE SEMEL MANUMISSUM SEMPER LIBERUM JUDICANT. Co. Litt. 137. The civil laws reduce an ungrateful freedman to his original slavery; but the laws of England regard a man once manumitted as ever after free.

LIBERTY. Freedom; exemption from extraneous control.

Freedom from all restraints except such as are justly imposed by law. Ex parte Kreutzer, 187 Wis. 463, 204 N.W. 595, 604. Freedom from restraint, under conditions essential to the equal enjoyment of the same right by others; freedom regulated by law. Kelly v. James, 37 S.D. 272, 157 N. W. 990, 991. The absence of arbitrary restraint, not immunity from reasonable regulations and prohibitions imposed in the interests of the community. Southern Utilities Co. v. Rosenblum, 42 N.Y.S.2d 626, 630, 181 Misc. 78; right to pursue chosen calling, State v. Chisesi, 187 La. 675, 175 So. 453; People v. Cohen, 8 N.Y.S.2d 70, 72, 255 App.Div. 485; right to use property according owner's

Liberty, on its positive side, denotes the fullness of individual existence; on its negative side it denotes the necessary restraint on all, which is needed to promote the greatest possible amount of liberty for each. Amos, Science of Law, p. 90.

The word "liberty" as used in the state and federal Constitutions means, in a negative sense, freedom from restraint, but in a positive sense, it involves the idea of freedom secured by the imposition of restraint, and it is in this positive sense that the state. in the exercise of its police powers, promotes the freedom of all by the imposition upon particular persons of restraints which are deemed necessary for the general welfare. Fitzsimmons v. New York State Athletic Commission, Sup., 146 N.Y.S. 117, 121.

"Liberty," in so far as it is noticed by government, is restraint, rather than license. It is a yielding of the individual will to that of the many, subject to such constitutional guarantees or limitations as will preserve those rights and privileges which are admitted of all men to be fundamental. "Liberty" in the civil state is a giving up Of natural right in consideration of equal protection and opportunity. Weber v. Doust, 84 Wash. 330, 146 P. 623, 625.

The "personal liberty" guaranteed by Const. U. S. Amend. 13 consists in the power of locomotion without imprisonment or restraint unless by due course of law, except those restraints imposed to prevent commission of threatened crime or in punishment of crime committed, those in punishment of contempts of courts or legislative bodies or to render their jurisdiction effectual, and those necessary to enforce the duty citizens owe in defense of the state to protect community against acts of those who by reason of mental infirmity are incapable of self-control. Ex parte Hudgins, 86 W.Va. 526, 103 S.E. 327, 329, 9 A.L.R. 1361.

The "liberty" safeguarded by Fourteenth Amendment is liberty in a social organization which requires the protection of law against the evils which menace the health, safety, morals, and welfare of the people. West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish, Wash., 57 S.Ct. 578, 581, 582, 300 U.S. 379, 81 L.Ed. 703, 108 A.L.R. 1330.

Also, a franchise or personal privilege, being some part of the sovereign power, vested in an individual, either by grant or prescription.

The term is used in the expression, rights, liberties, and franchises, as a word of the same general class and meaning with those words and privileges. This use of the term is said to have been strictly conformable to its sense as used in Magna Charta and in English declarations of rights, statutes, grants, etc.; Corn. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 70.

In a derivative sense, the place, district, or boundaries within which a special franchise is enjoyed, an immunity claimed, or a jurisdiction exercised. In this sense, the term is commonly used in the plural; as the "liberties of the city."

Civil Liberty

The liberty of a member of society, being a man's natural liberty, so far restrained by human. laws (and no further) as is necessary and expedient for the general advantage of the public. 1 El. Comm. 125; 2 Steph. 487

The power of doing whatever the laws permit. 1 Bl. Comm. 6; Inst. 1, 3, 1. See Dennis v. Moses, 18 Wash. 537, 52 P. 333, 40 L.R.A. 302. The greatest amount of absolute liberty which can, in the nature of things, be equally possessed by every citizen in a state. Guarantied protection against interference with the interests and rights held dear and important by large classes of civilized men, or by all the members of a state, together with an effectual share in the making and administration of the laws, as the best apparatus to secure that protection. Lieber, Civ.Lib. 24.

Liberty of a Port

In marine insurance. A license or permission incorporated in a marine policy allowing the vessel to touch and trade at a designated port other than the principal port of destination. See Allegre v. Maryland Ins. Co., 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 200, 29 Am.Dec. 536.

Liberty of Conscience

Liberty for each individual to decide for himself what is to him religious. Gobitis v. Minersville School Dist., D.C.Pa., 21 F.Supp. 581, 584. See, also, Religious Liberty, as defined below.

Liberty of Contract

The ability at will, to make or abstain from making, a binding obligation enforced by the sanctions at the law. Judson, Liberty of Contract, Rep. Am. Bar Ass'n (1891) 233.

The right to contract about one's affairs, including the right to make contracts of employment, and to obtain the best terms one can as the result of private bargaining. Adkins v. Children's Hospital of District of Columbia, 43 S. Ct. 394, 396, 261 U.S. 525, 67 L.Ed. 785, 24 A.L.R. 1238. It includes the corresponding right to accept a contract proposed. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Griffin, 106 Tex. 477, 171 S.W. 703, 704, L.R.A.1917B, 1108. There is, however, no absolute freedom of contract. The government may regulate or forbid any contract reasonably calculated to affect injuriously public interest. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 31 S.Ct. 164, 219 U.S. 186, 55 L.Ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.,N.S., 7; Carleton Screw Products Co. v. Fleming, C.C.A.Minn., 126 F.2d 537, 541. It means freedom from arbitrary or unreasonable restraint, not immunity from reasonable regulation to safeguard public interest, Saucier v. Life & Casualty Ins. Co. of Tennessee, 189 Miss. 693, 198 So. 625, 631; or the right to make contracts with competent persons on a plane of relative parity or freedom of choice and within the limits allowed or not forbidden by law. McGrew v. Industrial Commission, 96 Utah 203, 85 P.2d 608, 612.

Liberty of Speech

Freedom accorded by the constitution or laws of a state to express opinions and facts by word of mouth, uncontrolled by any censorship or restrictions of government.

But language tending to the violation of the rights of personal security and private property, and toward breaches of the public peace, is an abuse of the right, State v. Boyd, 86 N.J.L. 75, 91 A. 586, 587; which is not license, nor lawlessness, but rather the right to fairly criticize and comment, State v. Pape, 90 Conn. 98, 96 A. 313, 315. Liberty never has meant the unrestricted right to say what one pleases at all times and under all circumstances. Fraina v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 255 F. 28, 35. It is not an absolute right. State v. Chaplinsky, 91 N.H. 310, 18 A.2d 754, 760. It has been thought that the liberty to speak includes the corresponding right to be silent, and that this right is infringed by a statute compelling a corporation to give a discharged employee a statement of the cause of discharge. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Griffin, 106 Tex. 477, 171 S.W. 703, 705, L.R.A.1917B, 1108. As used in Constitution, "freedom of speech" means freedom of speech as it was understood by the common law when the Constitution was adopted. State v. Boloff, 138 Or. 568, 7 P.2d 775, 781.

In marine insurance. A license or permission incorporated in a marine policy authorizing the vessel to go to any part of the world, instead of being confined to a particular port of destination. See Eyre v. Marine Ins. Co., 6 Whart. (Pa.) 254.

The right to print and publish the truth, from good motives and for justifiable ends. People v. Croswell, 3 Johns. Cas. 394. Kline v. Robert M. McBride & Co., 11 N.Y.S.2d 674, 679, 170 Misc. 974.

The right to print without any previous license, subject to the consequences of the law. 3 Term 431; Respublica v. Dennie, 4 Yeates, Pa., 267, 2 Am.Dec. 402; Williams Printing Co. v. Saunders, 113 Va. 156, 73 S.E. 472, Ann.Cas. 1913E, 693. The right to publish whatever one may please. Knapp v. Post Printing & Publishing Co., 111 Colo. 492, 144 P.2d 981, 985; Howard Sports Daily v. Weller, 179 Md. 355, 18 A.2d 210, 215; and to be protected against any responsibility for so doing except so far as such publications, from their blasphemy, obscenity, or scandalous character, may be a public offense, or as by their falsehood and malice they may injuriously affect the standing, reputation, or pecuniary interests of individuals, Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 422. It is said to consist in this : "That neither courts of justice, nor any judges whatever, are authorized to take notice of writings intended for the press, but are confined to those which are actually printed." De Lolme, Eng.Const. 254. Immunity from previous restraints or [from] censorship. Grosjean v. American Press Co., La., 297 U.S. 233, 56 S.Ct. 444, 449, 80 L.Ed. 660.

Liberty of the Rules

A privilege to go out of the Fleet and Marshalsea prisons within certain limits, and there reside. Abolished by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 22.

Liberty to Hold Pleas

The liberty of having a court of one's own. Thus certain lords had the privilege of holding pleas within their own manors.

Natural Liberty

The power of acting as one thinks fit, without any restraint or control, unless by the law of nature. 1 Bl. Comm. 125.

The right which nature gives to all mankind of disposing of their persons and property after the manner they judge most consistent with their happiness, on condition of their acting within the limits of the law of nature, and so as not to interfere with an equal exercise of the same rights by other men. Burlamaqui, c. 3, § 15; 1 Bl.Comm. 125. It is called by Lieber social liberty, and is defined as the protection or unrestrained action in as high a degree as the same claim of protection of each individual admits of.

Personal Liberty

The right or power of locomotion; of changing situation, or moving one's person to whatsoever place one's own inclination may direct, without imprisonment or restraint, unless by due course of law. 1 Bl. Comm. 134. Civil Rights Cases, 3 S.Ct. 42, 109 U.S. 3, 27 L.Ed. 835; Pinkerton v. Verberg, 78 Mich. 573, 44 N.W. 579, 7 L.R.A. 507, 18 Am.St.Rep. 473.

Political Liberty

Liberty of the citizen to participate in the operations of government, and particularly in the making and administration of the laws.

Religious Liberty

Freedom from dictation, constraint, or control in matters affecting the conscience, religious beliefs, and the practice of religion; freedom to entertain and express any or no system of religious opinions, and to engage in or refrain from any form of religious observance or public or private religious worship, not inconsistent with the peace and good order of society and the general welfare. See Frazee's Case, 63 Mich, 396, 30 N.W. 72, 6 Am.St.Rep. 310; State v. White, 64 N.H. 48, 5 A. 828.

Permission or authority to do particular act or series of acts on land of another without possessing any estate or interest therein. Lang v. Dupuis, 382 Ill. 101, 46 N.E.2d 21, 23, 24; Sisters of Mercy of Cedar Rapids v. Lightner, 223 Iowa 1049, 274 N.W. 86, 94; Stanolind Pipe Line Co. v. Ellis, 142 Kan. 102, 45 P.2d 846, 848. A permissive use. Novinger v. Shoop, Mo.Sup., 201 S.W. 64, 66; Caldwell v. Gem Packing Co., 52 Cal.App.2d 80, 125 P. 2d 901, 903.

Also, the written evidence of authority accorded.

Executed license. That which exists when the licensed act has been done.

Executory license. That which exists where the licensed act has not been performed.

Express license. One which is granted in direct terms.

Implied license. One which is presumed to have been given from the acts of the party authorized to give it.

Simple license. One revocable at the will of the grantor; i. e., one not coupled with a grant. Cook v. Stearnes, 11 Mass. 533; Mumford v. Whitney, 15 Wend. (N.Y.) 380, 30 Am.Dec. 60; Fluker v. Banking Co., 81 Ga. 461, 8 S.E. 529, 2 L.R.A. 843, 12 Am.St.Rep. 328; Wheeler v. West, 78 Cal. 95, 20 P. 45; Cowles v. Kidder, 24 N.H. 364, 57 Am. Dec. 287.

A license is a personal privilege, Minnesota Valley Gun Club v. Northline Corporation, 207 Minn. 126, 290 N.W. 222, 224; Burnham v. Burnham, 130 Me. 409, 156 A. 823, 825; a personal, revocable, and unassignable privilege, Schnuerle v. Gilbert, 43 S.D. 535, 180 N.W. 953, 954; Morrison v. Fellman, 271 N.Y.S. 436, 150 Misc. 772; Beckett v. City of Paris Dry Goods Co., 14 Ca1.2d 633, 96 P.2d 122, 124; a privilege to occupy under the owner, Rhode Island Marine Transp. Co. v. Interstate Na^{y}. Co., 52 R.I. 322, 161 A. 108, 109; San Juan Gold Co. v. San Juan Ridge Mut. Water Ass'n, 34 Cal.App.2d 159, 93 P.2d 582, 589; an authority to do a particular act or series of acts which would amount to a trespass without permission, Barnett v. Lincoln, 162 Wash. 613, 299 P. 392, 394. It does not operate to confer upon or vest in licensee any title, interest or estate in property and licensee is "estopped" during time that license exists to deny title of licensor or of any one claiming under him, Wood v. Gregory, Mo., 155 S.W.2d 168, 171, 172. It is unassignable, 'Sweeney v. Bird, 293 Mich. 624, 292 N.W. 506, 508, 509.

A license is distinguished from an "easement," which implies an Interest in the land, and a "lease," or right to take the profits of land. It may be, however, and often, is, coupled with a grant of some interest in the land itself, or right to take the profits. 1 Washb.Real Prop. *398; Davis v. Tway, 16 Ariz. 566, 147 P. 750, L.R.A.1915E, 604; National Memorial Park v. C. I. R., C.C.A.4, 145 F.2d 1008, 1015.

A license is an authority to enter on land which is generally granted by parol and may be revoked by the licensor at pleasure and is not assignable, being a personal privilege, while an easement confers an interest in the land and may not be terminated at the pleasure of the servient owner. Louisville Chair & Furniture Co. v. Otter, 219 Ky. 757, 294 S.W. 483, 485.

The distinction between an easement and a license is often so metaphysical, subtle, and shadowy as to elude analysis. But there are certain fundamental principles underlying most cases which enable courts to distinguish an easement from a license when construed in the light of surrounding circumstances. East Jersey Iron Co. v. Wright, 32 N.J.Eq. 254; Nunnelly v. Iron Co., 94 Tenn: 397, 29 S.W. 361, 28 L.R.A. 421.

A "tenancy" implies some interest in the land leased, while a "license" conveys only a temporary privilege in the use of property usually revocable at the will of the licensor. Klein v. City of Portland, 106 Or. 686, 213 P. 147, 150; Vicker v. Byrne, 155 Wis. 281, 143 N.W. 186, 188. But see Mitchell v. Probst, 52 Okl. 10, 152 P. 597, 598.

An "invitation" is inferred where there is a common interest or mutual advantage, or where an owner or occupant of premises, by acts or conduct, leads another to believe the premises or something thereon were intended to be used by such other person, that such use is not only acquiesced in by the owner or occupant, but is in accordance with the intention or design for which the way, place, or thing was adapted or prepared or allowed to be used; while a "license" is implied where the object is the mere pleasure, convenience, or benefit of the person enjoying the privilege. Kruntorad v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 111 Neb. 753, 197 N.W. 611, 612. Polluck v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 44 S.D. 249, 183 N.W. 859, 862.

Special License

In English law. One granted by the archbishop of Canterbury to authorize a marriage at any time or place whatever. 2 Steph. Comm. 247, 255.

A permit to use street is a mere license revocable at pleasure. City of Boston v. A. W. Perry, Inc., 304 Mass. 18, 22 N.E.2d 627, 630; Lanham v. Forney, 196 Wash. 62, 81 P.2d 777, 779.

City having right to regulate use of its streets by motor vehicles for hire may issue licenses; license being permission. Ex parte Schutte, 118 Tex.Cr.R. 182, 42 S.W.2d 252, 255. Permissive use and license as synonymous, Aldine Realty Co. of Pittsburgh v. Manor Real Estate & Trust Co., 297 Pa. 583, 148 A. 56, 58. Street railway location or elevated railway location as license. Boston Elevated Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 310 Mass. 528, 39 N.E.2d 87, 103, 106, 108.

The privilege of using the streets and highways by the operation thereon of motor carriers for hire can be acquired only by permission or license from the state or its political subdivisions. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., 331.

Trade, Business or Calling

Authority or permission to do or carry on some trade or business which would otherwise be unlawful. Solberg v. Davenport, 211 Iowa 612, 232. N.W. 477, 480; S. S. Kresge Co. v. City of Blue• field, 117 W.Va. 17, 183 S.E. 601, 602; Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) v. State Board of Equalization, 110 Mont. 5, 99 P.2d 229, 234. Permission conferred by proper authority, to pursue certain trade, profession, or calling. Staniforth V. State, 34 Ohio App. 239, 170 N.E. 578, 580. Privilege to carry on a business. Johnson v. Liquor Control Commission, 266 Mich, 682, 254 N.W. 557; Lloyds of Texas v. Bobbitt, Tex.Civ.App., 40 S.W.2d 897, 901.

A license confers upon licensee neither contractual nor vested rights. Rosenblatt v. California State Board of Pharmacy, 69 Cal.App.2d 69, 158 P.2d 199, 203. Asbury Hospital v. Cass County, 72 N.D. 359, 7 N.W.2d 438, 452. Nor does it create a property right. State ex rel. Zugravu v. O'Brien, 130 Ohio St. 23, 196 N.E. 664.

Trade-Mark

Permission to use a trade-mark in an area where the purported owner's goods have not become known and identified by his use of mark is a naked "license". E. F. Prichard Co. V. Consumers Brewing Co., C.C.A.Ky., 136 F.2d 512, 521.

LICENSE CASES. The name given to the group of cases including Peirce v. New Hampshire, 5 How. 504, 12 L.Ed. 256, decided by the United States supreme court in 1847, to the effect that state laws requiring a license or the payment of a tax for the privilege of selling intoxicating liquors were not in conflict with the constitutional provision giving to congress the power to regulate interstate commerce, even as applied to liquors imported from another state and remaining in the original and unbroken packages. This decision was overruled in Leisy v. Hardin, 10 Sup.Ct. 681, 135 U.S. 100, 34 L.Ed. 128, which in turn was counteracted by the act of congress of August 8, 1890, commonly called the "Wilson law."

LICENSE FEE or TAX. Charge imposed by sovereign for a privilege. Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board v. Publicker Commercial Alcohol Co., 347 Pa. 555, 32 A.2d 914, 917. Stone v. General Contract Purchase Corporation, 193 Miss. 301, 7 So.2d 806, 808, 140 A.L.R. 1029.

Charge or fee imposed primarily for the discouragement of danger° is employments, the protection of the safety of the public, or the regulation of relative rights, privileges, or duties as between individuals, Conard v. State, Del. Super., 2 Terry 107, 16 A.2d 121, 125. Price paid to governmental or municipal authority for a license to engage in and pursue a particular calling or occupation. See Home Ins. Co. v. Augusta, 50 Ga. 537; Levi v. Louisville, 97 Ky. 394, 30 S.W. 973, 28 L.R.A. 480. Tax on privilege of exercising corporate franchise. City Investments v. Johnson, 6 Ca1.2d 150, 56 P.2d 939, 940. The term "license tax" includes both charge imposed under police power for privilege of obtaining license to conduct particular business, and tax imposed upon business for sole purpose of raising revenue; "license tax" being defined as sum exacted for privilege of carrying on particular occupation. City of Waycross v. Bell, 169 Ga. 57, 149 S.E. 641, 642. Where a fee is exacted and something is required or permitted in addition to the payment of the sum, either to be done by the licensee, or by some regulation or restriction imposed on him, then the fee is a "license fee". Conard v. State, Del.Super., 2 Terry 107, 16 A.2d 121, 125.

LICENSE IN AMORTIZATION. A license authorizing a conveyance of property which, without it, would be invalid under the statutes of mortmain.

LICENSE TAX. A license, strictly so-called, imposed in exercise of the ordinary police power of the state, or a tax, laid in the exercise of the power of taxation. State v. Commercial Loan Co., 251 Ala. 672, 38 So.2d 571, 573.

See License Fee or Tax, supra.

LICENSED VICTUALLER. A term applied, in England, to all persons selling any kind of intoxicating liquor under a license from the justices of the peace. Wharton.

LICENSEE. A person licensed; one who holds a license. Texas-Louisiana Power Co. v. Webster, 127 Tex. 126, 91 S.W.2d 302. A social guest. Biggs v. Bear, 320 Ill.App. 597, 51 N.E.2d 799, 800; Kalinowski v. Young Women's Christian Ass'n, 17 Wash.2d 380, 135 P.2d 852, 857; Gregory v. Exclusive Licensee

See Exclusive Licensee.

Patent Law

One who has had transferred to him, either in writing or orally, a less or different interest than either the interest in the whole patent, or an undivided part of such whole interest, or an exclusive sectional interest. Potter v. Holland, 4 Blatchf. 211, Fed.Cas.No.11,329.

LICENSEE BY INVITATION. A person who goes upon the lands of another with express or implied invitation to transact business with the owner or occupant or do some act to his advantage or to the mutual advantage of both the licensee and the owner or occupant. Samuel E. Pentecost Const. Co. v. O'Donnell, 112 Ind.App. 47, 39 N.E.2d 812.

A licensee by express invitation is one who is directly invited by the owner of the land to enter upon it. Mann v. Des Moines Ry. Co., 232 Iowa 1049, 7 N.W.2d 45, 51.

A licensee by implied invitation is one who has been invited to enter upon the land either by the owner or occupier of the same by some affirmative act done by such owner or occupier or by appearances which justify persons generally in believing that such owner or occupier had given his consent to the public generally to enter upon or to cross over his premises. Mann v. Des Moines Ry. Co., 232 Iowa 1049, 7 N.W.2d 45, 51.

LICENSEE BY PERMISSION. One who, for his own convenience, curiosity, or entertainment, goes upon the premises of another by the owner's or occupant's permission or sufferance. Samuel E. Pentecost Const. Co. v. O'Donnell, 112 Ind.App. 47, 39 N.E.2d 812, 817.

LICENSING ACTS. This expression is applied by Hallam (Const. Hist. c. 13) to acts of parliament for the restraint of printing, except by license.

It may also be applied to any act of parliament passed for the purpose of requiring a license for doing any act whatever. But, generally, when we speak of the licensing acts, we mean the acts regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors. Mozley & Whiteley.

LICENSOR. The person who gives or grants a license.

LICENTIA. Lat. License; leave; permission.

LICENTIA CONCORDANDI. In old practice and conveyancing. License or leave to agree; one of the proceedings on levying a fine of lands. 2 Bl, Comm. 350.

LICENTIA LOQUENDI. In old practice. Leave to speak, (i. e., with the plaintiff;) an imparlance; or rather leave to imparl. 3 Bl. Comm. 299.

LICENTIA SURGENDI. In old English practice. License to arise; permission given by the court to a tenant in a real action, who had cast an essoin de malo lecti, to arise out of his bed. Also, the writ thereupon.

If the demandant can show that the tenant was seen abroad before leave of court, and before being viewed by the knights appointed by the court for that purpose, such tenant shall be taken to be deceitfully essoined, and to have made default. Bract. lib. 5; Fleta, lib. 6, c. 10.

LICENTIA TRANSFRETANDI. A writ or warrant directed to the keeper of the port of Dover, or other seaport, commanding him to let such persons pass over sea as have obtained the royal license thereunto. Reg. Orig. 193.

LICENTIATE. One who has license to practice any art or faculty.

LICENTIOUSNESS. The indulgence of the arbitrary will of the individual, without regard to ethics or law, or respect for the rights of others.

In this it differs from "liberty;" for the latter term may properly be used only of the exercise of the will in its moral freedom, with justice to all men and obedience to the laws, Welch v. Durand, 36 Conn. 184, 4 Am. Rep. 55; State v. Brigman, 94 N.C. 889; liberty is restrained by natural or positive law, and consists in doing whatever we please not inconsistent with the rights of others, whereas licentiousness does not respect those rights. Wolff, Inst. § 84.

Also, lewdness or lasciviousness. Holton v. State, 28 Fla. 303, 9 So. 716; Purvis v. State, 117 Neb. 377, 220 N.W. 599, 600.

LICERE. Lat. To be lawful; to be allowed or permitted by law. Calvin.

LICERE, LICERI. Lat. In Roman law. To offer a price for a thing; to bid for it.

LICET. Lat. From the verb "licere," (q. v.). It is allowed; it is permissible; it is lawful; not forbidden by law.

Although; notwithstanding. Calvin. Importing, in this sense, a direct affirmation. Plowd. 127.

LICET DISPOSITIO DE INTERESSE FUTURO SIT INUTILIS, TAMEN POTEST FIERI DECLARATIO PRIECEDENS QUA& SORTIATUR EFFECTUM, INTERVENIENTE NOVO ACTU. Although the grant of a future interest be inoperative, yet a declaration precedent may be made, which may take effect provided a new act intervene. Bac. Max. pp. 60, 61, reg. 14; Broom, Max. 498.

LICET SZEPIUS REQUISITUS. (Although often requested.)

In pleading. A phrase used in the old Latin forms of declarations, and literally translated in the modern precedents. Yel. 66; 2 Chit.Pl. 90; 1 Chit.Pl. 331. The clause in a declaration which contains the general averment of a request by the plaintiff of the defendant to pay the sums claimed is still called ,the "licet scepius requisites."

LICITA BENE MISCENTUR, FORMULA NISI JURIS OBSTET. Lawful acts [done by several authorities] are well mingled, [i. e., become united or consolidated into one good act,] unless some form of law forbid. Bac. Max. p. 94, reg. 24 (E. g., Two having a right to convey, each a moiety, may unite and convey the whole.)

LICITACION. In Spanish law. The offering for sale at public auction of an estate or property held by co-heirs or joint proprietors, which cannot be divided up without detriment to the whole. See, also, Licitation.

LICITARE. Lat. In Roman law. To offer a price at a sale; to bid; to bid often; to make several bids, one above another. Calvin.

LICITATION. In the civil law. An offering for sale to the highest bidder, or to him who will give most for a thing.

An act by which co-heirs or other co-proprietors of a thing in common and undivided between them put it to bid between them, to be adjudged and to belong to the highest and last bidder, upon condition that he pay to each of his co-proprietors a part in the price equal to the undivided part which each of the said co-proprietors had in the estate licited, before the adjudication. Poth.Cont.Sale, nn. 516, 638. See Barbarich v. Meyer, 154 La. 325, 97 So. 459, 460.

LICITATOR. In Roman law. A bidder at a sale.

LICKING OF THUMBS. An ancient formality by which bargains were completed.

LIDFORD LAW. A sort of lynch law, whereby a person was first punished and then tried. Wharton.

LIE, n. An untruth deliberately told; the uttering or acting of that which is false for the purpose of deceiving; intentional mistatement. Brothers v. Brothers, 208 Ala. 258, 94 So. 175, 177.

LIE, v. To subsist; to exist; to be sustainable; to be proper or available.

Thus the phrase "an action will not lie" means that an action cannot be sustained, or that there is no ground upon which to found the action.

LIE DETECTOR. A machine which records by a needle on a graph varying emotional disturbances when answering questions truly or falsely, as indicated by fluctuations in blood pressure, respiration or perspiration. State v. .Cole, 354 Mo. 181, 188 S.W.2d 43, 51. A pathometer. People v. Forte, 4 N.Y.S.2d 913, 919, 167 Misc, 868.

LIE IN FRANCHISE. Property is said to "lie in franchise" when it is of such a nature that the persons entitled thereto may seize it without the aid of a court; e. g., wrecks, waifs, estrays.

LIE IN GRANT. Incorporeal hereditaments are said to "lie in grant;" that is, they pass by force of the grant (deed or charter) without livery.

LIE IN LIVERY. A term applied to corporeal hereditaments, freeholds, etc., signifying that they pass by livery, not by the mere force of the grant.

LIE IN WAIT. See Lying in Wait.

LIE TO. To adjoin. A cottage must have had four acres of land laid to it. See 2 Show. 279.

LIEFTENANT. An old form of "lieutenant," and still retained as the vulgar pronunciation of the word.

LIEGE.

In feudal law. Bound by a feudal tenure; bound in allegiance to the lord paramount, who owned no superior.

The term was applied to the lord, or liege lord, to whom allegiance was due, since he was bound to protection and a just government, and also to the feudatory, liegeman, or subject bound to allegiance, for he was bound to tribute and due subjection. 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. So lieges are the king's subjects. Stat. 8 Hen. VI. c. 10; 14 Hen. VIII. c. 2. So in Scotland. Bell, Dict.

In old records. Full; absolute; perfect; pure. lAege widowhood was pure widowhood. Cowell. Ligius was also used; e. g. ligia potestas, full and free power of disposal. Paroch. Antiq. 280.

LIEGE HOMAGE. Homage which, when performed by one sovereign prince to another, included fealty and services, as opposed to simple homage, which was a mere acknowledgment of tenure. (1 Bl. Comm. 367; 2 Steph, Comm. 400.) Mozley & Whiteley.

LIEGE LORD. A sovereign; a superior lord.

LIEGE POUSTIE. In Scotch law. That state of health which gives a person full power, to dispose of, mortis causal or' otherwise, his heritable property. Bell. A deed executed at the time of such a state of health, as opposed to a death-bed conveyance. The term seems to be derived from the Latin "legitima potestas."

LIEGEMAN. He that oweth allegiance. Cowell.

LIEGER, or LEGER. A resident ambassador.

LIEGES, or LIEGE PEOPLE. Subjects.

LIEN. A charge or security or incumbrance upon property. Theatre Realty Co. v. Aronberg-Fried Co., C.C.A.Mo., 85 F.2d 383, 388, McCarty v. Robinson, 222 Ala. 287, 131 So. 895, 896; Springer v. J. R. Clark Co., C.C.A.Minn., 138 F.2d 722, 726.

A claim or charge on property for payment of some debt, obligation or duty, Shipley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 25 Tenn.App. 452, 158 S.W.2d 739, 741; Williams v. Greer, Tex.Civ.App., 122 S.W.2d 247, 248; Ross v. Franko, 139 Ohio St. 395, 40 N.E.2d 664, 665; Gray v. Horne, 48 Cal.App.2d 372, 119 P.2d 779, 780; Willard v. Stauffer, 91 Ind. App. 119, 170 N.E. 332, 335; hold or claim which one person has upon the property of another for some debt or charge, Sissman v. Estates

The restriction or circumscription of an estate, in the conveyance by which it is granted, in respect to the interest of the grantee or its duration; the specific curtailment or confinement of an estate, by the terms of the grant, so that it cannot endure beyond a certain period or a designated contingency.

A "limitation" on a grant determines an estate upon the happening of the event itself without the necessity of doing any act to regain the estate, such as re-entry. Gulf Production Co. v. Continental Oil Co., Tex., 132 S.W.2d 553, 563.

A limitation, whether made by the express words of the party or existing in intendment of law, circumscribes the continuance of time for which the property is to be enjoyed, and by positive and certain terms, or by reference to some event which possibly may happen, marks the period at which the time of enjoyment shall end. Smith v. Smith, 23 Wis. 181, 99 Am.Dec. 153; Hoselton v. Hoselton, 166 Mo. 182, 65 S.W. 1005; Stearns v. Godfrey, 16 Me. 160.

The "unless" provisions of oil and gas lease which provided that if no well should be commenced within one year, lease should terminate unless privilege of commencement should be deferred by payment of rental, were a "limitation" on the grant. Gulf Production Co. v. Continental Oil Co., 139 Tex. 183, 132 S.W.2d 553, 563.

The word "limitation" defines the extent or quality of an estate conveyed or devised. Richardson v. Roney, 382 Dl. 528, 47 N.E.2d 714.

Collateral limitation. One which gives an interest in an estate for a specified period, but makes the right of enjoyment to depend on some collateral event, as an estate to A. till B. shall go to Rome. Templeman v. Gibbs, 86 Tex. 358, 24 S.W. 792; 4 Kent, Comm. 128.

Conditional limitation. A condition followed by a limitation over to a third person in case the condition be not fulfilled or there be a breach of it. Stearns v. Godfrey, 16 Me. 158; Hess v. Kernen Bros., 169 Iowa 646, 149 N.W. 847, 851; Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 151 Tenn. 221, 209 S.W. 36, 38. Board of Education of Borough of West Paterson v. Brophy, 90 N.J.Eq. 57, 106 A. 32, 34. A conditional limitation is where an estate is so expressly defined and limited by the words of its creation that it cannot endure for any longer time than till the contingency happens upon which the estate is to fail. 1 Steph.Comm. 309. Between conditional limitations and estates depending on conditions subsequent there is this difference : that in the former the estate determines as soon as the contingency happens; but in the latter it endures until the grantor or his heirs take advantage of the breach. 1 Steph.Comm. 310.

Contingent limitation. When a remainder in fee is limited upon any estate which would by the common law be adjudged a fee tail, such a remainder is valid as a contingent limitation upon a fee, and vests in possession on the death of the first taker without issue living at the time of his death. Rev.Codes N.D.1899, 1 3328 (Comp.Laws 1913, § 5307).

Limitation in law. A limitation in law, or an estate limited, is an estate to be holden only during the continuance of the condition under which it was granted, upon the determination of which the estate vests immediately in him in expectancy. 2 Bl.Comm. 155.

Limitation over. This term includes any estate in the same property created or contemplated by the conveyance, to be enjoyed after the first estate granted expires or is exhausted. Lane v. Citizens & Southern Nat. Bank, 195 Ga. 828, 25 S.E.2d 800, 802, 803. Thus, in a gift to A. for life, with remainder to the heirs of his body, the remainder is a "limitation over" to such heirs. Ewing v. Shropshire, 80 Ga. 374, 7 S.E. 554.

Limitation title. Full title, precluding all claims. Free v. Owen, 131 Tex. 281, 113 S.W.2d 1221, 1224.

Special limitation. A qualification serving to mark out the bounds of an estate, so as to determine it ipso facto in a given event, without action, entry, or claim, before it would, or might, otherwise expire by force of, or according to, the general limitation. Henderson v. Hunter, 59 Pa. 340.

Title by limitation. A prescriptive title; one which is indefeasible because of the expiration of the time prescribed by the statute of limitations for the bringing of actions to test or defeat it. See Dalton v. Rentaria, 2 Ariz. 275, 15 P. 37.

Words of limitation. In a conveyance or will, words which have the effect of marking the duration of an estate are termed "words of limitation." Thus, in a grant to A. and his heirs, the words "and his heirs" are words of limitation, because they. show that A. is to take an estate in fee-simple and do not give his heirs anything. Fearne, Rem. 78. And see Ball v. Payne, 6 Rand., Va., 75; Summit v. Yount, 109 Ind. 506, 9 N.E. 582.

The term "limitation" means the time at the end of which no action at law or suit in equity can be maintained. Uscienski v. National Sugar Refining Co., 18 A.2d 611, 612, 19 N.J.Misc. 240. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks, Tex.Com.App., 35 S.W.2d 128, 130, 75 A.L.R. 623.

The restriction by statute of the right of action to certain periods of time, after the accruing of the cause of action, beyond which, except in certain specified cases, it will not be allowed. Also the period' of time so limited by law for the bringing of actions. See Keyser v. Lowell, 117 F. 404, 54 C.C.A. 574; Battle v. Shivers, 39 Ga. 409; Baker v. Kelley, 11 Minn. 493 (Gil. 358) ; Riddelsbarger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 7 Wall. 390, 19 L.Ed. 257.

Limitation of Assize

In old practice. A certain time prescribed by statute, within which a man was required to allege himself or his ancestor to have been seised of lands sued for by a writ of assize. Cowell.

Statute of Limitations

A statute prescribing limitations to the right of action on certain described causes of action; that is, declaring that no suit shall be maintained on such causes of action unless brought within a specified period after the right accrued. Statutes of limitation are statutes of repose. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Quaker City Flour Mills Co., 282 Pa. 362, 127 A. 845, 846, and are such legislative enactments as prescribe the periods within which actions may be brought upon certain claims or within which certain rights may be enforced. People v. Kings County Development Co., 48 Cal. App. 72, 191 P. 1004, 1005. In criminal cases, however, a statute of limitation is an act of grace, a surrendering by sovereign of its right to prosecute. People v. Ross, 325 Ill. 417, 156 N.E. 303, 304.

LIMITED. Restricted; bounded; prescribed. Confined within positive bounds; restricted in duration, extent, or scope.

As to limited "Company," "Divorce," "Fee," and "Partnership," see those titles.

LIMITED ADMINISTRATION. An administration of a temporary character, granted for a particular period, or for a special or particular purpose. Holthouse.

LIMITED APPEAL. An appeal from only adverse portions of a decree; it is limited to the particular portions of the decree appealed from. Fox v. River Heights, 22 Tenn.App. 166, 118 S.W.2d 1104, 1114.

LIMITED COURT. Where special authority, in derogation of common law, is conferred by statute on a court of general jurisdiction, it becomes an "inferior or limited court". Partlow v. Partlow, 246 Ala. 259, 20 So.2d 517, 518.

LIMITED EXECUTOR. An executor whose appointment is qualified by limitations as to the time or place wherein, or the subject-matter whereon, the office is to be exercised; as distinguished from one whose appointment is absolute, i. e., certain and immediate, without any restriction in regard to the testator's effects or limitation in point of time. 1 Williams, Ex'rs, 249, et seq.

LIMITED GUARANTY. A limited guaranty is ordinarily one restricted in its application to a single transaction. Cooling v. Springer, 3 Terry 228, 30 A.2d 466, 469.

LIMITED JURISDICTION. This term is ambiguous, and the books sometimes use it without due precision. It is sometimes carelessly employed instead of "special." The true distinction between courts is between such as possess a general and such as have only a special jurisdiction for a particular purpose, or are clothed with special powers for the performance. Obert v. Hammel, 18 N.J.Law, 73.

LIMITED LIABILITY. The liability of the members of a joint-stock company may be either unlimited or limited; and, if the latter, then the limitation of liability is either the amount, if any, unpaid on the shares, (in which case the limit is said to be "by shares,") or such an amount as the members guaranty in the event of the company being wound up, (in which case the limit is said to be "by guaranty.") Brown.

LIMITED OR SPECIAL JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction which is confined to particular causes, or which can be exercised only under the limitations and circumstances prescribed by the statute. Midwest Piping & Supply Co. v. Thomas Spacing Mach. Co., 109 Pa.Super. 571, 167 A. 636, 638.

LIMITED OWNER. A tenant for life, in toil, or by the curtesy, or other person not having a fee-simple in his absolute disposition.

LIMITED PAYMENT PLAN. A policy upon a "limited payment plan" is a paid-up policy, and insurance upon which no further premium is to be paid. Bankers Life & Loan Ass'n v. Chase, Tex.Civ.App., 114 S.W.2d 374, 376.

LIMITED PERIOD. As used in statutes authorizing assignment in actions for divorce and separate maintenance, of homestead selected from separate property of either, to innocent party for limited period, means period of natural life of such innocent party. Greenlee v. Greenlee, 7 Cal. 2d 579, 61 P.2d 1157, 1159.

LIMITED POLICY. Is one specifically excluding certain classes or types of loss. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Industrial Accident Commission, 56 Cal.App.2d 443, 132 P.2d 890, 894.

LIMITED POWER OF APPOINTMENT. Power of appointment is limited when it is exercisable only in favor of persons or a class of persons designated in the instrument creating the power. Johnstone v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 76 F.2d 55, 57.

LIMITED PUBLICATION. Communication to a select number on condition, express or implied, that it is not intended to be thereafter common property. Berry v. Hoffman, 125 Pa.Super. 261, 189 A. 516, 519. Waring v. WDAS Broadcasting Station, 327 Pa. 433, 194 A. 631, 636.

LIMOGIA. Enamel. Du Cange.

LINARIUM. In old English law. A flax plat, were flax is grown. Du Cange.

LINCOLN'S INN. An inn of court. See Inns of Court.

LINE.

Lineal measure, containing the one-twelfth part of an inch.

The boundary or line of division between two estates.

Route. Menut & Parks Co. v. Cray, 114 Vt. 41, 39 A.2d 342, 347, 156 A.L.R. 404.

When a particular type of silver plate has gone through several patterns and has gained recognition, it is often called in the trade a "line". Oneida, Limited, v. National Silver Co., Sup., 25 N.Y.S.2d 271, 277.

Line by Line Budget. A detailed itemization of all expenditures by budget line. Block v. Sprague, Sup., 24 N.Y.S.2d 245, 247.

Line of an Intersection. A straight line substantially at right angles to bounds of highway at a point where, to the reasonable perception of a driver, the highway starts to widen as the result of the outcurving of its bounds to form the junction. Beck v. Sosnowitz, 125 Conn. 553, 7 A.2d 389, 391.

Line of credit. A margin or fixed limit of credit granted by one to another, to the full extent of which the latter may avail himself in his dealings with the former, but which he must not exceed ; usually intended to cover a series of transactions, in which case, when the customer's line of credit is nearly or quite exhausted, he is expected to reduce his indebtedness by payments before drawing upon it further. Pittinger v. Southwestern Paper Co. of Fort Worth, Tex.Civ.App., 151 S.W.2d 922, 925.

Line of duty. In military law and usage, an act is said to be done, or an injury sustained, "in the line of duty," when done or suffered in the performance or discharge of a duty incumbent upon the individual in his character as a member of the military or naval forces. See Rhodes v. U. S., 79 F. 743, 25 C.C.A. 186. An injury suffered or disease contracted by a sailor is considered to have been in "line of duty" unless actually caused by something for which sailor is responsible which intervenes between his performance of duty and the injury or disease. Meyer v. Dollar S. S. Line, C.C.A.Wash., 49 F.2d 1002, 1003.

Line of electrically infinite length. "Reflectionless line" and "traveling wave" are synonymous terms. Radio Corporation of America v. Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co., D.C.N.Y., 16 F.Supp. 610, 612.

Line of ordinary high tide. Ordinary high tide may, for practical purposes, within a restricted area, be conceived as a level plane; the "line of ordinary high tide" is the intersection of said plane with the surface of the land. Swarzwald v. Cooley, 39 Cal.App.2d 306, 103 P.2d 580, 584.

Building line. Sees Building Line.

Collateral line. See Descent,

Descent. See Descent.

Direct line. See Descent.

Maternal line. See Maternal Line.

Paternal line. See Paternal Line.

Public utilities. See Public Utility.

LINEA. Lat. A line; line of descent. See Descent.

LINEA OBLIQUA. In the civil law. The oblique line. More commonly termed "linea transversalis."

LINEA RECTA. The direct line; the vertical line.

In computing degrees of kindred and the succession to estates, this term denotes the direct line of ascendants and descendants. Where a person springs from another immediately, or mediately through a third person, they are said to be in the direct line, (linea recta,) and are called "ascendants" and "descendants." Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 129.

LINEA RECTA SEMPER PRIEFERTUR TRANSVERSALI. The right line is always preferred to the collateral. Co. Litt. 10; Broom, Max. 529.

LINEA TRANSVERSALIS. A collateral, transverse, or oblique line. Where two persons are descended from a third, they are called "collaterals," and are said to be related in the collateral line, (linea transversa or obliqua.)

LINEAGE. Race; progeny; family, ascending or descending. Lockett v. Lockett, 94 Ky. 289, 22 S. W. 224. Line of descent from an ancestor, hence, family, race, stock. In re Herrick's Estate, 273 N. Y.S. 803, 152 Misc. 9.

LINEAL. That which comes in a line; especially a direct line, as from father to son. Collateral relationship is not called "lineal," though the expression "collateral line," is not unusual. Proceeding in direct or unbroken line, hereditary, unbroken in course, distinguished from collateral, as lineal descent, lineal succession, having an ancestral basis or right. In re Herrick's Estate, 273 N. Y.S. 803, 152 Misc. 9.

LINEAL CONSANGUINITY. That kind of consanguinity which subsists between persons of whom one is descended in a direct line from the other; as between a particular person and his father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and so upward, in the direct ascending line; or between the same person and his son, grandson, great-grandson, and so downwards in the direct descending line. 2 Bl.Comm. 203; Willis Coal & Min. Co. v. Grizzell, 198 Ill. 313, 65 N.E. 74.

LINEAL DESCENT. See Descent.

LINEAL HEIR. One who inherits in a line either ascending or descending from the common source, as distinguished from a collateral heir. Rocky Mountain Fuel Co. v. Kovaics, 26 Colo.App. 554, 144 P. 863, 865.

The words "lineal heirs" like "heirs of the body" mean all lineal descendants to the remotest posterity and are words of "Inheritance" and not of "purchase," unless the instrument clearly shows that they were used in a restricted sense to denote "children." Sims v. Clayton, 193 S.C. 98, 7 S.E.2d 724, 727.

LINEAL WARRANTY. A warranty by an ancestor from whom the title did or might have come to the heir. 2 Bl.Comm. 301; Rawle, Co^y. 30.

LINES AND CORNERS. In deeds and surveys. Boundary-lines and their angles with each other. Nolin v. Parmer,. 21 Ala. 66.

LINK. A unit in a connected series; anything which serves to connect or bind together the things which precede and follow it. Thus, we speak of a "link in the chain of title." Something which binds together, or connects, separate things; a part of a connected series; a tie, a bond. City of Independence v. Board of Com'rs of Montgomery County, 140 Kan. 661, 38 P.2d 105, 106.

LIQUERE. Lat. In the civil law. To be clear, evident, or satisfactory.

When a judex was in doubt how to decide a case, he represented to the prwtor, under oath, sibi non liquere, (that It was not clear to him,) and was thereupon discharged. Calvin.

LIQUET. It is clear or apparent; it appears. Satis liquet, it sufficiently appears. 1 Strange, 412.

LIQUID DEBT. A debt immediately and unconditionally due. In re Brock, 312 Pa. 7, 166 A. 778, 780.

LIQUIDATE. To pay and settle. Gibson v. American Ry. Express Co., 195 Iowa 1126, 193 N.W. 274; Farmers State Bank & Trust Co. v. Brady, 137 Tex. 39, 152 S.W.2d 729, 732; Fleckner v. Bank of U. S., La., 8 Wheat. 338, 362, 5 L.Ed. 631.

Also to liquidate means to adjust. State ex rel. Banister v. Cantley, 330 Mo. 943, 52 S.W.2d 397, 399. Belden v. Modern Finance Co., Ohio App., 61 N.E.2d 801, 804; to ascertain the amount, or the several amounts, of the liabilities of insolvent and apportion the assets toward discharge of the indebtedness, Farmers State Bank & Trust Co. v. Brady, 137 Tex. 39, 152 S.W.2d 729, 732; to ascertain the balance due and to whom payable, State ex rel Banister v. Cantley, 330 Mo. 943, 52 S.W.2d 397, 399; to assemble and mobilize the assets, settle with the creditors and the debtors and apportion the remaining assets, if any, among the stockholders or owners. United States v. Metcalf, C.C. A.Cal., 131 F.2d 677, 679; State ex rel. Gibson v. American Bonding & Casualty Co., 225 Iowa 638, 281 N.W. 172, 175; to clear up, State ex rel. Banister v. Cantley, 330 Mo. 943, 52 S.W.2d 397, 399; Fleckner v. Bank of U. S., La., 8 Wheat. 338, 362, 5 L.Ed. 631; to determine by agreement or litigation precise amount of indebtedness, Continental Ins. Co. v. Harris, 190 Ark. 1110, 82 S.W.2d 841, 843; to discharge, Continental Ins. Co. v. Harris, 190 Ark. 1110, 82 S.W.2d 841, 843; to extinguish an indebtedness, Gibson v. American Ry. Express Co., 195 Iowa 1126, 193 N.W. 274, 278; Belden v. Modern Finance Co., Ohio App., 61 N.E.2d 801, 804; to gather in the assets, convert them into cash and distribute them according to the legal rights of the parties interested, Browne v. Hammett, 133 S.C. 446, 131 S.E. 612, 614; to lessen, Fleckner v. Bank of U. S., La., 8 Wheat. 338, 362, 5 L.Ed. 631; to make amount of indebtedness clear and certain, Continental Ins. Co. v. Harris, 190 Ark. 1110, 82 S.W.2d 841, 843; to reduce to precision in amount and to satisfy, State ex rel. Banister v. Cantley, 330 Mo. 943, 52 S.W.2d 397, 399; to sell, Esser v. Chimel, Del.Ch., 30 A.2d 685, 687; to "wind up" affairs of a business, Ex parte Amos, 94 Fla. 1023, 114 So. 760, 765; State ex rel. Gibson v. American Bonding & Casualty Co., 225 Iowa 638, 281 N.W. 172, 175.

LIQUIDATED. Ascertained; determined; fixed; settled; made clear or manifest. Cleared away; paid; discharged. Canda v. Canda, 92 N.J.Eq. 423, 112 A. 727, 728, 13 A.L.R. 1029; State Bank of Stratford v. Young, 159 Iowa 375, 140 N.W. 376, 380; Sinclair Refining Co. v. Unadilla Motor & Supply Co., 213 N.Y.S. 81, 83, 126 Misc. 292.

Adjusted, certain, or settled. Murchison v. Levy Plumbing Co., Tex.Civ.App., 73 S.W.2d 967, 968; McMurray v. Faust, 224 Iowa 50, 276 N.W. 95, 100. Declared by the parties as to amount, U. S. v. Skinner & Eddy Corporation, D.C.Wash., 28 F.2d 373, 386; made certain as to what and how much is due, Gasper v. Mayer, 171 Okl. 457, 43 P.2d 467, 471; Electrical Products Corporation of Oregon v. Ziegler Drug Stores, 157 Or. 267, 71 P.2d 583, 584.

LIS. Lat. A controversy or dispute; a suit or action at law.

LIS ALIBI PENDENS. A suit pending elsewhere.

The fact that proceedings are pending between a plaintiff and defendant in one court in respect to a given mat ter is frequently a ground for preventing the plaintiff from taking proceedings in another court against the same defendant for the same object and arising out of the same cause of action. Sweet.

LIS MOTA. A controversy moved or begun.

By this term is meant a dispute which has arisen upon a point or question which afterwards forms the issue upon which legal proceedings are instituted. Westfelt v. Adams, 131 N.C. 379, 42 S.E. 823. After such controversy has arisen, (post litem motam,) it is held, declarations as to pedigree, made by members of the family since deceased, are not admissible. See 4 Camp. 417; 6 Car. & P. 560.

LIS PENDENS. A pending suit. Moore v. Zelic, 338 Ill. 583, 170 N.E. 664, 666; People ex rel. O'Connor v. City of Chicago, 299 Ill.App. 504, 20 N. E.2d 306, 307; jurisdiction, power, or control which courts acquire over property in suit pending action and until final judgment, Commonwealth ex rel. Kelley v. Kelly, 322 Pa. 178, 185 A. 307, 310; Coleman v. Law, 170 Ga. 906, 154 S.E. 445, 448, 74 A.L.R. 684; notice of all facts apparent on face of pleadings and exhibits and of all other facts of which they would put a person of ordinary prudence on inquiry, Ben Williamson & Co. v. Hall, 290 Ky. 672, 161 S.W.2d 905, 907; notice of pendency of suit and warning to anyone interested to examine proceedings, Harris v. Lipson, 167 Va. 365, 189 S.E. 349, 352, 108 A.L.R. 912; a suit or controversy in court, Mayne v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., C.C.A.Mo., 64 F.2d 843, 845; that legal process, in a suit regarding land, which amounts to legal notice to all the world that there is a dispute as to the title. Stim. Law Gloss.

The filing of the bill and serving a subpoena creates a lis pendens, except when statutes require some record. Stim.Law Gloss. Tinsley v. Rice, 105 Ga. 285, 31 S.E. 174; Hines v. Duncan, 79 Ala. 117, 58 Am.Rep. 580; Troll v. City of St. Louis, 257 Mo. 626, 168 S.W. 167, 177; Heckmann v. Detlaff, 283 Ill. 505, 119 N.E. 639, 640. In the civil law. A suit pending. A suit was not said to be pending before that stage of it called "litis contestatio" (q. v.). Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 219; Calvin.

Notice of lis pendens. A notice filed for the purpose of warning all persons that the title to certain property is in litigation, and that, if they purchase the defendant's claim to the same, they are in danger of being bound by an adverse judgment. See Empire Land & Canal Co. v. Engley, 18 Colo. 388, 33 P. 153.

The notice is for the purpose of preserving rights pending litigation. Mitchell v. Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, 206 Ark. 253, 174 S.W.2d 671, 674.

LISTED. Included in a list; put on a list, particularly on a list of taxable persons or property.

LISTERS. This word is used in some of the states to designate the persons appointed to make lists of taxables. See Rev. St. Vt. 538.

LISTING. An alleged oral agreement to sell to any purchaser procured by broker for certain amount was a "listing" of the property. Zeligson v. Hartman-Blair, Inc., C.C.A.Kan., 135 F.2d 874, 876.

"Listing property for taxation" is the making of a schedule or inventory of such property, whereby owner makes statement of property in response to assessor's inquiries, Templing v. Bennett, 156 Kan. 68, 131 P.2d 904, 907. The word listing ordinarily implies an official listing of the persons and property to be taxed, and a valuation of the property of each person as a basis of apportionment. Buser v. Kriechbaum, 229 Iowa 888, 295 N.W. 455, 460.

LITE PENDENTE. Lat. Pending the suit. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 54, § 23.

LITEM DENUNCIARE, Lat. In the civil law. To cast the burden of a suit upon another; particularly used with reference to a purchaser of property who, being sued in respect to it by a third person, gives notice to his vendor and demands his aid in its defense. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 403.

LITEM SUAM FACERE. Lat. To make a suit his own. Where a judex, from partiality or enmity, evidently favored either of the parties, he was said litem suam facere. Calvin.

LITERA. Lat. A letter. The letter of a law, as distinguished from its spirit. See Letter.

LITERA PISANA. The Pisan letter. A term applied to the old character in which the copy of the Pandects formerly kept at Pisa, in Italy, was written. Spelman.

LITERA1E. Letters. A term applied in old English law to various instruments in writing, public and private.

LITERIE DIMISSORLE. Dimissory letters (q. v.).

LITERIE HUMANIORES. A term including Greek, Latin, general philology, logic, moral philosophy, metaphysics; the name of the principal course of study in the University of Oxford. Wharton.

LITER)E MORTUAZE. Dead letters; fulfilling words of a statute.

Lord Bacon observes that "there are in every statute certain words which are as veins, where the life and blood of the statute cometh, and where all doubts do arise, and the rest are literce mortuce, fulfilling words." Bac.St.Uses, (Works, iv. 189).

LITERZE PATENTES. Letters patent; literally, open letters.

LITERZE PATENTES REGIS NON ERUNT VACUE. 1 Bulst. 6. The king's letters patent shall not be void.

LITER1E PROCURATORLE. In old English law. Letters procuratory; letters of procuration; letters of attorney. Bract. fols. 40, 43.

LITERIE RECOGNITIONIS. In maritime law. A bill of lading. Jac. Sea Laws, 172.

LITERZE SCRIPTIE MANENT. Written words last.

LITERIE SIGILLATIE. In old English law. Sealed letters. The return of a sheriff was so called. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 64, § 19.

LITERAL. According to language; following expression in words.

A literal construction of a document adheres closely to its words, without making differences for extrinsic circumstances; a literal performance of a condition is one which complies exactly with its terms.

LITERAL CONTRACT. In Roman law. A species of written contract, in which the formal act by which an obligation was superinduced on the convention was an entry of the sum due, where it should be specifically ascertained, on the debit side of a ledger. Maine, Anc. Law, 3n. A contract, the whole of the evidence of which is reduced to writing, and binds the party who subscribed it, although he has received no consideration. Lec. El. Dr. Rom. § 887.

LITERAL PROOF. In the civil law. Written evidence.

LITERARY. Pertaining to polite learning; connected with the study or use of books and writings.

The word 'literary," having no legal signification, is to be taken in its ordinary and usual meaning. We speak of literary persons as learned, erudite; of literary property, es the productions of ripe scholars, or, at least, of professional writers; of literary institutions, as those where the positive sciences are taught, or persons eminent for learning associate, for purposes connected with their professions. This we think the popular meaning of the word; and that it would not be properly used as descriptive of a school for the instruction of youth. Indianapolis v. McLean, 8 Ind. 332.

LITERARY COMPOSITION. In copyright law. An original result of mental production, developed in a series of written or printed words, arranged for an intelligent purpose, in an orderly succession of expressive combinations. Keene v. Wheatley, 14 Fed.Cas. 192; Woolsey v. Judd, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 396.

LITERARY PROPERTY. May be described as the right which entitles an author and his assigns to all the use and profit of his composition, to which no independent right is, through any act or omission on his or their part, vested in another person. 9 Amer. Law Reg. 44. And see Keene v. Wheatley, 14 Fed.Cas. 192; Palmer v. De Witt, 32 N.Y.Super.Ct. 552.

A distinction is to be taken between "literary property" (which is the natural, common-law right a person has in the form of written expression to which he has, by labor and skill, reduced his thoughts) and "copyright," (which is a statutory monopoly, above and beyond natural prop:erty, conferred upon an author to encourage and reward a dedication of his literary property to the public.) Abbott.

LITERATE. In English ecclesiastical law. One who qualifies himself for holy orders by presenting himself as a person accomplished in classical learning, etc., not as a graduate of Oxford, Cambridge, etc.

LITERATURA. "Ad literaturam ponere" means to put children to school.

This liberty was anciently denied to those parents who were servile tenants, without the lord's consent. The prohibition against the education of sons arose from the fear that the son, being bred to letters, might enter into holy orders, and so stop or divert the services which he might otherwise do as heir to his father. Paroch.Antiq. 401.

LITERIS OBLIGATIO. In Roman law. The contract of nomen, which was constituted by writing, (scripture,)

It was of two kinds, viz. : (1) A re in personam, when a transaction was transferred from the daybook (adversaria) into the ledger (codex) in the form of a debt under the name or heading of the purchaser or debtor, (nomen;) and (2) a persona in personam, where a debt already standing under one nomen or heading was transferred in the usual course of novatio from that nomen to another and substituted nomen. By reason of this transferring, these obligations were called "nomina transcriptia." No money was, in fact, paid to constitute the contract. If ever money was paid, then the nomen was arcarium, (i. e., a real contract, re contractus,) and not a nomen proprium. Brown.

LITIGANT. A party to a lawsuit; one engaged in litigation; usually spoken of active parties, not of nominal ones.

LITIGARE. Lat. To litigate; to carry on a suit, (litem agere,) either as plaintiff or defendant; to claim or dispute by action; to test or try the validity of a claim by action.

LITIGATE. To dispute or contend in form of law; to carry on a suit.

To bring into or engage in litigation, the act of carrying on a suit in a law court, a judicial contest; hence, any controversy that must be decided upon evidence. In re Loudenslager's Estate, N.J.Prerog., 13 N.J.Eq. 418, 167 A. 194, 195.

LITIGATION. Contest in a court of justice for the purpose of enforcing a right. Summerour v. Fortson, 174 Ga. 862, 164 S.E. 809; a judicial contest, a judicial controversy, a suit at law. In re Loudenslager's Estate, Prerog., 113 N.J.Eq. 418, 167 A. 194; civil actions. Sunshine Mining Co. v. Carver, D.C.Idaho, 34 F.Supp. 274, 280.

LITIGIOSITY. In Scotch law. The pendency of a suit; it is a tacit legal prohibition of alienation, to the disappointment of an action, or of diligence, the direct object of which is to obtain possession, or to acquire the property of a particular subject. The effect of it is analogous to that of inhibition. Bell.

LITIGIOSO. Span. Litigious; the subject of litigation; a term applied to property which is the subject of dispute in a pending suit. White v. Gay, 1 Tex. 388.

LITIGIOUS. That which is the subject of a suit or action; that which is contested in a court of justice. In another sense, "litigious" signifies fond of litigation; prone to engage in suits.

LITIGIOUS RIGHT. In the civil law. A right which cannot be exercised without undergoing a lawsuit. Civil Code La. art. 3556, par. 1g.

A right, to be considered "litigious" under Louisiana law, must be in litigation at time of the sale thereof, and ceases to be litigious if at time of the sale judgment has become final. Caucier v. Crichton, C.C.A.La., 147 F.2d 430, 435.

LITIS AZESTIMATIO. Lat. The measure of damages.

LITIS CONTESTATIO. Lat.

Admiralty Practice. The general issue. 2 Browne, Civil & Adm. Law, 358, and note.

Civil and Canon Law. Contestation of suit; the process of contesting a suit by the opposing statements of the respective parties; the process of coming to an issue; the attainment of an issue; the issue itself.

Ecclesiastical Courts. The general answer made by the defendant, in which he denies the matter charged against him in the libel. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 11, no. 9.

LITIS DENUNCIATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The process by which a purchaser of property, who is sued for its possession or recovery by a third person, falls back upon his vendor's covenant of warranty, by giving the latter notice of the action and demanding his aid in defending it. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 403.

LITIS DOMINIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Ownership, control, or direction of a suit. A fiction of law by which the employment of an attorney or proctor (procurator) in a suit was authorized or justified, he being supposed to become, by the appointment of his principal (dominus) or client, the dominus litis. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 4, tit. 10, §§ 1246, 1247.

LITIS NOMEN OMNEM ACTIONEM SIGNIFICAT, SIVE IN REM, SIVE IN PERSONAM SIT. Co. Litt. 292. A lawsuit signifies every action, whether it be in rem or in personam.

LITTLE MORE THAN. About. Pierce v. Lefort, 197 La. 1, 200 So. 801, 803.

LITTORAL. Belonging to the shore, as of seas and great lakes. Webster.

Corresponding to riparian proprietors on a stream or small pond are littoral proprietors on a sea or lake. But "riparian" is also used coextensively with "littoral." Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush., Mass., 94. See Boston v. Lecraw, 17 How. 426, 15 L.Ed. 118. One whose lands abuts on lake is a "littoral owner". Darling v. Christensen, 166 Or. 17, 109 P.2d 585, 592; Peck v. Alfred Olsen Const. Co., 216 Iowa 519, 245 N.W. 131, 137, 89 A.L.R. 1147.

LITURA. Lat. In the civil law. An obliteration or blot in a will or other instrument. Dig. 28, 4, 1, 1.

LITUS. In Civil law. The bank of a stream or shore of the sea; the coast.

In old European law.- A kind of servant; one who surrendered himself into another's power. Spelman.

LITUS EST QUOUSQUE MAXIMUS FLUCTUS A MARI PERVENIT. The shore is where the highest wave from the sea has reached. Dig. 50, 16, 96. Ang. Tide-Waters, 67.

LITUS MARIS. The sea-shore.

"It is certain that that which the sea overflows, either at high spring tides or at extraordinary tides, comes not, as to this purpose, under the denomination of `litus marls,' and consequently the king's title is not of that large extent, but only to land that is usually overflowed at ordinary tides. That, therefore, I call the 'shore' that is between the common high-water and low-water mark, and no more." Hale de Jure Mar. c. 4.

LITVINOV ASSIGNMENT. An assignment to the United States as an incident to its recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as the de jure government of Russia, of the Soviet government's claims against American nationals, as clarified by subsequent correspondence between officials of the two countries. United States v. Pink, N.Y., 62 S.Ct. 552, 562, 315 U.S. 203, 86 L.Ed. 796.

LLOYD'S BONDS. The name of a class of evidences of debt, used in England; being acknowledgments, by a borrowing company made under its seal, of a debt incurred and actually due by the company to a contractor or other person for work done, goods supplied, or otherwise, as the case may be, with. a covenant for payment of the principal and interest at a future time. Brown.

LLOYD'S INSURANCE. Insurers are such as individuals and not as a corporate insurance company and the liability for loss is several and not joint. Jones v. Hollywood Style Shop, Tex.Civ. App., 62 S.W.2d 167. The "Lloyds' Plan," contemplates individual liability of the several underwriters. Harris v. Prince, 132 Tex. 231, 121 S.W. 2d 983, 986.

LOAD LINE. The depth to which a ship will sink in salt water when loaded.

A design, painted on each side of vessel, intended as a guide to determine safe loading depth under various conditions. The Indien, C.C.A.Cal., 71 F.2d 752, 759.

Every British ship must be marked on each side amidships with a loadline indicating the maximum loadline in salt water, to which it is lawful to load the ship. Sailing ships under eighty tons, fishing ships, and pleasure yachts, also ships employed exclusively in trading in any river or inland water wholly or partly in any British possession, and tugs and passenger steamers plying in smooth water or in excursion limits are excepted. This mark is called Plimsoll's Mark or Line, from Samuel Plimsoll, by whose efforts the passage of an act of parliament to prevent overloading was procured. The law applies to foreign ships while within any port of the United Kingdom, other than such as come into any such port to which they are not bound and for any purpose other than embarking or landing passengers or taking in or discharging cargo or taking in bunker coal. There must also be a mark on each side amidships indicating the position of each deck above water.

LOADING. The act of putting a load on or in; as to load a beast of burden, a car or a vessel; hence, to charge as with a load or burden. American Oil & Supply Co. v. United States Casualty Co., 19 N.J.Misc. 7, 18 A.2d 257, 259.

Terrell, 16 Ga. 20, 25; a borrowing of money or other personal property by a person who promises to return it, State v. Moltzner, 141 Or. 355, 17 P.2d 555, 556; contract whereby one delivers money to another who agrees to return equivalent sum. Easter Oil Corporation v. Strauss, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 336, 340; Shaw v. McShane, Tex.Com.App., 50 S.W.2d 278, 282; debts arising from borrowing of money, Lawrie v. Miller, Tex.Com.App., 45 S.W.2d 172, 173; delivery by one party and receipt by another party of money on agreement, express or implied, to repay money with or without interest, Parsons v. Fox. 179 Ga. 605, 176 S.E. 642; 0. A. Graybeal Co. v. Cook, 111 Cal.App. 518, 295 P. 1088, 1092; deposit of money by a customer with banker, Gimbel Bros. v. White, 10 N.Y.S.2d 666, 667, 256 App.Div. 439; deposit on time certificates, Carroll v. Eblen, 178 Tenn. 146, 156 S.W.2d 412, 415; payment of money by one to another to be repaid some future day, In re Arbuckle's Estate, 324 Pa. 501, 188 A. 758, 761; that which one lends or borrows, In re Lalla's Estate, 362 Ill. 621, 1 N.E.2d 50, 53; transaction creating customary relation of borrower and lender, Bannock County v. Citizens' Bank & Trust Co., 53 Idaho 159, 22 P.2d 674. Transaction wherein one party transfers to the other a sum of money which that other agrees to repay absolutely. Yezek v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 28 N.Y.S.2d 35, 36, 176 Misc. 553.

The four elements of a "loan" are, a principal sum, a placing of the sum with a safe borrower, an agreement that interest is to be paid, and a recognition by receiver of money of his liability for return of the principal amount with accrued interest. McLendon v. Johnson, 71 Ga.App. 424, 31 S.E.2d 89, 92.

LOAN ASSOCIATION. See Building and Loan Association.

LOAN CERTIFICATES. Certificates issued by a clearing-house to the associated banks to the amount of seventy-five per cent. of the value of the collaterals deposited by the borrowing banks with the loan committee of the clearing-house. Anderson.

LOAN FOR CONSUMPTION. A loan for consumption is where the article is not to be returned in specie, but in kind. This is a sale and not a bailment. Code Ga. 1882, § 2125 (Civ. Code 1910, § 3516).

The loan for consumption is an agreement by which one person delivers to another a certain quantity of things which are consumed by the use, under the obligation, by the borrower, to return to him as much of the same kind and quality. Civ.Code La. art. 2910.

LOAN FOR EXCHANGE. A loan for exchange is a contract by which one delivers personal property to another, and the latter agrees to return to the lender a similar thing at a future time, without reward for its use. Civ. Code Cal. § 1902.

LOAN FOR USE. Occurs where a chattel is to be used by bailee without reward and then specifically returned to bailor. Slack v. Bryan, 299 Ky. 132, 184 S.W.2d 873, 876.

The loan for use is an agreement by which a person delivers a thing to another, to use it according to its natural destination, or according to the agreement, under the obligation on the part of the borrower, to return it after he shall have done using it. Civ.Code La. art. 2893. A loan for use is a contract by which one gives to another the temporary possession and use of personal property, and the latter agrees to return the same thing to him at a future time, without reward for its use. Civ.Code Cal. § 1884. A loan for use is the gratuitous grant of an article to another for use, to be returned in specie, and may be either for a certain time or indefinitely, and at the will of the grantor. Code Ga.1882, § 2126 (Civ.Code 1910, § 3517). Loan for use (called "commodatum" in the civil law) differs from a loan for consumption, (called "mutuum" in the civil law,) in this : that the commodatum must be specifically returned; the mutuum is to be returned in kind. In the case of a commodatum, the property in the thing remains in the lender ; in a mutuum, the property passes to the borrower. Bouvier.

LOAN, GRATUITOUS, (or COMMODATE.) A class of bailment which is called "commodatum" in the Roman law, and is denominated by Sir William Jones a "loan for use," (prét-a-usage,) to distinguish it from "mutuum," a loan for consumption. It is the gratuitous lending of an article to the borrower for his own use. Wharton.

LOAN SOCIETIES. In English law. A kind of club formed for the purpose of advancing money on loan to the industrial classes.

LOANED EMPLOYEE. Whether an employee should be regarded as a "loaned employee" in the service of a special employer, or whether he should be regarded as remaining in the service of his general employer, depends upon in whose work the employee was engaged at the time of injury. Owen v. St. Louis Spring Co., 175 Tenn. 543, 136 S. W.2d 498, 499, 500.

Under the "loaned servant doctrine", when one lends his servant to another for a particular employment, servant, for anything done in that employment, must be dealt with as servant of one to whom he is lent. Blair v. Durham, C.C.A.Tenn., 134 F.2d 729, 732.

Under the "loaned servant" rule, a loaned servant does not become the servant of the borrower unless the borrower has exclusive control over him for the period covered. Walter v. Everett School Dist. No. 24, 195 Wash. 45, 79 P.2d 689.

LOBBYING. "Lobbying" is defined to be any personal solicitation of a member of a legislative body during a session thereof, by private interview, or letter or message, or other means and appliances not addressed solely to the judgment, to favor or oppose, or to vote for or against, any bill, resolution, report, or claim pending, or to be introduced by either branch thereof, by any person who misrepresents the nature of his interest in the matter to such member, or who is employed for a consideration by a person or corporation interested in the passage or defeat of such bill, resolution, report, or claim, for the purpose of procuring the passage or defeat thereof. But this does not include such services as drafting petitions, bills, or resolutions, attending to the taking of testimony, collecting facts, preparing arguments and memorials, and submitting them orally or in writing to a committee or member of the legislature, and other services of like character, intended to reach the reason of legislators. Code Ga. 1882, § 4486. And see Colusa County v. Welch, 122 Cal. 428, 55 P. 248; Houlton v. Nichol, 93 Wis. 393, 67 N.W. 715, 33 L.R.A. 166, 57 Am.St.Rep. 928.

LOBBYING CONTRACT. A contract to secure the passage of legislation by any other means than the use of reason and presentation of facts, making arguments and submitting them orally or in writing. Ewing v. National Airport Corporation, C.C.A.Va., 115 F.2d 859, 860, 861.

LOBBYIST. One who makes it a business to procure the passage of bills pending before a legislative body.

One "who makes it a business to 'see' members and procure, by persuasion, importunity, or the use of inducements, the passing of bills, public as well as private, which involve gain to the promoters." 1 Bryce, Am. Corn. 156.

L'OBLIGATION SANS CAUSE, OU SUR UNE FAUSSE CAUSE, OU SUR CAUSE ILLICITE, NE PEUT AVOIR AUCUN EFFET. An obligation without consideration, or upon a false consideration, (which fails,) or upon unlawful consideration, cannot have any effect. Code Civil, 3, 4; Chit. Cont. (11th Am. Ed.) 25, note.

If action could only have arisen in one place, then it is a "local action." Employers' Casualty Co. v. Ponton, Tex. Civ.App., 41 S.W.2d 147, 149; Barnett v. National Surety Corporation, 195 Miss. 528, 15 So.2d 775, 776, 777.

Actions are "local" when the transactions on which they are based could not occur except in some particular place. Bunting v. Henderson, 220 N.C. 194, 16 S.E.2d 836, 837. "Local," within statute providing where suits of local nature must be brought, is fixed place or determinate zone identified with given region. Hills v. F. S. Harmon & Co., D.C.Wash., 56 F.2d 662, 663.

One wherein all principal facts on which it is founded are of a local nature; as where possession of land is to be recovered, or damages for an actual trespass, or for waste affecting land, because in such case the cause of action relates to some particular locality, which usually also constitutes the venue of the action. Miller & Lux v. Rickey, C.C.Nev., 127 F. 577; Crook v. Pitcher, 61 Md. 513. Where subject-matter is situated in a county other than one in which the parties reside and the primary and principal relief sought relates to such subject-matter; such action must be brought and tried in the county where such subject-matter is situated. State v. District Court of Blue Earth County, 150 Mind. 512, 185 N.W. 953. And where the cause in its nature could only have arisen in one place. Taylor v. Sommers Bros. Match Co., 35 Idaho, 30, 204 P. 472, 474. See transitory actions, post, in this note.

LOCAL AFFAIRS. The "local affairs" over which regulation, management and control are delegated to cities are affairs within the jurisdiction of the city by the law of its being. Robia Holding Corporation v. Walker, 239 N.Y.S. 659, 662, 136 Misc. 358.

LOCAL AGENT. An agent at a given place or within a definite district. Sharp & Dohme v. Waybourne, Tex.Civ.App., 74 S.W.2d 413.

LOOK AND LISTEN. The requirement that a man shall "look and listen" before crossing street railroad track means only that he shall observe and estimate with reasonable accuracy his distance from the car and the speed of its oncoming, and then make calculation and comparison of the time it will take the car to come and the time it will take to cross the track. Kansas City Public Service Co. v. Knight, C.C.A.Kan., 116 F.2d 233, 234.

LOOKOUT. A person who is specially charged with the duty of observing the lights, sounds, echoes, or any obstruction to navigation, with the thoroughness which the circumstances admit. The Tillicum (D.C.) 217 F. 976, 978; The Wilbert L. Smith (D.C.) 217 F. 981, 984.

A proper lookout on a vessel is some one in a favorable position to see, stationed near enough to the helmsman to communicate with him, and to receive communications from him, and exclusively employed in watching the movements of vessels which they are meeting or about to pass. The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. 462, 13 L.Ed. 1058. Proper "lookouts" are competent persons other than the master and helmsman, properly stationed to look out, on the forward part of the vessel. The Catalina, C.C.A.CaI., 95 F.2d 283, 285.

LOPWOOD. A right in the inhabitants of a parish within a manor, in England, to lop for fuel, at certain periods of the year, the branches of trees growing upon the waste lands of the manor. Sweet.

LOQUELA. Lat. A colloquy; talk.

In old English law, this term denoted the oral altercations of the parties to a suit, which led to the issue, now called the "pleadings." It also designated an "imparlance," (q. v.,) both names evidently referring to the talking together of the parties. Loquela sine die, a postponement to an indefinite time.

LOQUENDUM UT VULGUS; SENTIENDUM UT DOCTI. We must speak as the common people; we must think as the learned. 7 Coke, 11b.

This maxim expresses the rule that, when words are used in a technical sense, they must be understood technically; otherwise, when they may be supposed to be used in their ordinary acceptation.

LORD. A feudal superior or proprietor; 'one of whom a fee or estate is held.

A title of honor or nobility belonging properly to the degree of baron, but applied. also. to the whole peerage, as in the expression "the house of lords." 1 Bl. Comm. 396-400.

A title of office, as lord mayor, lord commissioner, etc.

Law lords

See Law.

Lord advocate

The chief public prosecutor of Scotland. 2 Alis.Crim. Pr. 84.

Lord and vassal

In the feudal system, the grantor, who retained the dominion or ultimate property, was called the "lord," and the grantee, who had only the use or possession, was called the "vassal" or "feudatory."

Lord chief baron

The chief judge of the English court of exchequer, prior to the, judicature acts.

Lord chief justice

See Justice.

Lord high chancellor

See Chancellor.

Lord high steward

In England, when a person is impeached, or when a peer is tried on, indictment for treason or felony before the house of lords, one of the lords, is appointed lord high steward, and acts as speaker pro tempore. Sweet.

Lord high treasurer

An officer formerly existing in England, who had the charge of the royal revenues and customs duties, and of leasing the crown lands. His functions are now vested in the lords commissioners of the treasury. Mozley & Whitley.

Lord in gross

In feudal law. He who is lord, not by reason of any manor, but as the king in respect of his crown, etc. "Very lord" is he who is immediate lord to his tenant; and "very tenant," he who holds immediately of that lord. So that, where there is lord paramount, lord mesne, and tenant, the lord paramount is not very lord to the tenant. Wharton.

Lord justice clerk

The second judicial officer in Scotland.

Lord keeper

Originally another name for the lord chancellor. After Henry II.'s reign they were sometimes divided, but now there cannot .be a lord chancellor and lord keeper 'at the same time, for by St. 5 Eliz. c. 18, they are declared to be the same office. Com.Dig. "Chancery," B. 1.

Lord lieutenant

In English law. The viceroy of the crown in Ireland. The principal military officer of a county, originally appointed for the purpose of mustering the inhabitants for the defense of the country.

Lord mayor

The chief officer of the corporation of the city of London is so called. The origin of the appellation of "lord," which the mayor of London enjoys, is attributed to the fourth charter of Edward III., which conferred on that officer the honor of having maces, the same as royal, carried before him by the sergeants. Pull.Laws & Cust.Lond.

Lord mayor's court

In English law. This is a court of record, of law and equity, and is the chief court of justice within the corporation of London. Theoretically the lord mayor and aldermen are supposed to preside, but the recorder is in fact the acting judge. It has jurisdiction of all personal and mixed actions arising within the city and liberties without regard to the amount in controversy. See 3 Steph.Comm. 449, note l.

Lord of a manor

The grantee or owner of a manor.

Lord ordinary

The judge of the court of session in Scotland, who officiates for the time being as the judge of first instance. Dari.Pr.Ct.Sess.

Lord paramount

A term. applied to the King of England as the chief feudal proprietor, the theory of the feudal system being that all lands in the realm were held mediately or immediately from him. See De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 495, 57 Am.Dec. 470; Opinion of Justices, 66 N.H. 629, 33 A. 1076:

Lord privy seal

Before the 30 Hen. VIII., was generally an ecclesiastic. The office has since been usually conferred on temporal peers above the degree of barons. He is appointed by letters patent. The lord privy seal, receiving a warrant from the signet office, issues the privy seal, which is an authority to the lord chancellor to pass the great seal where the nature of the grant requires it. But the privy seals for money begin in the treasury, whence the first warrant issues, countersigned by the lord treasurer. The lord privy seal is a member of the cabinet council. Enc.Lond.

Lord warden of Cinque Ports

See Cinque Ports.

Lords appellants

Five. peers who for a time superseded Richard II. in his government, and whom, after a brief control of the government, he in turn superseded in 1397, and put the survivors of them to death. Richard II.'s eighteen commissioners (twelve peers and six commoners) took their place, as an embryo privy council acting with full powers, during the parliamentary recess. Brown.

Lords commissioners

In. English law. When a high public office in the state, formerly executed by an individual, is put into commission, the, persons charged with the commission are called "lords. commissioners," or sometimes "lords" or "commissioners" simply. Thus, we have, in lieu of the lord treasurer and lord high admiral of former times, the lords commissioners of the treasury, and the lords commissioners of the admiralty; and, whenever the great seal is put into commission, the persons charged with it are called "commissioners" or "lords commissioners" of the great seal. Mozley & Whiteley.

Lord's day

A name sometimes given to Sunday. Co.Litt. 135.

Lords justices of appeal

In English law. The title of the ordinary judges of the court of appeal, by Jud.Act 1877, § 4. Prior to the judicature acts, there were two "lords justices of appeal in chancery," to whom an appeal lay from a vice-chancellor, by 14 & 15 Via c. 83.

Lords marchers

Those noblemen who lived on the marches of Wales or Scotland, who in times past had their laws and power of life and death, like petty kings. Abolished by 27 Hen. VIII. c. 26, and 6 Edw. VI. c. 10. Wharton.

Lords of appeal

Those members of the house of lords of whom at least three must be present for the hearing and determination of appeals. They are the lord chancellor, the lords of appeal in ordinary, and such peers of parliament as hold, or have held, high judicial offices, such as ex-chancellors and judges of the superior courts in Great Britain and Ireland. App.Jur. Act 1876, §§ 5, 25.

Lords of appeal in ordinary

These are appointed, with a salary of £6,000 a year, to aid the house of lords in the hearing of appeals. They rank as barons for life, but sit and vote in the house of lords during the tenure of their office only. App.Jur. Act 1876, § 6.

Lords of erection

On the Reformation in Scotland, the king, as proprietor of benefices formerly held by abbots and priors, gave them out in temporal lordships to favorites, who were termed "lords of erection." Wharton.

Lords of parliament

Those who have seats in the house of lords. During bankruptcy, peers are disqualified from sitting or voting in the house of lords. 34 & 35 Viet. c. 50.

Lords of regality

In Scotch law. Persons to whom rights of civil and criminal jurisdiction were given by the crown.

Lords ordainers

Lords appointed in 1312, in the reign of Edward II., for the control of the sovereign and the court party, and for the general reform and better government of the country. Brown.

Lords spiritual

The archbishops and bishops who have seats in the house of lords.

Lords temporal

Those lay peers who have seats in the house of lords.

LORD CAMPBELL ACT. An act which fixes the maximum amount recoverable for wrongful death.

LORDSHIP. In English law. Dominion, manor, seigniory, domain; also a title of honor used to a nobleman not being a duke.

"Loss of time" as used in connection with damages recoverable for personal injuries means "loss of earnings." Sinclair Refining Co. v. Tompkins, C.C.A.Miss., 117 F.2d 596, 598.

As to "Actual Loss," "Constructive Loss," "Direct Loss," "Partial Loss," and "Total Loss," see those titles. As to "Loss of Consortium," see Consortium. As to "Salvage Loss," see Salvage.

LOST. An article is "lost" when the owner has lost the possession or custody of it, involuntarily and by any means, but more particularly by accident or his own negligence or forgetfulness, and when he is ignorant of its whereabouts or cannot recover it by a ordinarily diligent search. See In re O'Neil, 39 N.Y.S.2d 82, 179 Misc. 455; Belote v. State, 36 Miss. 120, 72 Am.Dec. 163; Hoagland v. Amusement Co., 170 Mo. 335, 70 S.W. 878, 94 Am.St.Rep. 740.

Involuntary change of location or inability to find, State v. Brewster, 72 N.D. 409, 7 N.W.2d 742, 744. See, also, Lost Property.

As applied to ships and vessels, the term means "lost at sea," and a vessel lost is one that has totally gone from the owners against their will, so that they know nothing of it, whether it still exists or not, or one which they know is no longer within their use and control, either in consequence of capture by enemies or pirates, or an unknown foundering, or sinking by a known storm, or collision, or destruction by shipwreck. Bennett v. Garlock, 10 Hun (N.Y.) 338; Collard v. Eddy, 17 Mo. 355; Insurance Co. v. Gossler, 7 Fed.Cas. 406.

LOST CORNER. See Corner.

LOST OR NOT LOST. A phrase sometimes inserted in policies of marine insurance.

It signifies that the contract is meant to relate back to the beginning of a voyage now in progress, or to some other antecedent time, and to be valid and effectual even if, at the moment of executing the policy, the vessel should have already perished by some of the perils insured against, provided that neither party has knowledge of that fact or any advantage over the other in the way of superior means of information. See Hooper v. Robinson, 98 U.S. 537, 25 L.Ed. 219; Insurance Co. v. Folsom, 18 Wall. 251, 21 L.Ed. 827.

LOST PAPERS. Papers which have been so mislaid that they cannot be found after diligent search.

LOST PROPERTY. Property which the owner has involuntarily parted with and does not know where to find or recover it, not including property which he has intentionally concealed or deposited in a secret place for safe-keeping. See Pritchett v. State, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 288, 62 Am.Dec. 468; State v. Cummings, 33 Conn. 260, 89 Am.Dec. 208; Danielson v. Roberts, 44 Or. 108, 74 Pac. 913, 65 L.R.A. 526, 102 Am.St.Rep. 627. But see: Foster v. Fidelity Safe Deposit Co., 264 Mo. 89, 174 S.W. 376, 377, L.R.A. 1916A, 655, Ann.Cas.1917D, 798; State v. Courtsol, 89 Conn. 564, 94 A. 973, 975, L.R.A. 1916A, 465.

Goods are "lost" only when possession has been casually and involuntarily parted with, so that mind has no impress of, and can have no recourse to, the event, Automobile Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Kirby, 25 Ala.App. 245, 144 So. 123, 124; when property is stolen and then abandoned at place unknown to owner, property is lost, Automobile Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. v. Kirby, 25 Ala.App. 245, 144 So. 123, 124.

LUCRA NUPTIALIA. Lat. In Roman law. A term including everything which a husband or wife, as such, acquires from the estate of the other, either before the marriage, or on agreeing to it, or during its continuance, or after its dissolution, and whether the acquisition is by pure gift, or by virtue of the marriage contract, or against the will of the other party by law or statute. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 580.

LUCRATIVA CAUSA. Lat. In Roman law. A consideration which is voluntary; that is to say, a gratuitous gift, or such like.

It was opposed to onerosa causa, which denoted a valuable consideration. It was a principle of the Roman law that two lucrative causes could not concur in the same person as regarded the same thing; that is to say, that, when the same thing was bequeathed to a person by two different testators, he could not have the thing (or its value) twice over. Brown.

LUCRATIVA USUCAPIO. Lat. This species of usucapio was permitted in Roman law only in the case of persons taking possession of property upon the decease of its late owner, and in exclusion or deforcement of the heir, whence it was called "usucapio pro hcerede."

The adjective "lucrativa" denoted that property was acquired by this usucapio without any consideration or payment for it by way of purchase; and, as the possessor who so acquired the property was a maid fide possessor, his acquisition, or usucapio, was called also "improba," (i. e., dishonest;) but this dishonesty was tolerated (until abolished by Hadrian) as an incentive to force the hceres to take possession, in order that the debts might be paid and the sacrifices performed; and, as a further incentive to the hceres, this usucapio was complete in one year. Brown.

LUCRATIVE. Yielding gain or profit; profitable; bearing or yielding a revenue or salary.

LUCRATIVE BAILMENT. See Bailment.

LUCRATIVE OFFICE. One which yields a revenue (in the form of fees or otherwise) or a fixed salary to the incumbent; according to some authorities, one which yields a compensation supposed to be adequate to the services rendered and in excess of the expenses incidental to the office. See State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 405, 15 Am.Rep. 239; Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 39; Hodge v. State, 135 Tenn. 525, 188 S.W. 203, 206. One the pay of • which is affixed to performance of duties of office. Holman v. Lutz, 132 Or. 185, 284 P. 825, 827.

LUCRATIVE SUCCESSION. In Scotch law. A kind of passive title by which a person accepting from another, without any onerous cause, (or without paying value,) a disposition of any part of his heritage, to which the receiver would have succeeded as heir, is liable to all the grantor's debts contracted before the said disposition. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 3, p. 102.

LUCRATUS. In Scotch law. A gainer.

LUCRE. Gain in money or goods; profit; usually in an ill sense, or with the sense of something base or unworthy. Webster.

LUCTUS, In Roman law. Mourning. See Annus Luctus.

LUGGAGE. Luggage may consist of any articles intended for the use of a passenger while traveling, or for his personal equipment. Civ.Code Cal. § 2181.

This term is synonymous with "baggage," but is more commonly used in England than in America. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. Zwirtz, 13 Okl. 411, 73 P. 941.

If a bus company or other motor carrier, "to suit its own convenience, takes possession of the luggage of a passenger for hire, to care for it on the trip, and becomes a bailee under a special contract, its liability as special bailee is broader than that of a common carrier and includes liability for articles that might not be classed as ordinary baggage." Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 2195.

LUMBER. Used to describe both trees suitable to saw and products into which they are sawed. Brasher v. Industrial Lumber Co., La.App., 165 So. 524, 526.

LUMP-SUM SETTLEMENT within compensation act, means that the entire amount of compensation due the employee is paid at one and the same time. Puchner v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation, 198 La. 921, 5 So.2d 288, 296.

LUMPING SALE. As applied to judicial sales, this term means a sale in mass, as where several distinct parcels of real estate, or several articles of personal property, are sold together for a "lump" or single gross sum. Anniston Pipeworks v. Williams, 106 Ala. 324, 18 So. 111, 54 Am.St. Rep. 51.

LUNACY. Lunacy is that condition or habit in which the mind is directed by the will, but is wholly or partially misguided or erroneously governed by it; or it is the impairment of any one or more of the faculties of the mind, accompanied with or inducing a defect in the comparing faculty. Owings' Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 386, 17 Am.Dec. 311.

The term includes every kind of unsoundness of mind except idiocy. De Nardo v. De Nardo, 293 N.Y. 550, 59 N. E.2d 241. See Insanity.

For "Commission of Lunacy," and "Inquisition (or Inquest) of Lunacy," see those titles.

LUNAR. Belonging to or measured by the revolutions of the moon.

LUNAR MONTH. See Month.

LUNATIC. A person of deranged or unsound mind; a person whose mental faculties are in the condition called "lunacy"; one who possessed reason, but through disease, grief, or other cause has lost it. May mean all insane persons or persons of unsound mind, sometimes including and sometimes excluding idiots. Oklahoma Natural Gas Corporation v. Lay, 175 Okl. 75, 51 P.2d 580, 582.

A "lunatic" is distinguished from an "Idiot" in that the lunatic has lucid intervals, while the idiot has no power of mind whatever. Weinberg v. Weinberg, 8 N.Y.S.2d 341, 344, 255 App.Div. 366.

LUNDRESS. In old English law. A silver penny, so called because it was to be coined only at London, (a Londres,) and not at the country mints. Lown. Essay Coins, 17; Cowell.

LUPANATRIX. A bawd or strumpet. 3 Inst. 206.

MACEDONIAN DECREE, In Roman law. This was the Senatu.s-consultum Macedonianum, a decree of the Roman senate, first given under Claudius, and renewed under Vespasian by which it was declared that no action should be maintained to recover a loan of money made to a child who was under the patria potestas.

It was intended to strike at the practice of usurers in making loans, on unconscionable terms, to family heirs who would mortgage their future expectations from the paternal estate. The law is said to have derived its name from that of a notorious usurer. See Mackeld.Rom. Law, § 432; Inst. 4, 7, 1; Dig. 14, 6.

MACER. A mace-bearer; an officer attending the court of session in Scotland.

MAD PARLIAMENT. Henry III, in 1258, at the desire of the Great Council in Parliament, consented to the appointment of a committee of twenty-four, of whom twelve were appointed by the Barons and twelve by the King, in a parliament which was stigmatized as the "Mad Parliament." Unlimited power was given to it to carry out all necessary reforms. It drew up the Provisions of Oxford.

MAD POINT. A term used to designate the idea or subject to which is confined the derangement of the mental faculties of one suffering from monomania. Owing's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 388, 17 Am. Dec. 311. See Insanity.

MADE. Filed. St. Louis Law Printing Co. v. Aufderheide, 226 Mo.App. 680, 45 S.W.2d 543, 545; Peavy v. Peavy, 145 S.E. 55, 56, 167 Ga. 219. Produced artificially. United States v. Anderson, D.C. Cal., 45 F.Supp. 943, 946. To require or compel, Dickinson v. Mingea, 191 Ark. 946, 88 S.W.2d 807, 809.

MADE KNOWN. Where a writ of scire fascias has been actually served upon a defendant, the proper return is that its contents have been "made known" to him.

A crime is "made known" to an officer when facts which come to knowledge of the officer are such as to indicate to him that it is his official duty to act or to see that an investigation of the alleged crime is instituted within his jurisdiction. State v. Young, 194 La. 1061, 195 So. 539, 540.

MADMAN. An insane person, particularly one suffering from mania in any of its forms.

Said to be inapplicable to idiots (Com. v. Haskell, 2 Brewst. [Pa.] 497) ; Bensberg v. Washington University, 251 Mo. 641, 158 S.W. 330, 336, but it is not a technical term either of medicine or the law, and is incapable of being applied with scientific precision. See Insanity.

MADNESS. See Insanity.

MADRAS REGULATIONS. Certain regulations prescribed for the government of the Madras presidency. Mozley & Whiteley.

MIEC-BURGH. In Saxon law. Kindred; family.

MIEG. A kinsman. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 241.

MAGIC. In English statutes. Witch-craft and sorcery.

MAGIS. Lat. More; more fully; more in number; rather.

MAGIS DE BONO QUAM DE MALO LEX INTENDIT. Co. Litt. 78b. The law favors a good rather than a bad construction.

Where the words used in an agreement are susceptible of two meanings, the one agreeable to, the other against, the law, the former is adopled. Thus, a bond conditioned "to assign all offices" will be construed to apply to such offices only as are assignable. Chit.Cont. 78.

MAGIS DIGNUM TRAHIT AD SE MINUS DIGNUM. The more worthy draws to itself the less worthy. Yearb. 20 Hen. VI. 2, arg.

MAGISTER. Lat.

Civil law. A title of several offices under the Roman Empire.

English law. A master or ruler; a person who has attained to some eminent degree in science. Cowell.

MAGISTER AD FACULTATES. In English ecclesiastical law. The title of an officer who grants dispensations; as to marry, to eat flesh on days prohibited, and the like. Bac. Abr. "Ecclesiastical Courts," A, 5.

MAGISTER BONORUM VENDENDORUM. In Roman law, a person appointed by judicial authority to inventory, collect, and sell the property of an absent or absconding debtor for the benefit of his creditors.

He was generally one of the creditors, and his functions corresponded generally to those of a receiver or an assignee for the benefit of creditors under modern practice. See Mackeld.Rom. Law § 521.

MAGISTER CANCELLARIZE. In old English law. Master of the chancery; master in chancery. These officers were said to be called "magistri," because they were priests. Latch. 133.

MAGISTER EQUITUM. Master of the horse. A title of office under the Roman Empire.

MAGISTER LIBELLORUM. Master of requests. A title of office under the Roman Empire.

MAGISTER LITIS. Master of the suit; the person who controls the suit or its prosecution, or has the right so to do.

MAGISTER NAVIS. In the civil law. The master of a ship or vessel. He to whom the care of the whole vessel is committed. Dig. 14, 1, 1, 1, 5.

MAGISTER PALATII. Master of the palace or of the offices. An officer under the Roman Empire bearing some resemblance to the modern lord chamberlain. Tayl. Civil Law, 37.

MAGISTER RERUM USUS. Use is the master of things. Co. Litt. 229b. Usage is a principal guide in practice.

MAGISTER RERUM USUS; MAGISTRA RERUM EXPERIENTIA. Use is the master of things; experience is the mistress of things. Co. Litt. 69, 229; Wing. Max. 752.

MAGISTER SOCIETATIS. In the civil law. The master or manager of a partnership; a managing partner or general agent; a manager specially chosen by a firm to administer the affairs of the partnership. Story Partn. § 95.

MAGISTERIAL. Relating or pertaining to the character, office, powers, or duties of a magistrate or of the magistracy.

MAGISTERIAL PRECINCT. In some American states, a local subdivision of a county, defining the territorial jurisdiction of justices of the peace and constables, Breckinridge Co. v. McCracken, C.C.A.Ky., 61 F. 194, 9 C.C.A. 442; also called magisterial district. State v. Mingo County Court, 97 W.Va. 615, 125 S.E. 576, 577.

MAGISTRACY. This term may have a more or less extensive signification according to the use and connection in which it occurs. In its widest sense it includes the whole body of public functionaries, whether their offices be legislative, judicial, executive, or administrative. In a more restricted (and more usual) meaning, it denotes the class of officers who are charged with the application and execution of the laws. In a still more confined use, it designates the body of judicial officers of the lowest rank, and more especially those who have jurisdiction for the trial and punishment of petty misdemeanors or the preliminary steps of a criminal prosecution, such as police judges and justices of the peace. The term also denotes the office of a magistrate. Golden v. Golden, 41 N.M. 356, 68 P.2d 928, 930.

MAGLSTRALIA BREVIA. In old English practice. Magisterial writs; writs adapted to special cases, and so called from being framed by the masters or principal clerks of the chancery. Bract. fol. 413b; Crabb, Corn. Law, 547, 548.

MAGISTRATE. Person clothed with power as a public civil officer. State ex rel. Miller v. McLeod, 142 Fla. 254, 194 So. 628, 630.

A public officer belonging to the civil organization of the state, and invested with powers and functions which may be either judicial, legislative, or executive. But the term is commonly used in a narrower sense, designating, in England, a person intrusted with the commission of the peace, and, in America, one of the class of inferior judicial officers, such as justices of the peace and police justices. Martin v. State, 32 Ark. 124; Ex parte White, 15 Nev. 146, 37 Am.Rep. 466; State v. Allen, 83 Fla. 655, 92 So. 155, 156; Merritt v. Merritt, 193 Iowa 899, 188 N.W. 32, 34.

A magistrate is an officer having power to issue a warrant for the arrest of a person charged with a public offense. Pen. Code Cal. § 807.

The word "magistrate" does not necessarily imply an officer exercising any judicial functions, and might very well be held to embrace notaries and commissioners of deeds. Schultz v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 57 Mo. 336.

For "Chief Magistrate," "Committing Magistrate," "Police Magistrate" and- "Stipendiary Magistrates," see those titles.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT. In American law. Courts in the state of South Carolina, having exclusive jurisdiction in matters of contract of and under twenty dollars.

A local court in the city of Philadelphia, possessing the criminal jurisdiction of a police court and civil jurisdiction in actions involving not more than one hundred dollars. It is not a court of record. See Const.Pa. art. 4, 12.

MAGISTRATUS. Lat. In the civil law. A magistrate. Calvin.

A judicial officer who had the power of hearing and determining causes, but whose office properly was to inquire into matters of law, as distinguished from fact. Halifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 8.

MAGNA ASSISA. In old English law. The grand assize. Glanv. lib. 2, cc. 11, 12.

MAGNA ASSISA ELIGENDA. An ancient writ to summon four lawful knights before the justices of assize, there to choose twelve others, with themselves to constitute the grand assize or great jury, to try the matter of right. The trial by grand assize was instituted by Henry II. in parliament, as an alternative to the duel in a writ of right. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27. Wharton.

MAGNA AVERIA. In old pleading. Great beasts, as horses, oxen, etc. Cro. Jac. 580.

MAGNA CENTUM. The great hundred, or six score. Wharton.

MAGNA CHARTA. The great charter.

The name of a charter (or constitutional enactment) granted by King John of England to the barons, at Runnymede, on June 15, 1215, and afterwards, with some alterations, confirmed in parliament by Henry III. and Edward I. This charter is justly regarded as the foundation of English constitutional liberty. Among its thirty-eight chapters are found provisions for regulating the administration of justice, defining the temporal and ecclesiastical jurisdictions, securing the personal liberty of the subject and his rights of property, and the limits of taxation, and for preserving the liberties and privileges of the church. Magna Charta is so called, partly to distinguish it from the Charta de Foresta, which was granted about the same time, and partly by reason of its own transcendent importance.

MAGNA CHARTA ET CHARTA DE FORESTA SONT APPELES LES "DEUX GRANDES CHARTERS." 2 Inst. 570. Magna Charta and the Charter of the Forest are called the "two great charters."

MAGNA COMPONERE PARVIS. To compare great things with small things.

MAGNA CULPA. Great fault; gross negligence.

MAGNA NEGLIGENTIA. In the civil law. Great or gross negligence.

MAGNA NEGLIGENTIA CULPA EST; MAGNA CULPA DOLUS EST. Gross negligence is fault; gross fault is fraud. Dig. 50, 16, 226.

MAGNA PRECARIA. In old English law. A great or general reap-day. Cowell; Blount.

MAGNA SERJEANTIA. In old English law. Grand serjeanty. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 4, § 1.

MAGNUM CAPE. In old Practice. Great or grand cape. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 418. See Grand Cape.

MAGNUM CON CILIUM. In old English law. The great council; the general council of the realm; afterwards called "parliament." 1 Bl. Comm. 148; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 62; Spelman.

The king's great council of barons and prelates. Spelman; Crabb, Com. Law 228.

MAGNUS ROTULUS STATUTORUM. The great statute roll. The first of the English statute rolls, beginning with Magna Charta, and ending with Edward III. Hale, Com. Law, 16, 17.

MAHA—GEN. In Hindu law. A banker or any great shop-keeper.

MAHAL. In Hindu law. Any land or public fund producing a revenue to the government of Hindostan. "Mahalaat" is the plural.

MAHLBRIEF. In maritime law. The German name for the contract for the building of a vessel.

This contract contains a specification of the kind of vessel intended, her dimensions, the time within which she is to be completed, the price and times of payment, etc., with reservation generally that the contractor or his agent (usually the master of a vessel) may reject uncontract-worthy materials, and oblige the builder to supply others. Jac. Sea Laws 2-8.

MAIDEN. A young unmarried woman. In an indictment for adultery, not necessarily a virgin. State v. Shedrick, 69 Vt. 428, 38 A. 75.

In Scotch law. An instrument formerly used in beheading criminals. It resembled the French guillotine, of which it is said to have been the prototype. Wharton.

MAIDEN ASSIZE. In English law. Originally an assize at which no person was condemned to die. Now a session of a criminal court at which there are no prisoners to be tried.

MAIDEN RENTS. In old English law. A fine paid to lords of some manors, on the marriage of tenants, originally given in consideration of the lord's relinquishing his customary right of lying the first night with the bride of a tenant. Cowell.

MAIGNAGIUM. A brasier's shop, or, perhaps, a house. Cowell.

MAIHEM. See Mayhem; Maim.

MAIHEMATUS. Maimed or wounded.

MAIHEMIUM EST HOMICIDIUM INCHOATUM. 3 Inst. 118. Mayhem is incipient homicide.

MAIHEM/UM EST INTER CRIMINA MAJORA MINIMUM, ET INTER MINORA MAXIMUM. Co.Litt. 127. Mayhem is the least of great crimes, and the greatest of small.

MAIHEMIUM EST MEMBRI MUTILATIO, ET DICI POTERIT, UBI ALIQUIS IN ALIQUA PARTE SUI CORPORIS EFFECTUS SIT INUTILIS AD PUGNANDUM. Co.Litt. 126. Mayhem is the mutilation of a member, and can be said to take place when a man is injured in any part of his body so as to be useless in fight.

MAIL. As applied to the post-office, the carriage of letters, whether applied to the bag into which they are put, the coach or vehicle by means of which they are transported, or any other means employed for their carriage and delivery by public authority. Wynen v. Schappert, 6 Daly (N.Y.) 560. It may also denote the letters or other matter so carried.

The term "mail," as used in Rev. St. U. S. § 5469, 18 U.S.C.A. §§ 1702, 1708, relative to robbing the mails, may mean either the whole body of matter transported by the postal agents, or any letter or package forming a component part of it. U. S. v. Inabnet, D.C.S.C., 41 F. 130.

Mail also denotes armor, as in the phrase a "coat of mail."

Scotch law. Rent; a rent or tribute. A tenant who pays a rent is called a "mail-payer," "mailer," or "mail-man." Skene.

MAIL MATTER. This term includes letters, packets, etc., received for transmission, and to be transmitted by post to the person to whom such matter is directed. U. S. v. Huggett, C.C.Ohio, 40 F. 641; U. S. v. Rapp, C.C.Ga., 30 F. 820.

Mail and mail matter are used interchangeably in statute, and both stamps and money can be mail matter. Kelly v. Johnston, C.C.A.Cal., 128 F.2d 793, 794.

MAILABLE. Suitable or admissible for transmission by the mail; belonging to the classes of articles which, by the laws and postal regulations, may be sent by post.

MAILE. In old English law. A kind of ancient money, or silver half-pence; a small rent.

MAILED. Mailing with appropriate address on envelope. Societa Principessa Iolanda Margherita Di Savoia (Fondata Dai Bonitesi) v. Broderick, 260 N.Y. 260, 183 N.E. 382, 383.

This word, as applied to a letter, means that the letter was properly prepared for transmission by the postal department, and that it was put in the custody of the officer charged with the duty of forwarding the mail. Pier v. Heinrichshoffen, 67 Mo. 163, 29 Am.Rep. 501, and testimony that a letter was "mailed" to the addressee implies that it was properly addressed, stamped, and deposited in a proper place for the receipt of mail. Dawson Farmer's Elevator Co. v. Opp, 57 N. D. 598, 223 N.W. 350, 353. Model Mill Co. v. Webb, 164 N. C. 87, 80 S.E. 232, 233. But some courts limit this implication. See W. T. Rawleigh Medical Co, v. Burney, 25 Ga.App. 20, 102 S.E. 358; Feder Silberberg Co. v. McNeil, 18 N.M. 44, 133 P. 975, 49 L.R.A., N.S., 458.

MAILLS AND DUTIES. In Scotch law. The rents of an estate. Bell.

MAIM. As now used signifies to cripple or mutilate in any way, to inflict upon a person any injury which deprives him of the use of any limb or member of the body, or renders him lame or defective in bodily vigor; to inflict bodily injury; to seriously wound or disfigure; disable. See Shackelford v. Com., 183 Va. 423, 32 S.E.2d 682, 684; State v. Thomas, 157 Kan. 526, 142 P.2d 692, 693; State v. Deso, 1 A.2d 710, 715; Phillips v. State, 140 Tex.Cr.R. 84, 143 S.W.2d 591, 592.

At common law, to deprive a person of a member or part of the body, the loss of which renders him less capable of fighting; or of defending himself ; to commit mayhem (q. v.). State v. Johnson, 58 Ohio St. 417, 51 N.E. 40, 65 Am. St. Rep. 769.

To "maim" an animal permanent injury must have been inflicted. State v. Benson, 91 Mont. 21, 5 P.2d 223, 224; Williams v. State, 51 Ga.App. 53, 179 S.E. 600.

MAIN. L. Fr. A hand. More commonly written "meyn."

Principal, chief, most important in size, extent, or utility.

First or chief in size, rank, importance, strength, extent; principal, chief, leading. Oregon, C. & E. Ry. Co. v. Blackmer, 154 Or. 3§8, 59 P.2d 694, 696.

Utilities, chief or primary conductors, Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 131 N. J.L. 565, 37 A.2d 111, 112, 113; main or principal conduits, Jersey Central Power & Light C9. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 130 N.J.L. 364, 33 A.2d 355, 356.

MAIN CHANNEL. The main channel of a river is that bed over which the principal volume of water flows. See St. Louis, etc., Packet Co. v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co., C.C.Iowa, 31 F. 757; Cessill v. State, 40 Ark. 504; Dunlieth & D. Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55 Iowa 558, 8 N.W. 443. See, also, Thalweg.

MAIN LINE. Line which would develop sufficient traffic to necessitate operation of more than one train in same or opposite direction at any one time within division terminals. Oregon, C. & E. Ry. Co. v. Blackmer, 154 Or. 388, 59 P.2d 694, 696; principal line, Union Pac. R. Co. v. Anderson, 167 Or. 687, 120 P.2d 578, 588.

MAIN SEA. See Sea.

MAINOUR. In criminal law. An article stolen, when found in the hands of the thief.

A thief caught with the stolen goods in his possession is said to be taken "with the mainour," that is, with the property in manu, in his hands. 4 Bl.Comm. 307.

The word seems to have corresponded 'with the Saxon "handhabend," (q. v.). In modern law it has sometimes been written as an English word "manner," and the expression "taken in the manner" occurs in the books. Crabb, Eng. Law, 154.

MAINOVRE, or 1VIA,INCEUVRE. A trespass committed by hand. See 7 Rich. II. c. 4.

MAINPERNABLE. Capable of being bailed; bailable; admissible to bail on giving surety by mainpernors.

MAINPERNOR. In old practice. A surety for the appearance of a person under arrest, who is delivered out of custody into the hands of his bail.

MAINPRISE. The delivery of a person into the custody of mainpernors (q. v.). Also the name of a writ (now obsolete) commanding the sheriff to take the security of mainpernors and set the party at liberty.

"Mainpernors" differ from "bail" in that a man's bail may imprison or surrender him up before the stipulated day of appearance; mainpernors can do neither, but are barely sureties for his appearance at the day. Bail are only sureties that the party be answerable for the special matter for which they stipulate; mainpernors are bound to produce him to answer all charges whatsoever. 3 Bl. Comm. 128. Other distinctions are made in the old books. See Cowell.

MAIN-RENT, Vassalage.

MAINSWORN. Forsworn, by making false oath with hand (main) on book. Used in the north of England. Brownl. 4; Hob. 125.

MAINTAIN, as its structure indicates, signifies literally to hold by the hand.

It is variously defined as acts of repairs and other acts to prevent a decline, lapse or cessation from existing state or condition; bear the expense of ; carry on; commence; continue; furnish means for subsistence or existence of ; hold; hold or keep in an existing state or condition; hold or preserve in any particular state or condition; keep; keep from change; keep from falling, declining, or ceasing; keep in existence or continuance; keep in force; keep in good order ; keep in proper condition ; keep in repair; keep up; preserve; preserve from lapse, decline, failure, or cessation; provide for; rebuild; repair ; replace; supply with means of support; supply with what is needed; support; sustain; uphold. Negatively stated, it is defined as not to lose or surrender; Rot to suffer or fail or decline. Tennessee Electric Power Co. v. White County, C.C.A.Tenn., 52 F.2d 1065, 1066; Maryland Casualty Co. v. City of Seattle, 11 Wash.2d 69, 118 P.2d 416, 418; State ex rel. Rose Bros. MALFETRIA. In Spanish law, offense. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 19, c. 1, § 1.

MALICE. The intentional doing of a wrongful act without just cause or excuse, with an intent to inflict an injury or under circumstances that the law will imply an evil intent. Luikart v. Miller, Mo., 48 S.W.2d 867, 871. Cottle v. Johnson, 179 N.C. 426, 102 S.E. 769, 770.

A conscious violation of the law (or the prompting of the mind to commit it) which operates to the prejudice of another person. Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co. v. Glenn, 213 Ala. 284, 104 So. 548, 549. A condition of the mind showing a heart regardless of social duty and fatally bent on mischief. Cockrell v. State, 135 Tex.Cr.R. 218, 117 S.W. 2d 1105, 1109, 1110.

In murder, that condition of mind which prompts one to take the life of another without just cause or provocation. State v. Smith, 26 N.M. 482, 194 P. 869, 870; State v. Moynihan, 93 N.J.L. 253, 106 A. 817, 818; a willful or corrupt intention of the mind. Pembrook v. State, 117 Neb. 759, 222 N.W. 956. It includes not only anger, hatred and revenge, but also every other unlawful and unjustifiable motive. State v. Scherr, 243 Wis. 65, 9 N.W.2d 117, 119.

"Malice," in its common acceptation, means ill will towards some person. In its legal sense, it applies to a wrongful act done intentionally, without legal justification.

It includes intent and will. State v. Robbins, 66 Me. 328.

"Malice" in law is not necessarily personal hate or ill will, but it is that state of mind which is reckless of law and of the legal rights of the citizen. Evers-Jordan Furniture Co. v. Hartzog, 237 Ala. 407, 187 So. 491, 493.

"Malice," in legal sense, characterizes all acts done with an evil disposition, a wrong and unlawful motive or purpose, or the willful doing of an injurious act without a lawful excuse. Giguere v. Rosselot, 110 Vt. 173, 3 A.2d 538, 542.

In libel and slander, as to privileged communications, "malice" involves an evil intent or motive arising from spite or ill will; personal hatred or ill will; or culpable recklessness or a willful and wanton disregard of the rights and interests of the person defamed. McDonald v. Brown, 23 R.I. 546, 51 A. 213, 58 L.R.A. 768, 91 Am.St.Rep. 659; Cherry v. Des Moines Leader, 86 N.W. 323, 114 Iowa 298, 54 L.R.A. 855, 89 Am.St.Rep. 365.

In a libel case it consists in intentionally publishing, without justifiable cause, any written or printed matter which is injurious to the character of another. Becker v. Brinkop, 230 Mo.App. 871, 78 S.W.2d 538, 541. And in a legal sense, as an ingredient of actions for slander or libel, it signifies nothing more than a wrongful act done intentionally, without just cause or excuse. Ambruster v. National Bank of Westfield, 116 N.J.L. 122, 182 A. 613, 614.

In the law of malicious prosecution, it means that the prosecution was instituted primarily because of a purpose other than that of bringing an offender to justice. Brown v. Kisner, 192 Miss. 746, 6 So.2d 611, 617.

Actual malice. Express malice, or malice in fact. Gee v. Culver, 13 Or. 598, 11 P. 302; Eteenpain Co-op. Soc. v. Lillback, C.C.A.Mass., 18 F.2d 912, 917.

Constructive malice. Implied malice; malice inferred from acts; malice imputed by law; malice which is not shown by direct proof of an intention to do injury, (express malice,) but which is inferentially established by the necessarily injurious results of the acts shown to have been committed. State v. Harrigan, 31 Atl. 1052, 9 Houst. (Del.) 369; Caldwell v. Raymond, 2 Abb.Prac. (N.Y.) 196.

Express malice. Actual malice; malice in fact; ill will or wrongful motive; a deliberate intention to commit an injury, evidenced by external circumstances. Sparf v. U. S., 15 S.Ct. 273, 156 U.S. 51, 39 L.Ed. 343; Weir v. McEwan, 94 N.J.L. 92, 109 A. 355, 356; People v. Scalisi, 324 Ill. 131, 154 N.E. 715, 722.

General malice. General malice is wickedness, a disposition to do wrong, a "black and diabolical heart, regardless of social duty and fatally bent on mischief." Neal v. Nelson, 117 N.C. 393, 23 S.E. 428, 53 Am.St.Rep. 590.

Implied malice. Malice inferred by legal reasoning and necessary deduction from the res gestce or the conduct of the party. Malice inferred from any deliberate cruel act committed by one person against another, however sudden. Whart.Hom. 38. What is called "general malice" is often thus inferred. Sparf v. U. S., 15 S.Ct. 273, 156 U.S. 51, 39 L.Ed. 343.

Legal malice. See Legal Malice.

Particular malice. Malice directed against a particular individual; ill will; a grudge; a desire to be revenged on a particular person. Brooks v. Jones, 33 N.C. 261; State v. Long, 117 N.C. 791, 23 S.E. 431.

Preconceived malice. Malice prepense or aforethought. See State v. Reidell, 9 Houst. (Del.) 470, 14 A. 550.

Premeditated malice. An intention to kill unlawfully, deliberately formed in the mind as the result of a determination meditated upon and fixed before the act. State v. Gin Pon, 16 Wash. 425, 47 P. 961; State v. Rutten, 13 Wash. 211, 43 P. 30.

Special malice. Particular or personal malice; that is, hatred, ill will, or a vindictive disposition against a particular individual.

Universal malice. By this term is not meant a malicious purpose to take the life of all persons, but it is that depravity of the human heart which determines to take life upon slight or insufficient provocation, without knowing or caring who may be the victim. Mitchell v. State, 60 Ala. 30.

MALICE AFORETHOUGHT. A predetermination to commit an act without legal justification or excuse. Harrison v. Commonwealth, 279 Ky. 510, 131 S.W.2d 454, 455. A malicious design to injure. State v. Thomas, 157 Kan. 526, 142 P.2d 692, 693.

In the definition of "murder," malice aforethought exists where the person doing the act which causes death has an intention to cause death or grievous bodily harm to any person, (whether the person is actually killed or not) or to commit any felony whatever, or has the knowledge that the act will probably cause the death of or grievous bodily harm to some person, although he does not desire it, or even wishes that it may. not be caused. Steph.Crim.Dig. 144; 1 Russ.Crimes. 641. The words "malice aforethought" long ago acquired in law a settled meaning, somewhat different from the popular one. In their legal sense they do not import an actual intention to kill the deceased. The idea is not spite or malevolence to the deceased in particular, but evil design in general, the dictate of a wicked, depraved, and malignant heart ; not premeditated personal hatred or revenge towards the person killed, but that kind of unlawful purpose which, if persevered in, must produce mischief. State v. Pike, 49 N.H. 399, 6 Am. Rep. 533.

MALICE IN FACT. Express or actual malice. Railway Co. v. Behee, 2 Tex.Civ.App. 107, 21 S.W. 384, Hotchkiss v. Porter, 30 Conn. 414.

It implies desire or intent to injure, while "malice in law," or "implied malice," means wrongful act done intentionally, without just cause or excuse, and jury may infer it as a deduction from want of probable cause. Glieberman v. Fine, 248 Mich. 8, 226 N.W. 669, 670.

MALICE IN LAW. The intentional doing of a wrongful act without just cause or excuse. Lyons v. St. Joseph Belt Ry. Co., Mo.App., 84 S.W.2d 933, 944. Implied, inferred, or legal malice. Smith v. Rodecap, 5 Ind.App. 78, 31 N.E. 479; Bacon v. Railroad Co., 66 Mich. 166, 33 N.W. 181.

As distinguished from malice in fact, it is presumed from tortious acts, deliberately done without just cause, excuse, or justification, which are reasonably calculated to injure another or others. Betts v. Jones, 208 N.C. 410, 181 S.E. 334.

MALICE PREPENSE. Malice aforethought; deliberate, predetermined malice. 2 Rolle, 461.

MALICIOUS. Characterized by, or involving, malice; having, or done with, wicked or mischievous intentions or motives; wrongful and done intentionally without just cause or excuse. People v. Knapp, 274 N.Y.S. 85, 152 Misc. 368.

In its broad sense it does not necessarily mean ill will or hatred. In a legal sense, any act done willfully and purposely to the prejudice and injury of another, which is unlawful, is, as against that person, "malicious." Pollard v. Phelps, 56 Ga.App. 408, 193 S.E. 102, 108.

MALICIOUS ABANDONMENT. In criminal law, the desertion of a wife or husband without just cause.

MALICIOUS ABUSE OF LEGAL PROCESS. Willfully misapplying court process to obtain object not intended by law. Atlanta Finance Co. v. Cain, 42 Ga.App. 819, 157 S.E. 337.

The willful misuse or misapplication of process to accomplish a purpose not warranted or commanded by the writ ; the malicious perversion of a regularly issued process, whereby a result not lawfully or properly obtained on a writ is secured; not including cases where the process was procured maliciously but not abused or misused after its issuance. King v. Yarbray, 136 Ga. 212 (1), 71 S.E. 131.

MALICIOUS ACCUSATION. Procuring accusation or prosecution of another from improper motive and without probable cause. McKenzie v. State, 113 Neb. 576, 204 N.W. 60, 63.

MALICIOUS ACT. A wrongful act intentionally done without legal justification or excuse; an unlawful act done willfully or purposely to injure another. La Plante v. Johnson, 297 N.Y.S. 318, 321, 163 Misc. 96.

MALICIOUS ARREST. An arrest made willfully and without probable cause, but in the course of a regular proceeding.

MALICIOUS INJURY. An injury committed against a person at the prompting of malice or hatred towards him, or done spitefully or wantonly. State v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 189, 85 N.W. 1046, 62 L.R.A. 700; Wing v. Wing, 66 Me. 62, 22 Am. Rep. 548.

The willful doing of an act with knowledge it is liable to injure another and regardless of consequences. In re Kalk, D.C.N.Y., 270 F. 627, 629.

Injury involving element of fraud, violence, wantonness and willfulness, or criminality. Braxton v. Matthews, 199 N.C. 484, 154 S.E. 735.

An injury that is intentional, wrongful and without just cause or excuse, even in the absence of hatred, spite or ill will. Panchula v. Kaya, 59 Ohio App. 556, 18 N.E.2d 1003, 1005.

MALICIOUS KILLING. Any intentional killing without a legal justification or excuse and not within the realm of voluntary manslaughter. State v. Cope, 78 Ohio App. 429, 67 N.E.2d 912, 920.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF. Willful destruction of personal property, from actual ill will or resentment towards its owner or possessor. People v. Petheram, 31 N.W. 188, 64 Mich. 252; First Nat. Bank v. Burkett, 101 Ill. 394, 40 Am.Rep. 209; State v. Waltz, 158 Iowa 191, 139 N.W. 458, 459. Though only a trespass at the common law, it is now, by several statutes, made severely penal. Jacob.

MALICIOUS MOTIVE. Any motive for instituting a prosecution, other than a desire to bring an offender to justice. Lounder v. Jacobs, 119 Colo. 511, 205 P.2d 236, 238.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION. One begun in malice without probable cause to believe the charges can be sustained. Eustace v. Dechter, 28 Cal.App. 2d 706, 83 P.2d 523, 525. Instituted with intention of injuring defendant and without probable cause, and which terminates in favor of the person prosecuted. For this injury an action on the case lies, called the "action of malicious prosecution." Hicks v. Brantley, 29 S.E. 459, 102 Ga. 264; Eggett v. Allen, 96 N.W. 803, 119 Wis. 625.

MALICIOUS TRESPASS. The act of one who maliciously or mischievously injures or causes to be injured any property of another or any public property. State v. McKee, 109 Ind. 497, 10 N.E. 405; Hannel v. State, 4 Ind.App. 485, 30 N.E. 1118.

MALICIOUS USE OF PROCESS. Exists where plaintiff proceeds maliciously and without probable cause to execute object which law intends process to subserve. Davison-Paxon Co. v. Walker, 45 Ga.App. 395, 165 S.E. 160, 163.

MALICIOUSLY. Imports a wish to vex, annoy, or injure another, or an intent to do a wrongful act, and may consist in direct intention to injure, or in reckless disregard of another's rights. Briggs v. Coykendall, 57 N.D. 785, 224 N.W. 202, 205.

MALICIOUSNESS. "Maliciousness" does not necessarily mean actual malice or ill will, but intentional doing of a wrongful act without legal or social justification. Dorrington v. Manning, 135 Pa.Super. 194, 4 A.2d 886, 890.

MALIGNARE. To malign or slander; also to maim.

MALINGER. To feign sickness or any physical disablement or mental lapse or derangement, especially for the purpose of escaping the performance of a task, duty, or work.

MALITIA. Lat. Actual evil design; express malice.

MALO GRATO. Lat. In spite; unwillingly.

MALO SENSU. Lat. In, an evil sense or meaning; with an evil signification.

MALPRACTICE. Any professional misconduct, unreasonable lack of skill or fidelity in professional or fiduciary duties, evil practice, or illegal or immoral conduct. Gregory v. McInnis, 140 S.C. 52, 134 S.E. 527, 529.

As applied to physicians and surgeons, this term means, generally, professional misconduct towards a patient which is considered reprehensible either because immoral in itself or because contrary to law or expressly forbidden by law.

In a more specific sense, it means bad, wrong, or injudicious treatment of a patient, professionally and in respect to the particular disease or injury, resulting in injury, unnecessary suffering, or death to the patient, and proceeding from ignorance, carelessness, want of proper professional skill, disregard of established rules or principles, neglect, or a malicious or criminal intent. Rodgers v. Kline, 56 Miss. 816, 31 Am.Rep. 389; Hibbard v. Thompson, 109 Mass. 288; Napier v. Greenzweig, C.C.A.N.Y., 256 F. 196, 197.

The term is occasionally applied to lawyers, and then means generally any evil practice in a professional capacity, but rather with reference to the court and its practice and process than to the client. In re Baum, 8 N.Y.S. 771, 55 Hun, 611; Cowley v. O'Connell, 54 N.E. 558, 174 Mass. 253.

MALT. A substance produced from barley or other grain by a process of steeping in water until germination begins and then drying in a kiln, thus converting the starch into saccharine matter. Hollender v. Magone, C.C.N.Y., 38 F. 915; U. S. v. Cohn, 52 S.W. 38, 2 Ind.T. 474.

MALT BEVERAGES. Consists of beer, ale, porter, and the like, and do not include distilled alcoholic beverages, or fermented juices from grapes, fruits, and berries. McCaffrey v. State, 183 Ga. 827, 189 S.E. 825, 826.

MALT LIQUOR. A general term including all alcoholic beverages prepared essentially by the fermentation of an infusion of malt (as distinguished from such liquors as are produced by the process of distillation), and particularly such beverages as are made from malt and hops, like beer, ale, and porter. Allred v. State, 89 Ala. 112, 8 So. 56; State v. Gill, 89 Minn. 502, 95 N.W. 449; Claunch v. State, 82 Tex.Cr. 355, 199 S.W. 483, 484.

MALT MULNA. A quern or malt-mill.

MALT-SHOT, or MALT-SCOT. A certain payment for making malt. Somner.

MALT-TAX. An excise duty upon malt in England. 1 Bl.Comm. 313; 2 Steph.Comm. 581.

MALTOTE. In French history, an oppressive tax levied in 1292 and later. Cassell's New Fr. Dict.

MALTREATMENT. In reference to the treatment of his patient by a surgeon, this term signifies improper or unskillful treatment; it may result either from ignorance, neglect, or willfulness; but the word does not necessarily imply that the conduct of the surgeon, in his treatment of the patient, is either willfully or grossly careless. Com. v. Hackett, 2 Allen (Mass.) 142.

MALUM, n. Lat. In Roman law, a mast; the mast of a ship. Dig. 50, 17, 242, pr. Held to be part of the ship. Id.

MALUM, adj. Lat. Wrong; evil; wicked; reprehensible.

MALUM IN SE. A wrong in itself; an act or case involving illegality from the very nature of the transaction, upon principles of natural, moral, and public law. Story, Ag. § 346. State v. Shedoudy, 45 N.M. 516, 118 P.2d 280, 287.

An act is said to be ma/um in se when it is inherently and essentially evil, that is, immoral in its nature and injurious in its consequences, without any regard to the fact of its being noticed or punished by the law of the state. Such are most or all of the offenses cognizable at common law, (without the denouncement of a statute;) as murder, larceny, etc.

MALUM NON HABET EFFICIENTEM, SED DEFICIENTEM, CAUSAM. 3 Inst.Proem. Evil has not an efficient, but a deficient, cause.

MALUM NON PRZESUMITUR. Wickedness is not presumed. Branch, Princ.; 4 Coke, 72a.

MALUM PROBIBITUM. A wrong prohibited; a thing which is wrong because prohibited; an act which is not inherently immoral, but becomes so because its commission is expressly forbidden by positive law; an act involving an illegality resulting from positive law. Contrasted with malum in se. Story, Ag. § 346; People v. Pavlic, 227 Mich. 562, 199 N.W. 373, 374, 35 A.L.R. 741.

MALUM QUO COMMUNIUS EO PEJUS. The more common an evil is, the worse it is. Branch, Princ.

MALVEILLES. In old English law, ill will; crimes and misdemeanors; malicious practices. Cowell.

MALVEIS PROCURORS. L. Fr. Such as used to pack juries, by the nomination of either party in a cause, or other practice. Cowell.

MALVEISA. A warlike engine to batter and beat down walls.

MALVERSATION. In French law, this word is applied to all grave and punishable faults committed in the exercise of a charge or commission, (office,) such as corruption, exaction, concussion, larceny. Merl. Repert.

MAN. A human being. A person of the male sex. A male of the human species above the age of puberty.

In its most extended sense the term includes not only the adult male sex of the human species, but women and children.

In feudal law, a vassal; a tenant or feudatory. The Anglo-Saxon relation of lord and man was originally purely personal, and founded on mutual contract. 1 Spence, Ch. 37.

MAN OF STRAW. See Men of Straw.

MANACLES. Chain for the hands; shackles.

MANAGE. To control and direct, to administer, to take charge of. Fluet v. McCabe (1938), 299 Mass. 173, 12 N.E.2d 89, 93. To conduct; to carry on the concerns of a business or establishment. Generally applied to affairs that are somewhat complicated and that involve skill and judgment. Corn. v. Johnson, 144 Pa. 377, 22 A. 703.

MANAGEMENT. Government, control, superintendence, physical or manual handling or guidance; act of managing by direction or regulation, or administration, as management of family, or of household, or of servants, or of great enterprises, or of great affairs. Branch v. Veterans' Administration, 189 Ark. 662, 74 S.W.2d 800, 804. Discretionary power of direction; J. T. Camp Transfer Co. v. Davenport, 15 Ala.App. 507, 74 So. 156, 159; Browne v. City of New York, 210 N.Y.S. 786, 795,. 125 Misc. 1.

MANAGER. One who has charge of corporation and control of its business or branch establishment, and who is vested with a certain amount of discretion and independent judgment. Braniff v. McPherren, 177 Okl. 292, 58 P.2d 871, 872. A person chosen or appointed to manage, direct, or administer the affairs of another person or of a corporation or company. Com. v. Johnson, 144 Pa. 377, 22 A. 703. Also one of the persons appointed on the part of the house of representatives to prosecute impeachments before the senate.

MANAGERS OF A CONFERENCE. Members of the houses of parliament appointed to represent each house at a conference between the two houses. It is an ancient rule that the number of commons named for a conference should be double those of the lords. May, Parl.Pr. c. 16.

MANAGING AGENT. See Agent.

MANAGING OWNER OF SHIP. The managing owner of a ship is one of several co-owners, to whom the others, or those of them who join in the adventure, have delegated the management of the ship. He has authority to do all things usual and necessary in the management of the ship and the delivery of the cargo, to enable her to prosecute her voyage and earn freight, with the right to appoint an agent for the purpose. 6 Q.B.Div. 93; Sweet.

MANAGIUM. A mansion-house or dwelling-place. Cowell.

MANAS MEDIAE. Men of a mean condition, or of the lowest degree.

MANBOTE. In Saxon law, a compensation or recompense for homicide, particularly due to the lord for killing his man or vassal, the amount of which was regulated by that of the were.

MANCA, MANCUS, or MANCUSA. A square piece of gold coin, commonly valued at thirty pence. Cowell.

MANCEPS. Lat. In Roman law, a purchaser; one who took the article sold in his hand; a formality observed in certain sales. Calvin. A farmer of the public taxes.

MANCHE-PRESENT. A bribe; a present from the donor's own hand.

MANCIPARE. Lat. In Roman law, to sell, alienate, or make over to another; to sell with certain formalities; to sell a person; one of the forms observed in the process of emancipation.

MANCIPATE. To enslave; to bind; to tie.

MANCIPATIO. Lat. In Roman law, a certain ceremony or formal process anciently required to be performed, to perfect the sale or conveyance of res mancipi, (land, houses, slaves, horses, or cattle.)

The parties were present, (vendor and vendee,) with five witnesses and a person called "libripens," who held a balance or scales. A set form of words was repeated on either side, indicative of transfer of ownership, and certain prescribed gestures made, and the vendee then struck the scales with a piece of copper, thereby symbolizing the payment, or weighing out, of the stipulated price.

The ceremony of mancipatio was used, in later times, in one of the forms of making a will. The testator acted as vendor, and the heir (or familice emptor) as purchaser, the latter symbolically buying the whole estate or succession, of the former. The ceremony was also used by a father in making a fictitious sale of his son, which sale, when three times repeated, effectuated the ' emancipation of the son.

MANCIPI RES. Lat. In Roman law, certain classes of things which could not be aliened or transferred except by means of a certain formal ceremony of conveyance called "mancipatio" (q. v.) . These included land, houses, slaves, horses, and cattle. All other things were called "res nec mancipi."

The distinction was abolished by Justinian. The distinction corresponded as nearly as may be to the early distinction of English law into real and personal property ; res mancipi being objects of a military or agricultural character, and res nec mancipi being all other subjects of property. Like personal estate, res nec mancipi were not originally either valuable in se or valued. Brown.

MANCIPIUM. Lat. In Roman law, the momentary condition in which a filius, etc., might be when in course of emancipation from the potestas, and before that emancipation was absolutely complete. The condition was not like the dominica potestas over slaves, but slaves are frequently called "mancipia" in the non-legal Roman authors. Brown.

To form a clear conception of the true import of the word in the Roman jurisprudence, it is necessary to advert to the four distinct powers which were exercised by the pater familias, viz.; the manus, or martial power; the mancipium, resulting from the mancipatio, or alienatio per vs et libram, of a freeman; the dominica potestas, the power of the master over his slaves, and the patria potestas, the paternal power. When the pater familias sold his son, venum dare, mancipare, the paternal power was succeeded by the mancipium, or the power acquired by the purchaser over the person whom he held in mancipio, and whose condition was assimilated to that of a slave. What is most remarkable is, that on the emancipation from the mancipium he fell back into the paternal power, which was not entirely exhausted until he had been sold three times by the pater familias. Si pater filium ter venum dat, filius a patre liber esto. Gaius speaks of the mancipatio as imaginaria qucedam venditio, because in his times it was only resorted to for the purpose of adoption or emancipation. See 1 Ortolan 112; Morey, Rom. L. 23, 32; Sohm, Inst. R. L. 124, 390.

MANCIPLE. A clerk of the kitchen, or caterer, especially in colleges. Cowell.

MANCOMUNAL. In Spanish law, an obligation is said to be mancomunal when one person assumes the contract or debt of another, and makes himself liable to pay or fulfill it. Schm.Civil Law, 120.

MANCUS. See Manca.

MANDAMIENTO. In Spanish law, commission; authority or power of attorney. A contract of good faith, by which one person commits to the gratuitous charge of another his affairs, and the latter accepts the charge. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 12, c. 1.

MANDAMUS. Lat. We command. This is the name of a writ (formerly a high prerogative writ) which issues from a court of superior jurisdiction, and is directed to a private or municipal corporation, or any of its officers, or to an executive, administrative or judicial officer, or to an inferior court, commanding the performance of a particular act therein specified, and belonging to his or their public, official, or ministerial duty, or directing the restoration of the complainant to rights or privileges of which he has been illegally deprived. Lahiff v. St. Joseph, etc., Soc., 76 Conn. 648, 57 A. 692, 65 L.R.A. 92, 100 Am.St.Rep. 1012.

The action of mandamus is one, brought in a court of competent jurisdiction, to obtain an order of such court commanding an inferior tribunal, board, corporation, or person to do or not to do an act the performance or omission of which the law enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station. Where discretion is left to the inferior tribunal or person, the mandamus, can only compel it to act, but cannot control such discretion. Rev.Code Iowa, 1880, § 3373 (Code 1931, § 12440).

Writ of "mandamus" is summary writ issued from court of competent jurisdiction to command performance of specific duty which relator is entitled to have performed. People v. Nelson, 346 Ill. 247, 178 N.E. 485, 487.

It is legal, not equitable, remedy, and, when issued, is an inflexible peremptory command to do a particular thing. State ex rel. Onion v. Supreme Temple Pythian Sisters, 227 Mo.App. 557, 54 S.W.2d 468, 469.

The writ of mandamus is either peremptory or alternative, according as it requires the defendant absolutely to obey its behest, or gives him an opportunity to show cause to the contrary. It is the usual practice to issue the alternative writ first. This commands the defendant to do the particular act, or else to appear and show cause against it at a day named. If he neglects to obey the writ, and either makes default in his appearance or fails to show good cause against the application, the peremptory mandamus issues, which commands him absolutely and without qualification to do the act.

MANDANS. Lat. In the civil law, the employing party in a contract of mandate. One who gives a thing in charge to another; one who requires, requests, or employs another to do some act for him. Inst. 3, 27, 1, et seq.

MANDANT. In French and Scotch law, the employing party in the contract of mandatum, or mandate. Story, Bailm. § 138.

MANDATA LICITA RECIPIUNT STRICTAM INTERPRETATIONEM, SED ILLICITA LATAM EX EXTENSAM. Lawful commands receive a strict interpretation, but unlawful commands a broad and extended one. Bac.Max. reg. 16.

MANDATAIRE. Fr. In French law, a person employed by another to do some act for him; a mandatary.

MANDATARIUS TERM:N 0S SIBI POSITOS TRANSGREDI NON POTEST. A mandatary cannot exceed the limits assigned him. Jenk.Cent. 53.

MANDATARY. He to whom a mandate, charge, or commandment is given; also, he that obtains a benefice by mandamus. Briggs. v. Spaulding, 11 S.Ct. 924, 141 U.S. 132, 35 L.Ed. 662.

MANDATE. A command, order, or direction, written or oral, which court is authorized to give and person is bound to obey. Silverman v. Seneca Realty Co., 276 N.Y.S. 466, 154 Misc. 35. A judicial command or precept proceeding from a court or judicial officer, directing the proper officer to enforce a judgment, sentence, or decree. Seaman v. Clarke, 69 N.Y.S. 1002, 60 'App.Div. 416; Horton v. State, 63 Neb. 34, 88 N.W. 146.

A precept or order issued upon the decision of an appeal or writ of error, directing action to be taken, or disposition to be made of case, by inferior court. Egbert v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 50 Okl. 623, 151 P. 228, 230.

In some of the state jurisdictions, the name "mandate" has been substituted for "mandamus" as the formal title of that writ. Chrisman v. Superior Court in and for Fresno County, 63 Cal. App. 477, 219 P. 85, 86; Davies v. Board of Com'rs of Nez Perce County, 26 Idaho, 450, 143 P. 945, 946.

A bailment of property in regard to which the bailee engages to do some act without reward. Story, Bailm. § 137; Maddock v. Riggs, 106 Kan. 808, 190 P. 12, 16, 12 A.L.R. 216.

Mandates and deposits closely resemble each other; the distinction being that in mandates the care and service are the principal, and the custody the accessory, while in deposits the custody is the principal thing, and the care and service are merely accessory. Story, Bailm. § 140.

A contract by which a lawful business is committed to the management of another, and by him undertaken to be performed gratuitously. The mandatary is bound to the exercise of slight diligence, and is responsible for gross neglect. Richardson v. Futrell, 42 Miss. 525; Williams v. Conger, 8 S.Ct. 933, 125 U.S. 397, 31 L.Ed. 778. A mandate, procuration, or letter of attorney is an act by which one person gives power to another to transact for him and in his name one or several affairs.

The mandate may take place in five different manners,- for the interest of the person granting it only; for the joint interest of both parties; for the interest of a third person; for the interest of a third person and that of the party granting it; and, finally, for the interest of the mandatary and a third person. Civ.Code La. arts. 2985, 2986.

The word may also denote a request or direction. Thus, a check is a mandate by the drawer to his banker to pay the amount to the transferee or holder of the check. 1 Q.B.Div. 33.

Civil Law. The instructions which the emperor addressed to a public functionary, and which were rules for his conduct. These mandates resembled those of the proconsuls, the mandata jurisdictio, and were ordinarily binding on the legates or lieutenants of the emperor•in the imperial provinces and there they had the authority of the principal edicts. Sa[y].Dr.Rom. c. 3, § 24, no. 4.

MANDATO. In Spanish law, the contract of mandate. Escriche.

MANDATO, PANES DE. Loaves of bread given to the poor upon Maundy Thursday.

MANDATOR. The person employing another to perform a mandate.

MANDATORY, adj. Containing a command; preceptive; imperative; peremptory.

A "mandatory" provision in the statute is one the omission to follow which renders the proceedings to which it relates void, while a "directory" provision is one the observance of which is not necessary to validity of the proceeding. Siedschlag v. May, 363 Ill. 538, 2 N.E.2d 836, 838. So the mandatory part of a writ is that which commands the person to do the act specified. State v. Barnell, 109 Ohio St. 246, 142 N.E. 611, 613; Williams v. Sherwood, 51 N.D. 520, 200 N.W. 782, 784.

It is also said that when the provision of a statute is the essence of the thing required to be done, it is mandatory, Kavanaugh v. Fash, C.C.A.Okl., 74 F.2d 435, 437; otherwise, when it relates to form and manner; and where an act is incident, or after jurisdiction acquired, it is directory merely, Davis v. Smith, 58 N.H. 17.

"Mandatory" s' atutory provision is one which must be observed, as distinguished from "directory" provision, which leaves it optional with department or officer to which addressed to obey it or not. State ex rel. Dworken v. Court of Common Pleas of Cuyahoga County, 131 Ohio St. 23, 1 N.E.2d 138, 139.

MANDATORY, n. One to whom a mandate is given; one who undertakes without compensation to perform certain duties. Swords v. Simineo, 216 P. 806, 809, 68 Mont. 164;' Smith v. State, 199 Ind. 217, 156 N.E. 513, 515.

MANDATORY INJUNCTION. See Injunction.

MANDATUM NISI GRATUITUM NULLUM EST. Unless a mandate is gratuitous, it is not a mandate. Dig. 17. 1. 1. 4; Inst. 3, 27; 1 Bouv.Inst. n. 1070.

MANDAVI BALLIVO. (I have commanded or made my mandate to the bailiff.) In English practice, the return made by a sheriff, where the bailiff of a liberty has the execution of a writ, that he has commanded the bailiff to execute it. 1 Tidd, Pr. 309; 2 Tidd, Pr. 1025.

MANENTES. Tenants. Obsolete. Cowell.

MANERA. In Spanish law, manner or mode. Las Partidas, pt. 4, tit. 4, 1. 2.

MANERIUM. In old English law, a manor.

MANERIUM DICITUR A MANENDO, SECUNDUM EXCELLENTIAM, SEDES MAGNA, FIXA, ET STABILIS. Co.Litt. 58. A manor is so called from manendo, according to its excellence, a seat, great, fixed, and firm.

MANGONARE. In old English law, to buy in a market.

MANGONELLUS. A warlike instrument for casting stones against the walls of a castle. Cowell.

MANIA A POTU. Insanity resulting as a secondary effect produced by excessive and protracted indulgence in intoxicating liquors in which the patient becomes a madman fully deprived of reason while the fit is upon him. State v. Wallace, 170 Or. 60, 131 P.2d 222, 233.

MANHOOD. In feudal law, a term denoting the ceremony of doing homage by the vassal to his lord. The formula used was, "Devenio vester homo," I become your man. 2 Bl.Comm. 54.

To arrive at manhood means to arrive at twenty-one years of age. Felton v. Billups, 21 N.C. 585.

MANIA. See Insanity.

MANIFEST. Evident to the senses, especially to the sight, obvious to the understanding, evident to the mind, not obscure or hidden, and is synonymous with open, clear, visible, unmistakable, indubitable, indisputable, evident, and self-evident. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Coffeen, 96 Colo. 375, 42 P.2d 998, 1001.

In evidence, that which is clear and requires no proof; that which is notorious.

In maritime law. A sea-letter; a written document required to be carried by merchant vessels, containing an account of the cargo, with other particulars, for the facility of the customs officers. The Sylvia II, D.C.Mass., 28 F.2d 215, 216.

MANIFEST LAW. See Lex manifesta, s. v. Lex.

MANIFESTA PROBATIONE NON INDIGENT. 7 Coke, 40. Things manifest do not require proof.

MANIFESTO. A formal written declaration, promulgated by a prince, or by the executive authority of a state or nation, proclaiming its reasons and motives for declaring a war, or for any other important international action.

MANIPULUS. In canon law, a handkerchief, which the priest always had in his left hand. Blount.

MANKIND. The race or species of human beings. In law, females, as well as males, may be included under this term. Fortesc. 91.

MANNER. A way, mode, method of doing anything, or mode of proceeding in any case or situation. Ducre v. Milner, La.App., 146 So. 734, 736.

A word of large signification, but cannot exceed the subject to which it belongs. The incident cannot be extended beyond its principal. Wells v. Bain, 75 Pa. 39, 54, 15 Am. Rep. 563.

Also a thing stolen, in the hand of the thief; a corruption of "mainour" (q. v.).

MANNER AND FORM; MODO ET FORMA. Formal words introduced at the conclusion of a traverse.

Their object is to put the party whose pleading is traversed not only to the proof that the matter of fact denied is, in its general effect, true as alleged, but also that the manner and form in which the fact or facts are set forth are also capable of proof. • Brown.

MANNING. A day's work of a man. Cowell. A summoning to court. Spelman.

MANNIRE. To cite any person to appear in court and stand in judgment there. It is different from bannire; for, though both of them are citations, this is by the adverse party, and that is by the judge. Du Cange.

MANNOPUS. In old English law, goods taken in the hands of an apprehended thief. The same as "mainour," (q. v.).

MANNUS. A horse. Cowell.

MANOR. A house, dwelling, seat, or residence.

In English law, the manor was originally a tract of land granted out by the king to a lord or other great person, in fee. It was otherwise called a "barony" or "lordship," and appendant to it was the right to hold a court, called the "court-baron." The lands comprised in the manor were divided into terrce tenementales (tenemental lands or bocland) and terrce dominicales, or demesne lands. The former were given by the lord of the manor to his followers or retainers in freehold. The latter were such as he reserved for his own use; but of these part were held by tenants in copyhold, e., those holding by a copy of the record in the lord's court; and part, under the name of the "lord's waste," served for public roads and commons of pasture for the lord and tenants. The tenants, considered in their relation to the court-baron and to each other, were called "pares curiae." The word also signified the franchise of having a manor, with jurisdiction for a court-baron and the right to the rents and services of copyholders.

In American law, a manor is a tract held of a proprietor by a fee-farm rent in money or in kind, and descending to the oldest son of the proprietor, who in New York is called a "patroon." People v. Van Rensselaer, 9 N.Y. 291.

Reputed Manor. Whenever the demesne lands and the services become absolutely separated, the manor ceases to be a manor in reality, although it may (and usually does) continue to be a manor in reputation, and is then called a "reputed manor," and it is also sometimes called a "seigniory in gross." Brown.

MANORIAL EXTENT. A survey of a manor made by a jury of tenants, often of unfree men sworn to sit for the particulars of each tenancy, and containing the smallest details as to the nature of the service due. These manorial extents "were made in the interest of the lords, who were anxious that all due services should be done; but they imply that other and greater services are not due, that the customary tenants, even though they be unfree men, owe these ser ices for their tenements, no less and no more. Statements that the tenants are not bound to do services of a particular kind are not very uncommon"; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 343. The "extents" of manors are descriptions which give the numbers and names of the tenants, the size of their holdings, the legal kind of their tenure and the kind and amount of their service; Maitland, Material for Hist. E. L. in 2 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Amer. Leg. Hist. 87.

MANQUELLER. In Saxon law, a murderer.

MANRENT. In Scotch law, the service of a man or vassal. A bond of manrent was an instrument by which a person, in order to secure the protection of some powerful lord, bound himself to such lord for the performance of certain services.

MANSE. In old English law, a habitation or dwelling, generally with land attached. Spelman.

A residence or dwelling-house for the parish priest; a parsonage or vicarage house. Cowell. Still used in Scotch law in this sense.

MANSER. A bastard. Cowell.

MANSIO. In Anglo-Saxon times the amount of land which would support a man and his family, called by various names: Mansio, familia, hide. 2 Holdsw. Hist.E.L. 54.

MANSION. A dwelling-house or place of residence, including its appurtenant outbuildings. 2 East, P.C. 492; Thompson v. People, 3 Parker, Cr. R. (N.Y.) 214; Armour v. State, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 385.

In old English law, residence; dwelling.

MANSION-HOUSE. In the law of burglary, etc., any species of dwelling-house. 3 Inst. 64.

MANSLAUGHTER. The unlawful killing of another without malice, either express or implied; which may be either voluntarily, upon a sudden heat, or involuntarily, but in the commission of some unlawful act. 1 Hale, P.C. 466; 4 Bl.Comm. 191.

The unlawful killing of a human creature without any deliberation, which may be involuntary, in the commission of a lawful act without due caution and circumspection. Wallace v. U. S., 16 S. Ct. 859, 162 U.S. 466, 40 L.Ed. 1039; High v. State, 10 S.W. 238, 26 Tex.App. 545, 8 Am.St.Rep. 488; U. S. v. Lewis, C.C.Tex., 111 F. 632.

The distinction between "manslaughter" and "murder" consists in the following: In the former, though the act which occasions the death be unlawful or likely to be attended with bodily mischief, yet the malice, either express or implied, which is the very essence of murder, is presumed to be wanting in manslaughter. 1 East, P.C. 218; Comm. v. Webster, 5 Cush., Mass., 304, 52 Am.Dec. 711. No time for premeditation. 1 Hale, P.C. 437; 1 Russ. Crimes, 485; 1 Bish.Crim.Law, 678; People v. Crenshaw, 298 Ill. 412, 131 N.E. 576, 577, 15 A.L.R. 671.

There are various degrees of manslaughter recognized by different states, viz. : First degree : Roohano v. State, 167 Wis. 500, 167 N.W. 741, 742. Second degree : State v. Staples, 126 Minn. 396, 148 N.W. 283. Third degree: State v. Prince, 258 Mo. 315, 167 S.W. 535, 538. Fourth degree : State v. Schwenk, 101 Kan. 408, 167 P. 743, 744.

Voluntary manslaughter. Manslaughter committed voluntarily upon a sudden heat of the passions; as if, upon a sudden quarrel, two persons fight, and one of them kills the other. 4 Bl.Comm. 190, 191; State v. Disalvo, 121 A. 661, 663, 2 W.W. Harr. (Del.) 232; Wiley v. State, 19 Ariz. 346, 170 P. 869, 873, L.R.A.1918D, 373. It is the unlawful taking of human life under circumstances falling short of willful or deliberate intent to kill and approaching too near thereto to be justifiable homicide. State v. McVay, 47 R.I. 292, 132 A. 436, 438, 44 A.L.R. 572.

Involuntary manslaughter. It exists where a person in committing an unlawful act not felonious or tending to great bodily harm, or in committing a lawful act without proper caution or requisite skill, unguardedly or undesignedly kills another. State v. Disalvo, 2 W.W.Harr. (Del.) 232, 121 A. 661, 663; State v. McVay, 47 R.I. 292, 132 A. 436, 437, 44 A.L.R. 572.

The absence of intention to kill or to commit any unlawful act which might reasonably produce death or great bodily harm is the distinguishing feature between voluntary and involuntary homicide. State v. Weisengoff, 85 W.Va. 271, 101 S.E. 450, 455; State v. Pond, 125 Me. 453, 134 A. 572, 573.

MANSO, or MANSUM. In old English law, a mansion or house. Spelman.

MANSUETAE NATURA. Tamed and domesticated animals. Andrews v. Smith, 324 Pa. 455, 188 A. 146, 148.

MANSUETUS. Lat. Tame; as though accustomed to come to the hand. 2 Bl.Comm. 391.

MANSUM CAPITALE. The manor-house or lord's court. Paroch.Antiq. 150.

MANTEA. In old records, a long robe or mantle.

MANTHEOFF. In Saxon law, a horse-stealer.

MANU FORTI. Lat. With strong hand. A term used in old writs of trespass. Manu forti et cum multitudine pentium, with strong hand and multitude of people. Reg.Orig. 183.

MANU LONGA. Lat. With a long hand. A term used in the civil law, signifying indirectly or circuitously. Calvin.

MANU OPERA. Lat. Cattle or implements of husbandry; also stolen goods taken from a thief caught in the fact. Cowell.

MANUAL. Of, or pertaining to, the hand or hands; done, made, or operated by or used with the hand or hands; or as manual labor. McErlain v. Taylor, 207 Ind. 240, 192 N.E. 260, 262, 94 A.L.R. 1284. Performed by the hand; used or employed by the hand; held in the hand.

MANUAL DELIVERY. Delivery of personal property sold, donated, mortgaged, etc., by passing it into the "hand" of the purchaser or transferee, that is, by an actual and corporeal change of possession.

MANUAL GIFT. The manual gift, that is, the giving of corporeal movable effects, accompanied by a real delivery, is not subject to any formality. Civil Code La. art. 1539.

MANUAL LABOR. Work done with the hand. State v. Ash, 53 Ariz. 197, 87 P.2d 270, 272. Labor performed by hand or by the exercise of physical force, with or without the aid of tools and of horses or other beasts of burden, but depending for its effectiveness chiefly upon personal muscular exertion rather than upon skill, intelligence or adroitness. Lew Jim v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 66 F. 954, 14 C.C.A. 281; Martin v. Wakefield, 42 Minn. 176, 43 N.W. 966, 6 L.R.A. 362.

MANUAL RATES. The Oklahoma Inspection Bureau is a private enterprise maintained by the insurance companies and its function is to compile the general basis schedule which sets out the rates for the risks insured. These rates are commonly referred to as "manual rates." Commercial Standard Ins. Co. v. Remer, C.C.A.Okl., 119 F. 2d 66, 67.

MANUALIA BENEFICIA. The daily distributions of meat and drink to the canons and other members of cathedral churches for their present subsistence. Cowell.

MANUALIS OBEDIENTIA. Sworn obedience or submission upon oath. Cowell.

MANUCAPTIO. In old English practice, a writ which lay for a man taken on suspicion of felony, and the like, who could not be admitted to bail by the sheriff, or others having power to let to mainprise. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 249.

MANUCAPTORS. Same as mainpernors (q. v.).

MANUFACTORY. A physical plant, or a place or building where manufacturing is carried on. (Plant wherein electric power was generated.) Duke Power Co. v. Bell, 156 S.C. 299, 152 S.E. 865, 868. What in common understanding is known as a "factory." Halpin v. Insurance Co., 23 N.E. 989, 120 N.Y. 73, 8 L.R.A. 79; In re I. Rheinstrom & Sons Co., D.C.Ky., 207 F. 119, 134.

MANUFACTURE, v. From Latin words manus and factura, literally, put together by hand. Now it means the process of making products by hand or machinery. United States v. Anderson, D.C. Cal., 45 F.Supp. 943, 946.

The primary meaning of this word is "making with the hand," but this definition is too narrow for its present use.

Meaning of word "manufacture," which is defined as the making of goods or wares by manual labor or by machinery, especially on a large scale, has expanded as workmanship and art have advanced, so that now nearly all artificial products of human industry, nearly all such materials as have acquired changed conditions or new and specific combinations, whether from the direct action of the human hand, from chemical processes devised and directed by human skill, or by the employment of machinery, are now commonly designated as "manufactured." Mayor and City Council of Baltimore v. Price, 168 Md. 174, 177 A. 160, 163.

Ordinarily does not include building or construction of outdoor structures. Morrison-Knudson Co. v. State Board of Equalization, 58 Wyo. 500, 135 P.2d 927, 931, 932.

MANUFACTURE, n. The process or operation of making wares or any material produced by hand, by machinery or by other agency; anything made from raw materials by the hand, by machinery, or by art. Jones Bros. Co. v. Underkoffier, D.C.Pa., 16 F.Supp. 729, 730. The production of articles for use from raw or prepared materials by giving such materials new forms, qualities, properties or combinations, whether by hand labor or machine. Cain's Coffee Co. v. City of Muskogee, 171 Old. 635, 44 P.2d 50, 52.

In patent law, any useful product made directly by human labor, or by the aid of machinery directed and controlled by human power, and either from raw materials, or from materials worked up into a new form. Also the process by which such products are made or fashioned. Turner v. Quincy Market Cold Storage & Warehouse Co., C.C.A.Mass., 225 F. 41; International Mausoleum Co. v. Sievert, C.C.A.Ohio, 213 F. 225, 227; Riter-Conley Mfg. Co. v. Aiken, C.C.A.Pa., 203 F. 699, 702.

An instrument created by the exercise of mechanical forces and designed for the production of mechanical effects, but not capable, when set in motion, of attaining, by its own operation, to any predetermined results. It receives its rule of action from the external source which furnishes its motive power.

A manufacture requires the constant guidance and control of some separate intelligent agent; a machine operates under the direction of that intelligence with which it was endowed by its inventor when he imposed on it its structural law. The parts of a machine, considered separately from the machine itself, all kinds of tools and fabrics, and every other vendible substance, which is neither a complete machine nor produced by the mere union of ingredients, is included under the title "manufacture." Rob.Pat. § 182.

Domestic manufactures. Generally, manufactures within a state's jurisdiction. Com. v. Giltinan, 64 Pa. 100.

MANUFACTURER. One who by labor, art, or skill transforms raw material into some kind of a finished product or article of trade. Henry v. Markesan State Bank, C.C.A.Minn., 68 F.2d 554,. 557.

MANUFACTURERS LIABILITY DOCTRINE. The foundation for the liability is knowledge of the danger attending use of manufactured or assembled product and negligence in failing to give appropriate warning, or negligence in failing to discover and appreciate the danger, and the probable consequences that injury will proximately result from the use of such product for the purposes for which it was intended. Crane Co. v. Davies,. 242 Ala. 570, 8 So.2d 196, 199.

MANUFACTURING CORPORATION. A corporation engaged in the production of some article, thing, or object, by skill or labor, out of raw material, or from matter which has already been subjected to artificial forces, or to which something has been added to change its natural condition. People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N.Y. 181, 1 N.E. 669. The term does not include a mining corporation. Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 135. But includes a corporation engaged in generation and distribution of electricity. Curry v. Alabama Power Co., 8 So.2d 521, 526, 243 Ala. 53.

MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHMENT. Any place where machinery is used for manufacturing purposes. Lilley v. Eberhardt, Mo., 37 S.W.2d 599, 601.

MANUMISSION. The act of liberating a slave from bondage and giving him freedom. In a wider sense, releasing or delivering one person from the power or control of another. See Fenwick v. Chapman, 9 Pet. 472, 9 L.Ed. 193; State v. Prall, 1 N.J.Law, 4.

MANUMITTERE IDEM EST QUOD EXTRA MANUM VEL POTESTATEM PONERE. Co.Litt. 137. To manumit is the same as to place beyond hand and power.

MANUNG, or MONUNG. In old English law, the district within the jurisdiction of a reeve, apparently so called from his power to exercise therein one of his chief functions, viz., to exact (amanian) all fines.

MANUPES. In old English law, a foot of full and legal measure.

MANUPRETIUM. Lat. In Roman law, the hire or wages of labor; compensation for labor or services performed. See Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 413.

MANURABLE. In old English law, capable of being had or held in hand; capable of manual occupation; capable of being cultivated; capable of being touched; tangible; corporeal. Hale, Anal. § 24.

MANURE. In old English law, to occupy; to use or cultivate; to have in manual occupation; to bestow manual labor upon. Cowell.

MANUS. Lat. A hand.

In the civil law, this word signified power, control, authority, the right of physical coercion, and was often used as synonymous with "potestas."

In old English law, it signified an oath or the person taking an oath; a compurgator.

MANUS MORTUA. A dead hand; mortmain. Spelman.

MANUSCRIPT. A writing; a paper written with the hand; a writing that has not been printed. Parton v. Prang, 18 Fed.Cas. 1275; Leon Loan & Abstract Co. v. Equalization Board, 86 Iowa 127, 53 N.W. 94, 17 L.R.A. 199, 41 Am.St.Rep. 486.

MANUTENENTIA. The old writ of maintenance. Reg.Orig. 182.

IVIANWORTH. In old English law, the price or value of a man's life or head. Cowell.

MANY. The word "many" is defined as consisting of a great number, numerous, not few. Many is a word of very indefinite meaning, and, though it is defined to be numerous and multitudinous, it is also recognized as synonymous with "several", "sundry", "various" and "divers". Goslin v. Kurn, 351 Mo. 395, 173 S.W.2d 79, 87.

MANZIE. In old Scotch law, mayhem; mutilation of the body of a person. Skene.

MAP. A representation of the earth's surface, or of some portion of it, showing the relative position of the parts represented, usually on a flat surface. Webster. "A map is but a transcript of the region which it portrays, narrowed in compass so as to facilitate an understanding of the original." Banker v. Caldwell, 3 Minn. 103 (Gil. 55).

MAR. To make defective; to do serious injury to; to damage greatly; to impair, spoil, ruin; to do physical injury to, especially by cutting off or defacing a part; to mutilate; mangle, disfigure; deface. Maxwell v. City of Buhl, 236 P. 122, 123, 40 Idaho 644; Borden v. Hirsh, 249 Mass. 205, 143 N.E. 912, 914, 33 A.L.R. 526.

MARA. In old records, a mere or moor; a lake, pool, or pond; a bog or marsh that cannot be drained. Cowell; Blount; Spelman.

MARAJUANA PLANT. The plant scientifically known as cannabis indica or cannabis americana, though there possibly may be some slight and unimportant botanical difference between the two, but apparently none in its effect upon the human system. See Mariguana.

MARATHON. Modern meaning is any race or physical endurance contest. Sportatorium, Inc., v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 104 S.W.2d 912, 916.

MARAUDER. "A marauder is defined in the law to be 'one who, while employed in the army as a soldier, commits larceny or robbery in the neighborhood of the camp, or while wandering away from the army.' But in the modern and metaphorical sense of the word, as now sometimes used in common speech, it seems to be applied to a class of persons who are not a part of any regular army, and are not answerable to any military discipline, but who are mere lawless banditti, engaged in plundering, robbery, murder, and all conceivable crimes." Curry v. Collins, 37 Mo. 328.

MARC-BANCO. The name of a piece of money formerly coined at Hamburg. Its value was thirty-five cents.

MARCA. A mark; a coin of the value of 13s. 4d. Spelman.

MARCATUS. The rent of a mark by the year anciently reserved in leases, etc.

MARCH. In Scotch law, a boundary line or border. Bell. The word is also used in composition; as march-dike, march-stone.

MARCHANDISES AVARIEES. In French mercantile law. Damaged goods.

MARCHERS. In old English law, noblemen who lived on the marches of Wales or Scotland, and who, according to Camden, had their private laws, as if they had been petty kings; which were abolished by the statute 27 Hen. VIII. c. 26. Called also "lords marchers." Cowell.

MARCHES. An old English term for boundaries or frontiers, particularly the boundaries and limits between England and Wales, or between England and Scotland, or the borders of the dominions of the crown, or the boundaries of properties in Scotland. Mozley & Whitley.

MARCHES, COURT OF. An abolished tribunal in Wales, where pleas of debt or damages, not above the value of £50, were tried and determined. Cro.Car. 384.

MARCHETA.

In old Scotch law, a custom for the lord of a fee to lie the first night with the bride of his tenant. Abolished by Malcolm III. Spelman; 2 Bl. Comm. 83. A fine paid by the tenant for the remission of such right, originally a mark or half a mark of silver. Spelman.

In old English law, a fine paid for leave to marry, or to bestow a daughter in marriage. Cowell.

MARCHIONESS. A dignity in a woman answerable to that of marquis in a man, conferred either by creation or by marriage with a marquis. Wharton.

MARE. Lat. The sea.

MARE CLAUSUM. The sea closed; that is, not open or free. The title of Selden's great work, intended as an answer to the Mare Liberum of Grotius; in which he undertakes to prove the sea to be capable of private dominion. 1 Kent, Comm. 27.

MARE LIBERUM. The sea free. The title of a work written by Grotius against the Portuguese claim to an exclusive trade to the Indies, through the South Atlantic and Indian oceans; showing that the sea was not capable of private dominion. 1 Kent, Comm. 27.

MARESCALLUS. In old English law, a marshal; a master of the stables; an officer of the exchequer; a military officer of high rank, having powers and duties similar to those of a constable. Du Cange. See Marshal.

A contract whose subject-matter has relation to the navigation of the seas or to trade or commerce to be conducted by navigation or to be done upon the sea or in ports. Edwards v. Elliott, 21 Wall. 553, 22 L.Ed. 487; Doolittle v. Knobeloch, D.C.S.C., 39 F. 40; Holt v. Cummings, 102 Pa. 215, 48 Am.Rep. 199; Rounds v. Cloverport Foundry & Machine Co., 159 Ky. 414, 167 S.W. 384, 387, Ann.Cas.1915D, 40.

MARITIME COURT. A court exercising jurisdiction in maritime causes; one which possesses the powers and jurisdiction of a court of admiralty.

MARITIME INTEREST. An expression equivalent to marine interest (q. v.).

MARITIME JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction in maritime causes; such jurisdiction as belongs to a court of admiralty on the instance side.

MARITIME LAW. The traditional body of rules, precepts, and practices known as the "maritime law". O'Donnell v. Great Lakes Dredge & Dock CO., 318 U.S. 36, 63 S.Ct. 488, 490, 87 L.Ed. 596. That system of law which particularly relates to commerce and navigation, to business transacted at sea or relating to navigation, to ships and shipping, to seamen, to the transportation of persons and property by sea, and to marine affairs generally. The law relating to harbors, ships, and seamen, divided into a variety of departments, such as those about harbors, property of ships, duties and rights of masters and seamen, contracts of affreightment, average, salvage, etc. Wharton; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 572, 22 L.Ed. 654; The Unadilla, D.C.Ill., 73 F. 351.

MARITIME LIEN. A privileged claim on a vessel for some service rendered to it to facilitate its use in navigation, or an injury caused by it in navigable waters, to be carried into effect by legal process in the admiralty court. The Westmoor, D.C.Or., 27 F.2d 886, 887.

It attaches to the vessel and freight, and is to be enforced by an action in rem. Paxson v. Cunningham, C.C.A.1, 63 F. 134, 11 C.C.A. 111.

The word "lien" is used in maritime law not in the strict legal sense in which we understand it in courts of common law, in which case there could be no lien where there was no possession, actual or constructive, but to express, as if by analogy, the nature of claims which neither presuppose nor originate in possession. 22 Eng.Law & Eq. 62. A distinction is sometimes made, however, between qualified maritime liens, which depend upon possession, and absolute maritime liens, which do not require nor depend upon possession. Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L.Ed. 890; 21 Am.Law Reg. 1. A "maritime lien" is a special property right in a ship given to a creditor by law as security for a debt or claim subsisting from the moment the debt arises with right to have the ship sold and debt paid out of proceeds. The Poznan, C.C.A.N.Y., 9 F.2d 838, 842. Such a lien is a proprietary interest or right of property in the vessel itself, and not a cause of action or demand for personal judgment against the owner. The Theodore Roosevelt, D.C.Ohio, 291 F. 453, 461; The River Queen, D.C.Va., 8 F.2d 426, 427.

MARITIME LOAN. A contract or agreement by which one, who is the lender, lends to another, who is the borrower, a certain sum of money, upon condition that if the thing upon which the loan has been made should be lost by any peril of the sea, or vis major, the lender shall not be repaid unless what remains shall be equal to the sum borrowed; and if the thing arrive in safety, or in case it shall not have been injured but by its own defects or the fault of the master or mariners, the borrower shall be bound to return the sum borrowed, together with a certain sum agreed upon as the price of the hazard incurred. Emerig. Mar. Loans, c. 1, s. 2. The Draco, 7 Fed.Cas. 1,042.

MARITIME PROFIT. A term used by French writers to signify any profit derived from a maritime loan.

MARITIME SERVICE. In admiralty law, a service rendered upon the high seas or a navigable river, and which has some relation to commerce or navigation,—some connection with a vessel employed in trade, with her equipment, her preservation, or the preservation of her cargo or crew. Thackarey v. The Farmer, 23 F.Cas. 877; The Atlantic, D.C.S.C., 53 F. 609; Newham v. Chile Exploration Co., 133 N.E. 120, 232 N.Y. 37, 25 A.L.R. 1018.

MARITIME STATE, in English law, consists of the officers and mariners of the British navy, who are governed by express and permanent laws, or the articles of the navy, established by act of parliament.

MARITIME TORT. Civil wrongs committed on navigable waters. Berwind-White Coal Mining Co. v. City of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 135 F.2d 443, 446. The term is never applied to a tort committed upon land, though relating to maritime matters. The Plymouth, 3 Wall. 33, 18 L.Ed. 125; Holmes v. Oregon & C. Ry. Co., D.C.Or., 5 F. 77; Butler v. Robins Dry Dock & Repair Co., 147 N.E. 235, 236, 240 N.Y. 23; Kuhlman v. W. & A. Fletcher Co., C.C.A.N.J., 20 F.2d 465, 466.

MARITUS. Lat. A husband; a married man. Calvin.

MARK. A character, usually in the form of a cross, made as a substitute for his signature by a person who cannot write, in executing a conveyance or other legal document.

It is commonly made as follows : A third person writes the name of the marksman, leaving a blank space between the Christian name and surname; in this space the latter traces the mark, or crossed lines, and above the mark is written "his," (or "her,") and below it, "mark."

The sign, writing, or ticket put upon manufactured goods to distinguish them from others, appearing thus in the compound, "trade-mark."

A token, evidence, or proof; as in the phrase "a mark of fraud."

A weight used in several parts of Europe, and for several commodities, especially gold and silver. When gold and silver are sold by the mark, it is divided into twenty-four carats.

A money of accounts in England, and in some other countries a coin. The English mark is two-thirds of a pound sterling, or 13s. 4d.; and the Scotch mark is of equal value in Scotch money of account. Enc.Amer.

The word is sometimes used as another form of "marque," a license of reprisals.

In early Teutonic and English law, a species of village community, being the lowest unit in the political system; one of the forms of the gens or clan, variously known as the "mark," "gemeinde," "commune," or "parish." Also the land held in common by such a community. The union of several such village communities and their marks, or common lands, forms the next higher political union, the hundred. Freem. Compar. Politics, 116, 117.

Demi-mark. Half a mark; a sum of money which was anciently required to be tendered in a writ of right, the effect of such tender being to put the demandant, in the first instance, upon proof of the seisin as stated in his count; that is, to prove that the seisin was in the king's reign there stated. Rosc. Real Act. 216.

High and low water-mark. See Water-Mark.

Mark banco. See Marc-Banco.

MARKEPENNY. A penny anciently paid at the town of Maldon by those who had gutters laid or made out of their houses into the streets. Wharton.

MARKET. Place of commercial activity in which articles are bought and sold. Zemel v. Commercial Warehouses, 132 N.J.L. 341, 40 A.2d 642, 643. The region in which any commodity can be sold; the geographical or economic extent of commercial demand. State v. Auclair, 110 Vt. 147, 4 A.2d 107, 116. A public time and appointed place of buying and selling; also purchase and sale. Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 419, 75 Am.Dec. 282; Strickland v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 154 Pa. 348, 26 A. 431, 21 L.R.A. 224; State v. Burkett, 119 Md. 609, 87 A. 514, 518, Ann.Cas.1914D, 345. It differs from the forum, or market of antiquity, which was a public market-place on one side only, or during one part of the day only, the other sides being occupied by temples, theaters, courts of justice, and other public buildings. Wharton.

The liberty, privilege, or franchise by which a town holds a market, which can only be by royal grant or immemorial usage. In re Certain Lands on North Shore of Harlem River in City of New York, 127 Misc.Rep. 710, 217 N.Y.S. 544, 557.

By the term "market" is also understood the demand there is for any particular article; as, "the cotton market in Europe is dull."

Clerk of the Market. See Clerk of the Market.

Public market. A market which is not only open to the resort of the general public i s purchasers, but also available to all who wish to offer their wares for sale, stalls, stands, or places being allotted to those who apply, to the limits of the capacity of the market, on payment of fixed rents or fees. American Live Stock Commission Co. v. Chicago Live Stock Exchange, 143 Ill. 210, 32 N.E. 274, 18 L.R.A. 190; State v. Fernandez, 39 La.Ann. 538, 2 So. 233.

MARKET GELD. The toll of a market.

MARKET OVERT. In English law, an open and public market. The market-place or spot of ground set apart by custom for the sale of particular goods is, in the country, the only market overt; but in London every shop in which goods are exposed publicly to sale is market overt, for such things only as the owner professes to trade in. 2 B1.Comm. 449; Godb. 131; 5 Coke, 83. Fawcett v. Osborn, 32 Ill. 426, 83 Am.Dec. 278.

MARKET PRICE. The price at which a seller is ready and willing to sell and a buyer ready and willing to buy in the ordinary course of trade. Bourjois, Inc., v. McGowan, D.C.N.Y., 12 F.Supp. 787, 790. The price actually given in current market dealings, and actual price at which given commodity is currently sold, or has recently been sold in open market, that is, not at forced sale, but in the usual and ordinary course of trade and competition between sellers and buyers equally free to bargain, as established by records of late sales. Wall v. United Gas Public Service Co., 178 La. 908, 152 So. 561, 563.

The actual price at which the given commodity is currently sold, or has recently been sold, in the open market, that is, not at a forced sale, but in the usual and ordinary course of trade and competition, between sellers and buyers equally free to bargain, as established by records of late sales. Lovejoy v. Michels, 88 Mich. 15, 49 N.W. 901, 13 L.R.A. 770; Sanford v. Peck, 63 Conn. 486, 27 A. 1057; McGarry v. Superior Portland Cement Co.,

95 Wash. 412, 163 P. 928, 929, Ann.Cas.1918A, 572. The term also means, when price at the place of exportation is in view, the price at which articles are sold and purchased, clear of every charge but such as is laid upon it at the time of sale. Goodwin v. United States, 2 Wash.C.C. 493, F.Cas.No.5,554.

For "Fair Market Price," see that title.

MARKET TOWNS. Those towns which are entitled to hold markets. 1 Steph.Comm., 7th Ed., 130.

MARKET VALUE. The price property would command in the market. State Highway Board v. Bridges, 60 Ga.App. 240, 3 S.E.2d 907, 910.

For "Fair and Reasonable Market Value" and "Fair Cash Market Value", see those titles.

The market value of an article or piece of property is the price which it might be expected to bring if offered for sale in a fair market; not the price which might be obtained on a sale at public auction or a sale forced by the necessities of the owner, but such a price as would be fixed by negotiation and mutual agreement, after ample time to find a purchaser, as between a vendor who is willing (but not compelled) to sell and a purchaser who desires to buy but is not compelled to take the particular article or piece of property. Winnipiseogee Lake, etc., Co. v. Gilford, 67 N.H. 514, 35 A. 945; Muser v. Magone, 155 U.S. 240, 15 S. Ct. 77, 39 L. Ed. 135; Little Rock Junction Ry. v. Woodruff, 49 Ark. 381, 5 S.W. 792, 4 Am.St.Rep. 51; William H. Lowe Estate Co. v. Lederer Realty Corporation, 35 R.I. 352, 86 A. 881, 883, Ann.Cas.1916A, 341.

Same meanipg as "reasonable market value," or "fair market value." Sanders v. Pinney, 103 Wash. 162, 174 P. 471, 472; Hubbell v. City of Des Moines, 166 Iowa 581, 147 N.W. 908, 910, Ann.Cas.1916E, 592.

MARKETABLE. Such things as may be sold in the market; those for which a buyer may be found; merchantable. Hinton v. Martin, 151 Ark. 343, 236 S.W. 267, 268; Pryor v. Fruit Distributors' Service Co., 73 Cal.App. 467, 238 P. 825, 827.

MARKETABLE TITLE. A "marketable title" to land is such a title as a court of equity, when asked to decree specific performance of the contract of sale, will compel the vendee to accept as sufficient. It is said to be not merely a defensible title, but a title which is free from plausible or reasonable objections. Austin v. Barnum, 52 Minn. 136, 53 N.W. 1132; Brokaw v. Duffy, 165 N.Y. 391, 59 N.E. 196; Wilson v. Korte, 91 Wash. 30, 157 P. 47, 48.

Such a title as is free from reasonable doubt in law and in fact; not merely a title valid in fact, but one which readily can be sold or mortgaged to a reasonably prudent purchaser or mortgagee; one acceptable to a reasonable purchaser, informed as to the facts and their legal meaning, willing tc-:, perform his contract, in the exercise of that prudence which business men usually bring to bear on such transactions; one under which a purchaser may have quiet and peaceful enjoyment of the property; one that is free from material defects, or grave doubts, and reasonably free from litigation. Myrick v. Austin, 141 Kan. 778, 44 P.2d 266, 268.

MARKSMAN. In practice and conveyancing. One who makes his mark; a person who cannot write, and only makes his mark in executing instruments. Arch.N.Pr. 13; 2 Chit. 92.

MARKUSH DOCTRINE. The Noctrine permits an applicant for a patent where there is no known subgeneric term which would include elements which applicant found useful and exclude those which are not, to employ a generic term limited to the elements found to be operative and recognizes as unobjectionable as to form, claims containing a coined subgeneric expression. In re Swenson, C.C.P.A., 132 F.2d 336.

MARLBRIDGE, STATUTE OF. An English statute enacted in 1267 (52 Hen. III.) at Marlbridge, (now called "Marlborough,") where parliament was then sitting. It related to land tenures, and to procedure, and to unlawful and excessive distresses.

MARQUE AND REPRISAL, LETTERS OF. These words, "marque" and "reprisal," are frequently used as synonymous, but, taken in their strict etymological sense, the latter signifies a "taking in return;" the former, the passing the frontiers (marches) in order to such taking. Letters of marque and reprisal are grantable, by the law of nations, whenever the subjects of one state are oppressed and injured by those of another, and justice is denied by that state to which the oppressor belongs; and the party to whom these letters are granted may then seize the bodies or the goods of the subjects of the state to which the offender belongs, until satisfaction be made, wherever they happen to be found. Reprisals are to be granted only in case of a clear and open denial of justice. At the present day, in consequence partly of treaties and partly of the practice of nations, the making of reprisals is confined to the seizure of commercial property on the high seas by public cruisers, or by private cruisers specially authorized thereto. Brown.

MARQUE, LAW OF. A sort of law of reprisal, which entitles him who has received any wrong from another and cannot get ordinary justice to take the shipping or goods of the wrong-doer, where he can find them within his own bounds or precincts, in satisfaction of the wrong. Cowell; Brown.

MARQUIS, or MARQUESS. In English law, one of the second order of nobility; next in order to a duke.

MARQUISATE. The seigniory of a marquis.

MARRIAGE. Marriage, as distinguished from the agreement to marry and from the act of becoming married, is the civil status, condition, or relation of one man and one woman united in law for life, for the discharge to each other and the community of the duties legally incumbent on those whose association is founded on the distinction of sex. 1 Bish.Mar. & Div. § 3; Collins v. Hoag & Rollins, 121 Neb. 716, 238 N.W. 351, 355; Allen v. Allen, 73 Conn. 54, 46 A. 242, 49 L.R.A. 142.

A contract, according to the form prescribed by law, by which a man and woman, capable of entering into such contract, mutually engage with each other to live their whole lives together in the state of union which ought to exist between a husband and wife. Shelf. Mar. & Div. 1; Seuss v. Schukat, 358 Ill. 27, 192 N.E. 668, 671, 95 A.L.R. 1461.

The word also signifies the act, ceremony, or formal proceeding by which persons take each other for husband and wife. Davis v. Davis, 119 Conn. 194, 175 A. 574, 575.

In old English law, marriage is used in the sense of "maritagium," (q. v.,) or the feudal right enjoyed by the lord or guardian in chivalry of disposing of his ward in marriage.

Avail of marriage. See that title.

Consensual marriage. See that title.

Common-law marriage. See Common Law.

Fleet marriages. There were in the neighborhood of the Fleet prison about sixty marriage houses, some of which were public houses and others not. They were known by having a sign-board, with joined hands, in addition to the public house sign. At the doors of these houses persons called Pliers solicited the passers-by to come in and be married, and in these houses persons who were, or pretended to be, clergymen performed the marriage ceremony and made entries in registers that were kept at the respective houses. There is little doubt that many entries had false dates, that persons who were married personated others, and that women who wished to plead a plea of coverture or hide their shame were married to men who, for a trifling gratuity, married any woman who would pay them, though they had previously married others. Such marriages also took place in the neighborhood of the King's Bench prison, at the Savoy, in the Mint, in the Borough, and at the Mayfair Chapel.

It is said in 1 Peake N.P.C. 303, that a marriage in the Fleet was considered at that time good and legal. In 13 Carr. & P. 581 (34 E.C.L.R.), Patteson, J., said: "I shall not receive the Fleet Registry in evidence for any purpose whatever." They were refused in 1 Peake N.P.C. 303. A collection of over a thousand Fleet registers have been deposited in the Registry, of the Bishop of London.

Jactitation of marriage. See Jactitation.

Manus marriage. A form of marriage in early Rome; it formed a relation called manus (hand) and brought the wife into the husband's power, placing her as to legal rights in the position of a daughter. Bryce, Marr. & Divorce, in 3 Sel. Essays in Anglo-Amer.L.H. 787.

Mixed marriage. A marriage between persons of different nationalities; or, more particularly, between persons of different racial origin; as between a white person and a negro or an Indian.

Morganatic marriage. The lawful and inseparable conjunction of a man, of noble or Illustrious birth, with a woman of inferior station, upon condition that neither the wife nor her children shall partake of the titles, arms, or dignity of the husband, or succeed to his inheritance, but be contented with a certain allowed rank assigned to them by the morganatic contract. But since these restrictions relate only to the rank of the parties and succession to property, without affecting the nature of a matrimonial engagement, it must be considered as a just marriage. The marriage ceremony was regularly performed; the union was indissoluble; the children legitimate. Wharton.

Plural marriage. In general, any bigamous or polygamous union, but particularly, a second or subsequent marriage of a man who already has one wife living under system of polygamy. See Freil v. Wood, 1 Utah 165.

Scotch marriage. A marriage contracted without any formal solemnization or religious ceremony, by the mere mutual agreement of the parties per verba de prcesenti in the presence of witnesses, recognized as valid by the Scottish law.

MARRIAGE ACT, ROYAL. An act of 12 Geo. III, c. 1 (1772), by which members of the royal family are forbidden to marry without the king's consent, or except on certain onerous conditions.

MARRIAGE ARTICLES. Articles of agreement between parties contemplating marriage, intended as preliminary to a formal marriage settlement, to be drawn after marriage. Ath.Mar.Sett. 92.

MARRIAGE BROKERAGE. The act by which a third person, for a consideration, negotiates a marriage between a man and woman. The money paid for such services is also known by this name. Hellen v. Anderson, 83 Ill.App. 509; White v. Equitable Nuptial Ben. Union, 76 Ala. 251, 52 Am. Rep. 325.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY. The form, religious or civil, for the solemnization of a marriage.

MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE. An instrument which certifies a marriage, and is executed by the person officiating at the marriage; it is not intended to be signed by the parties. Spencer v. Spencer, 84 Misc.Rep. 264, 147 N.Y.S. 111, 113.

MARRIAGE CONSIDERATION. The consideration furnished by an intended marriage of two persons. It is the highest consideration known to the law.

MARRIAGE LICENSE. A license or permission granted by public authority to persons who intend to intermarry, usually addressed to the minister or magistrate who is to perform the ceremony, or, in general terms, to any one authorized to solemnize marriages. By statute in some jurisdictions, it is made an essential prerequisite to the lawful solemnization of the marriage.

MARRIAGE—NOTICE BOOK. A book kept, in England, by the registrar, in which applications for and issue of registrar's licenses to marry are recorded.

MARRIAGE PER VERBA DE PRAESENTI. To constitute such a marriage, there must be an agreement to become husband and wife immediately from the time when the mutual consent is given. Pitney v. Pitney, 151 Kan. 848, 101 P.2d 933, 935.

MARRIAGE PORTION. Dowry; a sum of money or other property which is given to or settled on a woman on her marriage. In re Croft, 162 Mass. 22, 37 N.E. 784.

MARRIAGE PROMISE. Betrothal; engagement to intermarry with another. Perry v. Orr, 35 N. J.L. 296.

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT. A written agreement in the nature of a conveyance, called a "settlement," which is made in contemplation of a proposed marriage and in consideration thereof, either by the parties about to intermarry, or one of them, or by a parent or relation on their behalf, by which the title to certain property is settled, i. e., fixed or limited to a prescribed course of succession; the object being, usually, to provide for the wife and children. Thus, the estate might be limited to the husband and issue, or to the wife and issue, or to husband and wife for their joint lives, remainder to the survivor for life, remainder over to the issue, or otherwise. Such settlements may also be made after marriage, in which case they are called "postnuptial."

MARRIED WOMAN. A woman who has a husband living and not divorced; a feme covert.

MARSHAL. In old English law, the title borne by several officers of state and of the law, of whom the most important were the following: (1) The earl-marshal, who presided in the court of chivalry; (2) the marshal of the king's house, or knight-marshal, whose special authority was in the king's palace, to hear causes between members of the household, and punish faults committed within the verge; (3) the marshal of the king's bench prison, who had the custody of that jail; (4) the marshal of the exchequer, who had the custody of the king's debtors; (5) the marshal of the judge of assize, whose duty was to swear in the grand jury.

In American law, an officer pertaining to the organization of the federal judicial system, whose duties are similar to those of a sheriff. He is to execute the process of the United States courts within the district for which he is appointed, etc.

Also, in some of the states, this is the name of an officer of police, in a city or borough, having powers and duties corresponding generally to those of a constable or sheriff.

MARSHAL OF THE QUEEN'S BENCH. An officer who had the custody of the queen's bench prison. The St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 22, abolished this office, and substituted an officer called "keeper of the queen's prison."

MARSHALING. Arranging, ranking, or disposing in order; particularly, in the case of a group or series -of conflicting claims or interests, arranging them in such an order of sequence, or so directing the manner of their satisfaction, as shall secure justice to all persons concerned and the largest possible measure of satisfaction to each. See sub-titles infra.

MARSHALING ASSETS. In equity, the arranging or ranking of assets in the due order of administration. Such an arrangement of the different funds under administration as shall enable all the parties having equities therein to receive their due proportions, notwithstanding any intervening interests, liens, or other claims of particular persons to prior satisfaction out of a portion of these funds. In re Van Zandt's Estate, 142 Misc. 663, 255 N.Y.S. 359, 366. The arrangement or ranking' of assets in a certain order towards the payment of debts. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 558; 4 Kent, Comm. 421. The arrangement of assets or claims so as to secure the proper application of the assets to the various claims; especially when there are two classes of assets, and some creditors can enforce their claims against both, and others against only one, and the creditors of the former class are compelled to exhaust the assets against which they alone have a claim before having recourse to other assets, thus providing for the settlement of as many claims as possible. Pub.St.Mass. p. 1292.

MARSHALING LIENS. The ranking or ordering of several estates or parcels of land, for the satisfaction of a judgment or mortgage to which they are all liable, though successively conveyed away by the debtor. The rule is that, where lands subject to the lien of a judgment or mortgage have been sold or incumbered by the owner at different times to different purchasers, the various tracts are liable to the satisfaction of the lien in the inverse order of their alienation or incumbrance, the land last sold being first chargeable. 1 Black, Judgm. § 440.

MARSHALING REMEDIES. The basis for "marshaling of remedies" is that where one creditor has security on two funds of common debtor and another creditor has security on only one of such funds, second creditor has right in equity to compel first creditor to resort to the other fund, if it is necessary for satisfaction of both creditors and will not prejudice rights or interests of party entitled to double fund, do injustice to debtor, or operate inequitably on other persons' interests. Greenwich Trust Co. v. Tyson, 129 Conn. 211, 27 A.2d 166, 174.

MARSHALING SECURITIES. An equitable practice, which consists in so ranking or arranging classes of creditors, with respect to the assets of the common debtor, as to provide for satisfaction of the greatest number of claims. The process is this: Where one class of creditors have liens or securities on two funds, while another class of creditors can resort to only one of those funds, equity will compel the doubly-secured creditors to first exhaust that fund which will leave the single security of the other creditors intact. See 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 633; Dilworth v. Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, 170 Miss. 373, 154 So. 535, 540, 92 A. L.R. 1076.

MARSHALSEA. In English law, a prison belonging to the king's bench. It has now been consolidated with others, under the name of the "King's Prison."

MARSHALSEA, COURT OF. In English law, the court or seat of the marshal. A court originally held before the steward and marshal of the king's house, instituted to administer justice between the king's domestic servants. It had jurisdiction of all trespasses committed within the verge of the king's court, where one of the parties was of the royal household; and of all debts and contracts, when both parties were of that establishment. It was abolished by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 101, § 13. Mozley & Whitley.

MART. A place of public traffic or sale.

MARTE SUO DECURRERE. Lat. To run by its own force. A term applied in the civil law to a suit when it ran its course to the end without any impediment. Calvin.

MARTIAL LAW. Exists when military authorities carry on government or exercise various degrees of control over civilians or civilian authorities in domestic territory. Ochikubo v. Bonesteel, D.C.Cal., 60 F.Supp. 916, 928, 929, 930. A system of law, obtaining only in time of actual war and growing out of the exigencies thereof, arbitrary in its character, and depending only on the will of the commander of an army, which is established and administered in a place or district of hostile territory held in belligerent possession, or, sometimes, in places occupied or pervaded by insurgents or mobs, and which suspends all existing civil laws, as well as the civil authority and the ordinary administration of justice. In re Ezeta, D. C.Cal., 62 F. 972; Corn. v. Shortall, 206 Pa. 165, 55 A. 952, 65 L.R.A. 193. See, also, Military Law.

"Martial law, which is built upon no settled principles, but is entirely arbitrary in its decisions, is in truth and reality no law, but something indulged rather than allowed as a law. The necessity of order and discipline in an army is the only thing which can give it countenance, and therefore it ought not to be permitted in time of peace, when the king's courts are open for all persons to receive justice according to the laws of the land." 1 Bl. Comm. 413.

Martial law is neither more nor less than the will of the general who commands the army. It overrides and suppresses all existing civil laws, civil officers, and civil authorities, by the arbitrary exercise of military power; and every citizen or subject—in other words, the entire population of the country, within the confines of its power—is subjected to the mere will or caprice of the commander. He holds the lives, liberty, and property of all in the palm of his hand. Martial law is regulated by no known or established system or code of laws, as it is over and above all of them. The commander is the legislator, judge, and executioner. In re Egan, 5 Blatchf. 321, F.Cas. No.4,303.

MARTINMAS. The feast of St. Martin of Tours, on the 11th of November; sometimes corrupted into "Martilmas" or "Martlemas." It is the third of the four cross quarter-days of the year. Wharton.

MARUS. In old Scotch law, a maire; an officer or executor of summons. Otherwise called "prceco regis." Skene.

MASAGIUM. L. Lat. A messuage.

MASH. "Mash" means crushed malt, meal, rye, and the like steeped and mixed in hot water to form wort; a mixture of grain, meal, or the like, and hot water fed to animals; to subject crushed malt to action of hot water by heating and stirring to prepare extract known as wort; to convert into a mass; to reduce to soft pulpy state by heating or pressure; to bruise; to crush. Whisnant v. State, 39 Okl.Cr. 214, 264 P. 837, 839.

MASHGIACH. A qualified supervisor designated by rabbinical authority to supervise the receipt and handling of kosher meat. People on Complaint of Waller v. Jacob Branfman & Son, 147 Misc. 290, 263 N.Y.S. 629.

MASOCHISM. [From Leopold von Sacher-Masoch, a nineteenth-century Austrian novelist and historian.] A form of perversion in which sexual pleasure is heightened when one is beaten and maltreated at the hands of the other party; the opposite of sadism. Stedman's Med.Dict. (11th Ed.1930). Sexual perversion, in which a member of one sex takes delight in being dominated, even to the extent of violence or cruelty, by one of the other sex. Dunglison's Med.Dict. (1893), quoted in Murray's (Oxford) New English Dict.

MASON AND DIXON'S LINE. The boundary line between Pennsylvania on the north and Maryland on the south, celebrated before the extinction of slavery as the line of demarcation between the slave and the free states. It was run by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, commissioners in a dispute between the Penn Proprietors and Lord Baltimore. The line was carried 244 miles from the Delaware river where it was stopped by Indians. A resurvey was made in 1849, and in 1900 a new survey was authorized by the two states.

MASS PICKETING. The use of a large number of pickets. Lilly Dache, Inc., v. Rose, Sup., 28 N. Y.S.2d 303, 305.

MASS STRIKE. The striking or ceasing to work by concerted action of all working classes, thus paralyzing and bringing to an end government and its functions. People v. Gitlow, 234 N.Y. 132, 136 N.E. 317, 320.

MASSA. In civil law, a mass; an unwrought substance, such as gold or silver, before it is wrought into cups or other articles. Dig. 47, 2, 52, 14; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, §§ 17, 22.

MASSACHISM. See Masochism.

MASSACHUSETTS RULE. As regards sending out checks through banks for collection, the "Massachusetts rule" is that each bank that receives the item acts as an agent for the depositor; but in some other states, the "New York rule" prevails, under which only the bank first receiving the item is responsible to, or is the agent of, the depositor, the other banks being the agent of the bank, in the process of the collection. People's Gin Co. v. Canal Bank & Trust Co., 168 Miss. 630, 144 So. 858, 860.

MASSACHUSETTS TRUST. A business organization wherein property is conveyed to trustees and managed for benefit of holders of certificates like corporate stock certificates. Enochs & Flowers v. Roell, 170 Miss. 44, 154 So. 299.

MASSES. Religious ceremonials or observances of the Roman Catholic Church.

MAST. To fatten with mast (acorns, etc.). 1 Leon. 186.

MAST-SELLING. In old English law, the practice of selling the goods of dead seamen at the mast. Held void. 7 Mod. 141.

MASTER. A principal who employs another to perform service in his affairs and who controls or has right to control physical conduct of other in performance of the service. King v. Ransburg, 111 Ind.App. 523, 39 N.E.2d 822, 829.

One having authority; one who rules, directs, instructs, or superintends; a head or chief; an instructor; an employer. Applied to several judicial officers. See infra.

In Scotland, the title of the eldest son of a viscount or baron. Cent. Dict.

Special master. A master in chancery appointed to act as the representative of the court in some particular act or transaction, as, to make a sale of property under a decree. Guaranty Trust, etc., Co. v. Delta & Pine Land Co., C.C.A.Miss., 104 F. 5, 43 C.C.A. 396; Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U.S. 349, 12 S.Ct. 887, 36 L.Ed. 732.

Taxing masters. Officers of the English supreme court, who examine and allow or disallow items in bills of costs.

MASTER AND SERVANT. The relation of master and servant exists where one person, for pay or other valuable consideration, enters into the service of another and devotes to him his personal labor for an agreed period. Sweet.

It usually contemplates employer's right to prescribe end and direct means and methods of doing work. Holleman v. Taylor, 200 N.C. 618, 158 S.E. 88, 89.

MASTER AT COMMON LAW. The title of officers of the English superior courts of common law appointed to record the proceedings of the court to which they belong; to superintend the issue of writs and the formal proceedings in an action; to receive and account for the fees charged on legal proceedings, and moneys paid into court. There are five to each court. They are appointed under St. 7 Wm. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 30, passed in 1837. Mozley & Whitley.

MASTER IN CHANCERY. An officer of a court of chancery who acts as an assistant to the judge or chancellor. His office is to inquire into such matters as may be referred to him by the court, examine causes, take testimony, take accounts, compute damages, etc., reporting his findings to the court in such shape that a decree may be made; also to take oaths and affidavits and acknowledgments of deeds. In modern practice, many of the functions of a master are performed by clerks, commissioners, auditors, and referees, and in some jurisdictions the office has been superseded. Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U.S. 512, 9 S.Ct. 355, 32 L.Ed. 764; Schuchardt v. People, 99 Ill. 501, 39 Am.Rep. 34.

MASTER IN LUNACY. In English law, the masters in lunacy are judicial officers appointed by the lord chancellor for the purpose of conducting inquiries into the state of mind of persons alleged to be lunatics. Such inquiries usually take place before a jury. 2 Steph.Comm. 511-513.

MASTER OF A SHIP. In maritime law, the commander of a merchant vessel, who has the chief charge of her government and navigation and the command of the crew, as well as the general care and control of the vessel and cargo, as the representative and confidential agent of the owner. He is commonly called the "captain." Martin v. Farnsworth, 33 N.Y.Super.Ct. 260; Hubbell v. Denison, 20 Wend., N.Y., 181.

MASTER OF THE CROWN OFFICE. The king's coroner and attorney in the criminal department of the court of king's bench, who prosecutes at the relation of some private person or common informer, the crown being the nominal prosecutor. St. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 20; Wharton.

MASTER OF THE FACULTIES. In English law, an officer under the archbishop, who grants licenses and dispensations, etc.

MASTER OF THE HORSE. In English law, the third great officer of the royal household, being next to the lord steward and lord chamberlain. He has the privilege of making use of any horses, footmen, or pages belonging to the royal stables.

MASTER OF THE MINT. In English law, an officer who receives bullion for coinage, and pays for it, and superintends everything belonging to the mint. He is usually called the "warden of the mint." It is provided by St. 33 Vict. c. 10, § 14, that the chancellor of the exchequer for the time being shall be the master of the mint.

MASTER OF THE ORDNANCE. In English law, a great officer, to whose care all the royal ordnance and artillery were committed.

MASTER OF THE ROLLS. In English law, an assistant judge of the court of chancery, who holds a separate court ranking next to that of the lord chancellor, and has the keeping of the rolls and grants which pass the great seal, and the records of the chancery.

He was originally appointed only for the superintendence of the writs and records appertaining to the common-law department of the court, and is still properly the chief of the masters in chancery. 3 Steph.Comm. 417. Under the act constituting the supreme court of judicature, the master of the rolls becomes a judge of the high court of justice and ex officio a member of the court of appeal. The same act, however, provides for the abolition of this office, under certain conditions, when the next vacancy occurs. See 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, §§ 5, 31, 32.

MASTERS OF THE SUPREME COURT. In English law, officials deriving their title from Jud. (Officers') Act 1879, and being, or filling the places of, the sixteen masters of the common-law courts, the queen's coroner and attorney, the master of the crown office, the two record and writ clerks, and the three associates. Wharton.

MASTER OF THE TEMPLE. The chief ecclesiastical functionary of the Temple Church.

MASTER'S REPORT. The formal report or statement made by a master in chancery of his decision on any question referred to him, or of any facts or action he has been directed to ascertain or take.

MATER-FAMILIAS. Lat. In civil law, the mother or mistress of a family. A chaste woman, married or single. Calvin.

MATERIA. Lat. In Civil law, materials; as distinguished from species, or the form given by labor and skill. Dig. 41, 1, 7, 7-12; Fleta lib. 3, c. 2, § 14.

Materials (wood) for building, as distinguished from "lignum." Dig. 32, 55, pr.

In English law, matter; substance; subject-matter. 3 B1.Comm. 322.

MATERIAL. Important; more or less necessary; having influence or effect; going to the merits; having to do with matter, as distinguished from form.

Representation relating to matter which is so substantial and important as to influence party to whom made is "material." McGuire v. Gunn, 133 Kan. 422, 300 P. 654, 656. Any misrepresentation bringing about issuance of policy on reduced premium rate is "material." Brooks Transp. Co. v. Merchants' Mut. Casualty Co., 6 W.W.Harr. 40, 171 A. 207.

MATERIAL ALLEGATION. An allegation is said to be material when it forms a substantive part of the case presented by the pleading. A material allegation in a pleading is one essential to the claim or defense, and which could not be stricken from the pleading without leaving it insufficient. Lusk v. Perkins, 48 Ark. 247, 2 S.W. 847; Wheeler v. Hurley, 49 Nev. 70, 236 P. 559, 560. A material alteration in any written instrument is one which changes its tenor, or its legal meaning and effect; one which causes it to speak a language different in effect from that which it originally spoke. White v. Harris, 69 S.C. 65, 48 S.E. 41, 104 Am.St.Rep. 791; Foxworthy v. Colby, 64 Neb. 216, 89 N.W. 800, 62 L.R.A. 393.

MATERIAL ALTERATION. Alteration of instrument is "material" if legal effect thereof is changed notwithstanding triviality of change or whether it may be beneficial or detrimental to party to be charged on contract. Cook v. Parks, 46 Ga.App. 749, 169 S.E. 208, 210.

MATERIAL EVIDENCE. Such as is relevant and goes to the substantial matters in dispute, or has a legitimate and effective influence or bearing on the decision of the case. Porter v. Valentine, 18 Misc. 213, 41 N.Y.S. 507; Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. George, 52 Okl. 432, 153 P. 116, 119. "Materiality," with reference to evidence does not have the same signification as "relevancy." Pangburn v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 56 S.W. 72, 73.

MATERIAL FACT. (In contracts.) One which constitutes substantially the consideration of the contract, or without which it would not have been made. Lyons v. Stephens, 45 Ga. 143.

(In pleading and practice.) One which is essential to the case, defense, application, etc., and without which it could not be supported. Sandheger v. Hosey, 26 W.Va. 223; Davidson v. Hackett, 49 Wis. 186, 5 N.W. 459; Hansen v. Sandvik, 128 Wash. 60, 222 P. 205, 207.

One which tends to establish any of issues raised. Sherwood Bros. v. Yellow Cab Co. of Philadelphia, 283 Pa. 488, 129 A. 563, 564. The "material facts" of an issue of fact are such as are necessary to determine the issue. Woolman Const. Co. v. Sampson, 219 Mich. 125, 188 N.W. 420, 422.

(In insurance.) A fact which, if communicated to the agent or insurer, would induce him either to decline the insurance altogether, or not accept it unless a higher premium is paid. Berry v. Equitable Fire & Marine Ins. Co., Mo.App., 263 S.W. 884, 886; Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Dossett, Tex.Civ.App., 265 S.W. 259, 262. One which necessarily has some bearing on the subject-matter. Wittels Loan & Mercantile Co. v. American Cent. Ins. Co., Mo. App., 273 S.W. 1084, 1086. A fact which increases the risk, or which, if disclosed, would have been a fair reason for demanding a higher premium; any fact the knowledge or ignorance of which would naturally influence the insurer in making or refusing the contract, or in estimating the degree and character of the risk, or in fixing the rate. Boggs v. Insurance Co., 30 Mo. 68; Clark v. Insurance Co., 40 N.H. 338, 77 Am.Dec. 721; Murphy v. Insurance Co., 205 Pa. 444, 55 A. 19; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 19 C.C.A. 286, 72 F. 413, 38 L.R.A. 33.

MATERIALMAN. A person who has furnished materials used in the construction or repair of a building, structure, or vessel. Hihn-Hammond Lumber Co. v. Elsom, 171 Cal. 570, 154 P. 12, 13, Ann.Cas.1917C, 798; Royal Indemnity Co. v. Day & Maddock Co., 114 Ohio St. 58, 150 N.E. 426, 427, 44 A.L.R. 374.

MATERIALS. The substance or matter of which anything is made. Mutual Lumber Co. v. Sheppard, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 494, 498. Matter furnished for the erection of a house, ship, or other structure which enters into and becomes a part thereof. Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. 293; Standard Oil Co. v. Detroit Fidelity & Surety Co., 24 Ohio App. 237, 157 N.E. 418, 420; Royal Indemnity Co. v. Day & Maddock Co., 114 Ohio St. 58, 150 N.E. 426, 427, 44 A.L.R. 374; Fay v. Bankers' Surety Co., 125 Minn. 211, 146 N.W. 359, 360, Ann.Cas.1915C, 688.

MATERTERA. Lat. In civil law, a maternal aunt; a mother's sister. Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fol. 68b.

MATERTERA MAGNA. A great aunt; a grandmother's sister, (avice soror.) Dig. 38, 10, 10, 15.

MATERTERA MAJOR. A greater aunt; a great-grandmother's sister, (proavice soror;) a father's or mother's great-aunt, (patris vel matris matertera magna.) Dig. 38, 10, 10, 16.

MATERTERA MAXIMA. A greatest aunt; a great-great-grandmother's sister, (abavice soror;) a father's or mother's greater aunt, (patris vel matris matertera major.) Dig. 38, 10, 10, 17.

MATHEMATICAL EVIDENCE. Demonstrative evidence; such as establishes its conclusions with absolute necessity and certainty. It is used in contradistinction to moral evidence.

MATIMA. A godmother.

MATRICIDE. The murder of a mother; or one who has slain his mother.

MATRICIJLA. In civil and old English law, a register of the admission of officers and persons entered into any body or society, whereof a list was made. Hence those who are admitted to a college or university are said to be "matriculated." Also a kind of almshouse, which had revenues appropriated to it, and was usually built near the church, whence the name was given to the church itself. Wharton.

MATRICULATE. To enroll; to enter in a register; specifically, to enter or admit to membership in a body or society, particularly in a college or university, by enrolling the name in a register; to go through the process of admission to membership, as by examination and enrollment, in a society or college. State v. Regents of University System of Georgia, 179 Ga. 210, 175 S.E. 567.

MATRIMONIAL. Of or pertaining to matrimony or the estate of marriage.

MATRIMONIAL ACTION. An action seeking a determination of the marital status of the parties and brought or defended in an endeavor to sustain or prevent the destruction of such marital status. Kraunz v. Kraunz, 183 Misc. 724, 51 N.Y.S. 2d 433, 436.

MATRIMONIAL CAUSES. In English ecclesiastical law, causes of action or injuries respecting the rights of marriage. One of the three divisions of causes or injuries cognizable by the ecclesiastical courts, comprising suits for jactitation of marriage, and for restitution of conjugal rights, divorces, and suits for alimony. 3 Bl.Comm. 92-94; 3 Steph.Comm. 712-714.

MATRIMONIAL COHABITATION. The living together of a man and woman ostensibly as husband and wife. Cox v. State, 117 Ala. 103, 23 So. 806, 41 L.R.A. 760. Also the living together of those who are legally husband and wife, the term carrying with it, in this sense, an implication of mutual rights and duties as to sharing the same habitation. Forster v. Forster, 1 Hagg.Consist. 144; U. S. v. Cannon, 4 Utah, 122, 7 P. 369.

MATRIMONIAL DOMICILE. Place where parties live together as husband and wife either actually or constructively. Ex parte Allan, 220 Ala. 482, 125 So. 612, 614.

MATRIMONIAL RES. The marriage state. Usen v. Usen, 136 Me. 480, 13 A.2d 738, 749, 128 A.L.R. 1449.

MATRIMONIUM. Lat. In Roman law, a legal marriage, contracted in strict accordance with the forms of the older Roman law, i. e., either with the farreum, the coemptio, or by usus.

This was allowed only to Roman citizens and to those neighboring peoples to whom the right of connubium had been conceded. The effect of such a marriage was to bring the wife into the manus, or marital power, of the husband, and to create the patria potestas over the children.

MATRIMONIUM SUBSEQUENS TOLLIT PECCATUM PRIECEDENS. Subsequent marriage cures preceding criminality.

MATRIMONY. Marriage, (q. v.,) in the sense of the relation or status, not of the ceremony.

MATRIX. In civil law, the protocol or first draft of a legal instrument, from which all copies must be taken. Downing v. Diaz, 80 Tex. 436, 16 S.W. 53.

MATRIX ECCLESIA. Lat. A mother church. This term was anciently applied to a cathedral, in relation to the other churches in the same see, or to a parochial church, in relation to the chapels or minor churches attached to it or depending on it. Blount.

MATRON. A married woman; an elderly woman. The female superintendent of an establishment or institution, such as a hospital, an orphan asylum, etc., is often so called. Fisher v. Gardnier, 183 Mich. 660, 150 N.W. 358.

MATRONS, JURY OF. In common-law practice, a jury of twelve matrons or discreet women, impaneled upon a writ de ventre ins piciendo, or where a female prisoner, being under sentence of death, pleaded her pregnancy as a ground for staying execution. In the latter case, such jury inquired into the truth of the plea.

MATTER. Substantial facts forming basis of claim or defense; facts material to issue; substance as distinguished from form; transaction, event, occurrence; subject-matter of controversy; special proceeding. Parker v. Bowen, 98 Vt. 115, 126 A. 522, 523; Bishop v. Shurly, 237 Mich. 76, 211 N.W. 75, 78; Rubin v. Sheldon, 130 Misc. 588, 224 N.Y.S. 340, 341; People v. Anderson, 62 Cal.App. 222, 216 P. 401, 402; Franklin Buggy Co. v. Carter, 21 Ga.App. 576, 94 S.E. 820.

MATTER IN CONTROVERSY, or IN DISPUTE. Subject of litigation, matter on which action is brought and issue is joined and in relation to which, if issue be one of fact, testimony is taken. Golden v. Sixth Judicial Dist. Ct. in and for Pershing County, 57 Nev. 114, 58 P.2d 1042, 1044. Rights which plaintiffs assert and seek to have protected and enforced. Gavica v. Donaugh, C.C.A.Or., 93 F.2d 173, 175.

MATTER IN DEED. Such matter as may be proved or established by a deed or specialty. Matter of fact, in contradistinction to matter of law. Co.Litt. 320; Steph.Pl. 197.

MATTER IN ISSUE. That matter on which plaintiff proceeds by his action, and which defendant controverts by his pleadings. MacKenzie v. Union Guardian Trust Co., 262 Mich. 563, 247 N.W. 914. Not including facts offered in evidence to establish the matters in issue. King v. Chase, 15 N.H. 9, 41 Am.Dec. 675. That ultimate fact or state of facts in dispute upon which the verdict or finding is predicated. Clark v. Arizona Mut. Savings & Loan Ass'n, D.C.Ariz., 217 F. 640, 644. See 2 Black, Judgm. § 614, and cases cited.

MATTER IN LEY NE SERRA MISE IN BOUTCHE DEL JURORS. Jenk.Cent. 180. Matter of law shall not be put into the mouth of the jurors.

MATTER IN PAIS. Matter of fact that is not in writing; thus distinguished from matter in deed and matter of record; matter that must be proved by parol evidence.

MATTER OF COURSE. Anything done or taken in the course of routine or usual procedure, which is permissible and valid without being specially applied for and allowed.

MATTER OF FACT. That which is to be ascertained by the senses, or by the testimony of witnesses describing what they have perceived. Distinguished from matter of law and matter of opinion. Moses v. United States, C.C.A.Vt., 221 F. 863, 871.

MATTER OF FORM. See Form.

MATTER OF LAW. Whatever is to be ascertained or decided by the application of statutory rules or the principles and determinations of the law, as distinguished from the investigation of particular facts, is called "matter of law."

MATTER OF RECORD. Any judicial matter or proceeding entered on the records of a court, and to be proved by the production of such record. It differs from matter in deed, which consists of facts which may be proved by specialty.

MATTER OF RECORD, ESTOPPEL BY. See Record, Estoppel By.

MATTER OF SUBSTANCE. That which goes to the merits. The opposite of matter of form.

MATTERS OF SUBSISTENCE FOR MAN. This phrase comprehends all articles or things, whether animal or vegetable, living or dead, which are used for food, and whether they are consumed in the form in which they are bought from the producer or are only consumed after undergoing a process of preparation, which is greater or less, according to the character of the article. Sledd v. Com., 19 Grat., Va., 813.

MATURE; MATURED. A claim is "matured" for receivership purposes if it has become absolutely due without contingency, although not necessarily liquidated nor presently payable. In re L. P. Hollander Co., 301 Mass. 278, 16 N.E.2d 35, 3e

MATURIORA SUNT VOTA MULIERUM QUAM VIRORUM. 6 Coke, 71. The desires of women are more mature than those of men; e., women arrive at maturity earlier than men.

MATURITY. Termination of period a note or other obligation has to run. Pacific States Savings & Loan Co. v. Hollywood Knickerbocker, 11 Cal.App.2d 56, 52 P.2d 1014, 1017. In mercantile law, the time when a bill of exchange or promissory note becomes due. Story, Bills, § 329. Gilbert v. Sprague, 88 Ill.App. 508; Wheeless v. Williams, 62 Miss. 371, 52 Am.Rep. 190.

MAUGRE. L. Fr. In spite of; against the will of. Litt. § 672.

MAUNDY THURSDAY. The day preceding Good Friday, on which princes gave alms.

See Mandato, Panes De.

MAXIM. "Maxims" are but attempted general statements of rules of law and are law only to extent of application in adjudicated cases. Swetland v. Curtiss Airports Corporation, D.C.Ohio, 41 F. 2d 929, 936. An established principle or proposition. A principle of law universally admitted, as being a correct statement of the law, or as agreeable to reason.

Coke defines a maxim to be "conclusion of reason," and says that it is so called "quia maxima ejus dignitas et certissima auctoritas, et quod maxime omnibus probetur." Co.Litt. 11a. He says in another place: "A maxime is a proposition to be of all men confessed and granted without proofe, argument, or discourse." Id. 67a.

The maxims of the law, in Latin, French, and English, will be found distributed through this book in their proper alphabetical order.

MAXIME PACI SUNT CONTRARIA VIS ET INJURIA. The greatest enemies to peace are force and wrong. Co.Litt. 161b.

MAXIMUM. The highest or greatest amount, quality, value, or degree. Moweaqua Coal Corporation v. Industrial Commission, 360 Ill. 194, 195 N.E. 607.

MAXIMUS ERRORIS POPULUS MAGISTER. Bacon. The people is the greatest master of error.

MAY. An auxiliary verb qualifying the meaning of another verb by expressing ability, competency, liberty, permission, possibility, probability or contingency. U. S. v. Lexington Mill & E. Co., 232 U.S. 399, 34 S.Ct. 337, 340, 58 L.Ed. 658, L.R.A. 1915B, 774; Carson v. Turrish, 140 Minn. 445, 168 N.W. 349, 352, L.R.A.1918F, 164. Regardless of the instrument, however, whether constitution, statute, deed, contract or whatnot, courts not infrequently construe "may" as "shall" or "must" to the end that justice may not be the slave of grammar. Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. 46, 64, 7 L.Ed. 47; Appeal of Burnap, 94 Conn. 286, 108 A. 802, 804; Stapler v. El Dora Oil Co., 27 Cal.App. 516, 150 P. 643, 645.

MAYHEM. Unlawfully and violently depriving another of the use of such of his members as may render him the less able in fighting, either to defend himself, or to annoy his adversary. 4 Bl.Comm. 205. State v. Deso, 110 Vt. 1, 1 A.2d 710, 714.

Every person who unlawfully and maliciously deprives a human being of a member of his body, or disables, disfigures, or renders it useless, or cuts or disables the tongue, or puts out an eye, or slits the nose, ear, or lip, is guilty of mayhem. Pen.Code Cal. § 203.

MAYHEMAVIT. Maimed. This was a term of art which could not be supplied in pleading by any other word, as mutilavit, truncavit, etc. 3 Thorn Co. Litt. 548; Corn. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 247.

MAYN. L. Fr. A hand; handwriting. Britt. c. 28.

MAYNOVER. L. Fr. A work of the hand; a thing produced by manual labor. Yearb. M. 4 Edw. III. 38.

MAYOR. The executive head of a municipal corporation; the governor or chief magistrate of a city. Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 577; People v. New York, 25 Wend., N.Y., 36.

MAYOR'S COURT. A court established in some cities, in which the mayor sits with the powers of a police judge or committing magistrate in respect to offenses committed within the city, and sometimes with civil jurisdiction in small causes, or other special statutory powers.

MAYOR'S COURT OF LONDON. An inferior court having jurisdiction in civil cases where the whole cause of action arises within the city of London.

MAYORALTY. The office or dignity of a mayor.

MAYORAZGO. In Spanish law, the right to the enjoyment of certain aggregate property, left with the condition thereon imposed that they are to pass in their integrity, perpetually, successively to the eldest son. Schm. Civil Law, 62.

MAYORESS. The wife of a mayor.

MEAD. Ground somewhat watery, not plowed, but covered with grass and flowers. Enc. Lond.

MEADOW. A tract of low or level land producing grass which is mown for hay. Webster.

A tract which lies above the shore, and is overflowed by spring and extraordinary tides only, and yields grasses which are good for hay. Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 429. State v. Crook, 132 N.C. 1053, 44 S.E. 32.

MEAL-RENT. A rent formerly paid in meal.

MEAN, or MESNE. A middle between two extremes, whether applied to persons, things, or time.

Average, having an intermediate value between two extremes or between the several successive values of variable quantity during one cycle of variation. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Huwe, C.C.A.Ohio, 116 F.2d 1008, 1009.

MEAN LOW TIDE. The average of all low tides both low and lower low over a fixed period of time. State v. Edwards, 188 Wash. 467, 62 P.2d 1094, 1095.

As applied to Puget Sound, the "Harmonic plane" is the zero adopted by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Department of Commerce upon which its tidal tables, charts, and maps are based. It is an arbitrary plane, and is the lowest plane of the tide in the Sound recognized by that department, being approximately two feet lower than mean lower low tide, and approximately four feet lower than mean low tide. State v. Scott, 89 Wash. 63, 154 P. 165, 168.

MEAN LOWER LOW TIDE. The average of lower low tides over a fixed period of time. State v. Edwards, 188 Wash. 467, 62 P.2d 1094, 1095.

MEAN RESERVE. The mean of the reserve at the beginning of the policy year, after the premium for such year is paid, and the terminal reserve at end of such policy year. Kentucky Home Life Ins. Co. v. Leisman, 268 Ky. 825, 105 S.W.2d 1046, 1047.

MEANDER. To meander means to follow a winding or flexuous course; and when it is said, in a description of land, "thence with the meander of the river," it must mean a meandered line,—a line which follows the sinuosities of the river,—or, in other words, that the river is the boundary between the points indicated. Turner v. Parker, 14 Or. 341, 12 P. 495; Schurmeier v. St. Paul & P. R. Co., 10 Minn. 100, Gil. 75, 88 Am.Dec. 59.

This term is used in some jurisdictions with the meaning of surveying and mapping a stream according to its meanderings, or windings and turnings. See Jones v. Pettibone, 2 Wis. 317.

MEANDER LINES. Lines run in surveying particular portions of the public lands which border on navigable rivers, not as boundaries of the tract, but for the purpose of defining the sinuosities of the banks of the stream, and as the means of ascertaining the quantity of land in the fraction subject to sale, and which is to be paid for by the purchaser. In preparing the official plat from the field notes, the meander line is represented as the border line of the stream, and shows that the watercourse, and not the meander line as naturally run on the ground, is the boundary. St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeier, 7 Wall. 286, 19 L.Ed. 74; Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U.S. 300, 20 S.Ct. 124, 44 L.Ed. 171; Producers' Oil Co. v. Hanszen, 61 So. 754, 132 La. 691.

MEANING. That which is, or is intended to be, signified or denoted by act or language; signification; sense; import. Webster, Dict.

Secondary Meaning. While generic names, geographical names, and names composed of words which are merely descriptive are incapable of exclusive appropriation, words or names, which have a primary meaning of their own, such as words descriptive of the goods, service, or place where they are made, or the name of the maker, may nevertheless, by long use in connection with the business of the particular trade, come to be understood by the public as designating the goods, service, or business of a particular trader. This is what is known as the doctrine of "secondary meaning" ; and is the origin of the law of unfair competition, as distinguished from technical trademarks or trade-names. Saunders System Atlanta Co. v. Drive It Yourself Co., 158 Ga. 1, 123 S.E. 132, 135; Richmond Remedies Co. v. Dr. Miles Medical Co., C.C.A.Mo., 16 F.2d 598, 602.

MEANS. That through which, or by the help of which, an end is attained; something tending to an object desired; intermediate agency or measure; necessary condition or co-agent; instrument. Pope v. Business Men's Assur. Co. of America, 235 Mo.App. 263, 131 S.W.2d 887, 892; Under insurance policy, equivalent to cause. Pope v. Business Men's Assur. Co. of America, 235 Mo.App. 263, 131 S.W.2d 887, 892.

MEASURE. That by which extent or dimension is ascertained, either length, breadth, thickness, capacity, or amount. Webster. The rule by which anything is adjusted or proportioned.

MEASURE OF DAMAGES. The rule, or rather the system of rules, governing the adjustment or apportionment of damages as a compensation for injuries in actions at law.

MEASURE OF VALUE. In the ordinary sense of the word, "measure" would mean something by comparison with which we may ascertain what is the value of anything. When we consider, further, that value itself is relative, and that two things are necessary to constitute it, independently of the third thing, which is to measure it, we may define a "measure of value" to be something by comparing with which any two other things we may infer their value in relation to one another. 2 Mill, Pol. Econ. 101.

MEASURER, or METER. An officer in the city of London, who measured woolen clothes, coals, etc.

MEASURING MONEY. In old English law, a duty which some persons exacted, by letters patent, for every piece of cloth made, besides alnage. Now abolished.

MEAT. Specifically, animal flesh, though in one sense, the word includes other foods. Gardner v. State, 183 Ind. 101, 108 N.E. 230. Food in general; anything eaten for nourishment, either by man or beast; especially, solid food; hence, the edible part of anything. Webster, Dict.

MECHANIC. A person skilled in the practical use of tools. Warner Memorial University v. Ritenour, Tex.Civ.App., 56 S.W.2d 236, 237. A workman employed in shaping and uniting materials, such as wood, metal, etc., into some kind of structure, machine, or other object, requiring the use of tools. Story v. Walker, 11 Lea, Tenn., 517, 47 Am.Rep. 305; In re Osborn, D.C.N.Y., 104 F. 781; Baker v. Maxwell, 183 Iowa 1192, 168 N.W. 160, 2 A.L.R. 814.

MECHANIC'S LIEN. A claim created by law for the purpose of securing priority of payment of the price or value of work performed and materials furnished in erecting or repairing a building or other structure, and as such attaches to the land as well as buildings and improvements erected thereon. In re Louisville Daily News & Enquirer, D.C.Ky., 20 F.Supp. 465, 466.

MECHANICAL. Having relation to, or produced or accomplished by, the use of mechanism or machinery. Used chiefly in patent law. Of, pertaining to, or concerned with, manual labor; engaged in manual labor; of the artisan class; of, pertaining to, or concerned with, machinery or mechanism; made or formed by a machine or with tools. State v. Crounse, 105 Neb. 672, 181 N.W. 562, 563, 16 A.L.R. 533.

MECHANICAL ARM. In the artificial limb trade. An arm provided with fingers which can be moved by some mechanical contrivance, together with mechanism for rotating the wrist, simulating, as nearly as possible the motion of the human wrist, hand, and fingers. Carnes Artificial Limb Co. v. Dilworth Arm Co., D.C.Conn., 273 F. 838, 839.

MECHANICAL EQUIVALENT. If two devices do the same work in substantially the same way, and accomplish substantially the same result, they are "mechanical equivalents." Wire Tie Machinery Co. v. Pacific Box Corporation, C.C.A.Cal., 107 F.2d 54, 56. A device which may be substituted or adopted, instead of another, by any person skilled in the particular art from his knowledge of the art, and which is competent to perform the same functions or produce the same result, without introducing an original idea or changing the general idea of means. Smith v. Marshall, 22 F.Cas. 595; Alaska Packers' Ass'n v. Letson, C.C.Wash., 119 F. 611. The test of equivalency is whether the substituted element operates in substantially the same way to produce substantially the same result. Palmer v. Mach. Co., C.C.N.Y., 186 F. 496.

MECHANICAL MOVEMENT. A mechanism transmitting power or motion from a driving part to a part to be driven; a combination and arrangement of mechanical parts intended for the translation or transformation of motion. Campbell Printing Press Co. v. Miehle Printing Press Co., 42 C.C.A. 235, 102 F. 159.

MECHANICAL PROCESS. See Process.

MECHANICAL SKILL. As distinguished from invention or inventive capacity, this term means such skill, intelligence, ingenuity, or constructive ability in the adaptation of means to ends as would be possessed and exhibited by an ordinarily clever mechanic in the practice of his particular art or trade. Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co., 113 U. S. 59, 5 S.Ct. 717, 28 L.Ed. 901; Johnson Co. v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., C.C.Pa., 67 F. 942.

MELIOREM CONDITIONEM SUAM FACERE POTEST MINOR, DETERIOREM NEQUAQUAM. Co. Litt. 337. A minor can make his own condition better, but by no means worse.

MELIUS EST IN TEMPORE OCCURRERE, QUAM POST CAUSAM VULNERATUM REMEDIUM QU1ERERE. 2 Inst. 299. It is better to meet a thing in time than after an injury inflicted to seek a remedy.

MELIUS EST JUS DEFICIENS QUAM JUS INCERTUM. Law that is deficient is better than law that is uncertain. Lofft, 395.

MELIUS EST OMNIA MALA PATI QUAM MALO CONSENTIRE. 3 Inst. 23. It is better to suffer every ill than to consent to ill.

MELIUS EST PETERE FONTES QUAM SECTARI RIVULOS. It is better to go to the fountain head than to follow little streamlets.

MELIUS EST RECURRERE QUAM MALE CUR-. RERE. It is better to run back than to run badly; it is better to retrace one's steps than to proceed improperly. 4 Inst. 176.

MELIUS INQUIRENDUM. To be better inquired into.

In old English law, the name of a writ commanding a further inquiry respecting a matter; as, after an imperfect inquisition in proceedings in outlawry, to have a new inquest as to the value of lands.

MEMBER. One of the persons constituting a family, Grant v. Louisiana Sawmill Co., 6 La.App. 673, 675; a partnership, association, corporation, guild, etc. In re Sixth Ward Building & Loan Ass'n of Newark, 134 N.J.Eq. 98, 34 A.2d 292, 294.

One of the persons constituting a court, a legislative assembly, etc. In re Heafy, 247 App.Div. 277, 285 N.Y.S. 188, 193.

A part or organ of the animal body; especially a limb or other separate part. California Casualty Indemnity Exchange v. Industrial Accident Commission, Cal.App., 82 P.2d 1115, 1116.

MEMBER OF CONGRESS. A member of the senate or house of representatives of the United States. In popular usage, particularly the latter.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT. One having the right to sit in either house of the British parliament.

MEMBERS. In English law, places where a custom-house has been kept Of old time, with officers or deputies in attendance; and they are lawful places of exportation or importation. 1 Chit. Corn. Law, 726.

MEMBERSHIP CORPORATION. One organized for purposes other than that of pecuniary gain. In re William McKinley Lodge No. 840, F. & A. M., D.C.N.Y., 4 F.Supp. 280, 282.

MEMBRANA. Lat.

In Civil law, parchment. Dig. 32, 52.

In old English law, a skin of parchment. The ancient rolls usually consist of several of these skins, and the word "membrana" is used, in citations to them, in the same way as "page" or "folio," to distinguish the particular skin referred to.

MEMBRUM. A slip or small piece of land.

MEMOIRE. In French law, a document in the form of a petition, by which appeals to the court of cassation are initiated:

MEMORANDUM. Lat. To be remembered; be It remembered. A formal word with which the body of a record in the court of king's bench anciently commenced. Townsh. PL 486; 2 Tidd, Pr. 719.

Also an informal note or instrument embodying something that the parties desire to fix in memory by the aid of written evidence, or that is to serve as the basis of a future formal contract or deed. Plott v. Kittelson, 58 N.D. 881, 228 N.W. 217, 221.

This word is used in the statute of frauds as the designation of the written agreement, or note or evidence thereof, which must exist in order to bind the parties in the cases provided. The memorandum must be such as to disclose the parties, the nature and substance of the contract, the consideration and promise, and be signed by the party to be bound or his authorized agent. See 2 Kent, Comm. 510; Des Brisay v. Foss, 264 Mass. 102, 162 N.E. 4, 6.

The whole clause is now, in practice, termed, from this initial word, the "memorandum," and its use is supposed to have originated from the circumstance that proceedings "by bill" (in which alone it has been employed) were formerly considered as the by-business of the court. Gilb. Com.P1. 47, 48.

MEMORANDUM ARTICLES. In the law of marine insurance, this phrase designates the articles of merchandise which are usually mentioned in the memorandum clause, (q. v.,) and for which the underwriter's liability is thereby limited. See Waln v. Thompson, 9 Serg. & R., Pa., 120, 11 Am. Dec. 675.

MEMORANDUM CHECK. See Check.

MEMORANDUM CLAUSE. In a policy of marine insurance the memorandum clause is a clause inserted to prevent the underwriters from being liable for injury to goods of a peculiarly perishable nature, and for minor damages. It begins as follows: "N. B. Corn, fish, salt, fruit, flour, and seed are warranted free from average, unless general, or the ship be stranded,"—meaning that the underwriters are not to be liable for damage to these articles caused by seawater or the like. Maude & P. Shipp. 371; Sweet.

MEMORANDUM IN ERROR. A document alleging error in fact, accompanied by an affidavit of such matter of fact.

MEMORANDUM OF ALTERATION. Formerly, in England, where a patent was granted for two inventions, one of which was not new or not useful, the whole patent was bad, and the same rule applied when a material part of a patent for a single invention had either of those defects. To remedy this the statute 5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 83, empowers a patentee (with the fiat of the attorney general) to enter a disclaimer (q. v.) or a memorandum of an alteration in the title or specification of the patent, not being of such a nature as to extend the exclusive right granted by the patent, and thereupon the memorandum is deemed to be part of the letters patent or the specification. Sweet.

MEMORANDUM OF ASSOCIATION. A document to be subscribed by seven or more persons associated for a lawful purpose, by subscribing which, and otherwise complying with the requisitions of the companies' acts in respect of registration, they may form themselves into an incorporated company, with or without limited liability. 3 Steph.Comm. 20.

MEMORANDUM SALE. See Sale.

MEMORIAL. A document presented to a legislative body, or to the executive, by one or more individuals, containing a petition or a representation of facts.

In English law, that which contains the particulars of a deed, etc., and is the instrument registered, as in the case of an annuity which must be registered. Wharton.

In practice, a short note, abstract, memorandum, or rough draft of the orders of the court, from which the records thereof may at any time be fully made up. State v. Shaw, 73 Vt. 149, 50 A. 863.

[l]MEMORITER. Lat. From memory; by or from recollection. Thus, memoriter proof of a written instrument is such as is furnished by the recollection of a witness who had seen and known it.

MEMORIZATION. Committing anything to memory. Used to describe the act of one who listens to a public representation of a play or drama, and then, from his recollection of its scenes, incidents, or language, reproduces it, substantially or in part, in derogation of the rights of the author. 5 Term R. 245; 14 A.L.R., N.S. 207.

MEMORY. The word as used in Blackstone and other ancient authorities, appeared to be synonymous with "mind", whereas the word "memory" in modern times is used in a more restricted sense of recollection of past events rather than the general state of one's mental power. United States v. Boylen, D.C.Or., 41 F.Supp. 724, 725.

Mental capacity; the mental power to review and recognize the successive states of consciousness in their consecutive order.

This word, as used in jurisprudence to denote one of the psychological elements necessary in the making of a valid will or contract or the commission of a crime, implies the mental power to conduct a consecutive train of thought, or an orderly planning of affairs, by recalling correctly the past states of the mind and past events, and arranging them in their due order of sequence and in their logical relations with the events and mental states of the present.

The phrase "sound and disposing mind and memory" means not merely distinct recollection of the items of one's property and the persons among whom it may be given, but entire power of mind to dispose of property by will. Abbott.

The reputation and name, good or bad, which a man leaves at his death.

Legal memory. An ancient usage, custom, supposed grant (as a foundation for prescription) and the like, are said to be immemorial when they are really or fictitiously of such an ancient date that "the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," or, in other words, "beyond legal memory." And legal memory or "time out of mind," according to the rule of the common law, commenced from the reign of Richard I., A. D. 1189. But under the statute of limitation of 32 Hen. VIII. this was reduced to 60 years, and again by that of 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c. 71, to 20 years. In the American states, by statute, the time of legal memory is generally fixed at a period corresponding to that prescribed for actions for the recovery of real property, usually about 20 years. See 2 Bl.Comm. 31; Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb., N.Y. 153.

MEN OF STRAW. Men who used in former days to ply about courts of law, so called from their manner of making known their occupation, (i. e., by a straw in one of their shoes,) recognized by the name of "straw-shoes." An advocate or lawyer who wanted a convenient witness knew by these signs where to meet with one, and the colloquy between the parties was brief. "Don't you remember?" said the advocate; to which the ready answer was, "To be sure I do." "Then come into court and swear it?' And straw-shoes went into court and swore. Athens abounded in straw-shoes. Quart. Rev. vol. 33, p. 344.

MENACE. A threat; the declaration or show of a disposition or determination to inflict an evil or injury upon another. Cumming v. State, 99 Ga. 662, 27 S.E. 177; Morrill v. Nightingale, 93 Cal. 452, 28 Pac. 1068, 27 Am.St.Rep. 207.

MENETUM. In old Scotch law, a stockhorn; a horn made of wood, "with circles and girds of the same." Skene.

MENIAL. A servant of the lowest order; more strictly, a domestic servant living under his master's roof. Boniface v. Scott, 3 Serg. & R., Pa. 354.

MENS. Lat. Mind; intention; meaning; understanding; will.

MENS LEGIS. The mind of the law; that is, the purpose, spirit, or intention of a law or the law generally.

MENS LEGISLATORIS. The intention of the law-maker.

MENS REA. A guilty mind; a guilty or wrongful purpose; a criminal intent.

Guilty knowledge and wilfulness. United States v. Greenbaum, C.C.A.N.J., 138 F.2d 437, 438.

MENS TESTATORIS IN TESTAMENTIS SPECTANDA EST. Jenk. Cent. 277. The intention of the testator is to be regarded in wills.

MENSA. Lat. Patrimony or goods and necessary things for livelihood. Jacob. A table; the table of a money-changer. Dig. 2, 14, 47.

MENSA ET THORO. From bed and board. See Divorce.

MENSALIA. Parsonages or spiritual livings united to the tables of religious houses, and called "mensal benefices" amongst the canonists. Cowell.

MENSIS. Lat. In the civil and old English law, a month. Mensis vetitus, the prohibited month; fence-month (q. v.).

MENSOR. In civil law, a measurer of land; a surveyor. Dig. 11, 6; Id. 50, 6, 6; Cod. 12, 28.

MENSULARIUS. In civil law, a money-changer or dealer in money. Dig. 2, 14, 47, 1.

MENSURA. In old English law, a measure.

MENSURA DOMINI REGIS. "The measure of our lord the king," being the weights and measures established under King Richard I. in his parliament at Westminster, 1197. 1 Bl.Comm. 275; Mozley & Whiteley.

MENTAL. Relating to or existing in the mind; intellectual, emotional, or psychic, as distinguished from bodily or physical.

MENTAL ALIENATION. A phrase sometimes used to describe insanity (q. v.).

MENTAL ANGUISH. When connected with a physical injury, this term includes both the resultant mental sensation of pain and also the accompanying feelings of distress, fright, and anxiety. Railway Co. v. Miller, 25 Tex.Civ.App. 460, 61 S.W. 978. In other connections, and as a ground for damages or an element of damages, it includes the mental suffering resulting from the excitation of the more poignant and painful emotions, such as grief, severe disappointment, indignation, wounded pride, shame, public humiliation, despair, etc. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Taylor, 94 Fla. 841, 114 So. 529, 532; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Chamberlain, Tex.Civ.App., 169 S.W. 370, 371.

MENTAL CAPACITY OR COMPETENCE. Contemplates the ability to understand the nature and effect of the act in .which a person is engaged and the business he is transacting. Jones v. Traders & General Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 144 S.W.2d 689, 694. Such a measure of intelligence, understanding, memory, and judgment (relative to the particular transaction) as will enable the person to understand the nature of his act. Davren v. White, 42 N.J.Eq. 569, 7 A. 682; Conley v. Nailor, 118 U.S. 127, 6 S.Ct. 1001, 30 L.Ed. 112.

MENTAL CRUELTY. A course of conduct on the part of one spouse toward the other spouse which can endanger the mental and physical health and efficiency of the other spouse to such an extent as to render continuance of the marital relation intolerable. Burns v. Burns, 153 Fla. 73, 13 So.2d 599, 602.

MENTAL DEFECT. As applied to the qualification of a juror, this term must be understood to embrace either such gross ignorance or imbecility as practically disqualifies any person from performing the duties of a juror. Caldwell v. State, 41 Tex. 94.

MENTAL INCAPACITY; MENTAL INCOMPETENCY. Established when there is found to exist an essential privation of reasoning faculties, or when a person is incapable of understanding and acting with discretion in the ordinary affairs of life. In re Blochowitz' Guardianship, 135 Neb. 163, 280 N.W. 438, 441.

MENTAL RESERVATION. A silent exception to the general words of a promise or agreement not expressed, on account of a general understanding on the subject. But the word has been applied to an exception existing in the mind of the one party only, and has been degraded to signify a dishonest excuse for evading or infringing a promise. Wharton.

MENTE CAPTUS. Persons who are habitually insane. Clanton v. Shattuck, 211 La. 750, 30 So.2d 823, 824.

MENTIRI. Lat. To lie; to assert a falsehood. Calvin; 3 Bulst. 260.

MENTITION. The act of lying; a falsehood.

MERCABLE. Merchantable; to be sold or bought.

MERCANTANT. A foreign trader.

MERCANTILE. Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of, merchants, or the business of merchants; having to do with trade or commerce or the business of buying and selling merchandise; trading; commercial; conducted or acting on business principles. In re Wanamaker's Estate, 312 Pa. 362, 167 A. 592, 594.

MERCANTILE AGENCIES. Establishments which make a business of collecting information relating to the credit, character, responsibility and reputation of merchants, for the purpose of furnishing the information to subscribers. Brookfield v. Kitchen, 163 Mo. 546, 63 S.W. 825; State v. Morgan, 2 S.D. 32, 48 N.W. 314.

MERCANTILE LAW. An expression substantially equivalent to the law-merchant or commercial law; It designates the system of rules, customs, and usages generally recognized and adopted by merchants and traders, and which, either in its simplicity or as modified by common law or statutes, constitutes the law for the regulation of their transactions and the solution of their controversies.

MERCANTILE LAW AMENDMENT ACTS. The statutes 19 & 20 Vict. cc. 60, 97, passed mainly for the purpose of assimilating the mercantile law of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

MERCANTILE PAPER. Commercial paper; such negotiable paper (bills, notes, checks, etc.) as is made or transferred by and between merchants or traders, and is governed by the usages of the business world and the law-merchant.

MERCANTILE PARTNERSHIP. One which habitually buys and sells; one which buys for the purpose of afterwards selling. Com. v. Natural Gas Co., 32 Pittsb.Leg.J., 0.S. 310.

MERE MOTION. The free and voluntary act of a party himself, done without the suggestion or influence of another person, is said to be done of his mere motion, ex mero motu (q. v.). Brown.

The phrase is used of an interference of the courts of law, who will, under some circumstances, of their own motion, object to an irregularity in the proceedings, though no objection has been taken to the informality by the plaintiff or defendant in the suit. 3 Chit. Gen. Pr. 430.

MERE RIGHT. The mere right of property in land; the jus proprietatis, without either possession or even the right of possession. 2 BL Comm. 197. The abstract right of property.

MERE-STONE. In old English law, a stone for bounding or dividing lands. Yearb. P. 18 Hen. VI. 5.

MERELY. Without including anything else; purely; only; solely; absolute; wholly. In re Plymouth Motor Corporation, Cust. & Pat. App., 46 F.2d 211, 212.

MERENNIUM. In old records, timber. Cowell.

MERETRICIOUS. Of the nature of unlawful sexual connection. The term is descriptive of the relation sustained by persons who contract a marriage that is void by reason of legal incapacity. Bl. Comm. 436.

MERGER. The fusion or absorption of one thing or right into another; generally spoken of a case where one of the subjects is of less dignity or importance than the other. Here the less important ceases to have an independent existence. Marfield v. Cincinnati, D. & T. Traction Co., 111 Ohio St. 139, 144 N.E. 689, 696, 40 A.L.R. 357.

Conglomerate merger. Merger of corporations which are neither competitors nor potential or actual customers or suppliers of each other. U. S. v. General Dynamics Corp., D.C.N.Y., 258 F.Supp. 36, 56.

Contract law. Extinguishment of one contract by absorption into another. Clark v. Compania Granadera de Cananera, S.A., 385 P.2d 691, 695, 94 Ariz. 391; Whiddon v. General Mills, Inc., Tex. Civ.App., 347 S.W.2d 7, 10.

Corporations. The union of two or more corporations by the transfer of property of all to one of them, which continues in existence, the others being swallowed up or merged therein. Metropolitan Edison Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.3, 98 F.2d 807, 810, 811. It differs from a consolidation wherein all the corporations terminate their existence and become parties to a new one. Murphy v. Niehus, 50 Ohio App. 299, 198 N.E. 197.

Criminal Law. When a man commits a great crime which includes a lesser, or commits a felony which includes a tort against a private person, the latter is merged in the former. 1 East, P. C. 411.

Divorce law. Substitution of rights and duties under judgment or decree for those under property settlement agreement. Roesberry v. Roesberry, 401 P.2d 805, 807, 88 Idaho 514.

Horizontal merger. Merger of corporate competitors. U. S. v. General Dynamics Corp., D.C. N.Y., 258 F.Supp. 36, 56; U. S. v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., D.C.N.Y., 240 F.Supp. 867, 930.

Real-Property Law. It is a general principle of law that where a greater estate and a less coincide and meet in one and the same person, without any intermediate estate, the less is immediately annihilated, or, in the law phrase, is said to be merged, that is, sunk or drowned, in the greater. Thus, if there be tenant for years, and the reversion in fee-simple descends to or is purchased by him, the term of years is merged in the inheritance, and shall never exist any more. 2 Bl. Comm. 177; 1 Steph. Comm. 293; 4 Kent, Comm. 99. Duncan v. Smith, 31 N.J.L. 327.

Rights. This term, as applied to rights, is equivalent to "confusio" in the Roman law, and indicates that where the qualities of debtor and creditor become united in the same individual, there arises a confusion of rights which extinguishes both qualities; whence, also, merger is often called "extinguishment." Brown.

Rights of Action. In the law relating to rights of action, when a person takes or acquires a remedy or security of a higher nature, in legal estimation, than the one which he already possesses for the same right, then his remedies in respect of the minor right or security merge in those attaching to the higher one. Leake, Cont. 506; 10 C.B. 561. As where a claim is merged in the judgment recovered upon it. Frost v. Thompson, 219 Mass. 360, 106 N.E. 1009, 1010.

Vertical merger. Union with corporate customer or supplier. U. S. v. General Dynamics Corp., D.C.N.Y., 258 F.Supp. 36, 56.

MERIDIES. In old English law, noon. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 5, § 31.

MERINO. A fine long staple wool, which commands the highest price. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U.S. 483, 42 S.Ct. 384, 385, 66 L.Ed. 729.

MERIT SYSTEM. A system of appointing employees to office in the civil service, and of promoting them for competency only; opposed, in the United States, to the spoils system. Heck v. Hall, 238 Ala. 274, 190 So. 280, 285.

MERITORIOUS. Possessing or characterized by "merit" in the legal sense of the word. See Merits.

MERITORIOUS CAUSE OF ACTION. This description is sometimes applied to a person with whom the ground of action, or the consideration, originated or from whom it moved. For example, where a cause of action accrues to a woman while sole, and is sued for, after her marriage, by her husband and herself jointly, she is called the "meritorious cause of action."

MERITORIOUS CONSIDERATION. One founded upon some moral obligation; a valuable consideration in the second degree.

MINER. One who mines; a digger for metals and other minerals. While men of scientific attainments, or of experience in the use of machinery, are to be found in this class, yet the word by which the class is designated imports neither learning nor skill. Watson v. Lederer, 11 Colo. 577, 19 P. 604, 1 L.R.A. 854; Barton v. Wichita River Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W. 1043, 1046.

MINER'S INCH. See Inch.

MINERAL, adj. Relating to minerals or the process and business of mining; bearing or producing valuable minerals.

MINERAL, n. Any valuable inert or lifeless substance formed or deposited in its present position through natural agencies alone, and which is found either in or upon the soil of the earth or in the rocks beneath the soil. Barringer & Adams, Mines, p. lxxvi.

Any natural constituent of the crust of the earth, inorganic or fossil, homogeneous in structure, having a definite chemical composition and known crystallization. See Webster; Cent. Diet.

The term includes all fossil bodies or matters dug out of mines or quarries, whence anything may be dug, such as beds of stone which may be quarried. Earl of Rosse v. Wainman, 14 Mees. & W. 872.

The word is not a definite term and is susceptible of limitations or extensions according to intention with which it is used. Standing alone it might by itself embrace the soil, hence include sand and gravel, or, under a strict definition, it might be limited to metallic substances. Puget Mill Co. v. Duecy, 1 Wash.2d 421, 96 P.2d 571, 573, 574.

MINERAL DEED. A realty conveyance involving a severance from fee of present title to minerals in place, either effecting such severance in first instance or conveying part of such mineral ownership previously severed from the fee. Hickey v. Dirks, 156 Kan. 326, 133 P.2d 107, 109, 110.

MINERAL DISTRICT. A term occasionally used in acts of congress, designating in a general way those portions or regions of the country where valuable minerals are mostly found, or where the business of mining is chiefly carried on, but carrying no very precise meaning and not a known term of the law. See U. S. v. Smith, C.C.Or., 11 F. 490.

MINERAL LAND ENTRY. See Entry.

MINERAL LANDS. Lands containing deposits of valuable, useful, or precious minerals in such quantities as to justify expenditures in the effort to extract them, and which are more valuable for the minerals they contain than for agricultural or other uses. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U.S. 526, 23 S.Ct. 365, 47 L.Ed. 575; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U.S. 392, 6 S.Ct. 95, 29 L.Ed. 423.

Land3 on which metals or minerals have been discovered in rock in place. State v. Field, 31 N.M. 120, 241 P. 1027, 1042. "Mineral lands" include not merely metaliferous lands, but all such as are chiefly valuable for their deposits of mineral character, which are useful in arts or valuable for purposes of manufacture, Dunbar Lime Co. v. Utah-Idaho Sugar Co., C.C.A.Utah, 17 F.2d 351, 354; and embrace not only those which the lexicon defines as "mineral", but, in addition, such as are valuable for deposits of marble, slate, petroleum, asphaltum, and even guano. United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 311 U.S. 317, 61 S.Ct. 264, 284, 85 L.Ed. 210.

MINERAL LEASE. An agreement permitting use of land to explore, and then, if mineral is discovered, giving right to take mineral either for definite term or so long as it can be produced in paying quantities upon reserved royalty. Gordon v. Empire Gas & Fuel Co., C.C.A.Tex., 63 F.2d 487, 488.

MINERAL LODE. A mineral bed of rock with definite boundaries in a general mass of the mountain and also any zone or belt of mineralized rock lying within boundaries clearly separating it from the neighboring rock. Duffield v. San Francisco Chemical Co., C.C.A.Idaho, 205 F. 480, 484.

MINERAL RIGHT. An interest in minerals in land. A right to take minerals or a right to receive a royalty. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Strohacker, 202 Ark. 645, 152 S.W.2d 557, 561; Sheppard v. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co., Tex.Civ.App., 125 S.W. 2d 643, 648.

"Mineral rights" is a much broader term and is more inclusive than the term "oil and gas". Federal Gas, Oil & Coal Co. v. Moore, 290 Ky. 284, 161 S.W.2d 46, 49.

MINERAL ROYALTY. Income received from lessees of mineral land. Logan Coal & Timber Ass'n v. Helvering, C.C.A.3, 122 F.2d 848, 850. The term is distinguished from mineral interest. Maddox v. Butchee, 203 La. 299, 14 So.2d 4, 9.

MINERAL SERVITUDE. The right to exploit or develop. Frost Lumber Industries v. Republic Production Co., C.C.A.La., 112 F.2d 462, 466.

MINERATOR. In old records, a miner.

MINIMA P(ENA CORPORALIS EST MAJOR QUALIBET PECUNIARIA. The smallest corporal punishment is greater than any pecuniary one. 2 Inst. 220.

MINIME MUTANDA SUNT QUZE CERTAM HABUERUNT INTERPRETATIONEM. Things which have had a certain interpretation [whose interpretation has been settled, as by common opinion] are not to be altered. Co. Litt. 365; Wing. Max. p. 748, max. 202.

MINIMENT. An old form of muniment (q. v.). Blount.

MINIMUM CHARGE. A "minimum charge" in connection with public utilities rate-fixing means the minimum monthly bill which will be rendered regardless of whether or not a customer has used sufficient of the commodity to make up that sum at the agreed rate. Ashtabula Gas Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, 102 Ohio St. 678, 133 N.E. 915, 916, 20 A.L.R. 217.

MINIMUM EST NIHILO PROXIMUM. The smallest is next to nothing.

MINIMUM WAGE. Such an amount as will maintain a normal standard of living, including the preservation of the health and efficiency of the worker.

The least wage on which an ordinary individual can be self-sustaining and obtain the ordinary requirements of life. Associated Industries of Oklahoma v. Industrial Welfare Commission, 185 Okl. 177, 90 P.2d 899, 913.

MINING. The process or business of extracting from the earth the precious or valuable metals, either in their native state or in their ores. In re Rollins Gold Min. Co., D.C.N.Y., 102 F. 985.

As ordinarily used, the term does not include the extraction from the earth of rock, marble, or slate, which is commonly described as "quarrying," although coal and salt are "mined;" nor does it include sinking wells or shafts for petroleum or natural gas, unless expressly so declared by statute, as is the case in Indiana. State v. Indiana, etc., Min. Co., 120 Ind. 575, 22 N.E. 778, 6 L.R.A. 579; Williams v. Citizens' Enterprise Co., 153 Ind. 496, 55 N.E. 425.

MINING CLAIM. A parcel of land, containing precious metal in its soil or rock, and appropriated by an individual, according to established rules, by the process of "location." St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co. v. Kemp, 104 U.S. 649, 26 L.Ed. 875; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sanders, C.C.A.Mont., 49 F. 135, 1 C.C.A. 192.

MINING COMPANIES. This designation was formerly applied in England to the associations formed in London in 1825 for working nines in Mexico and South America; but at present it comprises, both in England and America, all mining projects carried on by joint-stock associations or corporations. Rapalje & Lawrence.

MINING DISTRICT. A section of country usually designated by name and described or understood as being confined within certain natural boundaries, in which the precious metals (or their ores) are found in paying quantities, and which is worked therefor, under rules and regulations prescribed or agreed upon by the miners therein. U. S. v. Smith, C.C.Or., 11 F. 490.

MINING LEASE. A lease of a mine or mining claim or a portion thereof, to be worked by the lessee, usually under conditions as to the amount and character of work to be done, and reserving compensation to the lessor either in the form of a fixed rent or a royalty on the tonnage of ore mined, and which (as distinguished from a license) conveys to the lessee an interest or estate in the land, and (as distinguished from an ordinary lease) conveys not merely the temporary use and occupation of the land, but a portion of the land itself, that is, the ore in place and unsevered and to be extracted by the lessee. Austin v. Huntsville Min. Co., 72 Mo. 541, 37 Am.Rep. 446; Knight v. Indiana Coal Co., 47 Ind. 113, 17 Am.Rep. 692.

MINING LOCATION. The act of appropriating and claiming, according to certain established rules and local customs, a parcel of land of defined area, upon or in which one or more of the precious metals or their ores have been discovered, and which constitutes a portion of the public domain, with the declared intention to occupy and work it for mining purposes under the implied license of the United States. Also the parcel of land so occupied and appropriated. Poire v. Wells, 6 Colo. 412; St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co. v. Kemp, 104 U.S. 649, 26 L.Ed. 875; Golden Fleece, etc., Min. Co. v. Cable, etc., Min. Co., 12 Nev. 328.

MINING PARTNERSHIP. A special type of partnership different in many respects from ordinary or trading partnerships. Meister v. Farrow, 109 Mont. 1, 92 P.2d 753, 757, 758, 760, 761.

An association of several owners of a mine for co-operation in working the mine. Kahn v. Central Smelting Co., 102 U.S. 645, 26 L.Ed. 266; Skillman v. Lachman, 23 Cal. 203, 83 Am. Dec. 96; Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U.S. 512, 9 S.Ct. 355, 32 L.Ed. 764.

Generally, where the parties co-operate in developing a lease for oil and gas, each agreeing to pay his part of the expenses and to share in the profits or losses, a "mining partnership" exists. Continental Supply Co. v. Dickson Oil Co., 94 Okl. 660, 153 P.2d 1017, 1019.

MINING RENT. In practice, the term is used to designate consideration given for a mining lease, whether such lease creates a tenancy, conveys a fee, or grants an incorporeal right or a mere license. Miller v. Carr, 137 Fla. 114, 188 So. 103, 107.

MINISTER. Ecclesiastical law. A person ordained according to the usages of some church or associated body of Christians for the preaching of the gospel and filling the pastoral office.

Foreign minister. An ambassador, minister, or envoy from a foreign government. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 56, 8 L.Ed. 25.

International law. An officer appointed by the government of one nation as a mediator or arbitrator between two other nations who are engaged in a controversy, with their consent, with a view to effecting an amicable adjustment of the dispute.

A general name given to the diplomatic representatives sent by one state to another, including ambassadors, envoys, and residents.

Practice. An officer of justice, charged with the execution of the law, and hence termed a "ministerial officer;" such as a sheriff, bailiff, coroner, sheriff's officer. Britt. c. 21.

An agent; one who acts not by any inherent authority, but under another.

Public law. One of the highest functionaries in the organization of civil government, standing next to the sovereign or executive head, acting as his immediate auxiliary, and being generally charged with the administration of one of the great bureaus or departments of the executive branch of government. Otherwise called a "cabinet minister," "secretary of state," or "secretary of a department."

Public minister. A general term comprehending all the higher classes of diplomatic representatives,—as ambassadors, envoys, residents,—but not including the commercial representatives, such as consuls.

MINISTERIAL. That which is done under the authority of a superior; opposed to judicial; that which involves obedience to instructions, but demands no special discretion, judgment, or skill. State Tax Commission of Utah v. Katsis, 90 Utah 406, 62 P.2d 120, 123, 107 A.L.R. 1477; Blalock v. Johnston, 180 S.C. 40, 185 S.E. 51, 54, 105 A.L.R. 1115; First Nat. Bank v. Filer, 107 Fla. 526, 145 So. 204, 207, 87 A.L.R. 267.

MINISTERIAL ACT. One which a person performs in a given state of facts in a prescribed manner in obedience to the mandate of legal authority, without regard to or the exercise of his own judgment upon the propriety of the act being done. State Tax Commission of Utah v. Katsis, 90 Utah 406, 62 P.2d 120, 123, 107 A.L.R. 1477.

MINISTERIAL ACT OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATION. See Corporate Act of Municipal Corporation.

MINISTERIAL DUTY. One regarding which nothing is left to discretion—a simple and definite duty, imposed by law, and arising under conditions admitted or proved to exist. City of Tacoma v. Peterson, 165 Wash. 461, 5 P.2d 1022, 1024. Mott v. Hull, 51 Okl. 602, 152 P. 92, L.R.A.1916B, 1184. It arises when an individual has such a legal interest in its performance that neglect of performance becomes a wrong to such individual. Morton v. Comptroller General, 4 S.C. 473.

MINISTERIAL OFFICE. See Office.

MINISTERIAL OFFICER. One whose duties are purely ministerial, as distinguished from executive, legislative, or judicial functions, requiring obedience to the mandates of superiors and not involving the exercise of judgment or discretion. U. S. to Use of Kinney v. Bell, C.C.Pa., 127 F. 1002; State v. Loechner, 65 Neb. 814, 91 N.W. 874, 59 L.R.A. 915; Reid v. Hood, 2 Nott & McC., S.C., 169, 10 Am.Dec. 582.

MINISTERIAL POWER. See Power.

MINISTERIAL TRUST. See Trust.

MINISTERS PLENIPOTENTIARY. Ministers plenipotentiary possess full powers, and are of much greater distinction than simple ministers. These are without any particular attribution of rank and character, but by custom are now placed immediately below the ambassador, or on a level with the envoy extraordinary; Vattel, liv. 4, c. 5, § 74; 1 Kent 48; Merlin, ROpert.

MINISTRANT. The party cross-examining a witness was so called, under the old system of the ecclesiastical courts.

MINISTRI REGIS. Lat. In old English law, ministers of the king, applied to the judges of the realm, and to all those who hold ministerial offices in the government. 2 Inst. 208.

MINISTRY. The term as used in England is wider than Cabinet and includes all the holders of public office who come in and go out with the Prime Minister. In this respect it may be contrasted with the Permanent Civil Service, whose tenure is independent of public changes. The first English Ministry as now understood was formed after the general election of 1696. Macaulay, Hist. Engl., ch. 24.

"Ecclesiastical functions," or "duties." Rector, etc., of St. George's Church in City of New York v. Morgan, 88 Misc. 702, 152 N.Y.S. 497, 498.

MINOR. An infant or person who is under the age of legal competence. One under twenty-one. A term derived from the civil law, which described a person under a certain age as less than so many years. Minor viginti quinque annis, one less than twenty-five years of age. Inst. 1, 14, 2; Audsley v. Hale, 303 Mo. 451, 261 S.W. 117, 123.

Also, less; of less consideration; lower; a person of inferior condition. Fleta, 2, 47, 13, 15; Calvin.

MINOR /ETAS. Lat. Minority or infancy. Cro. Car. 516. Literally, lesser age.

MINOR ANTE TEMPUS AGERE NON POTEST IN CASU PROPRIETATIS NEC ETIAM CONVENIRE; DIFFERETUR USQUE IETATEM; SED NON CADIT BREVE. 2 Inst. 291. A minor before majority cannot act in a case of property, nor even agree; it should be deferred until ma.-j ority; but the writ does not fail.

MINOR FACT. In the law of evidence, a relative, collateral, or subordinate fact; a circumstance. Wills, Circ.Ev. 27; Burrill, Circ.Ev. p. 121, note, 582.

MINOR JURARE NON POTEST. A minor cannot make oath. Co.Litt. 172b. An infant cannot be sworn on a jury. Litt. 289.

MINOR MINOREM CUSTODIRE NON DEBET, ALMS ENIM PRIESUMITUR MALE REGERE QUI SEIPSUM REGERE NESCIT. A minor ought not to be guardian to a minor, for he who knows not how to govern himself is presumed to be unfit to govern others. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 10; Co.Litt. 88b.

MINOR NON TENETUR RESPONDERE DURANTE MINORI 1ETATE, NISI IN CAUSA DOTIS, PROPTER FAVOREM. 3 Bulst. 143. A minor is not bound to reply during his minority, except as a matter of favor in a cause of dower.

MINOR QUI INFRA IETATEM 12 ANNORUM FUERIT UITAGARI NON POTEST, NEC EXTRA LEGEM PONI, QUTA ANTE TALEM AITATEM, NON EST SUB LEGE ALIQUA, NEC IN DECENNA. Co.Litt. 128. A minor who is under twelve years of age cannot be outlawed, nor placed without the law, because before such age he is not under any law, nor in a decennary.

MINOR SEPTEMDECIM ANNIS NON ADMITTITUR FORE EXECUTOREM. A person under seventeen years is not admitted to be an executor. 6 Coke, 67. A rule of ecclesiastical law.

MINORA REGALIA. In English law, the lesser prerogatives of the crown, including the rights of the revenue. 1 Bl.Comm. 241.

MINORITY. The state or condition of a minor; infancy.

The smaller number of votes of a deliberative assembly; opposed to majority, (which see.)

MINT. The place designated by law where bullion is coined into money under authority of the government.

Also a place of privilege, in Southwark, near the king's prison, where persons formerly sheltered themselves from justice under the pretext that it was an ancient palace of the crown. The privilege is now abolished. Wharton.

MINT-MARK. The masters and workers of the English mint, in the indentures made with them, agreed "to make a privy mark in the money they make, of gold and silver, so that they may know which moneys were of their own making." After every trial of the pix, having proved their moneys to be lawful, they were entitled to their quietus under the great seal, and to be discharged from all suits or actions. Wharton.

MINT-MASTER. One who manages the coinage.

MINTAGE. The charge or commission taken by the mint as a consideration for coining into money the bullion which is brought to it for that purpose; the same as "seigniorage."

Also that which is coined or stamped as money; the product of the mint.

MINUS. Lat. In the civil law, less; less than. The word had also, in some connections, the sense of "not at all." For example, a debt remaining wholly unpaid was described as "minus solutum."

MINUS LATIUM. See Jus Latium.

MINUS SOLVIT, QUI TARDIUS SOLVIT. He does not pay who pays too late. Dig. 50, 16, 12, 1.

MINUTE. In measures of time or circumference, a minute is the sixtieth part of an hour or degree.

MINUTE-BOOK. A book kept by the clerk or prothonotary of a court for entering memoranda of its proceedings.

MINUTE TITHES. Small tithes, usually belonging to the vicar; e. g. eggs, honey, wax, etc. 3 Burn, Eccl.Law 680; 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 71, §§ 17, 18, 27.

MINUTES. Business law. Memoranda or notes of a transaction or proceeding. Thus, the record of the proceedings at a meeting of directors or shareholders of a company is called the "minutes."

Practice. A memorandum of what takes place in court, made by authority of the court. Moore v. State, 3 Heisk., Tenn., 509.

Scotch Practice. A pleading put into writing before the lord ordinary, as the ground of his judgment. Bell.

MINUTIO. Lat. In the civil law, a lessening; diminution or reduction. Dig. 4, 5, 1.

MIRANDA RULE. Prior to any custodial interrogation; that is, questioning initiated by law enforcement officers after a person is taken into custody or otherwise deprived of his freedom in any significant way, the person must be warned:

1. That he has a right to remain silent;
2. That any statement he does make may be used as evidence agaiast him;
3. That he has a right to the presence of an attorney;
4. That if he cannot afford an attorney, one will be appointed for him prior to any questioning if he so desires.

Unless and until these warnings or a waiver of these rights are demonstrated at the trial, no evidence obtained in the interrogation may be used against the accused. Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 444, 478, 479, 86 S.Ct. 1602, 1612, 1630, 16 L.Ed.2d 294.

MIRROR. The Mirror of Justice, or of the Justices, commonly spoken of as the "Mirror," is an ancient treatise on the laws of England, supposedly written during the reign of Edward II., and attributed to one Andrew Horne. But it has been thought that the germ of it was written before the Conquest and that Horne only made additions to it.

MIS. An inseparable particle used. in composition, to mark an ill sense or depravation of the meaning; as "miscomputation" or "misaccompting," e., false reckoning.

MISA. In old English law, the mise or issue in a writ of right. Spelman.

In old records, a compact or agreement; a form of compromise. Cowell.

MISADVENTURE. A mischance or accident; a casualty caused by the act of one person inflicting injury upon another. Homicide "by misadventure" occurs where a man, doing a lawful act, without any intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another. 4 Bl.Comm. 182; Williamson v. State, 2 Ohio Cir. Ct.R. 292.

MISALLEGE. To cite falsely as a proof or argument.

MISAPPLICATION. Improper, illegal, wrongful, or corrupt use or application of funds, property, etc. Jewett v. U. S., C.C.A.Mass., 100 F. 840, 41 C.C.A. 88; Kansas Flour Mills Co. v. American Surety Co. of New York, 98 Kan. 618, 158 P. 1118.

MISAPPROPRIATION. The act of misappropriating or turning to a wrong purpose; wrong appropriation; a term which does not necessarily mean peculation, although it may mean that. Bannon v. Knauss, 57 Ohio App. 288, 13 N.E.2d 733, 735.

MISBEHAVIOR. Ill conduct; improper or unlawful behavior. Smith v. Cutler, 10 Wend., N.Y., 590, 25 Am.Dec. 580; State v. Arnold, 100 Tenn. 307, 47 S.W. 221.

MISBRANDING. False or misleading labeling. People v. Rosenbloom, Cal., 119 Cal.App. 759, 2 P.2d 228, 231.

MISCARRIAGE. Medical jurisprudence. The expulsion of the ovum or embryo from the uterus within the first six weeks after conception. Between that time, and before the expiration of the sixth month, when the child may possibly live, it is termed "abortion." When the delivery takes place soon after the sixth month, it is denominated "premature labor." But the criminal act of destroying or bringing forth prematurely the fœtus or unborn offspring of a pregnant woman, at any time before birth, is termed, in law, "procuring miscarriage." Chit.Med.Jur. 410. Smith v. State, 33 Me. 59, 54 Am.Dec. 607; People v. Rankin, 10 Cal.2d 198, 74 P.2d 71, 73.

The failure of a woman, from causes beyond her control to carry a fetus to maturity. Flory v. Supreme Tribe of Ben Hur, 98 Neb. 160, 152 N.W. 295.

Practice. As used in the statute of frauds, ("debt, default, or miscarriage of another,") this term means any species of unlawful conduct or wrongful act for which the doer could be held liable in a civil action. Gansey v. Orr, 173 Mo. 532, 73 S.W. 477.

MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE. Prejudice to substantial rights of a party. See the cases of State v. Cluff, 48 Utah, 102, 158 P. 701, 703; State v. Nell, 117 Wash. 142, 202 P. 7, 8.

MISCASTING. An error in auditing and numbering. It does not include any pretended miscasting or misvaluing. 4 Bouvier, Inst. n. 4128.

MISCEGENATION. Mixture of races; marriage between persons of different races; as between a white person and a Negro.

Living together in state of adultery or fornication, by white person and Negro, or descendant of Negro. Jackson v. State, 23 Ala.App. 555, 129 So. 306.

MISCHARGE. An erroneous charge; a charge, given by a court to a jury, which involves errors for which the judgment may be reversed.

MISCHIEF. In legislative parlance, the word is often used to signify the evil or danger which a statute is intended to cure or avoid.

In the phrase "malicious mischief," (which see,) it imports a wanton or reckless injury to persons or property.

MISCOGNISANT. Ignorant; uninformed. The word is obsolete.

MISCONDUCT. A transgression of some established and definite rule of action, a forbidden act, a dereliction from duty, unlawful behavior, willful in character, improper or wrong behavior; its synonyms are misdemeanor, misdeed, misbehavior, delinquency, impropriety, mismanagement, offense, but not negligence or carelessness. Mandella v. Mariano, 61 R.I. 163, 200 A. 478, 479.

MISCONDUCT IN OFFICE. Any unlawful behavior by a public officer in relation to the duties of his office, willful in character. Wysong v. Walden, 120 W.Va. 122; 196 S.E. 573, 575.

MISCONTINUANCE. In practice, an improper continuance; want of proper form in a continuance; the same with "discontinuance." Cowell.

MISCREANT. In old English law, an apostate; an unbeliever; one who totally renounced Christianity. 4 Bl.Comm. 44.

MISDATE. A false or erroneous date affixed to a paper or document.

MISDELIVERY. The delivery of property by a carrier or warehouseman to a person not authorized by the owner or person to whom the carrier or warehouseman is bound by his contract to deliver it. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Potts, 33 Ind. App. 564, 71 N.E. 689; Forbes v. Boston & L. R. Co., 133 Mass. 156.

MISDEMEANANT. A person guilty of a misdemeanor; one sentenced to punishment upon conviction of a misdemeanor. See First-Class Misdemeanant.

MISDEMEANOR. Offenses lower than felonies and generally those punishable by fine or imprisonment otherwise than in penitentiary. People v. Harshbarger, 296 Ill.App. 397, 16 N.E.2d 247, 248.

An act committed or omitted in violation of a public law either forbidding or commanding it. State v. Magee Pub. Co., 29 N.M. 455, 224 P. 1028, 1031, 38 A.L.R. 142; State v. Jackson, 142 La. 540, 77 So. 196, 197, L.R.A.1918B, 1178.

In the English law, "misdemeanor" is generally used in contradistinction to "felony ;" and misdemeanors comprehend all indictable offenses which do not amount to felony, as libels, conspiracies, attempts, and solicitations to corn-mit felonies, etc. Brown. People v. Upson, 79 Hun 87, 29 N.Y.Supp. 615; In re Bergin, 31 Wis. 386; Walsh v. People, 65 Ill. 65, 16 Am. Rep. 569.

Under modern statutes the distinction between felonies and misdemeanors is not whether the offense is infamous, but whether it is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary or capitally, in which case it is a "felony" ; otherwise a "misdemeanor." Jones v. Brinkley, 174 N.C. 23, 93 S.E. 372, 373; Lee Lewis, Inc., v. Dosch, 193 Ky. 163, 235 S.W. 355, 356.

MISDESCRIPTION. An error or falsity in the description of the subject-matter of a contract which deceives one of the parties to his injury, or is misleading in a material or substantial point.

MISDIRECTION. In practice, an error made by a judge in instructing the jury upon the trial of a cause.

MISE. The issue in a writ of right. When the tenant in a writ of right pleads that his title is better than the demandant's, he is said to join the mice on the mere right.

Also expenses; costs; disbursements in an action.

MISE-MONEY. Money paid by way of contract or composition to purchase any liberty, etc. Blount.

MISERA EST SERVITUS, UBI JUS EST VAGUM AUT INCERTUM. It is a wretched state of slavery which subsists where the law is vague or uncertain. 4 Inst. 245; Broom, Max. 150.

MISERABILE DEPOSITUM. Lat. In the civil law, the name of an involuntary deposit, made under pressing necessity; as, for instance, shipwreck, fire, or other inevitable calamity. Poth. Proc. Civile, pt. 5, c. 1, § 1; Code La. art. 2935, Civ. Code, art. 2964.

MISERERE. The name and first word of one of the penitential psalms, being that which was commonly used to be given by the ordinary to such condemned malefactors as were allowed the benefit of clergy; whence it is also called the "psalm of mercy." Wharton.

MISERICORDIA. Lat. Mercy; a fine or amen ciarnent; an arbitrary or discretionary amercement.

MISERICORDIA COMMUNIS. In old English law, a fine set on a whole county or hundred.

MISFEASANCE. A misdeed or trespass. The improper performance of some act which a man may lawfully do. 3 Steph.Comm. 460. Bell v. Josselyn, 3 Gray, Mass. 309, 63 Am.Dec. 741.

"Nonfeasance" means the omission of an act which a person ought to do; "misfeasance" is the improper doing of an act which a person might lawfully do; and "malfeasance" is the doing of an act which a person ought not to do at all. Proksch v. Bettendorf, 218 Iowa 1376, 257 N.W. 383. But "misfeasance" is often used in the sense of "malfeasance." Coite v. Lynes, 33 Conn. 109; Brooks v. Hornbeck, Tex.Civ.App., 274 S.W. 162, 163.

MISFEAZANCE. See Misfeasance.

MISFORTUNE. An adverse event, calamity, or evil fortune, arising by accident, (or without the will or concurrence of him who suffers from It,) and not to be foreseen or guarded against by care or prudence. 20 Q.B.Div. 816. Swetland v. Swetland, 100 N.J.Eq. 196, 134 A. 822, .829. In its application to the law of homicide, this term always involves the further idea that the person causing the death is not at the time engaged in any unlawful act. 4 Bl.Comm. 182. Gaunce v. State, 22 Okl.Cr. 361, 211 P. 517, 518.

MISJOINDER. See Joinder.

MISKENNING. In Saxon and old English law, an unjust or irregular summoning to court; to speak unsteadily in court; to vary in one's plea. Cowell; Blount; Spelman.

MISLAY. To deposit in a place not afterwards recollected; to lose anything by forgetfulness of the place where it was laid. Shehane v. State, 13 Tex.App. 535.

MISLEADING. Delusive; calculated to lead astray or to lead into error. Diamond Drill Contracting Co. v. International Diamond Drill Contracting Co., 106 Wash. 72, 179 P. 120, 122. In.-structions which are of such a nature as to be misunderstood by the jury, or to give them a wrong impression, are said to be "misleading."

MISNOMER. Mistake in name; giving incorrect name to person in accusation, indictment, pleading, deed or other instrument. Culpepper v. State, 173 Ga. 799, 161 S.E. 623.

MISPLEADING. Pleading incorrectly, or omitting anything in pleading which is essential to the support or defense of an action, is so called; as in the case of a plaintiff not merely stating his title in a defective manner, but setting forth a title which is essentially defective in itself; or if, to an action of debt, the defendant pleads "not guilty" instead of nil debet. Brown. Lovett v. Pell, 22 Wend., N.Y., 376; Chicago & A. IL Co. v. Murphy, 198 Ill. 462, 64 N.E. 1011.

MISPRISION. A word used to describe a misdemeanor which does not possess a specific name. 3 Inst. 36; United States v. Perlstein, C.C.A.N.J., 126 F.2d 789, 798. But more particularly and properly the term denotes either (1) a contempt against the sovereign, the government, or the courts of justice, including not only contempts of court, properly so called, but also all forms of seditious or disloyal conduct and leze-majesty; (2) maladministration of high public office, including peculation of the public funds; (3) neglect or light account made of a crime, that is, failure in the duty of a citizen to endeavor to prevent the commission of a crime, or, having knowledge of its commission, to reveal it to the proper authorities. 4 Bl.Comm. 119-126; State v. Biddle, 124 A. 804, 805, 2 W.W.Harr., Del. 401.

Negative misprision. The concealment of something which ought to be revealed; that is, misprision in the third of the specific meanings given above.

Positive misprision. The commission of something which ought not to be done; that is, misprision in the first and second of the specific meanings given above.

Practice. A clerical error or mistake made in writing or keeping records. State v. Ryan, 146 Wash. 114, 261 P. 775, 776.

MISPRISION OF FELONY. The offense of concealing a felony committed by another, but without such previous concert with or subsequent assistance to the felon as would make the party concealing an accessory before or after the fact. 4 Steph.Comm. 260; 4 Bl.Comm. 121; United States v. Perlstein, C.C.A.N.J., 126 F.2d 789, 798.

MISPRISION OF TREASON. The bare knowledge and concealment of an act of treason or treasonable plot, that is, without any assent or participation therein, for if the latter elements be present the party becomes a principal. 4 Bl.Comm. 120; Pen.Code Cal. '§ 38.

MISREADING. Reading a deed or other instrument to an illiterate or blind man (who is a party to it) in a false or deceitful manner, so that he conceives a wrong idea of its tenor or contents. 5 Coke, 19; 6 East, 309; Hallenbeck v. Dewitt, 2 Johns., N.Y. 404.

MISRECITAL. The erroneous or incorrect recital of a matter of fact, either in an agreement, deed, or pleading.

MISREPRESENTATION. Any manifestation by words or other conduct by one person to another that, under the circumstances, amounts to an assertion not in accordance with the facts. A. P. Landis, Inc., v. Mellinger, 116 Pa.Super. 167, 175 A. 745, 746.

An untrue statement of fact. An incorrect or false representation. That which, if accepted, leads the mind to an apprehension of a condition other and different from that which exists. Colloquially it is understood to mean a statement made to deceive or mislead. Haigh v. White Way Laundry Co., 164 Iowa 143, 145 N.W. 473, 474, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 1091; Zackwik v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., Mo. App., 225 S.W. 135, 138.

In a limited sense, an intentional false statement respecting a matter of fact, made by one of the parties to a contract, which is material to the contract and influential in producing it. Wise v. Fuller, 29 N.J.Eq. 262; Hicks v. Wynn, 137 Va. 186, 119 S.E. 133, 135.

A "misrepresentation," which justifies the rescission of a contract, is a false statement of a substantive fact, or any conduct which leads to a belief of a substantive fact material to proper understanding of the matter in hand, made with intent to deceive or mislead. Rhodes v. Uhl, 189 Iowa 408, 178 N.W. 394, 400.

Misrepresentation such as will amount to false pretense is not confined to mere oral misstatements of fact but includes distribution of printed matter, or a course of conduct, manifestly intended to deceive as to conditions actually existing. Commonwealth v. Dougherty, 84 Pa.Super. Ct. 319, 321.

False or fraudulent misrepresentation is a representation contrary to the fact, made by a person with a knowledge of its falsehood, and being the cause of the other party's entering into the contract. 6 Clark & F. 232.

Negligent misrepresentation is a false representation made by a person who has no reasonable grounds for believing it to be true, though he does not know that it is untrue, or even believes it to be true. L.R. 4 H.L. 79.

Innocent misrepresentation occurs where the person making the representation had reasonable grounds for believing it to be true. L.R. 2 Q.B. 580.

Insurance law. A statement of something as a fact which is untrue and material to the risk, and which assured states knowing it to be untrue and with intent to deceive, or which insured states positively as true, not knowing it to be true, and which has a tendency to mislead. Lawson v. Southwestern Voluntary Ass'n, 168 Va. 294, 191 S. E. 648, 649.

Material misrepresentation. In insurance law, one that would influence a prudent insurer in determining whether or not to accept the risk, or in fixing the amount of the premium in the event of such acceptance. Sovereign Camp, W. 0. W., v. Parker, 36 Ga.App. 695, 138 S.E. 86, 87.

MISSA. Lat. The mass.

MISSZE PRESBYTER. A priest in orders. Blount.

MISSAL. The mass-book.

MISSILIA. In Roman law, gifts or liberalities, which the praetors and consuls were in the habit of throwing among the people. Inst. 2, 1, 45.

MISSING SHIP. In maritime law, a vessel is so called when, computed from her known day of sailing, the time that has elapsed exceeds the average duration of similar voyages at the same season of the year. 2 Duer, Ins. 469.

MISSIONARIES. The term "missionaries," as used in the liquor trade, applies to men employed to visit saloons throughout the country and puff liquors of particular manufacture, so that salesmen of wholesalers and jobbers will find the way prepared for them. Hiram Walker & Sons v. Corning & Co., D.C.Ill., 255 F. 129, 130.

MISSIONS. In church parlance, the establishment of churches and schools and relief depots' through which are taught the principles of Christianity, the afflicted cared for, and the needy supplied. Hitchcock v. Board of Home Missions, 259 Ill. 288, 102 N.E. 741, 744, Ann.Cas.1915B, 1.

MISSIVES. In Scotch law, writings passed between parties as evidence of a transaction. Bell.

MISSTAICUS. In old records, a messenger.

MISSURA. The ceremonies used in a Roman Catholic church to recommend and dismiss a dying person.

MISTAKE. Some unintentional act, omission, or error arising from ignorance, surprise, imposition, or misplaced confidence. Code Ga. § 3117, Civ. Code 1910, § 4570; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 110.

A mistake exists when a person, under some erroneous conviction of law or fact, does, or omits to do, some act which, but for the erroneous conviction, he would not have done or omitted. Jeremy, Eq. Jur. 358; Ward v. Lyman, 108 Vt. 464, 188 A. 892, 896. It may arise either from unconsciousness, ignorance, forgetfulness, imposition, or misplaced confidence. Bisph. Eq. § 185; Salazar v. Steelman, 22 Cal.App.2d 402, 71 P.2d 79, 82.

Mistake of fact is a mistake not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake, and consisting in (1) an unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a fact, past or present, material to the contract; or (2) belief in the present existence of a thing material to the contract which does not exist, or in the past existence of such a thing which has not existed. Callan Court Co. v. Citizens & Southern Nat. Bank, 184 Ga. 87, 190 S.E. 831, 854.

A mistake of law happens when a party, having full knowledge of the facts, comes to an erroneous conclusion as to their legal effect. It is a mistaken opinion or inference, arising from an imperfect or incorrect exercise of the judgment, upon facts, Page v. Provines, 179 Okl. 391, 66 P.2d 7, 10; and necessarily presupposes that the person forming it is in full possession of the facts. The facts precede the law, and the true and false opinion alike imply an acquaintance with them. The one is the result of a correct application of legal principles, which every man is presumed to know, and is called "law ;" the other, the result of a faulty application, and is called a "mistake of law." Hurd v. Hall, 12 Wis. 124; Barnett v. Douglas, 102 Okl. 85, 226 P. 1035, 1037, 39 A.L.R. 188.

Mutual mistake is where the parties have a common intention, but it is induced by a common or mutual mistake. Paine-Fishburn Granite Co. v. Reynoldson, 115 Neb. 520, 213 N.W. 750, 751; Northwest Thresher Co. v. McNinch, 42 Okl. 155, 140 P. 1170, 1172. "Mutual" as used in the expression mutual mistake of fact expresses a thought of reciprocity and distinguishes it from a mistake which is a common mistake of both parties. There is something of the thought of a common mistake because it must affect both parties. Mistake of fact as ground for relief may be neither "mutual" nor common in the strict sense because it may be wholly the mistake of one of the parties, the other being wholly ignorant both of the fact upon the faith of which the other has mistakenly acted and that the other has acted upon such an understanding of the fact situation. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Heller, D.C.Pa., 259 F. 885, 890; Litteral v. Bevins, 186 Ky. 514, 217 S.W. 369, 370.

MISTERY. A trade or calling. Cowell.

MISTRESS. The proper style of the wife of an esquire or a gentleman in England.

MISTRIAL. An erroneous, invalid, or nugatory trial; a trial of an action which cannot stand in law because of want of jurisdiction, or a wrong drawing of jurors, or disregard of some other fundamental requisite. C. W. Hunt Co. v. Boston Elevated Ry. Co., 217 Mass. 319, 104 N.E. 728, 729; Illinois Oil Co. v. Grandstaff, 118 Okl. 101, 246 P. 832, 833.

MISUSER. An unlawful use of a right. Abuse of an office or franchise. 2 Bl.Comm. 153.

MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES. Such as do not constitute a justification or excuse of the offense in question, but which, in fairness and mercy, may be considered as extenuating or reducing the degree of moral culpability. Heaton v. Wright, 10 How.Prac., N.Y. 82. Those that affect basis for award of exemplary damages, or reduce actual damages by showing, not that they were never suffered, but that they have been partially extinguished. McClelland v. Climax Hosiery Mills, 252 N.Y. 347, 169 N.E. 605, 608. And in actions for libel and slander, circumstances bearing on defendant's liability for exemplary damages by reducing moral culpability, or on liability for actual damages by showing partial extinguishment thereof. Civil Practice Act, §§ 262, 338. Fleckenstein v. Friedman, 266 N.Y. 19, 193 N.E. 537, 539.

MITIGATION. Alleviation; abatement or diminution of a penalty or punishment imposed by law.

Reduction, diminishing, or lessening amount of penalty or punishment. People v. Fook, 206 Cal. 64, 273 P. 779, 782.

MITIGATION OF DAMAGES. A reduction of the amount of damages, not by proof of facts which are a bar to a part of the plaintiff's cause of action, or a justification, nor yet of facts which constitute a cause of action in favor of the defendant, but rather facts which show that the plaintiff's conceded cause of action does not entitle him to so large an amount as the showing on his side would otherwise justify the jury in allowing him. 1 Suth. Dam. 226.

MITIOR SENSUS. Lat. The more favorable acceptation.

MITIUS IMPERANTI MELIUS PARETUR. The more mildly one commands, the better is he obeyed. 3 Inst. 24.

MITOYENNETE. In French law, the joint ownership of two neighbors in a wall, ditch, or hedge which separates their estates.

MITTENDO MANUSCRIPTUM PEDIS FINIS. An abolished judicial writ addressed to the treasurer and chamberlain of the exchequer to search for and transmit the foot of a fine acknowledged before justices in eyre into the common pleas. Reg. Orig. 14.

MITTER. L. Fr. To put, to send, or to pass; as, mitter restate, to pass the estate; mitter le droit, to pass a right. These words are used to distinguish different kinds of releases.

MITTER AVANT. L. Fr. In old practice, to put before; to present before a court; to produce in court.

MITTIMUS. Criminal practice. The name of a precept in writing, issuing from a court or magistrate, directed to the sheriff or other officer, commanding him to convey to the prison the person named therein, and to the jailer, commanding him to receive and safely keep such person until he shall be delivered by due course of law. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1293. Connolly v. Anderson, 112 Mass. 62; Saunders v. U. S., D.C.Me., 73 F. 786. Transcript of minutes of conviction and sentence duly certified by court clerk. United States ex rel. Chasteen v. Denemark, C.C.A.I11., 138 F.2d 289, 291.

Old English law. A writ enclosing a record sent to be tried in a county palatine; it derives its name from the Latin word mittimus, "we send." It is the jury process of these counties, and commands the proper officer of the county palatine to command the sheriff to summon the jury for the trial of the cause, and to return the record, etc. Territory v. Hattick, 2 Mart. 0. S., La., 88.

MIXED. Formed by admixture or commingling; partaking of the nature, character, or legal attributes of two or more distinct kinds or classes.

As to mixed "Action," "Blood," "Contract," "Government," "Jury," "Larceny," "Marriage," "Nuisance," "Policy," "Presumption," "Property," "Tithes," and "War," see those titles.

MIXED ESTATE. Leasehold estates created by ground rent leases for 99 years renewable forever, both at common law and in Maryland, are sometimes called "mixed estates". Jones v. Magruder, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 193, 198.

MIXED INSURANCE COMPANY. One which has, at least in part, the nature of both stock and mutual companies, and in which a certain Portion of the profits is divided among the stockholders and distribution of other funds is made among the insured. Ohio Farmers Indemnity Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.6, 108 F.2d 665, 667; Pink v. Town Taxi Co., 138 Me. 44, 21 A.2d 656, 658, 659.

MIXED LAWS. A name sometimes given to those which concern both persons and property.

MIXED QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT. A question depending for solution on questions of both law and fact, but is really a question of either law or fact to be decided by either judge or jury. State v. Hayes, 162 La. 917, 111 So. 327, 329.

MIXED QUESTIONS. This phrase may mean either those which arise from the conflict of foreign and domestic laws, or questions arising on a trial involving both law and fact. Bennett v. Eddy, 120 Mich. 300, 79 N.W. 481.

MIXED SUBJECTS OF PROPERTY. Such as fall within the definition of things real, but which are attended, nevertheless, with some of the legal qualities of things personal, as emblements, fixtures, and shares in public undertakings, connected with land. Besides these, there are others which, though things personal in point of definition, are, in respect of some of their legal qualities, of the nature of things real; such are animals ferns naturce, charters and deeds, court rolls, and other evidences of the land, together with the chests in which they are contained, ancient family pictures, ornaments, tombstones, coats of armor, with pennons and other ensigns, and especially heirlooms. Wharton.

MIXED TRAIN. "Mixed train" is one carrying both passengers and freight. State v. Chicago, St. P., M. & 0. Ry. Co., 115 Neb. 306, 212 N.W. 535, 536; Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. State, 29 Ariz. 446, 242 P. 870, 871.

MIXED TRIBUNALS. A name given to an international jurisdiction introduced into Egypt in 1878, after negotiations with the various Christian Powers of Europe.

This tribunal made the administration of civil justice quite independent of the government of Egypt. They have jurisdiction over cases between persons of different nationalities, whether native or European, but criminal charges against natives are heard in the native criminal courts and those against Europeans in the proper consular courts. There are three first instance courts, one at Alexandria with eighteen judges, of whom twelve are foreign, one at Cairo with nineteen judges, of whom thirteen are foreign. and one at Mansurah with nine judges, of whom six are foreign, and a Court of Appeal sitting at Alexandria, composed of fifteen judges. The jurisdiction cannot be invoked unless one party is a foreigner, but it is said to be not uncommon for Egyptian merchants to assign their claims to foreigners, so as to get them into these courts. Ann.Bull. of Comp.Law Bureau, 1911, p. 43. The judges are subjects of various European states, and of the United States and Brazil. They are appointed by their respective governments; Milner, England in Egypt.

These courts were instituted for a period of five years only, and have been renewed at various times. Bonfils. Manual of Int.Law 460; 23 L.Q.R. 409; 8 Encyc.Laws of Eng. 445.

MIXTION. The mixture or confusion of goods or chattels belonging severally to different owners, in such a way that they can no longer be separated or distinguished; as where two measures of wine belonging to different persons are poured together into the same cask.

MIXTUM IMPERIUM. Lat. In old English law, mixed authority; a kind of civil power. A term applied by Lord Hale to the "power" of certain subordinate civil magistrates as distinct from "jurisdiction." Hale, Anal. § 11.

MOB. An assemblage of many people, acting in a violent and disorderly manner, defying the law, and committing, or threatening to commit, depredations upon property or violence to persons. Alexander v. State, 40 Tex.Cr.R. 395, 50 S.W. 716; Marshall v. Buffalo, 50 App.Div. 149, 64 N.Y.S. 411; Champaign County v. Church, 62 Ohio St. 318, 57 N.E. 50, 48 L.R.A. 738.

The word, in legal use, is practically synonymous with "riot," but the latter is the more correct term. Koska v. Kansas City, 123 Kan. 362, 255 P. 57, 58; Blakeman v. City of Wichita, 93 Kan. 444, 144 P. 816, L.R.A.1915C, 578.

MOBBING AND RIOTING. In Scotch law, a general term including all those convocations of the lieges for violent and unlawful purposes, which are attended with injury to the persons or property of the lieges, or terror and alarm to the neighborhood in which it takes place. The two phrases are usually placed together; but, nevertheless, they have distinct meanings, and are sometimes used separately in legal language, the word "mobbing" being peculiarly applicable to the unlawful assemblage and violence of a number of persons, and that of "rioting" to the outrageous behavior of a single individual. Alis. Crim. Law, c. 23, p. 509.

MOBILIA. Lat. Movables; movable things; otherwise called "res mobiles."

MOBILIA NON HABENT SITUM. Movables have no situs or local habitation. Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns., N.Y., Ch. 472, 8 Am.Dec. 581.

MOBILIA SEQUUNTUR PERSONAM. Movables follow the [law of the] person. Story, Conti. Law, § 378; Broom, Max. 522, MOCK. To deride, to laugh at, to ridicule, to treat with scorn and contempt. State v. Warner, 34 Conn. 279.

MOCKADOES. A kind of cloth made in England, mentioned in St. 23 Eliz. c. 9.

MODAL LEGACY. See Legacy.

MODE. The manner in which a thing is done; as the mode of proceeding, the mode of process. Anderson's L. Dict.

MODEL. A pattern or representation of something to be made. A fac simile of something invented, made on a reduced scale, in compliance with the patent laws. State v. Fox, 25 N.J.L. 566; Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston, etc., Min. Co., 27 Mont. 288, 70 P. 1126.

MODERAMEN INCULPATIE TUTELIE. Lat. In Roman law, the regulation of justifiable defense. A term used to express that degree of force in defense of the person or property which a person might safely use, although it should occasion the death of the aggressor. Calvin; Bell.

MODERATA MISERICORDIA. A writ founded on Magna Charta, which lies for him who is amerced in a court, not of record, for any transgression beyond the quality or quantity of the offense. It is addressed to the lord of the court, or his bailiff, commanding him to take a moderate amerciament of the parties. New Nat. Brev. 167; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 76.

MODERATE CASTIGAVIT. Lat. In pleading, he moderately chastised. The name of a plea in trespass which justifies an alleged battery on the ground that it consisted in a moderate chastisement of the plaintiff by the defendant, which, from their relations, the latter had a legal right to inflict.

MODERATE SPEED. In admiralty law, as applied to a steam-vessel, "such speed only is moderate as will permit the steamer reasonably and effectually to avoid a collision by slackening speed, or by stopping and reversing, within the distance at which an approaching vessel can be seen." The City of New York, C.C.N.Y., 35 F. 609; The Allianca, D.C.N.Y., 39 F. 480. As to sailing vessel, see The Robert M. Thompson, C.C.A.N.Y., 244 F. 662, 671.

MODERATOR. A chairman or president of an assembly. A person appointed to preside at a popular meeting. The presiding officer of town-meetings in New England is so called. See Wheeler v. Carter, 180 Mass. 382, 62 N.E. 471.

MODIATIO. In old English law, a certain duty paid for every tierce of wine.

MODICA CIRCUMSTANTIA FACTI JUS MUTAT. A small circumstance attending an act may change the law.

MODIFICATION. A change; an alteration which introduces new elements into the details, or cancels some of them, but leaves the general purpose and effect of the subject-matter intact. Wiley v. Corporation of Bluffton, 111 Ind. 152, 12 N.E. 165; State v. Tucker, 36 Or. 291, 61 P. 894, 51 L.R.A. 246.

"Modification" is not exactly synonymous with "amendment," for the former term denotes some minor change in the substance of the thing, without reference to its improvement or deterioration thereby, while the latter word imports an amelioration of the thing (as by changing the phraseology of an instrument, so as to make it more distinct or specific) without involving the idea of any change in substance or essence.

Scotch law. The term usually applied to the decree of the teind court, awarding a suitable stipend to the minister of a parish. Bell.

MODIFY. To alter; to change in incidental or subordinate features; enlarge, extend; limit, reduce. State v. Lincoln, 133 Minn. 178, 158 N.W. 50, 52; U. S. v. Felder, D.C.N.Y., 13 F.2d 527, 528. See Modification.

MODIUS. Lat. A measure. Specifically, a Roman dry measure having a capacity of about 550 cubic inches; but in medieval English law used as an approximate translation of the word "bushel."

MODIUS TERRIE VEL AGRI. In old English law, a quantity of ground containing in length and breadth 100 feet.

MODO ET FORMA. Lat. In manner and form. Words used in the old Latin forms of pleadings by way of traverse, and literally translated in the modern precedents, importing that the party traversing denies the allegation of the other party, not only in its general effect, but in the exact manner and form in which it is made. Steph.P1. 189, 190.

MODUS. Lat. Civil law. Manner; means; way.

Old conveyancing. Mode; manner; the arrangement or expression of the terms of a contract or conveyance.

Also a consideration; the consideration of a conveyance, technically expressed by the word "ut."

A qualification, involving the idea of variance or departure from some general rule or form, either by way of restriction or enlargement, according to the circumstances of a particular case, the will of a donor, the particular agreement of parties, and the like. Burrill.

Criminal pleading. The modus of an indictment is that part of it which contains the narrative of the commission of the crime; the statement of the mode or manner in which the offense was committed. Tray. Lat. Max.

Ecclesiastical law. A peculiar manner of tithing, growing out of custom.

Rank modus. One that is too large. Rankness is a mere rule of evidence, drawn from the improbability of the fact, rather than a rule of law. 2 Steph.Comm. 729.

MODUS DE NON DECIMANDO. In ecclesiastical law, a custom or prescription of entire exemption from the payment of tithes; this is not valid, unless in the case of abbey-lands.

MODUS DE NON DECIMANDO NON VALET. A modus (prescription) not to pay tithes is void. Lofft, 427; Cro.Eliz. 511; 2 Shars.B1.Comm. 31.

MODUS DECIMANDI. In ecclesiastical law, a manner of tithing; a partial exemption from tithes, or a pecuniary composition prescribed by immemorial usage, and of reasonable amount; for it will be invalid as a rank modus if greater than the value of the tithes in the time of Richard I. Stim.Law Gloss.

MOHATRA. In French law, a transaction covering a fraudulent device to evade the laws against usury.

It takes place where an individual buys merchandise from another on a credit at a high price, to sell it immediately to the first seller, or to a third person who acts as his agent, at a much less price for cash. 16 Toullier, no. 44.

MOIDORE. A gold coin of Portugal, valued at twenty-seven English shillings.

MOIETY. The half of anything. Joint tenants are said to hold by moieties. Litt. 125; 3 C.B. 274, 283; Young v. Smithers, 181 Ky. 847, 205 S.W. 949, 950.

MOIETY ACTS. A name sometimes applied to penal and criminal statutes which provide that half the penalty or fine shall inure to the benefit of the informer.

MOLENDINUM. In old records, a mill.

MOLENDUM. A grist; a certain quantity of corn sent to a mill to be ground.

MOLESTATION. In Scotch law, a possessory action calculated for continuing proprietors of landed estates in the lawful possession of them till the point of right be determined against all who shall attempt to disturb their possession. It is chiefly used in questions of commonty or of controverted marches. Ersk.Inst. 4, 1, 48.

MOLITURA. The toll or multure paid for grinding corn at a mill. Jacob.

MOLITURA LIBERA. Free grinding; a liberty to have a mill without paying tolls to the lord. Jacob.

MOLLITER MANUS IMPOSUIT. Lat. He gently laid hands upon. Formal words in the old Latin pleas in actions of trespass and assault where a defendant justified laying hands upon the plaintiff, as where it was done to keep the peace, etc. The phrase is literally translated in the modern precedents, and the original is retained as the name of the plea in such cases. 3 Bl.Comm. 21; 1 Chit.Pl. 501, 502; Id. 1071.

MOLMUTIAN LAWS. The laws of Dunvallo Molmutuis, a legendary or mythical king of the Britons, who is supposed to have begun his reign about 400 B. C. These laws were famous in the land till the Conquest. Tomlins; Mozley & Whiteley.

MOMENTUM. In the civil law, an instant; an indivisible portion of time. Calvin.

A portion of time that might be measured; a division or subdivison of an hour; answering in some degree to the modern minute, but of longer duration. Calvin.

MONACHISM. The state of monks.

MONARCHY. A government in which the supreme power is vested in a single person.

Where a monarch is Invested with absolute power, the monarchy is termed "despotic;" where the supreme power is virtually in the laws, though the majesty of government and the administration are vested in a single person, it is a "limited" or "constitutional" monarchy. It is hereditary where the regal power descends immediately from the possessor to the next heir by blood, as in England; or elective, as was formerly the case in Poland. Wharton.

MONASTERIUM. A monastery; a church. Spelman.

MONASTICON. A book giving an account of monasteries, convents, and religious houses.

MONETA. Lat. Money, (q. v.).

MONETA EST JUSTUM MEDIUM ET MENSURA RERUM COMMUTABELIUM, NAM PER MEDIUM MONETIE FIT OMNIUM RERUM CONVENTENS ET JUSTA ZESTIMATIO. Da^{y}. Ir. K. B. 18. Money is the just medium and measure of commutable things, for by the medium of money a convenient and just estimation of all things is made.

MONETAGIUM. Mintage, or the right of coining money. Cowell. Hence, anciently, a tribute payable to a lord who had the prerogative of coining money, by his tenants, in consideration of his refraining from changing the coinage.

MONETANDI JUS COMPREHENDITUR IN REGALIBUS QUIE NUNQUAM A REGIO SCEPTRO ABDICANTUR. The right of coining money is comprehended among those royal prerogatives which are never relinquished by the royal scepter. Da^{y}. Ir. K. B. 18.

MONETARY. The usual meaning is "pertaining to coinage or currency or having to do with money", but it has been held to include personal property. In re Kipp's Will, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 541, 543.

MONEY. In usual and ordinary acceptation it means gold, silver, or paper money used as circulating medium of exchange, And does not embrace notes, bonds, evidences of debt, or other personal or real estate. Lane v. Railey, 280 Ky. 319, 133 S.W.2d 74, 79, 81. Currency; the circulating medium; cash.

The term "moneys" is not of more extensive signification than "money," and means only cash, and not things in action. Mann v. Mann, 14 Johns., N.Y., 1, 7 Am.Dec. 416.

In its strict technical sense, "money" means coined metal, usually gold or silver, upon which the government stamp has been impressed to indicate its value. In its more popular sense, "money" means any currency, tokens, bank-notes, or other circulating medium in general use as the representative of value. Kennedy v. Briere, 45 Tex. 305; Cook v. State, 130 ,Nrk. 90, 196 S. W. 922, 924; Vick v. Howard, 136 Va. 101, 116 S.E. 465, 467, 31 A.L.R. 240.

The simple meaning of "money" is current coin, but it may mean possessions expressible in money values. "Money" has no technical meaning, but is of ambiguous import, and may be interpreted having regard to all surrounding circumstances under which it is used. "Money" is often and popularly used as equivalent to "property." "Money" means wealth reckoned in terms of money; capital considered as a cash asset; specifically such wealth or capital dealt in as a commodity to be loaned, invested, or the like; wealth considered as a cash asset. Salt Lake County v. Utah Copper Co., C.C.A.Utah, 93 F.2d 127, 132.

In its more comprehensive and general sense, it means wealth,—the representative of commodities of all kinds, of lands, and of everything that can be transferred in commerce. Paul v. Ball, 31 Tex. 10. A general, indefinite term for the measure and representative of value.

Public Money. Revenue. Hays v. State, 22 Okl.Cr. 99, 210 P. 728, 730. Money received by officers of the state in the ordinary processes of taxation, etc. Beaumont S. L. & W. Ry. Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W. 641, 642; Wardell v. Town of Killingly, 97 Conn. 423, 117 A. 520, 522. Under a municipal charter, money or funds belonging to a city; moneys which are owing or payable to the city in its corporate capacity, such as assessments, license fees, or moneys derived from the sales of property, wharfage charges, and such like, City of Sacramento v. Simmons, 66 Cal. App. 18, 225 P. 36, 39. Under a statute, all money which by law the sheriff in his capacity as such and as treasurer of the county and district is authorized to collect, receive, and disburse for public purposes. Bunch v. Short, 78 W.Va. 764, 90 S.E. 810, 812. As used in the United States statutes, the money of the federal government received from the public revenues, or intrusted to its fiscal officers, wherever it may be. See Branch v. U. S., 12 CICI. 281.

As to money "Broker," "Count," "Judgment," and "Scrivener," see those titles.

MONEY-BILL. In parliamentary language, an act by which revenue is directed to be raised, for any purpose or in any shape whatsoever, either for governmental purposes, and collected from the whole people generally, or for the benefit of a particular district, and collected in that district, or for making appropriations. Opinion of Justices, 126 Mass. 547; Northern Counties Inv. Trust v. Sears, 30 Or. 388, 41 P. 931, 35 L.R.A. 188.

MONEY CHANGERS. A money changer is one whose occupation is the exchanging of kinds or denominations of currency, and the common meaning of the term pertained to those persons who, in early history, engaged in the business of foreign exchange and it includes the business of a banker and buying and selling of uncurrent funds and the exchanging of one kind of money for another. Arnold v. City of Chicago, 387 Ill. 532, 56 N.E.2d 795, 799.

MONEY CLAIMS. In English practice, under the judicature act of 1875, claims for the price of goods sold, for money lent, for arrears of rent, etc., and other claims where money is directly payable on a contract express or implied, as opposed to the cases where money is claimed by way of damages for some independent wrong, whether by breach of contract or otherwise. These "money claims" correspond very nearly to the "money counts" hitherto in use. Mozley & Whitley.

MONEY DEMAND. A claim for a fixed and liquidated amount of money, or for a sum which can be ascertained by mere calculation; in this sense, distinguished from a claim which must be passed upon and liquidated by a jury, called "damages." Roberts v. Nodwift, 8 Ind. 341; Mills v. Long, 58 Ala. 460.

MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED. In pleading, the technical designation of a form of declaration in assumpsit, wherein the plaintiff declares that the defendant had and received certain money, etc.

Gist of action for "money had and received" is that defendant has received money which, in equity and good conscience, should have been paid to plaintiff and under such circumstances that he ought to pay it over. Bosworth v. Wolfe, 146 Wash. 615, 264 P. 413, 417, 56 A.L.R. 1117.

MONEY LAND. A phrase descriptive of money which is held upon a trust to convert it into land.

MONEY LENT. In pleading, the technical name of a declaration in an action of assumpsit for that the defendant promised to pay the plaintiff for money lent.

MONEY MADE. The return made by a sheriff to a writ of execution, signifying that he has collected the sum of money required by the writ.

MONEY OF ADIEU. In French law, earnest money; so called because given at parting in completion of the bargain. Arrhes is the usual French word for earnest money; "money of adieu" is a provincialism found in the province of Orleans. Poth.Cont. 507.

MONEY ORDER. Under the postal regulations of the United States, a money order is a species of draft drawn by one post-office upon another for an amount of money deposited at the first office by the person purchasing the money order, and payable at the second office to a payee named in the order. U. S. v. Long, C.C.Ga., 30 F. 679.

MONEY—ORDER OFFICE. One of the post-offices authorized to draw or pay money orders.

MONEY PAID. In pleading, the technical name of a declaration in assumpsit, in which the plaintiff declares for money paid for the use of the defendant.

MONEYED CAPITAL. This term has a more limited meaning than the term "personal property," and applies to such capital as is readily solvable in money. Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U.S. 138, 7 S.Ct. 826, 30 L.Ed. 895.

MONEYED CORPORATION. See Corporation.

MONGER. A dealer or seller. It is seldom or never used alone, or otherwise than after the name of any commodity, to express a seller of such commodity.

MONIERS, or MONEYEERS. Ministers of the mint; also bankers. Cowell.

MONIMENT. A memorial, superscription, or record.

MONITION. Admiralty. The summons to appear and answer, issued on filing the libel; which is either a simple monition in personam or an attachment and monition in rem. Ben.Adm. 228, 239.

It is sometimes termed "monition viis et modis," and has been supposed to be derived from the old Roman practice of summoning a defendant. Manro v. Almeida, 10 Wheat. 490, 6 L.Ed. 369.

The monition, in American admiralty practice, is, in effect, a summons, citation, or notice, though in form a command to the marshal to cite and admonish the defendant to appear and answer, and not a summons addressed to the party. 2 Conk.Adm., 2d Ed., 147.

General monition. In civil law and admiralty practice, a monition or summons to all parties in interest to appear and show cause against the decree prayed for.

Practice. A monition is a formal order of the court commanding something to be done by the person to whom it is directed, and who is called the "person monished." Thus, when money is decreed to be paid, a monition may be obtained commanding its payment. In ecclesiastical procedure, a monition is an order monishing or warning the party complained against to do or not to do a certain act "under pain of the law and contempt thereof." A monition may also be appended to a sentence inflicting a punishment for a past offense; in that case the monition forbids the repetition of the offense. Sweet.

MONITORY LETTERS. Communications of warning and admonition sent from an ecclesiastical judge, upon information of scandal and abuses within the cognizance of his court.

MONOCRACY. A government by one person.

MONOCRAT. A monarch who governs alone; an absolute governor.

MONOGAMY. The marriage of one wife only, or the state of such as are restrained to a single wife. Webster.

A marriage contracted between one man and one woman, in exclusion of all the rest of mankind. The term is used in opposition to "bigamy" and "polygamy." Wolff, Dr. de la Nat. § 857.

MONOGRAPH. A special treatise upon a particular subject of limited range; a treatise or commentary upon a particular branch or division of a general subject.

MONOMACHY. A duel; a single combat.

It was anciently allowed by law for the trial or proof of crimes. It was even permitted in pecuniary causes, but it is now forbidden both by the civil law and canon laws.

MONOMANIA. In medical jurisprudence, derangement of a single faculty of the mind, or with regard to a particular subject, the other faculties being in regular exercise. See Insanity.

MONOPOLIA DICITUR, CUM UNUS SOLUS ALIQUOD GENUS MERCATURIE UNIVERSUM EMIT, PRETIUM AD SUUM LIBITUM STATUENS. 11 Coke, 86. It is said to be a monopoly when one person alone buys up the whole of one kind of commodity, fixing a price at his own pleasure.

MONOPOLIUM. The sole power, right, or privilege of sale; monopoly; a monopoly. Calvin.

MONOPOLY. A privilege or peculiar advantage vested in one or more persons or companies, consisting in the exclusive right (or power) to carry on a particular business or trade, manufacture a particular article, or control the sale of the whole supply of a particular commodity.

Defined in English law to be "a license or privilege allowed by the king for the sole buying and selling, making, working, or using, of anything whatsoever; whereby the subject in general is restrained from that liberty of manufacturing or trading which he had before." 4 Bl. Comm. 159; 4 Steph.Comm. 291; State v. Duluth Board of Trade, 107 Minn. 506, 121 N.W. 395, 23 L.R.A.,N.S., 1280.

A monopoly consists in the ownership or control of so large a part of the market-supply or output of a given commodity as to stifle competition, restrict the freedom of commerce, and give the monopolist control over prices. State v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Co., 210 N.C. 742, 188 S.E. 412, 416.

MONSTER. A prodigious birth; a human birth or offspring not having the shape of mankind, which cannot be heir to any land, albeit it be brought forth in marriage. Bract. fol. 5; Co.Litt. 7, 8; 2 Bl.Comm. 246.

MONSTRANS DE DROIT. L. Fr. In English law, a showing or manifestation of right; one of the common law methods of obtaining possession or restitution from the crown, of either real or personal property.

It is the proper proceeding when the right of the party, as well as the right of the crown, appears upon record, and consists in putting in a claim of right grounded on facts already acknowledged and established, and praying the judgment of the court whether upon these facts the king or the subject has the right. 3 Bl.Comm. 256; 4 Coke, 54b.

MONSTRANS DE FAITS. L. Fr. In old English practice, a showing of deeds; a species of profert. Cowell.

MONSTRAVERUNT, WRIT OF. In English law, a writ which lies for the tenants of ancient demesne who hold by free charter, and not for those tenants who hold by copy of court roll, or by the rod, according to the custom of the manor. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 14.

MONSTRUM. A box in which relics are kept; also a muster of soldiers. Cowell.

MONTES. In Spanish law, forests or woods. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 1, c. 6, § 1.

MONTES PIETATIS. Public pawnbroking establishments; institutions established by government, in some European countries, for lending small sums of money on pledges of personal property. In France they are called "monts de piëte."

MONTH. Word "month," unless otherwise defined, means "calendar month," or time from any day of any of the months as adjudged in the calendar to corresponding day, if any, if not any, to last day, of next month. Daniel v. Ormand, 26 Ala.App. 441, 163 So. 361.

The space of time denoted by this term varies according as one or another of the following varieties of months is intended:

Astronomical, containing one-twelfth of the time occupied by the sun in passing through the entire zodiac.

Calendar, civil, or solar, which is one of the months in the Gregorian calendar,—January, February, March, etc., —which are of unequal length.

Lunar, being the period of one revolution of the moon, or twenty-eight days.

The word "month," when used in a statute or contract without qualification, meant at common law a lunar month of 28 days. State v. White, 73 Fla. 426, 74 So. 486, 487.

The matter is generally regulated by statute now. In re McNamara's Estate, 181 Cal. 82, 183 P. 552, 556, 7 A.L.R. 313.

MONUMENT. Anything by which the memory of a person, thing, idea, art, science or event is preserved or perpetuated. A tomb where a dead body has been deposited. In re Ogden, 25 R.I. 373, 55 A. 933; Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Benedict, 41 R.I. 143, 103 A. 146, 147.

In real-property law and surveying, monuments are visible marks or indications left on natural or other objects indicating the lines and boundaries of a survey. In this sense the term includes not only posts, pillars, stone markers, cairns, and the like, but also fixed natural objects, blazed trees, and even a watercourse. Grier v. Pennsylvania Coal Co., 128 Pa. 79, 18 A. 480; Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. 124, 75 Am.Dec. 584.

MONUMENTA QUZE NOS RECORDA VOCAMUS SUNT VERITATIS ET VETUSTATIS VESTIGIA. Co.Litt. 118. Monuments, which we call "records," are the vestiges of truth and antiquity.

MONUNG. See Manung.

MONYA, In Norman law, moneyage. A tax or tribute of one shilling on every hearth, payable to the duke every three years, in consideration that he should not alter the coin. Hale, Com.Law, 148, and note.

MOOKTAR. In Hindu law, an agent or attorney.

MOOKTARNAMA. In Hindu law, a written authority constituting an agent; a power of attorney.

MOONSHINE. Intoxicating liquor illicitly produced or smuggled into community for beverage purposes, or spirituous liquor, illegally distilled or manufactured. State v. King, 331 Mo. 268, 53 S.W.2d 252, 254.

MOOR. An officer in the Isle of Man, who summons the courts for the several sheadings. The office is similar to the English bailiff of a hundred.

MOORAGE. A sum due by law or usage for mooring or fastening of ships to trees or posts at the shore, or to a wharf. Wharf Case, 3 Bland, Md., 373.

MOORING. In maritime law, anchoring or making fast to the shore or dock; the securing or confining a vessel in a particular station, as by cables and anchors or by a line or chain run to the wharf.

A vessel is "moored in safety," within the meaning of a policy of marine insurance, when she is thus moored to a wharf or dock, free from any immediate danger from any of the perils insured against. 1 Phil.Ins. 968; Bramhall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 516, 6 Am.Rep. 261.

MOOT, n. English law. Moots are exercises in pleading, and in arguing doubtful cases and questions, by the students of an inn of court before the benches of the inn. Sweet.

Saxon law. A meeting or assemblage of people, particularly for governmental or judicial purposes. The more usual forms of the word were "mote" and "gemot." See those titles.

MOOT, adj. A subject for argument; unsettled; undecided. A moot point is one not settled by judicial decisions. A moot case is one which seeks to determine an abstract question which does not arise upon existing facts or rights. Adams v. Union R. Co., 21 R.I. 134, 42 A. 515, 44 L.R.A. 273.

One which seeks to get a judgment on a pretended controversy, or a decision in advance about a right before it has been actually asserted and contested, or a judgment on some matter which, when rendered, for any reason, cannot have any practical legal effect upon a then existing controversy. Smith v. Smith, 209 Wis. 605, 245 N.W. 644, 645.

MOOT COURT. A court held for the arguing of moot cases or questions.

MOOTING. The exercise of arguing questions of law or equity, raised for the purpose. See Moot.

MORA. Lat. In the civil law, delay; default; neglect; culpable delay or default. Calvin.

MORA. Sax. A moor; barren or unprofitable ground; marsh; a heath; a watery bog or moor. Co.Litt. 5; Fleta, 1, 2, c. 71.

MORA MUSSA. A watery or boggy moor; a morass.

MORA REPROBATUR IN LEGE. Delay is reprobated in law. Jenk.Cent. p. 51, case 97.

MORAL. Pertains to character, conduct, intention, social relations, etc. United States v. Carroll,, D.C.Mo., 30 r.Supp. 3, 6.

1. Pertaining or relating to the conscience or moral sense or to the general principles of right conduct.

2. Cognizable or enforceable only by the conscience or by the principles of right conduct, as distinguished from positive law.

3. Depending upon or resulting from probability; raising a belief or conviction in the mind independent of strict or logical proof.

4. Involving or affecting the moral sense; as in the phrase "moral insanity."

MORAL ACTIONS. Those only in which men have knowledge to guide them, and a will to choose for themselves. Ruth, Inst. lib. 1, c. 1.

MORAL CERTAINTY. That degree of assurance which induces a man of sound mind to act, without doubt, upon the conclusions to which it leads. Wills, Circ.Ev. 7. A high degree of impression of the truth of a fact, falling short of absolute certainty, but sufficient to justify a verdict of guilty, even in a capital case. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 198-200.

As explained in the Century Dictionary, it signifies a probability sufficiently strong to justify action on it. In Webster's International, the first definition given is, "a very high degree of probability, although not demonstrable, as a certainty." It has also been used as indicating a conclusion of the mind established beyond a reasonable doubt. Gray v. State, 56 Okl.Cr. 208, 38 P.2d 967.

The phrase "moral certainty" has been introduced into our jurisprudence from the publicists and metaphysicians, and signifies only a very high degree of probability. It was observed by Puffendorf that, "when we declare such a thing to be morally certain, because it has been confirmed by credible witnesses, this moral certitude is nothing else but a strong presumption grounded on probable reasons, and which very seldom fails and deceives us." "Probable evidence," says Bishop Butler, in the opening sentence of his Analogy, "is essentially distinguished from demonstrative by this: that it admits of degrees, and of all variety of them, from the highest moral certainty to the very lowest presumption." Corn. v. Costley, 118 Mass. 23.

MORAL CONSIDERATION. See Consideration.

MORAL DURESS. Consists in imposition, oppression, undue influence, or the taking of undue advantage of the business or financial stress or extreme necessity or weakness of another. Lafayette Dramatic Productions v. Ferentz, 305 Mich. 193, 9 N.W.2d 57, 66, 145 A.L.R. 1158.

MORAL EVIDENCE. As opposed to "mathematical" or "demonstrative" evidence, this term denotes that kind of evidence which, without developing an absolute and necessary certainty, generates a high degree of probability or persuasive force. It is founded upon analogy or induction, experience of the ordinary course of nature or the sequence of events, and the testimony of men.

MORAL FRAUD. This phrase is one of the less usual designations of "actual" or "positive" fraud or "fraud in fact," as distinguished from "constructive" fraud or "fraud in law." It means fraud which involves actual guilt, a wrongful purpose, or moral obliquity.

MORAL HAZARD. See Hazard.

MORAL INSANITY. See Insanity,

MORAL LAW. The law of conscience; the aggregate of those rules and principles of ethics which relate to right and wrong conduct and prescribe the standards to which the actions of men should conform in their dealings with each other. Moore v. Strickling, 46 W.Va. 515, 33 S.E. 274, 50 L.R.A. 279.

MORAL OBLIGATION. See Obligation.

MORAL TURPITUDE. An act of baseness, vileness, or depravity in the private and social duties which a man owes to his fellow men, or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between man and man. Traders & General Ins. Co. v. Russell, Tex.Civ. App., 99 S.W.2d 1079, 1084; Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223, 71 S.Ct. 703, 706.

Conduct contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals. Marsh v. State Bar of California, 210 Cal. 303, 291 P. 583, 584.

MORANDIE SOLUTIONIS CAUSA. Lat. For the purpose of delaying or postponing payment or performance.

MORATORIUM. A term designating suspension of all or of certain legal remedies against debtors, sometimes authorized by law during financial distress. Brown v. State Nat. Bank of Shawnee, 133 Okl. 173, 271 P. 833, 834. A period of permissive or obligatory delay; specifically, a period during which an obligor has a legal right to delay meeting an obligation. State ex rel. Jensen Livestock Co. v. Hyslop, 111 Mont. 122, 107 P.2d 1088, 1092.

MORATUR IN LEGE. Lat. He delays in law. The phrase describes the action of one who demurs, because the party does not proceed in pleading, but rests or abides upon the judgment of the court on a certain point, as to the legal sufficiency of his opponent's pleading. The courts deliberate and determine thereupon.

MORAVIANS. Otherwise called "Herrnhutters" or "United Brethren." A sect of Christians whose social polity is particular and conspicuous. It sprung up in Moravia and Bohemia, on the opening of that reformation which stripped the chair of St. Peter of so many votaries, and gave birth to so many denominations of Christians. They give evidence on their solemn affirmation. 2 Steph.Comm. 338n.

MORBUS SONTICUS. Lat: in" the civil law, a sickness which rendered a man incapable of attending to business.

MORE COLONICO. Lat. In old pleading, in husband-like manner. Townsh.Pl. 198.

MORE OR LESS. About; substantially; or approximately; implying that both parties assume the risk of any ordinary discrepancy. Alexander v. Hicks, 242 Ala. 243, 5 So.2d 781, 782, 783.

The words are intended to cover slight or unimportant inaccuracies in quantity, Carter v. Finch, 186 Ark. 954, 57 S.W.2d 408; and are ordinarily to be interpreted as taking care of unsubstantial differences or differences of small importance compared to the whole number of items transferred. Crawl v. Box, 144 Okl. 25, 288 P. 942, 946.

MOREOVER. In addition thereto, also, furthermore, likewise, beyond this, besides this. Pagano v. Cerri, 93 Ohio St. 345, 112 N.E. 1037, 1040, L.R.A. 1917A, 486; Aldersley v. McCloud, 35 Cal.App. 17, 168 P. 1153, 1155.

MORGANATIC-MARRIAGE. See Marriage.

MORGANGINA, or MORGANGIVA. A gift on the morning after the wedding; dowry; the husband's gift to his wife on the day after the wedding. Du Cange; Cowell.

MORGEN. Anglo-Dutch. In old New York law, a measure of land, equal to about two acres.

MORGUE. A place where the bodies of persons found dead are kept for a limited time and exposed to view, to the end that their friends may identify them.

MORMON. A member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Church was organized in 1830 at Seneca, New York, by Joseph Smith, and today its headquarters are in Salt Lake City, Utah.

MORON. One whose intellectual development proceeds normally up to about the 8th year of age, then is arrested, and never exceeds that of a normal child of about 12 years. - People v. Joyce, 233 N.Y. 61, 134 N.E. 836, 840.

MORPHINOMANIA, or MORPHINISM. The opium habit. An excessive desire for morphia.

MORRIS PLAN COMPANY. An industrial bank which accepts money from the public for investment in "investment certificates" which draw interest periodically payable to the investor, and which bank lends money principally to steadily employed salaried people who are required to secure repayment with the endorsement of two other employed salaried people, the contract calling for installment payments over a one year period. Other secured loans are also made. Board of Com'rs of Tulsa County v. Remedial Finance Corporation, 186 Okl. 648, 100 P.2d 240, 242.

MORS. Lat. Death. State v. Logan, 344 Mo. 351, 126 S.W.2d 256, 259, 122 A.L.R. 417.

MORS DICITUR ULTIMUM SUPPLICIUM. Death is called the "last punishment," the "extremity of punishment." 3 Inst. 212.

MORS OMNIA SOLVIT. Death dissolves all things. Jenk.Cent. p. 160, case 2. Applied to the case of the death of a party to an action.

MORSELLUM, or MORSELLUS, TERRIE. In old English law, a small parcel or bit of land.

MORT CIVILE, In French law, civil death, as upon conviction for felony.

It was nominally abolished by a law of the 31st of May, 1854, but something very similar to it, in effect at least, still remains. Thus, the property of the condemned, possessed by him at the date of his conviction, goes and belongs to his successors, (hOritiers,) as in case of an intestacy; and his future acquired property goes to the state by right of its prerogative, (par droit de desUrence,) but the state may, as a matter of grace, make it over in whole or in part to the widow and children. Brown.

MORT D'ANCESTOR. An ancient and now almost obsolete remedy in the English law. An assize of mort d'ancestor was a writ which lay for a person whose ancestor died seised of lands in fee-simple, and after his death a stranger abated; and this writ directed the sheriff to summon a jury or assize, who should view the land in question and recognize whether such ancestor were seised thereof on the day of his death, and whether the demandant were the next heir.

MORTAL. Destructive to life; causing or occasioning death; exposing to or deserving death, especially spiritual death; deadly; fatal; as, a mortal wound, State v. Logan, 344 Mo. 351, 126 S.W.2d 256, 259, 122 A.L.R. 417; or mortal sin; of or pertaining to time of death. State v. Baker, 122 Kan. 552, 253 P. 221, 223.

MORTALITY. This word, in its ordinary sense, never means violent death, but death arising from natural causes. Lawrence 'v. Aberdein, 5 Barn. & Ald. 110.

MORTALITY TABLES. A means of ascertaining the probable number of years any man or woman of a given age and of ordinary health will live. Butler v. Butler, 180 Minn. 134, 230 N.W. 575, 579.

MORTGAGE. An estate created by a conveyance absolute in its form, but intended to secure the performance of some act, such as the payment of money, and the like, by the grantor or some other person, and to become void if the act is performed agreeably to the terms prescribed at the time of making such conveyance. 1 Washb.Real Prop. *475.

A conditional conveyance of land. Mitchell v. Burnham, 44 Me. 299.

A transfer of property passing conditionally as security for debt. Potter v. Vernon, 129 Okl. 251, 264 P. 611, 613.

A debt by specialty, secured by a pledge of lands, of which the legal ownership is vested in the creditor, but of which, in equity, the debtor and those claiming under him remain the actual owners, until debarred by judicial sentence or their own laches, Coote, Mortg. 1.

The foregoing definitions are applicable to the common-law conception of a mortgage. But in many states in modern times, it is regarded as a mere lien, and not as creating a title or estate. Zeigler v. Sawyer, Tex.Civ.App., 16 S.W.2d 894, 896. It is a pledge or security of particular property for the payment of a debt or the performance of some other obligation, whatever form the transaction may take, but is not now regarded as a conveyance in effect, though it may be cast in the form of a conveyance. Muth v. Goddard, 28 Mont. 237, 72 P. 621, 98 Am.St.Rep. 553; Johnson v. Robinson, 68 Tex. 399, 4 S.W. 625; Killebrew v. Hines, 104 N.C. 182, 10 S.E. 159, 17 Am.St.Rep. 672; Stockel v. Elich, 297 P. 595, 597, 112 Cal.App. 588; In re Morgan, D.C.N.J., 39 F.2d 489, 490.

Chattel mortgage. A mortgage of goods, chattels, or personal property. See Chattel Mortgage.

Conventional mortgage. The conventional mortgage is a contract by which a person binds the whole of his property, or a portion of it only, in favor of another, to secure the execution of some engagement, but without divesting himself of possession. Civ.Code La. art. 3290; Succession of Benjamin, 39 La.Ann. 612, 2 So. 187. It is distinguished from the "legal" mortgage, which is a privilege which the law alone in certain cases gives to a creditor over the property of his debtor, without stipulation of the parties. This last is very much like a general lien at common law, created by the law rather than by the act of the parties, such as a judgment lien.

Equitable mortgage. A specific lien upon real property to secure the payment of money or the performance of some other obligation, which a court of equity will recognize and enforce, in accordance with the clearly ascertained intent of the parties to that effect, but which lacks the essential features of a legal mortgage, either because it grows out of the transactions of the parties without any deed or express contract to give a lien, or because the instrument used for that purpose Is wanting in some of the characteristics of a common-law mortgage, or, being absolute in form, is accompanied by a collateral reservation of a right to redeem, or because an explicit agreement to give a mortgage has not been carried into effect. 4 Kent, Comm. 150; 2 Story, Eq.Jur. § 1018; Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U.S. 306, 25 L.Ed. 999; Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 89, 26 P. 789, 13 L.R.A. 187.

In English law, the following mortgages are equitable: (1) Where the subject of a mortgage is trust property, which security is effected either by a formal deed or a written memorandum, notice being given to the trustees in order to preserve the priority. (2) Where it is an equity of redemption, which is merely a right to bring an action in the chancery division to redeem the estate. (3) Where there is a written agreement only to make a mortgage, which creates an equitable lien on the land. (4) Where a debtor deposits the title-deeds of his estate with his creditor or some person on his behalf, without even a verbal communication. The deposit itself is deemed evidence of an executed agreement or contract for a mortgage for such estate. Wharton.

First mortgage. The first (in time or right) of a series of two or more mortgages covering the same property and successively attaching as liens upon it; also, in a more particular sense, a mortgage which is a first lien on the property, not only as against other mortgages, but as against any other charges or incurnbrances. Green's Appeal, 97 Pa. 347.

First mortgage bonds. Bonds the payment of which is secured by a first mortgage on property. Bank of Atchison County v. Byers, 139 Mo. 627, 41 S.W. 325; Corn. v. Williamstown, 156 Mass. 70, 30 N.E. 472.

General mortgage. Mortgages are sometimes classified as general and special, a mortgage of the former class being one which binds all property, present and future, of the debtor (sometimes called a "blanket" mortgage) ; while a special mortgage is limited to certain particular and specified property. Barnard v. Erwin, 2 Rob., La., 415.

Judicial mortgage. In the law of Louisiana, the lien resulting from judgments, whether rendered on contested cases or by default, whether final or provisional, in favor of the person obtaining them. Civ.Code La. art. 3321.

Legal mortgage. A term used in Louisiana. The law alone in certain cases gives to the creditor a mortgage on the property of his debtor, without it being requisite that the parties should stipulate it. This is called "legal mortgage." Civ.Code La. art. 3311.

Mortgage of goods. A conveyance of goods in gage or mortgage by which the whole legal title passes conditionally to the mortgagee; and, if the goods are not redeemed at the time stipulated, the title becomes absolute in law, although equity will interfere to compel a redemption. It is distinguished from a "pledge" by the circumstance that possession by the mortgagee is not or may not be essential to create or to support the title. Story, Bailm. § 287. See Chattel Mortgage.

Purchase-money mortgage. A mortgage given, concurrently with a conveyance of land, by the vendee to the vendor, on the same land, to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price. Baker v.

Clepper, 26 Tex. 629, 84 Am.Dec. 591; Keefe v. Cropper, 196 Iowa 1179, 194 N.W. 305, 306; Ladd & Tilton Bank v. Mitchell, 93 Or. 668, 184 P. 282, 284, 6 A.L.R. 1420.

Second mortgage. One which takes rank immediately after a first mortgage on the same property, without any intervening liens, and is next entitled to satisfaction out of the proceeds of the property. Green's Appeal, 97 Pa. 347. Properly speaking, however, the term designates the second of a series of mortgages, not necessarily the second lien. For instance, the lien of a judgment might intervene between the first and second mortgages; in which case, the second mortgage would be the third lien.

Tacit mortgage. In Louisiana, the same as a "legal" mortgage. See supra.

Welsh mortgage. In English law, a species of security which partakes of the nature of a mortgage, as there is a debt due, and an estate is given as security for the repayment, but differs from it in the circumstances that the rents and profits are to be received without account till the principal money is paid off, and there is no remedy to enforce payment, while the mortgagor has a perpetual power of redemption. It is now rarely used. 1 Pow.Mortg. 373a; Bentley v. Phelps, 3 F.Cas. 250.

MORTGAGE POOLS. Groups of mortgages. In re D'Happart's Estate, 132 Pa.Super. 326, 200 A. 927, 929.

MORTGAGEE. He that takes or receives a mortgage.

MORTGAGEE IN POSSESSION. A mortgagee of real property who is in possession of it with the agreement or assent of the mortgagor, express or implied, and in recognition of his mortgage and because of it, and under such circumstances as to make the satisfaction of his lien an equitable prerequisite to his being dispossessed. Rogers v. Benton, 39 Minn. 39, 38 N.W. 765, 12 Am.St.Rep. 613; Stouffer v. Harlan, 68 Kan. 135, 74 P. 610, 64 L.R.A. 320.

MORTGAGOR. One who, having all or some part of title to property, by written instrument pledges that property for some particular purpose such as security for a debt. Goodell v. Silver Creek Nat. Bank, Sup., 48 N.Y.S.2d 572, 576.

MORTH. Sax. Murder, answering exactly to the French "assassinat" or "muertre de guet-apens."

MORTHLAGA. A murderer. Cowell.

MORTHLAGE. Murder. Cowell.

MORTIFICATION. In Scotch law, a term nearly synonymous with "mortmain." Bell. Lands are said to be mortified for a charitable purpose.

MORTIS CAUSA. Lat. By reason of death; in contemplation of death. Thus used in the phrase "Donatio mortis causa," (q. v.).

MORTIS MOMENTUM EST ULTIMUM VITAE MOMENTUM. The last moment of life is the moment of death. Terrill v. Public Adm'r, 4 Bradf. Sur., N.Y., 245, 250.

MORTMAIN. A term applied to denote the alienation of lands or tenements to any corporation, sole or aggregate, ecclesiastical or temporal. These purchases having been chiefly made by religious houses, in consequence of which lands became perpetually inherent in one dead hand, this has occasioned the general appellation of "mortmain" to be applied to such alienations. 2 Bl.Comm. 268; Co.Litt. 2b; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. 495, 16 L.Ed. 701.

MORTMAIN ACTS. These acts had for their object to prevent lands getting into the possession or control of religious corporations, or, as the name indicates, in mortua mane. After numerous prior acts dating from the reign of Edward I., it was enacted by the statute 9 Geo. II. c. 36, (called the "Mortmain Act" par excellence), that no lands should be given to charities unless certain requisites should be observed. Brown. Yates v. Yates, 9 Barb., N.Y., 324.

MORTON TOE. "Morton toe" is neuralgia of the fourth toe. State v. Armstrong, 38 Idaho 493, 225 P. 491, 493, 33 A.L.R. 835.

MORTUARY. In ecclesiastical law, a burial-place.

Modern term applied to undertaking and embalming establishments.. City of Tucson v. Arizona Mortuary, 34 Ariz. 495, 272 P. 923, 924.

A kind of ecclesiastical heriot, being a customary gift of the second best living animal belonging to the deceased, claimed by and due to the minister in many parishes, on the death of his parishioners, whether buried in the church-yard or not. 2 Bl. Comm. 425. Ayrton v. Abbott, 14 Q.B. 19.

It has been sometimes used in a civil as well as in an ecclesiastical sense, and applied to a payment to the lord of the fee. Paroch.Antiq. 470.

MORTUARY TABLES. Tables for estimating the probable duration of the life of a party at a given age. Gallagher v. Market St. Ry. Co., 67 Cal. 16, 6 P. 871, 51 Am.Rep. 680.

MORTUUM VADIUM. A dead pledge; a mortgage (q. v.) ; a pledge where the profits or rents of the thing pledged are not applied to the payment of the debt.

MORTUUS. Lat. Dead. So in sheriff's return. mortuus est, he is dead.

MORTUUS CIVILITER. Civil death.

This incident attended every attainder of treason or other felony, whereby in the language of Lord Coke the attainted person "is disabled to bring any action, for he is extra legem mortuus"; Co.Litt. 199. He could be heard in court only for the direct purpose of reversing the attainder, and not in prosecution of a civil right; 1 B. & A. 159. He could be grantor or grantee after attainder, and the grant would be good against all persons except the king; Shepard, Touch. 231.

MORTUUS EXITUS NON EST EXITUS. A dead issue is no issue. Co.Litt. 29. A child born dead is not considered as issue.

MORTUUS SINE PROLE. Dead without issue. In genealogical tables often abbreviated to "m. s. p."

MOS RETINENDUS EST FIDELISSIMIE VETUSTATIS. 4 Coke, 78. A custom of the truest antiquity is to be retained.

MOSCOW INTERNATIONAL. See Third International.

MOSLEM LAW. One of the two great systems of customary law which the English found in India. It regulated the life and relations of all Moslems, and parts of it, especially its penal provisions, were applied to both Moslems and Hindus. Bryce, Extension of the Law.

MOST FAVORED NATION CLAUSE. A clause found in most treaties providing that the citizens or subjects of the contracting states may enjoy the privileges accorded by either party to those of the most favored nations. It is said that the general design of such clauses is to establish the principle of equality of international treatment. The test of whether this principle is violated by the concession of advantages to a particular nation is, not the form in which such concession is made, but the condition on which it is granted; whether it is given for a price, or whether this price is in the nature of a substantial equivalent, and not of a mere evasion. The United States has always taken the stand that reciprocal commercial concessions are given for a valuable consideration and are not within the scope of this clause. Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U.S. 190, 8 S.Ct. 456, 31 L.Ed. 386. Great Britain has taken the opposite position.

See Consular Treaty Rights and Comments on the "Most Favored Nation" Clause, by Ernest Ludwig; 3 Amer.Journ.Int.L. 57; Herod, Most Favored Nation Treatment; Moore's Dig.Int.Law; 3 Amer. Journ.Int.Law 395.

MOSTRENCOS. In Spanish law, strayed goods; estrays. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 6.

MOTE. Sax. A meeting; an assembly. Used in composition, as burgmote, folkmote, etc.

MOTE-BELL. The bell which was used by the Saxons to summon people to the court. Cowell.

MOTEER. A customary service or payment at the mote or court of the lord, from which some were exempted by charter or privilege. Cowell.

MOTHER. A woman who has borne a child. Gardner v. Hall, 132 N.J.Eq. 64, 26 A.2d 799, 807. A female parent, Guide Pub. Co. v. Futrell, 175 Va. 77, 7 S.E.2d 133, 138. Correlative to "son" or "daughter." The term includes maternity during prebirth period. Watson v. Independent Banner of Love Soc., 54 Ga.App. 370, 187 S.E. 897, 898.

MOTHER-IN-LAW. The mother of one's wife or of one's husband.

MOTION. Parliamentary law. The formal mode in which a member submits a proposed measure or resolve for the consideration and action of the meeting.

Practice. Primarily an application for a rule or order made viva voce to a court or judge, but the term is generally employed with reference to all such applications, whether written or oral. Irwin v. Gilson Realty Co., 117 Fla. 394, 158 So. 77.

Special motion. A motion addressed to the discretion of the court, and which must be heard and determined; as distinguished from one which may be granted of course. Merchants' Bank v. Crysler, Mo., 14 C.C.A. 444, 67 F. 390.

MOTION FOR DECREE. Under the chancery practice, the most usual mode of bringing on a suit for hearing when the defendant has answered is by motion for decree. Hunter, Suit Eq. 59; Daniell, Ch.Pr. 722.

MOTION FOR JUDGMENT. In English practice, a proceeding whereby a party to an action moves for the judgment of the court in his favor. S.Ct. Rules 1883, ord. 40.

MOTION IN ARREST OF JUDGMENT. It is intended to avoid judgment because of unamendable defect appearing on record. Turner v. Shackleford, 43 Ga.App. 271, 158 S.E. 439, 440.

MOTION IN ERROR. A motion in error stands on the same footing as a writ of error; the only difference is that, on a motion in error, no service is required to be made on the opposite party, because, being before the court when the motion is filed, he is bound to take notice of it at his peril. Treadway v. Coe, 21 Conn. 283.

MOTION TO SET ASIDE JUDGMENT. This is a step taken by a party ih an action who is dissatisfied with the judgment directed to be entered at the trial of the action.

MOTIVE. Cause or reason that moves the will and induces action. Commonwealth v. Trunk, 311 Pa. 555, 167 A. 333, 338. An inducement, or that which leads or tempts the mind to indulge a criminal act. People v. Lewis, 275 N.Y. 33, 9 N.E.2d 765, 768.

In the popular mind intent and "motive" are not infrequently regarded as one and the same thing. In law there is a clear distinction between them. "Motive" is the moving power which impels to action for a definite result. Intent is the purpose to use a particular means to effect such result. "Motive" is that which incites or stimulates a person to do an act. People v. Weiss, 252 App.Div. 463, 300 N.Y.S. 249, 255.

MOTOR VEHICLE. In the Uniform Act Regulating Traffic on Highways, 11 U.L.A., and similar statutes, any self-propelled "vehicle," defined as including every device in, upon, or by which any person or property is or may be transported or drawn upon a highway, except devices moved by human or muscular power or used exclusively upon stationary rails or tracks. The term "motor vehicles," although sometimes regarded as synonymous with or limited to "automobiles," often has a broader meaning, and includes not only ordinary automobiles, but also motorbusses and trucks, as well as motorcycles. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 2.

Motor vehicle insurance. See Insurance.

MOTORCYCLE. A bicycle propelled by a gasoline engine located in the frame between the wheels. Ellett v. Klein, C.C.A.Pa., 252 F. 805, 806, certiorari denied Harley-Davidson Motor Co. v. Ellett, 39 S.Ct. 8, 248 U.S. 563, 63 L.Ed. 423; Bonds v. State, 16 Ga.App. 401, 85 S.E. 629, 630.

A motorcycle is not a "motor-driven car" as that term is used in insurance policies. Generally, however, a motorcycle is included in the term "motor vehicle," although under some statutes the words "automobile" and "motorcycle" are separately defined and the regulations and liabilities with respect thereto differ in material ways. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., §2.

MOTU PROPRIO. Lat. Of his own motion. The commencing words of a certain kind of papal rescript.

MOUNTINGS. Used in the Tariff Act of 1913, in connection with optical instruments such as the microscope and polariscope, in the sense of accessories, adjuncts, or parts thereof. U. S. v. International Forwarding Co., 9 Ct.Cust.App. 156, 159.

MOURNING. The dress or apparel worn by mourners at a funeral and for a time afterwards. Also the expenses paid for such apparel.

As to "year of mourning," see that title.

MOUTH OF RIVER. By statute in some states, the mouth of a river or creek, which empties into another river or creek, is defined as the point where the middle of the channel of each intersects the other. Pol.Code Cal. § 3908; Rev.St.Ariz.1901, par. 931, Rev.Code 1928, § 742.

MOVABLE. That which can be changed in place, as movable property; or in time, as movable feasts or terms of court. Goddard v. Winchell, 86 Iowa 71, 52 N.W. 1124, 17 L.R.A. 788.

MOVABLE ESTATE. A term equivalent to "personal estate" or "personal property." Den v. Sayre, 3 N.J.L. 187.

MOVABLE FREEHOLD. A term applied by Lord Coke to real property which is capable of being increased or diminished by natural causes; as where the owner of seashore acquires or loses land as the waters recede or approach. Holman v. Hodges, 112 Iowa 714, 84 N.W. 950, 58 L.R.A. 673.

MOVABLES. Things movable; movable or personal chattels which may be annexed to or attendant on the person of the owner, and carried about with him from one part of the world to another. 2 Bl.Comm. 387.

Movables consist—First, of inanimate things, as goods, plate, money, jewels, implements of war, garments, and the like or vegetable productions, as the fruit or other parts of a plant when severed from the body of it or the whole plant itself when severed from the ground; secondly, of animals, which have in themselves a principle and power of motion. 2 Steph.Comm. 67.

Movables are further distinguished into such as are in possession, or which are in the power of the owner, as a horse in actual use, a piece of furniture in a man's own house; and such as are in the possession of another, and can only be recovered by action, which are therefore said to be in action, as a debt.

But it has been held that movable property, in a legacy, strictly includes only such as is corporeal and tangible; not, therefore, rights in action, as judgment or bond debts; Strong v. White, 19 Conn. 238, 245; 1 Wm. Jones 225; but see Penniman v. French, 17 Pick., Mass., 404, 28 Am.Dec. 309; and that, in a will, "movables" is used in its largest sense, but will not pass growing crops, nor building materials on ground; Jackson v. Vanderspreigle, 2 Dall. 142, 1 L.Ed. 323.

Civil law. Movables (mobilia,) properly denoted inanimate things; animals being distinguished as moventia, things moving. Calvin. But these words mobilia and moventia are also used synonymously, and in the general sense of "movables." Id.

Scotch law. "Movables" are opposed to "heritage." So that every species of property, and every right a man can hold, is by that law either heritable or movable. Bell.

MOVANT. One who moves; one who makes a motion before a count; the applicant for a rule or order.

MOVE. To make an application to a court for a rule or order, or to take action in any matter. To ask. Harris v. Chicago House-Wrecking Co., 314 Ill. 500, 145 N.E. 666, 669. The term comprehends all things necessary to be done by a litigant to obtain an order of the court directing the relief sought. O'Hanion v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 76 Mont. 128, 245 P. 518, 519.

To propose a resolution, or recommend action in a deliberate body.

To pass over; to be transferred; as when the consideratictn of a contract is said to "move" from one party to the other.

MOVE OUT. To vacate; to yield up possession. Polich v. Severson, 68 Mont. 225, 216 R 785, 787.

MOVEMENT. In relating to train, the word "movement" was not restricted to actual revolution of wheels of train or locomotive engaged in interstate commerce, but could apply to a train tied up on a siding. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. United States, C.C.A.Idaho, 211 F. 309, 312. Similarly, as regards vehicles, the term could comprehend the control and management of vehicles, including power to require that motor be closed down when a motor vehicle was left on street. White v. District of Columbia, 55 App.D.C. 197, 4 F.2d 163, 164.

MOVENT. An alternative spelling of movant.

MOVING FOR AN ARGUMENT. Making a motion on a day which is not motion day in virtue of having argued a special case; used in the exchequer after it became obsolete in the queen's bench. Wharton, MOVING PAPERS. Such papers as are made the basis of some motion in court proceedings, e. g. a bill in equity with supporting affidavits.

MOVING PICTURE SHOW. A place where motion pictures are exhibited for the purpose of public amusement and entertainment. State v. Morris, 28 Idaho 599, 155 P. 296, 297, L.R.A.1916D, 573.

MRS. Title of courtesy prefixed to name of woman to indicate that she has been married. Guide Pub. Co. v. Futrell, 175 Va. 77, 7 S.E.2d 133, 138.

MUCIANA CAUTIO. See Cautio.

MUEBLES. In Spanish law, movables; all sorts of personal property. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 3, c. 1, § 2.

MUFFLER. Any of various devices to deaden the noise of escaping gases or vapors, such as a tube filled with obstructions, through which the exhaust gases of an internal combustion engine, as an automobile, are passed (called also a silencer), or an attachment usually consisting of a series of perforated baffles for a locomotive pop safety valve. Hines v. Foreman, Tex.Com.App., 243 S.W. 479, 484.

MUGGLE; MUGGLE HEADS. Marihuana is popularly known among the criminal element as "muggles" or "mooter," and addicts are commonly termed "muggle heads." State v. Navaro, 83 Utah, 6, 26 P.2d 955.

MUIRBURN. In Scotch law, the offense of setting fire to a muir or moor. 1 Brown, Ch. 78, 116.

MULATTO. A person that is the offspring of a negress by a white man, or of a white woman by a negro. Thurman v. State, 18 Ala. 276. In a more general sense, a person of mixed Caucasian and negro blood, or Indian and negro blood. Webster, Dict. See, also, Mustizo.

Properly a mulatto is a person one of whose parents is wholly black and the other wholly white ; but the word does not always, though perhaps it does generally, require so exactly even a mixture of blood, nor is its signification alike in all the states. 1 Bish.Mar. & D. § 308.

MULCT. A penalty or punishment imposed on a person guilty of some offense, tort, or misdemeanor, usually a pecuniary fine or condemnation in damages. Cook v. Marshall County, 119 Iowa 384, 93 N.W. 372, 104 Am.St.Rep. 283. A forfeit, fine, or penalty. Kleinath, Schuster & Hudson v. Reed, 18 N.M. 358, 137 P. 841, 844. To sentence to a pecuniary penalty or forfeiture as a punishment; fine; hence to fine unjustly; to punish. Gorton v. Doty, 57 Idaho 792, 69 P.2d 136, 142.

Formerly, an imposition laid on ships or goods by a company of trade for the maintenance of consuls and the like.

MULCTA DAMNUM FAME NON IRROGAT. Cod. 1, 54; Calvin. A fine does not involve loss of character.

MULE. A hybrid between the horse and the ass; especially, the offspring of a male ass and a mare. Webster, Diet.

MULIER. Lat. A woman; a wife; a widow; a virgin; a legitimate child. 1 Inst. 243; Co.Litt. 170, 253; 2 Bla.Com. 248.

The term is used always in contradistinction to a bastard, mulier being always legitimate. Co. Litt. 243.

MULIER PUISNE. L. Fr. When a man has a bastard son, and afterwards marries the mother, and by her has also a legitimate son, the elder son is bastard eignó, and the younger son is mulier puisnd.

MULIERATUS. A legitimate son. Glanvil.

MULIERTY. In old English law, the state or condition of a mulier, or lawful issue. Co.Litt. 352b. The opposite of bastardy. Blount.

MULTA. A fine or final satisfaction, anciently given to the king by the bishops, that they might have power to make their wills, and that they might have the probate of other men's wills, and the granting of administration. 2 Inst. 291. Called, also, multura episcopi.

A fine imposed ex arbitrio by magistrates on the prcesides probinciarum. Inst. 4, 1.

MULTA CONCEDUNTUR PER OBLIQUUM QUIE NON CONCEDUNTUR DE DIRECTO. Many things are allowed indirectly which are not allowed directly. 6 Coke, 47.

MULTA FIDEM PROMISSA LEVANT. Many promises lessen confidence. Brown v. Castles, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 350.

MULTA IGNORAMUS QUIE NOBIS NON LATERENT SI VETERUM LECTIO NOBIS FUIT FAMILIAR'S. 10 Coke, 73. We are ignorant of many things which would not be hidden from us if the reading of old authors was familiar to us.

MULTA IN JURE COMMUNI CONTRA RATIONEM DISPUTANDI, PRO COMMUNI UTILITATE INTRODUCTA SUNT. Many things have been introduced into the common law, with a view to the public good, which are inconsistent with sound reason. Co.Litt. 70b; Broom, Max. 158; 2 Co. 75. See 3 Term 146; 7 id. 252.

MULTA MULTO EXERCITATIONE FACILIUS QUAM REGULIS PERCIPIES. 4 Inst. 50. You will perceive many things much more easily by practice than by rules.

MULTA NON VETAT LEX, QUIE TAMEN TACITE DAMNAVIT. The law forbids not many things which yet it has silently condemned.

MULTA TRANSEUNT CUM UNIVERSITATE QUIE NON PER SE TRANSEUNT. Many things pass with the whole which do not pass separately. Co.Litt. 12a.

MULTI MULTA, NEMO OMNIA NOVIT. 4 Inst. 348. Many men have known many things; no one has known everything.

MULTIFARIOUSNESS. Equity pleading. The misjoinder of causes of action in a bill. Van Antwerp v. Van Antwerp, 242 Ala. 92, 5 So.2d 73, 77.

The fault of improperly joining in one bill distinct and independent matters, and thereby confounding them; as, for example, the uniting in one bill of several matters perfectly distinct and unconnected against one defendant (more commonly called misjoinder of claims), or the demand of several matters of a distinct and independent nature against several defendants, in the same bill. Stork, Eq.P1. § 271; Essen v. Adams, 342 Mo. 1196, 119 S.W.2d 773, 777, 118 A.L.R. 1393.

"Multifariousness" as to matter consists in uniting in the same bill distinct and disconnected subjects, matters, or causes, and "multifariousness" as to parties consists in joining in same suit parties who are without a common interest in subject of litigation and have no connection with each other. Essen v. Adams, 342 Mo. 1196, 119 S.W.2d 773, 777, 118 A.L.R. 1393.

The joining of distinct and independent matters, each of which would constitute a cause of action. Otto F. Stifel's Union Brewing Co. v. Weber, 194 Mo.App. 605, 186 S.W. 1119, 1122; Johnson v. Benbow, 93 Fla. 124, 111 So. 504, 507.

"Multifariousness" abstractly is incapable of an accurate definition, but includes those cases where a party is brought as a defendant on a record with a large portion of which, and, in the case made by which, he has no connection whatever. Stamey v. Fortner; 230 Ala. 204, 160 So. 116.

The vice of multifariousness is the union of causes of action which, or of parties whose claims, it is either impractical or inconvenient to adjudicate in a single suit. Where it is as practical and convenient for court and parties to deal with the claims, and parties joined, in one suit as in many, there is no multifariousness. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. R. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 71 C.C.A. 1, 137 F. 26; Schell v. Leander Clark College, C.C.A.Iowa, 2 F.2d 17, 21. And it is not essential that every defendant have an interest in or concern for all matters or phases of the controversy. Mitchell v. Cudd, 196 Ala. 162, 71 So. 660; Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Stricklin, D.C.N.C., 264 F. 546, 555.

A bill is not multifarious which seeks alternative or inconsistent relief growing out of the same subject-matter or founded on the same contract or transaction, or relating to the same property between the same parties. Code Ala. § 3095, Code 1923, § 6526; Szabo v. Speckman, 73 Fla. 374, 74 So. 411, 412, L.R.A. 1917D, 357.

Legislation. The joining, in a single legislative act, of dissimilar and discordant subjects, which, by no fair intendment, can be considered as having a legitimate connection or relation to the subject of the act. Boise City v. Baxter, 41 Idaho 368, 238 P. 1029, 1033.

MULTIPARTITE. Divided into many or several parts.

MULTIPLE EVIDENCE. That which is admissible for a specific purpose to which it must be confined and inadmissible to prove a different fact. Green v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 136 S.C. 337, 134 S.E. 385, 386.

MULTIPLE POINDING. In Scotch law, double distress; a name given to an action, corresponding to proceedings by way of interpleader, which may be brought by a person in possession of goods claimed by different persons pretending a right thereto, calling the claimants and all others to settle their claims, so that the party who sues may be liable only "in once and single payment." Bell.

MULTIPLEX ET INDISTINCTUM PARIT CONFUSIONEM; ET QUZESTIONES, QUO SIMPLICIORES, EO LUCIDIORES. Hob. 335. Multiplicity and indistinctness produce confusion; and questions, the more simple they are, the more lucid.

MULTIPLICATA TRANSGRESSIONE CRESCAT PCENIE INFLICTIO. As transgression is multiplied, the infliction of punishment should increase. 2 Inst. 479.

MULTIPLICITY. A state of being many. That quality of a pleading which involves a variety of matters or particulars; undue variety. 2 Saund. 410. A multiplying or increasing. Story, Eq.P1. § 287.

MULTIPLICITY OF ACTIONS, or SUITS. Numerous and unnecessary attempts to litigate the same right. A phrase descriptive of the state of affairs where several different suits or actions are brought upon the same issue. The actions must be against a single defendant. Prospect Park & C. I. R. Co. v. Morey, 155 App.Div. 347, 140 N.Y.S. 380, 385; Williams v. Millington, 1.H.B1. 81.

MULTITUDE. An assemblage of many people. According to Coke it is not a word of very precise meaning; for some authorities hold that there must be at least ten persons to make a multitude, while others maintain that no definite number is fixed by law. Co.Litt. 257. Two cannot constitute a multitude. Pike v. Witt, 104 Mass. 595. Three or more constitute. State v. Earp, '196 N.C. 164, 145 S.E. 23, 25.

MULTITUDINEM DECEM FACIUNT. Co.Litt. 257. Ten make a multitude.

MULTITUDO ERRANTIUM NON PARIT ERRORI PATROCINUM. The multitude of those who err furnishes no countenance or excuse for error. 11 Coke, 75a. It is no excuse for error that it is entertained by numbers.

MULTITUDO IMPERITORUM PERDIT CURIAM. A great number of unskillful practitioners ruins a court. 2 Inst. 219.

MULTO. In old records, a wether sheep.

MULTO UTILIUS EST PAUCA IDONEA EFFUNDERE QUAM MULTIS INUTILIBUS HOMINES GRAVARI. 4 Coke, 20. It is more useful to pour forth a few useful things than to oppress men with many useless things.

MULTURA EPISCOPI. See Multa.

MULTURE. In Scotch law, the quantity of grain or meal payable to the proprietor of a mill, or to the multurer, his tacksman, for manufacturing the corns. Ersk.Inst. 2, 9, 19.

MUMMIFICATION. In medical jurisprudence, the complete drying up of the body as the result of burial in a dry, hot soil, or the exposure of the body to a dry, cold atmosphere. 15 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 261.

MUMMING. Antic diversions in the Christmas., holidays, suppressed in Queen Anne's time.

MUND. In old English law, peace; whence mundbryc, a breach of the peace.

MUNDBYRD, MUNDEBURDE. A receiving into favor and protection. Cowell.

MUNDIUM. In old French law, a tribute paid by a church or monastery to their seignorial avouês and vidames, as the price of protecting them. Steph.Lect. 236.

MUNERA. In the early ages of the feudal law, the name given to the grants of land made by a king or chieftain to his followers, which were held by no certain tenure, but merely at the will of the lord. Afterwards they became life-estates, and then hereditary, and were called first "benefices," and then "feuds." See Wright, Ten. 19.

MUNICEPS. Lat. In Roman Law, eligible to office. A provincial person; a countryman. This was the designation of one born in the provinces or in a city politically connected with Rome, who had come to Rome, and though a Roman citizen, yet was looked down upon as a provincial, and not allowed to hold the higher offices.

In the provinces the term seems to have been applied to the freemen of any city who were eligible to the municipal offices. Calvin.

MUNICIPAL. In narrower sense, it means pertaining to a local governmental unit, commonly, a city or town or other governmental unit. In its broader sense, it means pertaining to the public or governmental affairs of a state or nation or of a people. Chadwick v. City of Crawfordsville, 216 Ind. 399, 24 N.E.2d 937, 941, 942, 129 A.L.R. 469. Sometimes, pertaining to a county. State ex rel. Schneider v. Midland Investment & Finance Corporation, 219 Wis. 161, 262 N.W. 711, contra, State ex rel. City of Missoula v. Holmes, 100 Mont. 256, 47 P.2d 624, 628, 100 A.L.R. 581; local, particular, independent; Horton v. Mobile School Com'rs, 43 Ala. 598; also, pertaining to local self-government in general; Woodward v. Livermore Falls Water Dist., 116 Me. 86, 100 A. 317, 319, L.R.A. 1917D, 678.

Relating to a state or nation, particularly when considered as an entity independent of other states or nations. Hammel v. Little, 66 App.D.C. 356, 87 F.2d 907, 910.

Among the Romans, cities were called municipia; these cities voluntarily joined the Roman republic in relation to their sovereignty only, retaining their laws, their liberties, and their magistrates, who were thence called municipal magistrates. With us this word has a more extensive meaning : for example, we call municipal law not the law of a city only, but the law of the state. 1 Bla.Comm. 44.

MUNICIPAL ACTION. Exercise of governmental power by a municipality. Orme v. Atlas Gas & Oil Co., 217 Minn. 27, 13 N.W.2d 757, 761.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS. A term referring to the internal business affairs of a municipality. Griffin v. City of Los Angeles, 134 Cal.App. 763, 26 P. 2d 655.

The term is frequently used in constitutional and statutory provisions concerning the power to legislate as to the concerns of municipalities. City of Los Angeles v. Central Trust Co. of New York, 173 Cal. 323, 159 P. 1169, 1171; State v. Cummings, 47 Okl. 44, 147 P. 161, 163. And it has come to include public service activities, such as supplying water to the inhabitants, the construction of a reservoir for their benefit, the sale and distribution of electrical energy, and the establishment and operation of transportation service, which were once regarded as being of a strictly private nature. In re Bonds of Orosi Public Utility Dist., 196 Cal. 43, 235 P. 1004, 1010.

MUNICIPAL AID. A contribution or assistance granted by a municipal corporation towards the execution or progress of some enterprise, undertaken by private parties, but likely to be of benefit to the municipality; e. g., a railroad.

MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES. As used in statutes contemplating the consent of such authorities, the term means the consent by the legislative authorities of the city acting by ordinance; Holland Realty & Power Co. v. City of St. Louis, 282 Mo. 180, 221 S.W. 51, 53, for example, in a town, the members of the town board; Farnsworth v. Boro Oil & Gas Co., 216 N.Y. 40, 109 N.E. 860.

MUNICIPAL BONDS. Evidences of indebtedness issued by cities or other corporate public body, negotiable in form, payable at designated future time, and intended for sale in market with object of raising money for municipal expense, which is beyond immediate resources of reasonable taxation, as distinguished from temporary evidences of debt, such as vouchers, certificates of indebtedness, orders, or drafts drawn by one officer on another and similar devices for liquidating current obligations in anticipation of collection of taxes. City of Stamford v. Town of Stamford, 107 Conn. 596, 141 A. 891, 896.

MUNICIPAL CHARTER. A legislative enactment conferring governmental powers of the state upon its local agencies. State v. Thompson, 193 Ala. 561, 69 So. 461, 464.

MUNICIPAL CLAIMS. In Pennsylvania law, claims filed by a city against property owners therein, for taxes, rates, levies, or assessments for local improvements, such as the cost of grading, paving, or curbing the streets, or removing nuisances.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION. A public corporation, created by government for political purposes, and having subordinate and local powers of legislation. 2 Kent, Comm. 275; Bonaparte v, Camden & A. R. Co., Baldw. 222, F.Cas.No.1617.

An incorporation of persons, inhabitants of a particular place, or connected with a particular district, enabling them to conduct its local civil government Glov.Mun.Corp. 1.

A legal institution formed by charter from sovereign power erecting a populous community of prescribed area into a body politic and corporate with corporate name and continuous succession and for the purpose and with the authority of subordinate self-government and improvement and local administration of affairs of state. State v. Cheyenne County, 127 Neb. 619, 256 N.W. 67.

A body corporate consisting of the inhabitants of a des, ignated area created by the legislature with or without the consent of such inhabitants for governmental purposes, possessing local legislative and administrative power, also power to exercise within such area so much of the administrative power of the state as may be delegated to it and possessing limited capacity to own and hold property, and to act in purveyance of public conveniences. Van Gilder v. City of Madison, 222 Wis. 58, 268 N.W. 108, 109.

Cities, towns, and villages are municipal corporations proper. Strickfaden v. Green Creek Highway Dist., 42 Idaho 738, 248 P. 456, 458, 49 A.L.R. 1057. On the other hand, such term in many instances does not extend so far as to include counties; Hersey v. Nelson, 47 Mont. 132, 131 P. 30, 31, Ann.Cas.1914C, 963; or drainage districts; Sawyer v. Camden Run Drainage Dist., 179 N.C. 182, 102 S.E. 273, 274; or irrigation districts; Crawford v. Imperial Irr. Dist., 200 Cal. 318, 253 P. 726, 729; or road districts; William T. Joyce Co. v. Police Jury of Parish of Tangipahoa, 146 La. 322, 83 So. 587, 588; or school districts; Dickson v. Brewer, 180 N.C. 403, 104 S.E. 887, 889; nor does it include the state; Herkimer Lumber Co. v. State, 196 App. Div. 708, 189 N.Y.S. 119, 122; but see contra, as to the District of Columbia, Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U.S. 141, 9 S.Ct. 256, 32 L.Ed. 637. Nevertheless, it has been held in other cases, often under different circumstances or in different contexts, that the term may include counties; Van Hess v. Board of Com'rs of St. Joseph County, 190 Ind. 347, 129 N.E. 305, 307; and, in Louisiana, parishes; State v. Hagen, 136 La. 868, 67 So. 935; drainage districts; State v. Little River Drainage Dist., 291 Mo. 267, 236 S.W. 848, 849; irrigation districts; Peters v. Union Gap Irr. Dist., 98 Wash. 412, 167 P. 1085, 1086; road districts; State ex rel. Little Prairie Special Road Dist. of Pemiscot County v. Thompson, 315 Mo. 56, 285 S.W. 57, 61; and the like; Milheim v. Moffat-Tunnel Improvement Dist., 72 Colo. 268, 211 P. 649, 653; Drum v. University Place Water Dist.: 144 Wash. 585, 258 P. 505, 506.

English law. A body of persons in a town having the powers of acting as one person, of holding and transmitting property, and of regulating the government of the town. Such corporations existed in the chief towns of England (as of other countries) from very early times, deriving their authority from "incorporating" charters granted by the crown. Wharton.

Quasi municipal corporations. Bodies politic and corporate, created for the sole purpose of performing one or more municipal functions. Woodward v. Livermore Falls Water Dist., 116 Me. 86, 100 A. 317, 319, L.R.A.1917D, 678.

Public corporations organized for governmental purposes and having for most purposes the status and powers of municipal corporations (such as counties, townships, school districts, drainage districts, irrigation districts, etc.), but not municipal corporations proper, such as cities and incorporated towns. Snider v. St. Paul, 51 Minn. 466, 53 N.W. 763, 18 L.R.A. 151; Plumbing Supply Co. v. Board of Education of Independent School Dist. of City of Canton, 32 S.D. 270, 142 N.W. 1131, 432; Melin v. Community Consol. School Dist. No. 76, 312 Ill. 376, 144 N.E. 13, 16.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION DE FACTO. One which exists when there is (1) some law under which a corporation with the powers assumed might lawfully have been created; (2) a colorable and bona fide attempt to perfect an organization under such a law; (3) user of the rights claimed to have been conferred by the law. Evens v. Anderson, 132 Minn. 59, 155 N.W. 1040, 1041.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS ACT. In English law, a general statute, (5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 76,) passed in 1835, prescribing general regulations for the incorporation and government of boroughs.

MUNICIPAL COURTS. In the judicial organization of several states, courts are established under this name, whose territorial authority is confined to the city or community in which they are erected. Such courts usually have a criminal jurisdiction corresponding to that of a police court, and, in some cases, possess civil jurisdiction in small causes. Ex parte Gownlock, 13 Okl.Cr. 293, 164 P. 130, 131.

MUNICIPAL DOMICILE. Sometimes used in contradistinction to "national domicile" and "quasi national domicile" to refer to residence in a county, township, or municipality; called also "domestic domicile." Hayward v. Hayward, 65 Ind.App. 440, 115 N.E. 966, 970.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION. One at which municipal officers are chosen. Hutchins v. City of Des Moines, 176 Iowa, 189, 157 N.W. 881, 883. Compare Johnson v. Luers, 129 Md. 521, 99 A. 710, 714.

MUNICIPAL FUNCTION. One created or granted for the special benefit and advantage of the urban community embraced within the corporate boundaries. State ex rel. Gebhardt v. City Council of Helena, 102 Mont. 27, 55 P.2d 671, 673.

Sometimes called a private function, as distinguished from a public or governmental function, which is one conferred or imposed on the municipality as a local agency of limited and prescribed jurisdiction to be employed in administering the affairs of the state, and promoting the public welfare generally. Bryan v. City of West Palm Beach, 75 Fla. 19, 77 So. 627; Griffith v. City of Butte, 72 Mont. 552, 234 P. 829, 831.

Logically all those are strictly municipal functions which specially and peculiarly promote the comfort, convenience, safety and happiness of the citizens of the municipality, rather than the welfare of the general public. Under this class of functions are included, in most jurisdictions, the proper care of streets and alleys, parks and other public places, and the erection and maintenance of public utilities and improvements generally. Chardkoff Junk Co. v. City of Tampa, 102 Fla. 501, 135 So. 457, 459.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT. Instrumentalities of state for purpose of local government. Moore v. State, 159 Tenn. 468, 19 S.W.2d 233.

This term, in certain state constitutions, embtaces the. governmental affairs of counties; State v. Touchberry, 121 S.C. 5, 113 S.E. 345; and includes all forms of representative municipal government; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N.E. 778, 781.

MUNICIPAL LAW. Not the law of a city only but the law of the state. People ex rel. Ray v. Martin, 181 Misc. 925, 47 N.Y.S.2d 883, 891.

In contradistinction to international law, it is the law of an individual state or nation. It is the rule or law by which a particular district, community, or nation is governed. 1 Bl.Comm. 44. That which pertains solely to the citizens and inhabitants of a state, and is thus distinguished from political law, commercial law, and the law of nations. Wharton; City of Louisville v. Babb, C.C.A. Ind., 75 F.2d 162, 165. In its more modern and narrower connotation it means those laws which pertain to towns, cities and villages and their local government. People ex rel. Ray v. Martin, 294 N.Y. 61, 60 N.E.2d 541, 547; 548.

MUNICIPAL LIEN. A lien or claim existing in favor of a municipal corporation against a property owner for his proportionate, share of a public improvement, made by the municipality, whereby his property is specially and individually benefited.

It may comprehend all activities essential to the health, morals, protection, and welfare of the municipality. State ex rel. Harper v. McDavid, 145 Fla. 605, 200 So. 100, 102, 133 A.L.R. 360.

For example, the taking of land for a school; Byfield v. City of Newton, 247 Mass. 46, 141 N.E. 658, 661; lighting the streets; City of Colorado Springs v. Pike's Peak Hydro-Electric Co., 57 Colo. 169, 140 P. 921, 927; supplying water to the inhabitants; Marin Water & Power Co. v. Town of Sausalito, 168 Cal. 587, 143 P. 767, 772; The collection and disposal of garbage and refuse; N. Ward Co. v. Board of Street Com'rs of City of Boston, 217 Mass. 381, 104 N.E. 965, 966; or the building of a subway; In re Montague Street in Borough of Brooklyn in City of New York, 87 Misc. 120, 150 N.Y.S. 382, 385.

MUNICIPAL SECURITIES. The evidences of indebtedness issued by cities, towns, counties, townships, school-districts, and other such territorial divisions of a state. They are of two general classes; (1) Municipal warrants, orders, or certificates; (2) municipal negotiable bonds. 15 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1206.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION. Refers to municipal purposes that are beneficial to municipality as a whole. Klemm v. Davenport, 100 Fla. 627, 129 So. 904, 910, 70 A.L.R. 156.

This term may have reference to any tax collected by the city tax collector, including state, county, and city or town taxes. Boston Fish Market Corp. v. City of Boston, 224 Mass. 31, 112 N.E. 616.

MUNICIPAL WARRANTS. A municipal warrant or order is an instrument, generally in the form of a bill of exchange, drawn by an officer of a municipality upon its treasurer, directing him to pay an amount of money specified therein to the person named or his order, or to bearer. 15 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1206.

MUNICIPALITY. A legally incorporated or duly authorized association of inhabitants of limited area for local governmental or other public purposes. State ex rel. Attorney General v. City of Avon Park, 108 Fla. 641, 149 So. 409, 412.

A body politic created by the incorporation of the people of a prescribed locality invested with subordinate powers of legislation to assist in the civil government of the state and to regulate and administer local and internal affairs of the community. State ex rel. McIntire v. City Council of City of Libby, 107 Mont. 216, 82 P.2d 587, 588.

Though sometimes limited in its application to cities only; City of Bangor v. Ridley, 117 Me. 297, 104 A. 230, 232; it ordinarily includes towns as well as cities of all classes; Goodman Warehouse Corporation v. Jersey City, 102 N.J.L. 294, 132 A. 503, 506 ; and may on occasion include townships; Whittingham v. Milburn Tp., 90 N.J.L. 344, 100 A. 854; counties; Murphy v. Freeholders of Hudson, 91 N.J.L. 40, 102 A. 896; school districts; Scobee v. Board of Education of Clark County, 157 Ky. 510, 163 S.W. 472, 473; and every kind and character of public corporations which are created by statute or the Constitution of the state, and which are dependent for their support and maintenance from taxes imposed and collected; Joint School Dist. No. 132 in Major County and Alfalfa County v. Dabney, 127 Okl. 234, 260 P. 486, 487. But neither townships; Petition of Herrington, 266 Pa. 88, 109 A. 791, 793; nor school districts; Long v. School Dist. of Cheltenham Tp., 269 Pa. 472, 112 A. 545, 546; nor drainage districts or the like are necessarily included; Witty v. Ellsberry Drainage Dist., 126 Miss. 645, 89 So. 268, 270.

Also, the body of officers taken collectively, belonging to a city, who are appointed to manage its affairs and defend its interests.

MUNICIPIUM. In Roman law, a foreign town to which the freedom of the city of Rome was granted, and whose inhabitants had the privilege of enjoying offices and honors there. Adams, Rom. Ant. 47, 77. A free town which retained its original right of self-government, but whose inhabitants also acquired certain rights of Roman citizens. Morey, Rom.L. 51.

MUNIMENT-ROUSE, or MUNIMENT-ROOM. A house or room of strength, in cathedrals, collegiate churches, castles, colleges, public buildings, etc., purposely made for keeping deeds, charters, writings, etc. 3 Inst. 170; Cowell.

The instruments of writing and written evidences which the owner of lands, possessions, or inheritances has, by which he is enabled to defend the title of his estate. Termes de la Ley; 3 Inst. 170.

MUNITIONS OF WAR. In international law and United States statutes, this term includes not only ordnance, ammunition, and other material directly useful in the conduct of a war, but also whatever may contribute,to its successful maintenance, such as military stores of all kinds and articles of food. U. S. v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. 119, 4 L.Ed. 199.

MUNUS. Lat. A gift; an office; a benefice or feud. A gl&diatorial show or spectacle. Calvin.; Du Cange.

MURAGE. A toll formerly levied in England for repairing or building public walls.

MURAL MONUMENTS. Monuments made in walls.

MURDER. The unlawful killing of a human being by another with malice aforethought, either express or implied. State v. Hutter, 145 Neb. 798, 18 N.W.2d 203, 206.

The crime committed where a person of sound mind and discretion (that is, of sufficient age to form and execute a criminal design and not legally "insane") kills any human creature in being (excluding quick but unborn children) and in the peace of the state or nation (including all persons except the military forces of the public enemy in time of war or battle) without any warrant, justification, or excuse in law. with malice aforethought, express or implied, that is, with a deliberate purpose or a design or determination distinctly formed in the mind before the commission of the act, provided generally that death results from the injury inflicted within one year and a day after its infliction. Kilpatrick v. Com., 31 Pa. 198; Hotema v. U. S., 186 U.S. 413, 22 S.Ct. 895, 46 L. Ed. 1225; Clarke v. State, 117 Ala. 1, 23 So. 671, 67 Am.St.Rep. 157.

The term implies a felonious homicide, while the word "kill" does not necessarily mean any more than to deprive of life, as a man may kill another by accident, or in self-defense, and in many other ways, without the imputation of crime. Pilcher v. State, 16 Ala.App. 237, 77 So. 75, 76.

For the distinction between murder and manslaughter and other forms of homicide, see Homicide; Manslaughter.

Statutory Definitions. Murder is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought. Pen.Code Cal. § 187; Arizona Code Ann.1939, § 43-2901, Pen.Code Ariz. 1901, § 172. Whoever kills any human being with malice aforethought, either express or implied, is guilty of murder. I.C.A. § 690.1. Murder is the unlawful killing of a human being, in the peace of the State, by a person of sound memory and discretion, with malice aforethought, either express or implied. Georgia Code Ann. § 26-1002. The killing of a human being, without the authority of law, by any means, or in any manner shall be murder in the following cases : When done with deliberate design to effect the death of the person killed, or of any human being ; when done in the commission of an act eminently dangerous to others, and evincing a depraved heart, regardless of human life, although without any premeditated design to effect the death of any particular individual; when done without any design to effect death, by any person engaged in the commission of the crime of rape, burglary, arson, or robbery, or in any attempt to commit such felonies. Mississippi Code 1942 § 2215. Every homicide, perpetrated by poison, lying in wait, or any other kind of willful, deliberate, malicious, and premeditated killing; or committed in the perpetration of, or the attempt to perpetrate, any arson, rape, robbery, or burglary; or perpetrated from a premeditated design unlawfully and maliciously to effect the death of any human being other than him who is killed; or perpetrated by any act greatly dangerous to the lives of others, and evidencing a depraved mind, regardless of human life, although without any preconceived purpose to deprive any particular person of life, is murder in the first degree; and every other homicide, committed under such circumstances as would have constituted murder at common law, is murder in the second degree. Code Ala. 1940, § 314. Murder is the unlawful killing of a human being, in the peace of the people, with malice aforethought, either expressed or implied. The unlawful killing may be perpetrated by poisoning, striking, starving, drowning, stabbing, shooting, or by any other of the various forms or means by which human nature may be overcome, and death thereby occasioned. S.H.A. ch. 38, § 358.

Common-Law. The willful killing of any subject whatever, with malice aforethought, whether the person slain shall be an Englishman or a foreigner. Hawk. P.C. b. 1, c. 13, § 3. The killing of any person under the king's peace, with malice prepense or aforethought, either express, or implied by law. 1 Russ. Crimes, 421; Corn. v. Webster, 5 Cush., Mass., 304, 52 Am.Dec. 711. When a person of sound mind and discretion unlawfully killeth any reasonable creature in being, and under the king's peace, with malice aforethought, either express or implied. 3 Inst. 47; State v. Robinson, 143 La. 543, 78 So. 933, 935.

Degrees. These were unknown at common law, but have been introduced in many states by statutes, the terms of which are too variant to be here discussed in detail. In general, however, it may be said that most states only divide the crime into "murder in the first degree" and "murder in the second degree," though in some there are three degrees; and that the general purport of these statutes is to confine murder in the first degree to homicide committed by poison, lying in wait, and other killings committed in pursuance of a deliberate and premeditated design, and to those which accompany the commission of some of the more atrocious felonies, such as burglary, arson, rape, and robbery; while murder in the second degree occurs where there is no such deliberately formed design to take life or to perpetrate one of the enumerated felonies as is required for the first degree, but where, nevertheless, there was a purpose to kill (or at least a purpose to inflict the particular injury without caring whether it caused death or not) formed instantaneously in the mind, and where the killing was without justification or excuse, and without any such provocation as would reduce the crime to the grade of manslaughter. State v. Nelson, 148 Minn. 285, 181 N.W. 850, 851; State v. Liolios, 285 Mo. 1, 225 S.W. 941, 947; Commonwealth v. Divomte, 262 Pa. 504, 105 A. 821, 822. In a few states, there is a crime of "murder in the third degree," which is defined as the killing of a human being without any design to effect death by a person who is engaged in the commission of a felony. Tillman v. State, 81 Fla. 558, 88 So. 377, 378.

MURDRUM. In old English law, the killing of a man in a secret manner.

When a man was thus killed, and he was unknown, by the laws of Canute he was presumed to be a Dane, and the vill was compelled to pay forty marks to the king for his death. After the conquest, a similar law was made in favor of Normans, which was abolished by 3 Edw. III.

The fine formerly imposed in England upon a person who had committed homicide per infortunium or se defendendo. Prin.Pen.Law 219, note.

MURORUM OPERATIO. Lat. The service of work and labor done by inhabitants and adjoining tenants in building or repairing the walls of a city or castle; their personal service was commuted into murage (q. v.). Cowell.

MURTHRUM. In old Scotch law, murther or murder. Skene.

MUSEUM. A building or institution for the cultivation of science or the exhibition of curiosities or works of art. The term embraces not only collections of curiosities for the entertainment of the sight, but also such as would interest, amuse, and instruct the mind. Bostick v. Purdy, 5 Stew. & P., Ala., 109.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT. An instrument having the capacity in and of itself when properly operated to produce or initiate the musical sound. Dunbar v. Spratt-Snyder Co., 208 Iowa 490, 226 N. W. 22, 63 A.L.R. 1016.

MUSICAL TABLOID. As distinguished from vaudeville, a condensation of a musical comedy in which the plot and the characters taken by different actors are preserved, to produce just one whole play by itself, without any special independent features brought into it; it classifies as vaudeville only when other features are put on during the intermissions between the scenes or acts. Princess Amusement Co. v. Well, C.C.A. Tenn., 271 F. 226, 231.

MUSSA. In old English law, a moss or marsh ground, or a place where sedges grow; a place overrun with moss. Cowell.

MUSSEL. A fresh water shellfish capable of locomotion, usually living in the bed of streams partially covered with mud. Gratz v. McKee, C. C.A.Mo., 258 F. 335, 336.

MUST. This word, like the word "shall," is primarily of mandatory effect; State ex rel. McCabe v. District Court of Third Judicial Dist. in and for Deer Lodge County, 106 Mont. 272, 76 P.2d 634, 637; and in that sense is used in antithesis to "may"; Emery v. First Nat. Bank, 32 N.D. 575, 156 N.W. 105, 109; Reinert Bros. Const. Co. v. Tootle, 200 Mo.App. 284, 206 S.W. 422, 424. But this meaning of the word is not the only one, and it is often used in a merely directory sense. Robinson v. City of Saginaw, 267 Mich. 557, 255 N.W. 396; Munro v. State, 223 N.Y. 208, 119 N.E. 444, 445; State v. Barnell, 109 Ohio St. 246, 142 N.E. 611, 614; and consequently is a synonym for the word. "may" not only in the permissive sense of that word; Tosti v. Sbano, 170 Misc. 828, 11 N.Y.S.2d 321, 323; Pleasant Grove Union School Dist. v. Algeo, 61 Cal.App. 660, 215 P. 726; but also in the mandatory sense which it sometimes has; People v. Highway Com'rs of Town of Anchor, 279 Ill. 542, 117 N.E. 56, 57.

MUSTER. To assemble together troops and their arms, whether for inspection, drill, or service in the field. To take recruits into the service in the army and inscribe their names on the muster-roll or official record, To summon together; to enroll in service. Bannister v. Soldiers' Bonus Board, 43 R.I. 346, 112 A. 422, 423, 13 A.L.R. 589. In the latter sense the term implies that the persons mustered are not already in the service. Tyler v. Pomeroy, 8 Allen, Mass., 480.

NARR. A common abbreviation of "narratio," (q. v.). A declaration in an action. Jacob.

NARR AND COGNOVIT LAW. Law providing that judgment may be had for plaintiff on notes by confession of any attorney that amount shown on notes, together with interest and costs, constitutes legal and just claim; word "narr" being an abbreviation of Latin word "narratio," meaning complaint or petition, and word "cognovit" meaning that defendant has confessed judgment and justice of claim. Dyer v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 19 S.W.2d 421, 422.

NARRATIO. Lat. One of the common law names for a plaintiff's count or declaration, as being a narrative of the facts on which he relies.

NARRATIVE. In Scotch conveyancing, that part of a deed which describes the grantor, and person in whose favor the deed is granted, and states the cause (consideration) of granting. Bell.

NARRATOR. A countor; a pleader who draws narrs. Serviens narrator, a serjeant at law. Fleta, 1. 2, c. 37.

NARROW SEAS. Those seas which run between two coasts not far apart. The term is sometimes applied to the English channel. Wharton.

NASCITURUS. Lat. That shall hereafter be born. A term used in marriage settlements ,to designate the future issue of the marriage, as distinguished from "natus," a child already born.

NATALE. The state and condition of a man acquired by birth.

NATI ET NASCITURI. Born and to be born. All heirs, near and remote.

NATIO. In old records, a native place. Cowell.

NATION. A people, or aggregation of men, existing in the form of an organized jural society, usually inhabiting a distinct portion of the earth, speaking the same language, using the same customs, possessing historic continuity, and distinguished from other like groups by their racial origin and characteristics, and generally, but not necessarily, living under the same government and sovereignty. Montoya v. U. S., -180 U.S. 261, 21 S. Ct. 358, 45 L.Ed. 521; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 539, 8 L.Ed. 483; Republic of Honduras v. Soto, 112 N.Y. 310, 19 N.E. 845, 2 L.R.A. 642.

Besides the element of autonomy or self-government, that is, the independence of the community as a whole from the interference of any foreign power in its affairs or any subjection to such power, it is further necessary to the constitution of a nation that it should be an organized jural society, that is, both governing its own members by regular laws, and defining and protecting their rights, and respecting the rights and duties which attach to it as a constituent member of the family of nations. Such a society, says Vattel, has her affairs and her interests; she deliberates and takes resolutions in common ; thus becoming a moral person, who possesses an understanding and will peculiar to herself, and is susceptible of obligations and rights. Vattel, §1 1, 2.

The words "nation" and "people" are frequently used as synonyms, but there is a great difference between them. A nation is an aggregation of men speaking the same language, having the same customs, and endowed with certain moral qualities which distinguish them from other groups of a like nature. It would follow from this definition that a nation is destined to form only one state, and that it constitutes one indivisible whole. Nevertheless, the history of every age presents us with nations divided into several states. Thus, Italy was for centuries divided among several different governments. The people is the collection of all citizens without distinction of rank or order. All men living under the same government compose the people of the state. In relation to the state, the citizens constitute the people; in relation to the human race, they constitute the nation. A free nation is one not subject to a foreign government, whatever be the constitution of the state ; a people is free when all the citizens can participate in a certain measure in the direction and in the examination of public affairs. The people is the political body brought into existence by community of laws, and the people may perish with these laws. The nation is the moral body, independent of political revolutions, because it is constituted by inborn qualities which render it indissoluble. The state is the people organized into a political body. Lalor, Pol.Enc. s.

In American constitutional -law the word "state" is applied to the several members of the American Union, while the word "nation" is applied to the whole body of the people embraced within the jurisdiction of the federal government. Cooley, Const.Lim. 1; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 720, 19 L. Ed. 227.

NATIONAL. Pertaining or relating to a nation as a whole; commonly applied in American law to institutions, laws, or affairs of the United States or its government, as opposed to those of the several states.

The term "national" as used in the phrase "national of the United States" is broader than the term "citizen". Brassert v. Biddle, D.C.Conn., 59 F.Supp. 457, 462.

NATIONAL AGENCY. That Mexican government contributed to capital of association, and was represented on governing board and even subsidized association did not render association a '"national agency" that it might claim sovereign immunity. The Uxmal, D.C.Mass., 40 F.Supp. 258, 261.

NATIONAL BANK. A bank incorporated and doing business under the laws of the United States, as distinguished from a state bank, which derives its powers from the authority of a particular state.

NATIONAL CURRENCY. Notes issued by national banks, and by the United States government.

NATIONAL DEBT. The money owing by government to some of the public, the interest of which is paid out of the taxes raised by the whole of the public.

NATIONAL DEFENSE. A generic concept and refers to the military and naval establishments and the related activities of national preparedness and includes all matters directly and reasonably connected with the defense of the nation against its enemies. Gorin v. United States, Cal., 312 U. S. 19, 61 S.Ct. 429, 434, 436, 85 L.Ed. 488.

NATIONAL DOMAIN. See Domain.

NATIONAL DOMICILE. See Domicile.

NATIONAL EMERGENCY. A state of national crisis; a situation demanding immediate and extraordinary national or federal action.

Congress has made little or no distinction between a "state of national emergency" and a "state of war". Brown v. Bernstein, D.C.Pa., 49 F.Supp. 728, 732.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. The government of a whole nation, as distinguished from that of a local or territorial division of the nation, and also as distinguished from that of a league or confederation.

"A national government is a government of the people of a single state or nation, united as a community by what is termed the 'social compact,' and possessing complete and perfect supremacy over persons and things, so far as they can be made the lawful objects of civil government. A federal government is distinguished from a national government, by its being the government of a community of independent and sovereign states, united by compact." Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio St. 393.

NATIONALITY. That quality or character which arises from the fact of a person's belonging to a nation or state.

Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while domicile determines his civil status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization. According to Savigny, "nationality" is also used as opposed to "territoriality," for the purpose of distinguishing the case of a nation having no national territory; e. g., the Jews. 8 Sa^{y}. Syst. § 346; Westl.Priv.Int. Law, 5.

NATIONALIZACION. In Spanish and Mexican law, nationalization.

"The nationalization of property is an act which denotes that it has become that of the nation by some process of law, whereby private individuals or corporations have been for specified reasons deprived thereof." Hall, Mex. Law, § 749.

NATIONS, LAW OF. See International Law.

NATIVE. A natural-born subject or citizen; a denizen by birth; one who owes his domicile or citizenship to the fact of his birth within the country referred to. The term may also include one born abroad, if his parents were then citizens of the country, and not permanently residing in foreign parts. U. S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890; New Hartford v. Canaan, 54 Conn. 39, 5 A. 360; Oken v. Johnson, 160 Minn. 217, 199 N.W. 910.

The word "natives", as used in Alien Enemy Act, refers to person's place of birth, so that a person remains a native of country of his birth, though he has moved away therefrom. United States ex rel. D'Esquiva v. Uhl, C.C.A. N.Y., 137 F.2d 903, 905.

One who was born in Germany and later become a citizen of France was a "native" of Germany. Ex parte Gregoire, D.C.Cal., 61 F.Supp. 92, 93.

But a person born in Alsace which at time of his birth was part of Germany but which was restored to French sovereignty by the treaty of Versailles of 1918, was a "native" of France. United States ex rel. Umecker v. McCoy, D.C.N.D., 54 F.Supp. 679, 681, 682.

NATIVA. A niefe or female villein. So called because for the most part bound by nativity. Co. Litt. 122b.

NATIVI CONVENTIONARH. Villeins or bondmen by contract or agreement.

NATIVI DE STIPITE. Villeins or bondmen by birth or stock. Cowell.

NATIVITAS. Villenage; that state in which men were born slaves. 2 Mon. Angl. 643.

NATIVO IfABENDO. A writ which lay for a lord when his villein had run away from him. It was directed to the sheriff, and commanded him to apprehend the villein, and to restore him together with his goods to the lord. Brown.

NATIVUS. Lat. In old English law, a native; specifically, one born into a condition of servitude; a born serf or villein.

NATURA APPETIT PERFECTUM; ITA ET LEX. Nature covets perfection; so does law also. Hob. 144.

NATURA BREVIUM. The name of an ancient collection of original writs, accompanied with brief comments and explanations, compiled in the time of Edward III. This is commonly called "Old Natura Brevium," (or "0. N. B.,") to distinguish it from Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium, a later work, cited as "F. N. B.," or "Fitzh. Nat. Brev."

NATURA FIDE JUSSIONIS SIT STRICTISSIMI JURIS ET NON DURAT VEL EXTENDATUR DE RE AD REM, DE PERSONA AD PERSONAM, DE TEMPORE AD TEMPUS. The nature of the contract of suretyship is strictissimi juris, and cannot endure nor be extended from thing to thing, from person to person, or from time to time. Burge, Sur. 40.

NATURA NON FACIT SALTUM; ITA NEC LEX. Nature makes no leap, [no sudden or irregular movement,] so neither does law. Co. Litt. 238. Applied in old practice to the regular observance of the degrees in writs of entry, which could not be passed over per saltum.

NATURA NON FACIT VACUUM, NEC LEX SUPERVACUUM. Nature makes no vacuum, the law nothing purposeless. Co. Litt. 79.

NATURE VIS MAXIMA; NATURA BIS MAXIMA. The force of nature is greatest; nature is doubly great. 2 Inst. 564.

NATURAL. The juristic meaning of this term does not differ from the vernacular, except in the cases where it is used in opposition to the term "legal;" and then it means proceeding from or determined by physical causes or conditions, as distinguished from positive enactments of law, or attributable to the nature of man rather than to the commands of law, or based upon moral rather than legal considerations or sanctions.

As to natural "Allegiance," "Boundary," "Channel," "Child," "Day," "Death," "Domicile," "Equity," "Fruits," "Guardian," "Heir," "Infancy," "Liberty," "Obligation," "Person," "Possession," "Presumption," "Rights," "Succession," "Watercourse," and "Year," see those titles.

NATURAL AFFECTION. Such as naturally subsists between near relatives, as a father and child, brother and sister, husband and wife. This is regarded in law as a good consideration.

NATURAL—BORN SUBJECT. In English law, one born within the dominions, or rather within the allegiance, of the king of England.

NATURAL FLOOD CHANNEL. A channel beginning at some point on banks of stream and ending at some other point lower down stream, through which flood waters naturally flow at times of high water. C. M. Bott Furniture Co. v. City of Buffalo, 131 Misc. 624, 227 N.Y.S. 660, 665.

NATURAL FOOL. A person born without understanding; a born fool or idiot. Sometimes called, in the old books, a "natural." In re Anderson, 132 N.C. 243, 43 S.E. 649.

NATURAL LAW. This expression, "natural law," or jus naturale, was largely used in the philosophical speculations of the Roman jurists of the Antonine age, and was intended to denote a system of rules and principles for the guidance of human conduct which, independently of enacted law or of the systems peculiar to any one people, might be discovered by the rational intelligence of man, and would be found to grow out of and conform to his nature, meaning by that word his whole mental, moral, and physical constitution. The point of departure for this conception was the Stoic doctrine of a life ordered "according to nature," which in its turn rested upon the purely supposititious existence, in primitive times, of a "state of nature;" that is, a condition of society in which men universally were governed solely by a rational and consistent obedience to the needs, impulses, and promptings of their true nature, such nature being as yet undefaced by dishonesty, falsehood, or indulgence of the baser passions. Maine, Anc.Law, 50, et seq.; Jus Naturale.

NATURAL LIFE. The period of a person's existence considered as continuing until terminated by physical dissolution or death occurring in the course of nature; used in contradistinction to that juristic and artificial conception of life as an aggregate of legal rights or the possession of a legal personality, which could be terminated by "civil, death,"(q. v.), that is, that extinction of personality which resulted from entering a monastery or being attainted of treason or felony. See People v. Wright, 89 Mich. 70, 50 N.W. 792.

NATURAL MARKETING AREA. A region within which milk is ordinarily sold in response to commercial demand. State v. Auclair, 110 Vt. 147, 4 A.2d 107, 116.

NATURAL MILK SHED. The milk producing area which normally produces milk for a given milk consuming area or market.

Milk producer whose milk could be preserved and transported to Connecticut in time to be usable as fresh milk was within the "natural milk shed" of Connecticut. Bryant & Chapman & Co. v. Lowell, 129 Conn. 321, 27 A.2d 637, 638.

NATURAL MONUMENT. Objects permanent in character which are found on the land as they were placed by nature, such as streams, lakes, ponds, shores, and beaches. Timme v. Squires, 199 Wis. 178, 225 N.W. 825, 828. Sometimes including highways and streets, walls, fences, trees, hedges, springs, and rocks, and the like. Parran v. Wilson, 160 Md. 604, 154 A. 449, 451.

NATURAL OBJECT OF TESTATOR'S BOUNTY. In testamentary law, term comprises whoever would take, in the absence of a will, because they are the persons whom the law has so designated, and in the ordinary case the law follows the normal condition of near relationship. Page v. Phelps, 108 Conn. 572, 143 A. 890, 893.

NATURAL OBJECTS. In interpretation of boundaries term includes mountains, lakes, rivers, etc. Earhart v. Rosenwinkel, 108 Ind.App. 281, 25 N.E. 2d 268, 273.

NATURAL PREMIUM. Actual sum necessary to meet maturing death claims each year and is necessarily exceeded by the "net premium". Fox v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 107 F.2d 715, 718.

NATURAL RESOURCE. The term includes not only timber, gas, oil, coal, minerals, lakes, and submerged lands, but also, features which supply a human need and contribute to the health, welfare, and benefit of a community, and are essential to the well-being thereof and proper enjoyment of property devoted to park and recreational purposes. Snyder v. Board of Park Com'rs of Cleveland Metropolitan Park Dist., 125 Ohio St. 336, 181 N.E. 483, 484.

NATURALE EST QUIDLIBET DISSOLVI EO MODO QUO LIGATUR. It is natural for a thing to be unbound in the same way in which it was bound. Jenk. Cent. 66; Broom, Max. 877.

NATURALEZA. In Spanish law, the state of a natural-born subject. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 2, NATURALIZATION. The act of adopting a foreigner and clothing him with the privileges of native citizen. U. S. v. Harbanuk, 62 F.2d 759, 761.

Collective Naturalization. This takes place where a government, by treaty or cession, acquires he whole or part of the territory of a foreign nation and takes to itself the inhabitants thereof, clothing them with the rights of citizenship either by the terms of the treaty or by subsequent legislation. State v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682, 48 N.W. 739; Opinion of Justices, 68 Me. 589.

NATURALIZE. To confer citizenship upon an alien; to make a foreigner the same, in respect to rights and privileges, as if he were a native citizen or subject.

NATURALIZED CITIZEN. One who, being an alien by birth, has received citizenship under the laws of the state or nation.

NATUS. Lat. Born, as distinguished from nascturus, about to be born. Ante natus, one born before a particular person or event, e. g., before the death of his father, before a political revolution, etc. Post natus, one born after a particular person or event.

NAUCLERUS. Lat. In the civil law, the master or owner of a merchant vessel. Calvin.

NAUFRAGE. In French maritime law, shipwreck.

"The violent agitation of the waves, the impetuous force of the winds, storm, or lightning, may swallow up the vessel, or shatter it, in such a manner that nothing remains of it but the wreck ; this is called 'making shipwreck,' (faire naufrage.) The vessel may also strike or run aground upon a bank, where it remains grounded, which is called 'echouement;' it may be dashed against the coast or a rock, which is called (bris;' an accident of any kind may sink it in the sea, where it is swallowed up, which is called `sombrer.' " 3 Pard. Droit Commer, § 643.

NAUFRAGIUM. Lat. Shipwreck.

NAUGHT. In old practice, bad; defective. "The bar is naught." 1 Leon. 77. "The avowry is naught." 5 Mod. 73. "The plea is undoubtedly naught." 10 Mod. 329. See 11 Mod. 179.

NAULAGE. The freight of passengers in a ship. Johnson; Webster.

NAULUM. In the civil law, the freight or fare paid for the transportation of cargo or passengers over the sea in a vessel. This is a Latinized form of a Greek word.

NAUTA. Lat. In the civil ands law, a sailor; one who works a ship. Calvin. Any one who is on board a ship for the purpose of navigating her. The employer of a ship. Dig. 4, 9, 1, 2.

NAUTICA PECUNIA. A loan to a shipowner, to be repaid only upon the successful termination of the voyage, and therefore allowed to be made at an extraordinary rate of interest (nauticum foonus). Holland, Jurispr. 250.

NAUTICAL. Pertaining to ships or to the art of navigation or the business of carriage by sea.

NAUTICAL ASSESSORS. Experienced shipmasters, or other persons having special knowledge of navigation and nautical affairs, who are called to the assistance of a court of admiralty, in difficult cases involving questions of negligence, and who sit with the judge during the argument, and give their advice upon questions of seamanship or the weight of testimony. The Empire, D.C.Mich., 19 F. 559; The Clement, 2 Curt. 369, F.Cas.No.2,879.

NAUTICAL MILE. See Mile.

NAUTICUM FCENUS. Lat. In the civil law, nautical or maritime interest; an extraordinary rate of interest agreed to be paid for the loan of money on the hazard of a voyage; corresponding to interest on contracts of bottomry or respondentia in English and American maritime law. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 433; 2 Bl.Comm. 458.

NAVAGIUM. In old English law, a duty on certain tenants to carry their lord's goods in a ship.

NAVAL. Appertaining to the navy, (q. v.).

NAVAL BASE. See Base.

NAVAL COURTS. Courts held abroad in certain cases to inquire into complaints by the master or seamen of a British ship, or as to the wreck or abandonment of a British ship.

A naval court consists of three, four, or five members, being officers in her majesty's navy, consular officers, masters of British merchant ships, or British merchants. It has power to supersede the master of the ship with reference to which the inquiry is held, to discharge any of the seamen, to decide questions as to wages, send home offenders for trial, or try certain offenses in a summary manner. Sweet.

NAVAL COURTS—MARTIAL. Tribunals for the trial of offenses arising in the management of public war vessels.

NAVAL LAW. The system of regulations and principles for the government of the navy.

NAVAL OFFICER. An officer in the navy. Also an important functionary in the United States custom-houses, who estimates duties, signs permits and clearances, certifies the collectors' returns, etc.

NAVARCIIUS. In the civil law, the master or commander of a ship; the captain of a man-of-war.

NAVICULARIUS. In the civil law, the master or captain of a ship. Calvin.

NAVIGABLE. Capable of being navigated; that may be navigated or passed over in ships or vessels. Natcher v. City of Bowling Green, 264 Ky. 584, 95 S.W.2d 255, 259. But the term is often, particularly at common law, understood in a more restricted sense, viz., subject to the ebb and flow of the tide. Luscher v. Reynolds, 153 Or. 625, 56 P.2d 1158, 1162.

"The doctrine of the common law as to the navigability of waters has no application In this country. • • •

There [In England] no waters are navigable in fact, or at least to any considerable extent, which are not subject to the tide, and from this circumstance tide-water and navigable water there signify substantially the same thing. But in this country the case is widely different. * * * Those rivers must be regarded as public navigable rivers, in law, which are navigable in fact." The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 563, 19 L.Ed. 999.

Waters are "navigable" when they are used, or are susceptible of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce, over which trade and travel are or may be conducted in customary modes of trade and travel on water. United States v. Appalachian Electric Power Co., D.C.Va., 23 F.Supp. 83.

NAVIGABLE IN FACT. Streams or lakes are navigable in fact when they are used or are susceptible of being used in their natural and ordinary condition as highways for commerce over which trade and travel are or may be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on water. Taylor Fishing Club v. Hammett, Tex.Civ.App., 88 S.W.2d 127, 129.

NAVIGABLE RIVER OR STREAM. At common law, a river or stream in which the tide ebbs and flows, or as far as the tide ebbs and flows. 3 Kent, Comm. 412, 414, 417, 418; 2 Hil. Real Prop. 90, 91. But as to the definition in American law, see Navigable, supra.

NAVIGABLE WATERS. Those waters which afford a channel for useful commerce. The Montello, 20 Wall. 430, 22 L.Ed. 391.

See, also, Navigable, supra.

In several states so long as a stream or body of water may be put to public use it is "navigable" whether it can be uses for commercial navigation or not. U. S. v. Holt State Bank, C.C.A.Minn., 294 F. 161, 166; State v. Korrer, 127 Minn. 60, 148 N.W. 617, 618, L.R.A.1916C, 139; State v. Akers, 92 Kan. 169, 140 P. 637, 640, Ann.Cas.1916B, 543. Any natural waters that are usable for rowing or canoeing are "navigable," and as such open to the public for hunting or fishing, notwithstanding water is a shallow, muddy lake or marsh. Baker v. Voss, 217 Wis. 415, 259 N.W. 413. Contra : To be "navigable," waters must be navigable for some purpose useful to trade or agriculture and susceptible of use for purposes of commerce, or possess capacity for valuable floatage in transportation to market of products of country through which it runs, a mere theoretical or potential navigability, or one that is temporary, precarious, unprofitable, or which requires artificial improvement, being insufficient. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Carroll, Tex.Civ.App., 106 S.W.2d 757, 759. The test of "navigability" is whether there is in the stream capacity for use for the purpose of transportation valuable to the public. American Red Cross v. Hinson, 173 Tenn. 667, 122 S.W.2d 433, 435. Navigability is not imparted by ability to float small boats, such as skiffs or canoes. United States v. Appalachian Electric Power Co., D.C.Va., 23 F.Supp. 83. Generally, a lake that is chiefly valuable for fishing or pleasure boats of small size is not "navigable." Taylor Fishing Club & Hammett, Tex.Civ.App., 88 S.W.2d 127, 129, 130.

NAVIGABLE WATERS OF THE UNITED STATES. Waters are "navigable waters of the United States" when they form in their ordinary condition by themselves, or by uniting with other waters, a continued highway over which commerce is or may be carried on with other states or foreign countries in the customary modes in which such commerce is conducted by water. United States v. Appalachian Electric Power Co., D.C. Va., 23 F.Supp. 83, NAVIGATE. To journey by water; to go in a vessel; to sail or manage a vessel; to use the waters as a highway for commerce or communication; ply. Hence, to direct one's course through any medium; to steer, especially to operate an airplane or airship. United States v. Monstad, C.C.A.Cal., 134 F.2d 986, 987, 988.

NAVIGATION, The act or the science or the business of traversing the sea or other waters in ships or vessels. Pollock v. Cleveland Ship Building Co., 56 Ohio St. 655, 47 N.E. 582; The Silvia, 171 U.S. 462, 19 S.Ct. 7, 43 L.Ed. 241; Laurie v. Douglass, 15 Mees. & W. 746.

Regular navigation. In this phrase, the word "regular" may be used in contradistinction to "occasional," rather than to "unlawful," and refer to vessels that, alone or with others, constitute lines, and not merely to such as are regular in the sense of being properly documented under the laws of the country to which they belong. The Steamer Smidt, 16 Op.Attys.Gen. 276.

Rules of navigation. Rules and regulations adopted by commercial nations to govern the steering and management of vessels approaching each other at sea so as to avoid the danger of collision or fouling.

NAVIGATION ACTS. Various English enactments passed for the protection of British shipping and commerce as against foreign countries. For a sketch of their history and operation, see 3 Steph. Comm. They are now repealed. See 16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, and 17 & 18 Vict. cc. 5, 120. Wharton.

NAVIGATION SERVITUDE. Public right of navigation for the use of the people at large. United States v. 412.715 Acres of Land, Contra Costa County, Cal., D.C.Cal., 53 F.Supp. 143, 148, 149.

NAVIGATIONAL VISIBILITY. Visibility as affecting speed with reference to distance within which boat in fog could be brought to stop, before any course of any vessel emerging from fog on either side would cross her projected course alongside the fog bank at its nearest point. The Silver Palm, C.C.A.Cal., 94 F.2d 754, 767.

NAVIRE. Fr. In French law, a ship. Emerig. Traite des Assur. c. 6, § 1.

NAVIS. Lat. A ship; a vessel.

NAVIS BONA. A good ship; one that was staunch and strong, well caulked, and stiffened to bear the sea, obedient to her helm, swift, and not unduly affected by the wind. Calvin.

NAVY. A fleet of ships; the aggregate of vessels of war belonging to an independent nation. In a broader sense, and as equivalent to "naval forces," the entire corps of officers and men enlisted in the naval service and who man the public ships of war, including in this sense, in the United States, the officers and men of the Marine Corps. Wilkes v. Dinsman, 7 How. 124, 12 L.Ed. 618; U. S. v. Dunn, 120 U.S. 249, 7 S.Ct. 507, 30 L.Ed. 667.

NAVY BILLS. Bills drawn by officers of the English navy for their pay, etc.

NAVY DEPARTMENT. One of the executive departments of the United States, presided over by the secretary of the navy, and having in charge the defense of the country by sea, by means of ships of war and other naval appliances.

NAVY PENSION. A pecuniary allowance made in consideration of past services of some one in the navy.

NAZIM, In Hindu law, composer, arranger, adjuster. The first officer of a province, and minister of the department of criminal justice.

NE ADMITTAS. Lat. In ecclesiastical law, the name of a prohibitory writ, directed to the bishop, at the request of the plaintiff or defendant, where a quare impedit is pending, when either party fears that the bishop will admit the other's clerk pending the suit between them. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 37.

NE BAILA PAS. L. Fr. He did not deliver. A plea in detinue, denying the delivery to the defendant of the thing sued for.

NE DISTURBA PAS. L. Fr. (Does or did not disturb.) In English practice, the general issue or general plea in quare impedit. 3 Steph.Comm. 663.

NE DONA PAS, or NON DEDIT. The general issue in a formedon, now abolished. It denied the gift in tail to have been made in manner and form as alleged; and was therefore the proper plea, if the tenant meant to dispute the fact of the gift, but did not apply to any other case. 5 East, 289.

NE .EXEAT. A writ which forbids the person to whom it is addressed to leave the country, the state, or the jurisdiction of the court; available in some cases to keep a defendant within the reach of the court's process, where the ends of justice would be frustrated if he should escape from the jurisdiction.

Sometimes a ne exeat writ is issued only to restrain a person from leaving the jurisdiction, and sometimes it is issued against a person who is removing or attempting to remove property beyond the jurisdiction. August v. August, 65 Ga.App. 883, 16 S.E.2d 784, 785.

NE EXEAT BOND. In wife's suit for divorce and alimony, "ne exeat bond" conditioned on husband's appearance on hearing of bill of complaint was in effect an appearance bond to abide the decree of the court. Muckelrath v. Chezem, 184 Miss. 511, 186 So. 621, 623.

NE EXEAT REGNO. Lat. In English practice, a writ which issues to restrain a person from leaving the kingdom. It was formerly used for political purposes, but is now only resorted to in equity when the defendant is about to leave the kingdom; it is only in cases where the intention of the party to leave can be shown that the writ is granted.

NE EXEAT REPUBLICA. Lat. In American practice, a writ similar to that of ne exeat regno, (q. v.) available to the plaintiff in a civil suit, under some circumstances, when the defendant is about to leave the state. Dean v. Smith, 23 Wis. 483, 99 Am.Dec. 198; Adams v. Whitcomb, 46 Vt. 712; Cable v. Alvord, 27 Ohio St. 664.

NE GIST PAS EN BOUCHE. L. Fr. It does not lie in the mouth. A common phrase in the old books. Yearb. M. 3 Edw. II. 50.

NE INJUSTE VEXES. Lat. In old English practice, a prohibitory writ, commanding a lord not to demand from the tenant more services than were justly due by the tenure under which his ancestors held.

NE LUMINIBUS OFFICIATUR. Lat. In the civil law, the name of a servitude which restrains the owner of a house from making such erections as obstruct the light of the adjoining house. Dig. 8, 4, 15, 17.

NE QUID IN LOCO PUBLICO VEL ITINERE FIAT. Lat. That nothing shall be done (put or erected) in a public place or way. The title of an interdict in the Roman law. Dig. 43, 8.

NE RECIPIATUR. Lat. That it be not received. A caveat or warning given to a law officer, by a party in a cause, not to receive the next proceedings of his opponent. 1 Sell. Pr. 8.

NE RECTOR PROSTERNET ARBORES. L. Lat. The statute 35 Edw. I. § 2, prohibiting rectors, 1. e., parsons, from cutting down the trees in churchyards. In Rutland v. Green, 1 Keb. 557, it was extended to prohibit them from opening new mines and working the minerals therein. Brown.

NE RELESSA PAS. L. Fr. Did not release. Where the defendant had pleaded a release, this was the proper replication by way of traverse.

NE UNQUES ACCOUPLE. L. Fr. Never married. More fully, ne unques accouple en loiall matrimonie, never joined in lawful marriage. The name of a plea in the action of dower unde nihil habet, by which the tenant denied that the dowress was ever lawfully married to the decedent.

NE UNQUES EXECUTOR. L. Fr. Never executor. The name of a plea by which the defendant denies that he is an executor, as he is alleged to be; or that the plaintiff is an executor, as he claims to be.

NE UNQUES SEISE QUE DOWER. L. Fr. (Never seised of a dowable estate.) In pleading, the general issue in the action of dower unde nil habet, by which the tenant denies that the demandant's husband was ever seised of an estate of which dower might be had. Rosc. Real Act. 219, 220.

NE UNQUES SON RECEIVER. L. Fr. In pleading, the name of a plea in an action of account-render, by which the defendant denies that he ever was receiver of the plaintiff. 12 Vin. Abr. 183.

NE VARLETUR. Lat. It must not be altered. A phrase sometimes written by a notary upon a bill or note, for the purpose of establishing its identity, which, however, does not affect its negotiability. Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. 338, 5 L.Ed. 631.

NEAP TIDE. When the moon is in its first and third quarters, the tides do not rise as high, nor fall as low, as on the average; at such times the tides are known as "neap tides." Borax Consolidated v. City of Los Angeles, Cal., 296 U.S. 10, 56 S.Ct. 23, 80 L.Ed. 9.

NEAR. The word as applied to space is a relative term without positive or precise meaning, depending for its signification on the subject-matter in relation to which it is used and the circumstances under which it becomes necessary to apply it to surrounding objects. Case-Fowler Lumber Co. v. Winslett, 168 Ga. 808, 149 S.E. 211, 213.

NEAT, NET. The clear weight or quantity of an article, without the bag, box, keg, or other thing in which it may be enveloped.

NEAT CATTLE. Oxen or heifers. "Beeves" may include neat stock, but all neat stock are not beeves. Castello v. State, 36 Tex. 324; Hubotter v. State, 32 Tex. 479. Straight-backed, domesticated animals of the bovine genus regardless of sex, and is not generally but may be, taken to mean calves, or animals younger than yearlings. It includes cows, bulls, and steers, but not horses, mares, geldings, colts, mules, jacks, or jennies, goats, hogs, sheep, shoats, or pigs. State v. District Court of Fifth Judicial Dist. in and for Nye County, 42 Nev. 218, 174 P. 1023, 1025; State v. Swager, 110 Wash. 431, 188 P. 504, 506.

NEAT—LAND. Land let out to the yeomanry. Cowell.

NEATNESS. In pleading, the statement in apt and appropriate words of all the necessary facts, and no more. Lawes, Pl. 62.

NEC CURIA DEFICERET IN JUSTITIA EXHIBENDA. Nor should the court be deficient in showing justice. 4 Inst. 63.

NEC NON. A clause so called which was used as a fiction to give jurisdiction to the common pleas in connection with the writ of quare clausum fregit. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 89, note. See Bill of Middlesex.

NEC TEMPUS NEC LOCUS OCCURRIT REGI. Jenk. Cent. 190. Neither time nor place affects the king.

NEC VENIAM EFFUSO SANGUINE CASUS HABET. Where blood is spilled, the case is unpardonable. 3 Inst. 57.

NEC VENIAM, L7ESO NUMINE, CASUS HABET. Where the Divinity is insulted the case is unpardonable. Jenk. Cent. 167.

NECATION. The act of killing.

NECESSARIES. An article which a party actually needs. State v. Earnest, Mo.App., 162 S.W. 2d 338, 341. Things indispensable, or things proper and useful, for the sustenance of human life.

The word has no hard and fast meaning, but varies with the accustomed manner of living of the parties. Smitti v. Roth Cadillac Co., 145 Pa.Super. 292, 21 A.2d 127, 130.

"Necessaries" consist of food, drink, clothing, medical attention, and a suitable place of residence, and they are regarded as necessaries in the absolute sense of the word; however, liability for necessaries is not limited to articles required to sustain life; it extends to articles which would ordinarily be necessary and suitable, in view of the rank, position, fortune, earning capacity, and mode of living of the husband or father. Caruso v. Caruso, 102 N.J.Eq. 393, 141 A. 16, 19.

Such things as are suited to wife's and children's condition and station in life, their needs and wants, in so far as ability of parties will permit. Rice v. Mercantile Bank & Trust Co. of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S.W.2d 54, 56.

Including funeral expenses of wife and children. Colovos' Adm'r v. Gouvas, 269 Ky. 752, 108 S.W.2d 820, 827, 113 A.L.R. 871. And children's insurance. Sanker v. Humborg, 48 Cal.App.2d 205, 119 P.2d 433, 434.

Whether attorney's services are to be considered "necessaries" depends on whether there is necessity therefor. Fenn v. Hart Dairy Co., 231 Mo.App. 1005, 83 S.W.2d 120, 124. But such services are usually "necessaries". Leonard v. Alexander, 50 Cal.App.2d 385, 122 P.2d 984, 986.

What constitutes "necessaries" for which an admiralty lien will attach depends upon what is reasonably needed in the ship's business, regard being had to the character of the voyage and the employment in which the vessel is being used. Walker Skageth Food Stores v. The Bavois, D.C. N.Y., 43 F.Supp. 109, 110, 111.

In the case of ships the term "necessaries" means such things as are fit and proper for the service in which the ship is engaged, and such as the owner, being a prudent man, would have ordered if present; e. g., anchors, rigging, repairs, victuals. , Maude & P. Shipp. 71, 113. The master may hypothecate the ,ship for necessaries supplied abroad so as to bind the owner. Sweet; The Plymouth Rock, 19 F.Cas. 898; Hubbard v. Roach, C.C.IU., 2 F. 394; The Gustavia, 11 Fed.Cas. 126.

NECESSARIUM EST QUOD NON POTEST ALITER SE ELABERE. That is necessary which cannot be otherwise.

NECESSARIUS. Lat. Necessary; unavoidable; indispensable; not admitting of choice or the action of the will; needful.

NECESSARY. This word must be considered in the connection in which it is used, as it is a word susceptible of various meanings. It may import absolute physical necessity or inevitability, or it may import that which is only convenient, useful, appropriate, suitable, proper, or conducive to the end sought. It is an adjective expressing degrees, and may express mere convenience or that which is indispensable or an absolute physical necessity. It may mean something which in the accomplishment of a given object cannot be dispensed with, or it may mean something reasonably useful and proper, and of greater or lesser benefit or convenience, and its force and meaning must be determined with relation to the particular object sought. Kay County Excise Board v, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 185 Okl. 327, 91 P.2d 1087, 1088.

In eminent domain proceedings, it means land reasonably requisite and proper for accomplishment of end in view, not absolute necessity of particular location. State v. Whitcomb, 94 Mont. 415, 22 P.2d 823.

As to necessary "Damages," "Deposit," "Domicile," "Implication," "Intromission," "Parties," "Repairs," and "Way," see those titles.

NECESSARY INFERENCE. One which is inescapable or unavoidable from the standpoint of reason. Taylor v. Twiner, 193 Miss. 410, 9 So.2d 644, 646.

NECESSARY INJURY. Under Wrongful Death Statute the words mean pecuniary injury and include any damages whether present, prospective, or proximate which may be estimated according to a pecuniary standard, and the jury is not confined to precise calculation as to amount of loss to survivors of deceased, but has large discretion in determining such damages. Polk v. Krenning, Mo. App., 2 S.W.2d 107, 109.

NECESSITAS. Lat. Necessity; a force, power, or influence which compels one to act against his will. Calvin.

NECESSITAS CULPABILIS. Culpable necessity; unfortunate necessity; necessity which, while it excuses the act done under its compulsion, does not leave the doer entirely free from blame. The necessity which compels a man to kill another in self-defense is thus distinguished from that which requires the killing of a felon. See 4 Bl. Comm. 187.

NECESSITAS EST LEX TEMPORIS ET LOCI. Necessity is the law of time and of place. 1 Hale, P. C. 54.

NECESSITAS EXCUSAT AUT EXTENUAT DELICTUM IN CAPITALIBUS, QUOD NON OPERATUR IDEM IN CIVILIBUS. Necessity excuses or extenuates a delinquency in capital cases, which has not the same operation in civil cases. Bac. Max.

NECESSITAS FACIT LICITUM QUOD ALIAS NON EST LICITUM. 10 Coke, 61. Necessity makes that lawful which otherwise is not lawful.

NECESSITAS INDUCIT PRIVILEGIUM QUOAD JURA PRIVATA. Bac. Max. 25. Necessity gives a privilege with reference to private rights. The necessity involved in this maxim is of three kinds, viz.: (1) Necessity of self-preservation; (2) of obedience; and (3) necessity resulting from the act of God, or of a stranger. Noy, Max. 32.

NECESSITAS NON HABET LEGEM. Necessity has no law. Plowd. 18a. "Necessity shall be a good excuse in our law, and in every other law." Id.

NECESSITAS PUBLICA MAJOR EST QUAM PRIVATA. Public necessity is greater than private. "Death," it has been observed, "is the last and furthest point of particular necessity, and the law imposes it upon every subject that he prefer the urgent service of his king and country before the safety of his life." Noy, Max. 34; Broom, Max. 18, NECESSITAS QUOD COGIT, DEFENDIT. Necessity defends or justifies what it compels. 1 Hale, P. C. 54. Applied to the acts of a sheriff, or ministerial officer, in the execution of his office. Broom, Max. 14.

NECESSITAS SUB LEGE NON CONTINETUR, QUIA QUOD ALIAS NON EST LICITUM NECESSITAS FACIT LICITUM. 2 Inst. 326. Necessity is not restrained by law; since what otherwise is not lawful necessity makes lawful.

NECESSITAS VINCIT LEGEM. Necessity overrules the law. Hob. 144; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th Ed. 747.

NECESSITAS VINCIT LEGEM; LEGUM VINCULA IRRIDET. Hob. 144. Necessity overcomes law; it derides the fetters of laws.

NECESSITOUS. Indigent or pressed by poverty. St. Cyr v. Wills, 87 N.H. 277, 178 A. 257.

NECESSITOUS CIRCUMSTANCES. In the civil code of Louisiana the words are used relative to the fortune of the deceased and to the condition in which the claimant lived during the marriage. Smith v. Smith, 43 La.Ann. 1140, 10 So. 248.

Needing the necessaries of life, which cover not only primitive physical needs, things absolutely indispensable to human existence and decency, but those things, also, which are in fact necessary to the particular person left without support. State v. Waller, 90 Kan. 829, 136 P. 215, 216, 49 L.R.A., N.S., 588.

NECESSITUDO. Lat. In the civil law, an obligation; a close connection; relationship by blood. Calvin.

NECESSITY. Controlling force; irresistible compulsion; a power or impulse so great that it admits no choice of conduct.

When it is said that an act is done "under necessity," it may be, in law, either of three kinds of necessity : (1) The necessity of preserving one's own life, which will excuse a homicide; (2) the necessity of obedience, as to the laws, or the obedience of one not sui juris to his superior ; (3) the necessity caused by the act of God or a stranger. See Jacob; Mozley & Whiteley.

That which makes the contrary of a thing impossible.

The quality or state of being necessary, in its primary sense signifying that which makes an act or event unavoidable. Spreckels v. City and County of San Francisco, 76 Cal.App. 267, 244 P. 919, 922; In re Washington Ave. in Borough of Chatham, 5 N.J.Misc. 858, 139 A. 239, 240.

A constraint upon the will whereby a person is urged to do that which his judgment disapproves, and which, it is to be presumed, his will (if left to itself) would reject. A man, therefore, is excused for those actions which are done through unavoidable force and compulsion. Wharton.

In determining what is a work of "necessity" excepted from the operation of the Sunday law, the necessity meant is not a physical or absolute necessity, but a moral fitness or propriety of the work and labor done under the circumstances of the particular case, and whether or not the act is morally fit and proper is usually a question of fact for the jury under proper instructions. Lakeside Inn Corpora-. tion v. Commonwealth, 134 Va. 696, 114 S.E. 769, 771; Natural Gas Products Co. v. Thurman, 205 Ky. 100, 265 S.W. 475, 477. The term "necessity" means an economical and moral necessity, rather than an unavoidable physical necessity. Rosenbaum v. State, 131 Ark. 251, 199 S.W. 388, 392, L.

R.A.1918B, 1109. The necessity which must exist depends on what the general public in its ordinary modes of doing business regards as necessary. Gray v. Commonwealth, 171 Ky. 269, 188 S.W. 354, 355, L.R.A. 1917B, 93. "Works of necessity" include whatever is needful for the good health, order, or comfort of the community. State v. Dean, 149 Minn. 410, 84 N.W. 275.

The word "necessity", within certificate of public convenience and necessity, is not used in the sense of being essential or absolutely indispensable but merely that certificate is reasonably necessary for public good. Alabama Public Service Commission v. Crow, 247 Ala. 120, 22 So.2d 721, 724.

To fulfill requirements for easement of right of way of necessity, the necessity must be actual, real, and reasonable, as distinguished from inconvenience, but it need not be absolute and irresistible necessity. Brasington v. Williams, 143 S.C. 223, 141 S.E. 375, 383.

"Necessity" when used in relation to power of eminent domain does not mean absolute necessity, but only reasonable necessity. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. City of Racine, 200 Wis. 170, 227 N.W. 859, 861.

The "necessity" of and appurtenance for the beneficial use of leased premises, which will entitle the lessee thereto, is not an absolute necessity in the sense that it must be completely indispensable, but is a real necessity and not a mere convenience or advantage. Raynes v. Stevens, 219 Mass. 556, 107 N.E. 398, 399.

Public necessity. Of a municipal improvement, needed for reasonable convenience, facility, and completeness in accomplishing a public purpose. In re Washington Ave. in Borough of Chatham, 5 N.J.Misc. 858, 139 A. 239, 240. With reference to common carriers, great or urgent public convenience. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Van Santvoord, D.C.N.Y., 232 F. 978, 983.

NECK-VERSE The Latin sentence, "Miserere mei, Deus," was so called, because the reading of it was made a test for those who claimed benefit of clergy.

NECROPHILISM. See Insanity.

NECROPSY. An autopsy, or post-mortem examination of a human body.

NEED. A relative term, the conception of which must, within reasonable limits, vary with the personal situation of the individual employing it. In re Skuse's Estate, 165 Misc. 554, 1 N.Y.S.2d 202, 205.

NEEDFUL. Necessary, requisite, essential, indispensable. Riddell v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 262 Pa. 582, 106 A. 80, 81.

NEEDLESS. In a statute against "needless" killing or mutilation of any animal, this term denotes an act done without any useful motive, in a spirit of wanton cruelty, or for the mere pleasure of destruction. Grise v. State, 37 Ark. 460; Hunt v. State, 3 Ind.App. 383, 29 N.E. 933; State v. Bogardus, 4 Mo.App. 215.

NEEDY. Indigent, necessitous, very poor. Moore v. State Social Security Commission, 233 Mo.App. 536, 122 S.W.2d 391, 393; Nichols v. State Social Security Commission of Missouri, 349 Mo. 1148, 164 S.W.2d 278, 280.

NEFAS. Lat. That which is against right or the divine law. A wicked or impious thing or act. Calvin.

NEFASTUS. Lat. Inauspicious, Applied, in the Roman law, to a day on which it was unlawful to open the courts or administer justice.

NEGATIO CONCLUSIONIS EST ERROR IN LEGE. Wing. 268. The denial of a conclusion is error in law.

NEGATIO DESTRUIT NEGATIONEM, ET AMBIE FACIUNT AFFIRMATIONEM. A negative destroys a negative, and both make an affirmative. Co. Litt. 146b. Lord Coke cites this as a rule of grammatical construction, not always applying in law.

NEGATIO DUPLEX EST AFFIRMATIO. A double negative is an affirmative.

NEGATIVE. A denial; a proposition by which something is denied; a statement in the form of denial. Two negatives do not make a good issue. Steph. Pl. 386, 387.

As to negative "Covenant," "Easement," "Servitude," "Statute," and "Testimony," see those titles.

NEGATIVE AVERMENT. As opposed to the traverse or simple denial of an affirmative allegation, a negative averment is an allegation of some substantive fact, e. g., that premises are not in repair, which, although negative in form, is really affirm• ative in substance, and the party alleging the fact of non-repair must prove it. Brown. An averment in some of the pleadings in a case in which a negative is asserted. U. S. v. Eisenminger, D.C. Del., 16 F.2d 816, 819.

NEGATIVE CONDITION. One by which it is stipulated that a given thing shall not happen.

NEGATIVE EVIDENCE. Testimony that an alleged fact did not exist. K. B. Johnson & Sons v. Southern Ry. Co., 214 N.C. 484, 199 S.E. 704, 706.

NEGATIVE HEAD. As used in connection with a filtration plant it means the force that comes into play when a partial vacuum is created either within or below the filter bed. City of Harrisburg v. New York Continental Jewell Filtration Co., C.C. A.Pa., 217 F. 366, 368.

NEGATIVE PREGNANT. In pleading, a negative implying also an affirmative. Cowell. Such a form of negative expression as may imply or carry within it an affirmative. Steph. Pl. 318; Fields v. State, 134 Ind: 46, 32 N.E. 780; Stone v. Quaal, 36 Minn. 46, 29 N.W. 326.

As if a man be said to have aliened land in fee, and he says he has not aliened in fee, this is a negative pregnant; for, though it be true that he has not aliened in fee, yet it may be that he has made an estate in tail. Cowell. A "negative pregnant," is a denial in form, but is in fact an admission, as where the denial in hiec verba includes the time and place, which are usually immaterial. Hall & Lyon Furniture Co. v. Torrey, 196 App. Div. 804, 188 N.Y. S. 486, 487; Green v. Commercial Bank & Trust Co. D.C. Wyo., 277 F. 527, 528; McIntosh Livestock Co. v. Buffington, 108 Or. 358, 217 P. 635, 636.

A denial in such form as to imply or express an admission of the substantial fact which apparently is controverted; or a denial which, although in the form of a traverse, really admits the important facts contained in the allegations to which it relates. Cramer v. Aiken, 63 App.D.C. 16, 68 F.2d 761, 762.

NEGGILDARE. To claim kindred. Jac. L. Dict.

NEGLECT. May mean to omit, fail, or forbear to do a thing that can be done, or that is required to be done, but it may also import an absence of care or attention in the doing or omission of a given act. State v. Sheldon, 135 Okl. 278, 276 P. 468, 472; Same v. Butterfield, 138 Oki. 112, 276 P. 473.

And it may mean a designed refusal or unwillingness to perform one's duty. In re Perkins, 234 Mo.App. 716, 117 S.W.2d 686, 692.

The term is used in the law of bailment as synonymous with "negligence." But the latter word is the closer translation of the Latin "negligentia."

Failure to pay money which the party is bound to pay without demand. Kimball v. Rowland, 6 Gray, Mass., 224. An omission to do or perform some work, duty, or act. Esposito v. St. George Swimming Club, 143 Misc. 15, 255 N.Y.S. 794, 801. Failure to perform or discharge a duty, covering positive official misdoing or official misconduct as well as negligence. Commonwealth ex rel. and to Use of Allegheny County v. De Luca, 131 Pa.Super. 451, 200 A. 712, 714.

Culpable Neglect. In this phrase, the word "culpable" means not only criminal, but censurable. As he has merely lost a right of action which he might voluntarily relinquish, and has wronged nobody but himself, culpable neglect to preserve rights conveys the idea of neglect which exists where the loss can fairly be ascribed to the party's own carelessness, improvidence, or folly. State ex rel. Fulton v. Coburn, 133 Ohio St. 192, 12 N.E.2d 471, 477.

Willful Neglect. The neglect of the husband to provide for his wife the common necessaries of life, he having the ability to do so; or it is the failure to do so by reason of idleness, profligacy, or dissipation. Civil Code Cal. § 105.

NEGLECTED MINOR. One suffering from neglect and in state of want. People v. De Pue, 217 N.Y.S. 205, 206, 217 App.Div. 321.

NEGLIGENCE. The omission to do something which a reasonable man, guided by those ordinary considerations which ordinarily regulate human affairs, would do, or the doing of something which a reasonable and prudent man would not do. Schneeweisz v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 196 Ill.App. 248, 253; Schneider v. C. H. Little Co., 184 Mich. 315, 151 N.W. 587, 588; Hulley v. Moosbrugger, 88 N.J.L. 161, 95 A. 1007, 1010, L.R.A. 1916C, 1203.

The term refers only to that legal delinquency which results whenever a man fails to exhibit the care which he ought to exhibit, whether it be slight, ordinary, or great. Hazzard v. Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York, 159 Misc. 57, 287 N.Y.S. 541, 552. It is characterized chiefly by inadvertence, thoughtlessness, inattention, and the like, while "wantonness" or "recklessness" is characterized by willfulness. People v. Orr, 243 Mich. 300, 220 N.W. 777, 779. The law of "negligence" is founded on reasonable conduct or reasonable care under all circumstances of particular case. Charbonneau v. MacRury, 84 N.H. 501, 153 A. 457, 462, 73 A.L.R. 1266. Doctrine of negligence rests on duty of every person to exercise due care in his conduct toward others from which injury may result. Johnson v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., 246 Mich. 52, 224 N.W. 448, 449. "Negligence" is not intentional conduct. Gunther v. Morey Larue Laundry Co., 129 N.J.L. 345, 29 A.2d 713, 714. Inaction as well as action may be "negligence". Public Service Co. of New Hampshire v. Elliott, C.C.A.N.H., 123 F.2d 2, 5. It is not act itself, but fact which defines character of act and makes it legal wrong. Metzger v. Gambill, Tex.Civ.App., 37 S.W.2d 1077, 1078. It is immaterial to the question of "negligence" whether violated standard of conduct is established by statute or by the common law. Armit v. Loveland, C.C.A.Pa., 115 F.2d 308, 311, 312. It is the failure to do that which a person of ordinary prudence, Ottenhelmer v. Molohan, 146 Md. 175, 126 A. 97, 100; an ordinarily prudent person, Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Meyers, Tex.Civ.App., 248 S.W. 444, 447; a reasonable and prudent person, Chickasha Cotton Oil Co. v. Brown, 39 Okl. 245, 134 P. 850; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U.S. 441, 24 L.Ed. 506; a person of ordinary care. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Jasper v. Rateliff & Lanier, Tex.Civ.App., 238 S. W. 362, 365; a reasonable, prudent person, Boswell v. Whitehead Hosiery Mills, 191 N.C. 549, 132 S.E. 598, 602; a person of ordinary prudence and care, Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Nelson, C.C.A.Iowa, 203 F. 956, 959; an ordinarily reasonable, careful, and prudent person, Johnson v. Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Ry. Co., 194 Iowa 1230, 190 N.W. 977, 978; or a reasonably prudent person, guided by those considerations which ordinarily regulate conduct of human affairs, would do, or doing something which such a person would not do, under like or similar circumstances. McKee v. Iowa Ry. & Light Co., 204 Iowa 44, 214 N.W. 564, 565; Bowers v. J. D. Halstead Lumber Co., 28 Ariz. 122, 236 P. 124, 125.

The failure to use ordinary care, Curtis v. Mauger, 186 Ind. 118, 114 N.E. 408, 409; reasonable care, Crowley v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 204 Iowa 1385, 213 N.W. 403, 407, 53 A.L.R. 964; or ordinary or reasonable care under the circumstances, Thrasher v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co., 826 Okl. 88, 206 P. 212, 214.

The failure to exercise that degree of care which a prudent person, Getsinger v. Corbell, 188 N.C. 553, 125 S.E. 180, 181; an ordinarily prudent person, Faulk v. Kansas City Rys. Co., Mo.App., 247 S.W. 253; a reasonably prudent person, Moir v. Hart, 189 Ill.App. 566, 567; City of Decatur v. Eady, 186 Ind. 205, 115 N.E. 577, 579, L.R.A. 1917E, 242; a reasonable and prudent person, Heller v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 265 F. 192, 198, 17 A.L.R. 823; a reasonably careful person, Behen v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co., 93 A. 903, 904, 5 Boyce, Del., 389; an ordinary prudent person, Donahue v. R. A. Sherman's Sons Co., 39 R.I. 373, 98 A. 109, 114, L.R.A.1917A, 76; a reasonably prudent, careful person, Gray v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 3 W.W.Harr., Del., 450, 139 A. 66, 75; a reasonably prudent and careful person, Lemmon v. Broadwater, 108 A. 273, 274, 7 Boyce, Del., 472; or an ordinarily prudent and careful person would exercise under like circumstances, Clayton v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co., 106 A. 577, 579, 7 Boyce, Del., 343.

The failure to exercise ordinary care. Anderson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 161 N.C. 462, 77 S.E. 402, 404. Ordinary or reasonable care being that care which ordinarily prudent persons, Travis v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 183 Ala. 415, 62 So. 851, 854; reasonably prudent persons, Burns v. Polar Wave Ice & Fuel Co., Mo.App., 187 S.W. 145, 148; persons of ordinary prudence, Shirley Hill Coal Co. v. Moore, 181 Ind. 513, 103 N.E. 802, 804; ordinary careful, prudent persons, Yellow Pine Paper Mill Co. v. Wright, Tex., 154 S.W. 1168, 1171; or ordinarily careful or prudent persons, would exercise under like or similar circumstances. Loverage v. Carmichael, 164 Minn. 76, 204 N.W. 921, 922.

The breach of a legal duty. Taylor v. Neuse Lumber Co., 173 N.C. 112, 91 S.E. 719, 720; Jones v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 98 Kan. 133, 157 P. 399, 400; Pickett v. Waldorf System, 241 Mass. 569, 136 N.E. 64, 65, 23 A.L.R. 1014; Schell v. Du Bois, 94 Ohio St. 93, 113 N.E. 664, 668, L.R.A.1917A, 710.

Negligence usually consists in the "involuntary and casual"-that is, "accidental"-doing or omission to do something which results in an injury, Root v. Topeka Ry. Co., 96 Kan. 694, 153 P. 550; and is synonymous with heedlessness, carelessness, thoughtlessness, disregard, inattention, inadvertence, remissness and oversight, Payne v. Vance, 103 Ohio St. 59, 133 N.E. 85, 87.

"Negligence" in official conduct is ordinarily the failure to use such reasonable care and caution as would be expected of a prudent man. Hamrick v. McCutcheon, 101 W. Va. 485, 133 S.E. 127, 129.

Negligence is any culpable omission of a positive duty. It differs from heedlessness, in that heedlessness is the doing of an act in violation of a negative duty, without adverting to its possible consequences. In both cases there is inadvertence, and there is breach of duty. Aust. Jur. 630.

Negligence or carelessness signifies want of care, caution, attention, diligence, or discretion in one having no positive intention to injure the person complaining thereof. The words "reckless," "indifferent," "careless," and "wanton" are never understood to signify positive will or intention, unless when joined with other words which show that they are to receive an artificial or unusual, if not an unnatural, interpretation. Lexington v. Lewis, 10 Bush, Ky., 677.

"Negligence" is not synonymous with "incompetency," since the competent may be negligent. Alabama City, G. & A. Ry. Co. v. Bessiere, 190 Ala. 59, 66 So. 805, 806; Barclay v. Wetmore & Morse Granite Co., 92 Vt. 195, 102 A. 493, 495.

See Care.

Actionable Negligence. See Actionable Negligence.

Collateral Negligence. In the law relating to the responsibility of an employer or principal for the negligent acts or omissions of his employee, the term "collateral" negligence is sometimes used to describe negligence attributable to a contractor employed by the principal and for which the latter is not responsible, though he would be responsible for the same thing if done by his servant. Weber v. Railway Co., 20 App.Div. 292, 47 N.Y.S. 11.

Comparative Negligence, See Comparative Negligence.

Concurrent Negligence. Arises where the injury is ,,..1.,proximatel;, caused by the concurrent wrongful acts or omissions of two or more persons acting independently. Carr v. St. Louis Auto Supply Co., 293 Mo. 562, 239 S.W. 827, 828.

Contributory Negligence. The act or omission amounting to want of ordinary care on part of complaining party, which, concurring with defendant's negligence, is proximate cause of injury. Honaker v. Crutchfield, 247 Ky. 495, 57 S.W.2d 502.

Any want of ordinary care on the part of the person injured, (or on the part of another whose negligence is imputable to him,) which combined and concurred with the defendant's negligence, and contributed to the injury as a proximate cause thereof, and as an element without which the injury would not have occurred. Railroad Co. v. Young, 153 Ind. 163, 54 N.E. 791; Barton v. Railroad Co., 52 Mo. 253, 14 Am.Rep. 418; McLaughlin v. Electric Light Co., 100 Ky. 173, 37 S.W. 851, 34 L.R.A. 812; 25 C.J. S. Damages; Townsend v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 163 La. 872, 113 So. 130, 132, 54 A.L.R. 538.

The negligent act of plaintiff which, concurring and cooperating with negligent act of defendant, becomes real, efficient, and proximate cause of injury, or cause without which the injury would not have occurred. Elder v. Plaza Ry., 194 N.C. 617, 140 S.E. 298, 299; James v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 92 N.J.L. 149, 104 A. 328, 333.

"Assumption of risk" and "contributory negligence" are not synonymous. Chicago, R. L & P. R. Co. v. Rogers, 60 Okl. 249, 159 P. 1132, 1136.

Concurrent Contributory Negligence. Knowledge of specific danger and negligent failure to avoid it. Sprinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 215 Ala. 191, 110 So. 137, 140.

Mutual Contributory Negligence. Exists when injury would not have happened but for negligence of both parties. Alexander v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 153, 155.

Criminal Negligence. Criminal negligence which will render killing a person manslaughter is the omission on the part of the person to do some act which an ordinarily careful and prudent man would do under like circumstances, or the doing of some act which an ordinarily careful, prudent man under like circumstances would not do by reason of which another person is endangered in life or bodily safety; the word "ordinary" being synonymous with "reasonable" in this connection. State v. Coulter, Mo.Sup., 204 S.W. 5.

Negligence of such a character, or occurring under such circumstances, as to be punishable as a crime by statute; or (at common law) such a flagrant and reckless disregard of the safety of others, or wilful indifference to the injury liable to follow, as to convert an act otherwise lawful into a crime when it results in personal injury or death. 4 Bl. Comm. 192, note; Cook v. Railroad Co., 72 Ga. 48; Rankin v. Transportation Co., 73 Ga. 229, 54 Am.Rep. 874; Railroad Co. v. Chollette, 33 Neb. 143, 49 N.W. 1114.

Culpable Negligence. Failure to exercise that degree of care rendered appropriate by the particular circumstances, and which a man of ordinary prudence in the same situation and with equal experience would not have omitted. Carter v. Lumber Co., 129 N.C. 203, 39 S.E. 828; Woodman v. Nottingham, 49 N.H. 387, 6 Am.Rep. 526; Kimball v. Palmer, C.C.A.Va., 25 C.C.A. 394, 80 F. 240.

Degrees of Negligence. There are degrees of care, and failure to exercise proper degree of care is "negligence," but there are no degrees of negligence. Murray v. De Luxe Motor Stages of Illinois, Mo.App., 133 S.W.2d 1074, 1078.

Classification of "negligence" as "gross," "ordinary," and "slight" indicates only that under special circumstances great care and caution, or ordinary care, or slight care are required, but failure to exercise care demanded is "negligence." 38 Del. Laws, c. 26. Gallegher v. Davis, 7 W.W.Harr. 380, 183 A. 620.

Gross Negligence, The Intentional failure to perform a manifest duty in reckless disregard of the consequences as affecting the life or property of another; such a gross want of care and regard for the rights of others as to justify the presumption of willfulness and wantonness. Seelig v. First Nat. Bank, D.C.I1L, 20 F.Supp. 61, 68.

The failure to exercise slight care. Jones v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 98 Kan. 133, 157 P. 399, 400; Burton Const. Co. v. Metcalfe, 162 Ky. 366, 172 S.W. 698, 701.

The want of slight diligence. The want of that care which every man of common sense, how inattentive soever, takes of his own property. The omission of that care which even inattentive and thoughtless men never fail to take of their own property. Litchfield v. White, 7 N.Y. 442, 57 Am. Dec. 534; Seybel v. National Currency Bank, 54 N.Y. 299, 13 Am.Rep. 583; Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S. 132, 11 S.Ct. 925, 35 L.Ed. 662; The want of ordinary diligence and care which usually prudent man takes of his own property of like description. Dalton v. Hamilton Hotel Operating Co., 242 N.Y. 481, 152 N.E. 268, 270. In the law of torts (and especially with reference to personal injury cases), the term means such negligence as evidences a reckless disregard of human life, or of the safety of persons exposed to its dangerous effects, or that entire want of care which would raise the presumption of a conscious indifference to the rights of others which is equivalent to an intentional violation of them. McDonald v. Railroad Co., Tex.Civ.App., 21 S.W. 775; Railroad Co. v. Bodemer, 139 Ill. 596, 29 N.E. 692, 32 Am.St.Rep. 218; Coit v. Western Union Tel. Co., 130 Cal. 657, 63 P. 83, 53 L.R.A. 678; Bremer v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 318 Ill. 11, 148 N. E. 862, 866, 41 A.L.R. 1345.

Indifference to present legal duty and utter forgetfulness of legal obligations, so far as other persons may be affected, and a manifestly smaller amount of watchfulness and circumspection than the circumstances require of a person of ordinary prudence. Burke v. Cook, 246 Mass. 518, 141 N.E. 585, 586. Negligence bordering on recklessness. People v. Adams, 289 Ill. 339, 124 N.E. 575, 577.

"Gross negligence," is substantially higher in magnitwie than simple inadvertence, but falls short of intentional wrong. Young v. City of Worcester, 253 Mass. 481, 149 N.E. 204, 205. Words "gross negligence," are equivalent to words "reckless and wanton." Jones v. Commonwealth, 213 Ky. 356, 281 S. W. 164, 167.

Hazardous Negligence. Such careless or reckless conduct as exposes one to very great danger of injury or to imminent peril. Riggs v. Standard Oil Co., C.C.Minn., 130 F. 204.

Legal Negligence. See Legal Negligence.

Ordinary Negligence. The omission of that care which a man of common prudence usually takes of his own concerns. Ouderkirk v. Central Nat. Bank, 119 N.Y. 263, 23 N.E. 875; Scott v. Depeyster, 1 Edw. Ch., N.Y., 543; Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S. 132, n. Sup.Ct. 924, 35 L.Ed. 662. Failure to exercise care of an ordinarily prudent person in same situation. Avery v. Thompson, 117 Me. 120, 103 A. 4, 5, L.R.A. 1918D 205. A want of that care and prudence that the great majority of mankind exercise under the same or similar circumstances. Clemens v. State, 176 Wis. 289, 185 N.W. 209, 212, 21 A.L.R. 1490. Wherever distinctions between gross, ordinary and slight negligence are observed, "ordinary negligence" is said to be the want of ordinary care. Saxe v. Terry, 250 P. 27, 28, 140 Wash. 503.

"Ordinary negligence" is based on fact that one ought to have known results of his acts, while "gross negligence" rests on assumption that one knew results of his acts, but was recklessly or wantonly indifferent to results. All negligence below that called gross by courts and text-book writers is "slight negligence" and "ordinary negligence." People v. Campbell, 237 Mich. 424, 212 N.W. 97, 99. The distinction between "ordinary negligence" and "gross negligence is that the former lies in the field of inadvertence and the latter in the field of actual or constructive intent to injure. Ben tson v. Brown, 191 W is. 460, 211 N.W. 132, 133.

Passive Negligence. Negligence which permits defects, obstacles or pitfalls to exist upon premises; which causes dangers arising from physical condition of land itself. Perry v. St. Jean, 218 A.2d 484, 485; Cunag v. McCarthy, 191 N.E.2d 404, 407, 42 Ill.App.2d 36.

Slight Negligence. "A slight want of ordinary care." 7 A. & E. Enc. Law 2d Ed. 373(2), 375(4), 377(5) ; Macon & Western R. Co. v. Davis, 13 Ga. 68(10). Slight negligence is not slight want of ordinary care contributing to the injury, which would defeat an action for negligence. Slight negligence is defined to be only an absence of that degree of care and vigilance which persons of extraordinary prudence and foresight are accustomed to use. Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U.S. 132, 11 &Ct. 924, 35 L.Ed. 662; Litchfield v. White, 7 N.Y. 438, 57 Am.Dec. 534.

Subsequent Negligence. Exists where defendant sees plaintiff in a position of danger and fails to exercise due and proper precaution to prevent injury to plaintiff. Holman v. Brady, 241 Ala. 487, 3 So.2d 30, 33.

Wanton Negligence. Reckless indifference to the consequences of an act or omission, where the party acting or failing to act is conscious of his conduct and, without any actual intent to injure, is aware, from his knowledge of existing circumstances and conditions, that his conduct will inevitably or probably result in injury to another. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hall, 105 Ala. 599, 17 So. 176.

Willful Negligence. Though rejected by some courts and writers as involving a contradction of terms, this phrase is occasionally used to describe a higher or more aggravated form of negligence than "gross." It then means a willful determination not to perform a known duty, or a reckless disregard of the safety or the rights of others, as manifested by the conscious and intentional omission of the care proper under the circumstances. Victor Coal Co. v. Muir, 20 Colo. 320, 38 P. 378, 26 L.R.A. 435; Hoiwerson v. Railway Co., 157 Mo. 216, 57 S.W. 770, 50 L.R.A. 850.

Also, the failure to exercise ordinary care after discovering a person to be in a position of peril. Cowan v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 42 N.D. 170, 172 N.W. 322, 323. It involves deliberation and malice. Schwartz v. Johnson, 152 Tenn. 586, 280 S. W. 32, 33, 47 A.L.R. 323. "Willful negligence" implies an act intentionally done in disregard of another's rights, or omission to do something to protect the rights of another after having had such notice of those rights as would put a prudent man on his guard to use ordinary care to avoid injury. Covert v. Rockford & I. Ry. Co., 299 Ill. 288, 132 N.E. 504, 505. There is no proof of what is called "willful negligence," unless it is shown that defendant discovered plaintiff's peril at such a time and under such circumstances as offered an opportunity, and in consequence imposed a duty on defendant, to take some step to prevent the injury. It is the failure in such a duty that is willful negligence, so called. Westerberg v. Motor Truck Service Co., 158 Minn. 202, 197 N.W. 98, 99. A charge of "willful and wanton negligence" does not signify degrees of negligence, but the words have reference to the intent, which must have been to do the wrongful act, but not to inflict the resulting injury ; otherwise, it would be a willful and not a negligent injury. Westre v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., C.C.A.S.D., 2 F.2d 227, 229.

NEGLIGENCE, ESTOPPEL BY. An estoppel which occurs when one who is under a legal duty, either to the person injured or to the public, to act with due care, fails to do so, and such failure is the natural and proximate cause of misleading that person to alter his position. Bradford v. Ins. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 102 F. 48, 43 C.C.A. 310, 49 L.R.A. 530; Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey v. McCartney, 68 N.J.Law, 165, 52 Atl. 575; Brown & Co. v. Ins. Co., 42 Md. 384, 20 Am.Rep. 90; 1 C. P. D. 578; 1905, 1 K. B. 677; Bigelow, Est. 6th Ed. 711.

An estoppel arises when one by acts, representations, intentionally or negligently, induces another to change his position for the worse. Smith v. Vara, 136 Misc. 500, 241 N.Y.S. 202, 209.

An estoppel arises when one by acts, representations, or admissions, or by silence when he ought to speak, intentionally or through culpable negligence, induces another to believe certain facts to exist and such other rightfully relies and acts on such belief so that he will be prejudiced if the former is permitted to deny the existence of such facts. Postal v. Home State Bank for Savings, 284 Mich. 220, 279 N.W. 488, 491. American Exchange Nat. Bank v. Winder, 198 N.C. 18, 150 S.E. 489, 491.

Estoppel may exist where a party has led another into the belief of a certain state of facts by conduct of culpable negligence, calculated to have that result, and the other party has acted upon such belief to his prejudice. Scott v. First Nat. Bank, 343 Mo. 77, 119 S.W.2d 929, 938.

The phrase "estoppel by negligence" has been characterized as "an expression usual but not accurate, since negligence prevents a right of action accruing, estoppel a right that has accrued from being set up"; 2 Beven, Negl. 1332. See a discussion of the doctrine, with critical examination of the English cases, in 15 L. Q. R. 384.

NEGLIGENCE IN LAW. "Actionable negligence" or "negligence in law" grows out of nonobservance of a duty prescribed by law. Kingery v. Donnell, 222 Iowa 241, 268 N.W. 617, 620.

NEGLIGENCE PER SE. Conduct, whether of action or omission, which may be declared and treated as negligence without any argument or proof as to the particular surrounding circumstances, either because it is in violation of a statute or valid municipal ordinance, or because it is so palpably opposed to the dictates of common prudence that it can be said without hesitation or doubt that no careful person would have been guilty of it. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Lee, 70 Tex. 496, 7 S.W. 857; Murray v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 101 Mo. 236, 13 S.W. 817, 20 Am.St.Rep. 601. As a general rule, the violation of a public duty, enjoined by law for the protection of person or property, constitutes. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Pitchford, 44 Okl. 197, 143 P. 1146, 1150; Kavanagh v. New York, 0. & W. Ry. Co., 196 App.Div. 384, 187 N.Y.S. 859, 860.

NEGLIGENT. One is not "negligent" unless he fails to exercise that degree of reasonable care that would be exercised by person of ordinary prudence under all the existing circumstances in view of probable danger of injury. Pulford v. Mouw, 279 Mich. 376, 272 N.W. 713, 714.

Synonymous with "careless." Delmore v. Kansas City Hardwood Flooring Co., 90 Kan. 29, 133 P. 151, 47 L.R.A., N.S., 1220. Sometimes regarded as synonymous with "wrongful." Belmont v. City of New York, 191 App.Div. 717, 182 N.Y.S. 173, 175.

The word is often used to include all conduct which, although not intended to invade any legally protected interest, has the element of social fault. Universal Concrete Pipe Co. v. Bassett, 130 Ohio St. 567, 200 N.E. 843, 847.

NEGLIGENT ESCAPE. Where prisoner escapes through officer's negligence. Hershey v. People, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345, 347.

Where a party arrested or imprisoned escapes against the will of him who arrests or imprisons him, and is not freshly pursued and taken again before he has been lost sight of. State v. Wedin, 85 N.J.L. 399, 89 A. 753, 754.

NEGLIGENT OFFENSE. One which ensues from a defective discharge of a duty, which defect could have been avoided by the exercise of that care which is usual, under similar circumstances, with prudent persons of the same class. People v. Gaydica, 122 Misc.Rep. 31, 203 N.Y.S. 243, 258.

NEGLIGENT VIOLATION OF STATUTE. One occasioned by or accompanied with negligent conduct. Hamrick v. McCutcheon, 101 W.Va. 485, 133 S.E. 127, 128.

NEGLIGENTIA. Lat. In the civil law, carelessness; inattention; the omission of proper care or forethought. The term is not exactly equivalent to our "negligence," inasmuch as it was not any negligentia, but only a high or gross degree of it, that amounted to culpa, (actionable or punishable fault.)

NEGLIGENTIA SEMPER HABET INFORTUNIUM COMITEM. Negligence always has misfortune for a companion. Co. Litt. 246b; Shep. Touch. 476.

NEGLIGENTLY. Without due caution and circumspection. People v. Pociask, 96 P.2d 788, 791, 14 Cal.2d 679.

The absence of ordinary care, which is such care as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise for his own protection. Jones v. Commonwealth, 213 Ky. 356, 281 S.W. 164, 167. Equivalent of improperly. Cairnes v. Hillman Drug Co., 214 Ala. 545, 108 So. 362, 364. "Inadvertently" and "negligently" are synonymous. Meyerstein v. Burke, 193 Cal. 105, 222 P. 810.

NEGLIGENTLY DONE. The doing of an act where ordinary care required that it should not have been done at all, or that it should have been done in some other way, and where the doing of the act was not consistent with the exercise of ordinary care under the circumstances. Curtis v. Mauger, 186 Ind. 118, 114 N.E. 408, 409.

NEGOCE. Fr. Business; trade; management of affairs.

NEGOTIABILITY. In mercantile law, transferable quality. That quality of bills of exchange and promissory notes which renders them transferable from one person to another, and from possessing which they are emphatically termed "negotiable paper." 3 Kent, Comm. 74, 77, 89, et seq. Story, Bills, § 60.

NEGOTIABLE. Capable of being transferred by indorsement or delivery so as to pass to holder the right to sue in his own name and take free of equities against assignor payee. Fischbach & Moore v. Philadelphia Nat. Bank, 134 Pa.Super. 84, 3 A.2d 1011, 1012.

An instrument embodying an obligation for the payment of money is called "negotiable" when the legal title to the instrument itself and to the whole amount of money expressed upon its face, with the right to sue therefor in his own name, may be transferred from one person to another without a formal assignment, but by mere indorsement and delivery by the holder or by delivery only. 1 Daniel, Nego. Inst. § 1; Walker v. Ocean Bank, 19 Ind. 247; Robinson v. Wilkinson, 38 Mich. 299.

Quasi Negotiable. "Quasi negotiable" describes the nature of instruments which, while not negotiable, in sense of law merchant, are so framed and dealt with as frequently to convey as good title to transferee as if they were negotiable. A bill of lading is 'a quasi negotiable instrument. National Bank of Savannah v. Kershaw Oil Mill, C. C. A.S. C. , 202 F. 90, 94.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS. Any written securities which 'hay be transferred by indorsement and delivery or by delivery merely, so as to vest in the indorsee the legal title, and thus enable him to sue thereon in his own name. Or, more technically, those instruments which not only carry the legal title with them by indorsement or delivery, but carry as well, when transferred before maturity, the right of the transferee to demand the full amounts which their faces call for. Daniel, Neg. Inst. § la.

A negotiable instrument is a written promise or request for the payment of a certain sum of money to order or bearer. Civ.Code Cal. § 3087.

A genera) name for bills, First Nat. Bank v. Rochamora, 193 N.C. 1, 136 S.E. 259, 261; notes, checks, Kansas City Casualty Co. v. Westport Ave. Bank, 191 Mo.App. 287, 177 S.W. 1092, 1094; Santa Marina Co. v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, C.C.A.CaI., 254 F. 391, 393; trade acceptances, Federal Commercial & Savings Bank v. International Clay Machinery Co., 230 Mich. 33, 203 N.W. 166, 43 A.L.R. 1245; certain bonds, Grosfleld v. First Nat. Bank, 73 Mont. 219, 236 P. 250, 254; Stevens v. Berkshire St. Ry. Co., 247 Mass. 399, 142 N.E. 59, 60; letters of credit, and other negotiable written securities.

Under the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act, an instrument, to be negotiable, must be in writing and signed; must contain an unconditional promise or order to pay a certain sum of money on demand, or at a fixed and determinable future time; it must be payable to order or to bearer, and where it is addressed to the drawee, he must be named or otherwise indicated with reasonable certainty; its negotiability is not affected by the fact that it is not dated, or that it bears a seal, or that it does not specify the value given or that any value was given.

NEGOTIABLE WORDS. Words and phrases which impart the character of negotiability to bills, notes, checks, etc., in which they are inserted; for instance, a direction to pay to A. "or order" or "bearer."

NEGOTIATE. To transact business, to treat with another respecting a purchase and sale, to hold intercourse, to bargain or trade, to conduct communications or conferences. It is that which passes between parties or their agents in the course of or incident to the making of a contract and is also conversation in arranging terms of contract. Werner v. Hendricks, 121 Pa.Super. 46, 182 A. 748, 749.

To discuss or arrange a sale or bargain; to arrange the preliminaries of a business transaction. Also to sell or discount negotiable paper, or assign or transfer it by indorsement and delivery. Palmer v. Ferry, 6 Gray, Mass., 420; Newport Nat. Bank v. Board of Education, 114 Ky. 87, 70 S.W. 186.

To conclude by bargain, treaty, or agreement. Morton Furniture Co. v. Dubuque Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 287 Mass. 170, 191 N.E. 637, 638.

An instrument is "negotiated" when transferred from one person to another so as to constitute transferee holder thereof. Ficklin v. Nickles, 238 Ky. 591, 38 S.W.2d 456, 459.

NEGOTIATION. The deliberation, discussion, or conference upon the terms of a proposed agreement; the act of settling or arranging the terms and conditions of a bargain, sale, or other business transaction.

The act by which a. bill of exchange or promissory note is put into circulation by being passed by one of the original parties to another person.

NEGOTIORUM GESTIO. Lat. In the civil law, literally, a doing of business or businesses. A species of spontaneous agency, or an interference by one in the affairs of another, in his absence, from benevolence or friendship, and without authority. 2 Kent, Comm. 616, note; Inst. 3, 28, 1.

NEGOTIORUM GESTOR. Lat. In the civil law, a transactor or manager of business; a person voluntarily constituting himself agent for another; one who, without any mandate or authority, assumes to take charge of an affair or concern for another person, in the latter's absence, but for his interest.

One who spontaneously, and without the knowledge or consent of the owner, intermeddles with his property, as to do work on it, or to carry it to another place, etc. Story, Bailm. § 189.

NEGRO: The word "negro" means a black man, one descended from the African race, and does not commonly include a mulatto. Felix v. State, 18 Ala. 720. But the laws of the different states are not uniform in this respect, some including in the description "negro" one who has one-eighth or more of African blood.

Term "Negro" means necessarily person of color, but not every person of color is "negro." Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 109.

NEIFE, NAIF, NATIVUS. In old English law, a woman who was born a villein, or a bond-woman. 1 Steph. Corn. 133.

NEIGHBOR. One who lives in close proximity to another. In a grant relating to the use of water by neighbors, it was limited to the next adjoining farm; 1 A. C., 22 (So. Africa).

NEIGHBORHOOD. A place near; an adjoining or surrounding district; a more immediate vicinity; vicinage. Langley v. Barnstead, 63 N.H. 246; Madison v. Morristown Gaslight Co., 65 N.J.Eq. 356, 54 A. 439; Connally v. General Const. Co., 269 U.S. 385, 46 S.Ct. 126, 129, 70 L.Ed. 322.

It is not synonymous with territory or district, but is a collective noun, with the suggestion of proximity, and refers to the units which make up its whole, as well as to the region which comprehends those units. A district or locality, especially when considered with relation to its inhabitants or their interests. Lindsay LIT. Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 P. 803.

In ordinary and common usage "locality" is synonymous in meaning with "neighborhood," and neither connote large geographical areas with widely diverse interests. Lukens Steel Co. v. Perkins, 70 App.D.C. 354, 107 F.2d 627, 631.

As used with reference to a person's reputation, "neighborhood" means in general any community or society where person is well known and has established a reputation. Craven v. State, 22 Ala. App. 39, 111 So. 767, 769.

NEITHER PARTY. An abbreviated form of docket entry, meaning that, by agreement, neither of the parties will further appear in court in that suit. Gendron v. Hovey, 98 Me. 139, 56 A. 583; White v. Beverly Bldg. Ass'n, 221 Mass. 15, 108 N.E. 921, 922.

NET REVENUES. Revenues remaining after providing for the sinking fund, interest, and current expenses of the plant. City of Raymondville v. McCann, Tex.Civ.App., 54 S.W.2d 1049, 1050.

NET SINGLE PREMIUM. Aggregate of future yearly costs of insurance, severally discounted to age from which computation is made. Magers v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 348 Mo. 96, 152 S.W.2d 148, 152.

Premium which, if exacted from a group of policyholders and immediately invested at the assumed rate of interest, will yield in the aggregate a sum exactly sufficient to pay all death claims as they mature providing the mortality rate is in accord with the table used. Fox v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 107 F.2d 715, 718.

NET TONNAGE. The cubic contents of the interior of a vessel, when the spaces occupied by the crew and by propelling machinery are deducted, numbered in tons. Kiessig v. San Diego County, 51 Cal.App.2d 47, 124 P.2d 163, 165.

NET VALUE. Accumulation of balances of past net premiums not absorbed in carrying risk. Fox v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 107 F.2d 715, 718, 719. Policy "reserve". Magers v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 348 Mo. 96, 152 S.W.2d 148, 152, 153.

NET WEIGHT. The weight of an article or collection of articles, after deducting from the gross weight the weight of the boxes, coverings, casks, etc., containing the same. The weight of an animal dressed for sale, after rejecting hide, offal, etc.

NET WORTH. Remainder after deduction of liabilities from assets. W. H. Miner, Inc. v. Peerless Equipment Co., C.C.A.Ill., 115 F.2d 650, 655.

NETHER HOUSE OF PARLIAMENT A name given to the English house of commons in the time of Henry VIII.

NEURASTHENIA. In medical jurisprudence, a condition of weakness or exhaustion of the general nervous system, giving rise to various forms of mental and bodily inefficiency.

NEUTRAL. In international law, indifferent; impartial; not engaged on either side; not taking an active part with either of the contending states. In an international war, the principal hostile powers are called "belligerents;" those actively 'co-operating with and assisting them, their "allies;" and those taking no part whatever, "neutrals."

NEUTRAL PROPERTY. Property which belongs to citizens of neutral powers, and is used, treated, and accompanied by proper insignia as such.

NEUTRALITY. The state of a nation which takes no part between two or more other nations at war. U. S. v. The Three Friends, 166 U.S. 1, 17 S.Ct. 495, 41 L.Ed. 897; O'Neill v. Central Leather Co., 87 N. J.L. 552, 94 A. 789, 790, L.R.A. 1917A, 276.

NEUTRALITY LAWS. Acts of congress which forbid the fitting out and equipping of armed vessels, or the enlisting of troops, for the aid of either of two belligerent powers with which the United States is at peace.

NEUTRALITY PROCLAMATION. A proclamation by the president of the United States, issued on the outbreak of a war between two powers with both of which the United States is at peace, announcing the neutrality of the United States and warning all citizens to refrain from any breach of the neutrality laws.

NEVER INDEBTED, PLEA OF. A species of traverse which occurs in actions of debt on simple contract, and is resorted to when the defendant means to deny in point of fact the existence of any express contract to the effect alleged in the declaration, or to deny the matters of fact from which such contract would by law be implied. Steph. Pl. 153, 156; Wharton.

NEW. As an element in numerous compound terms and phrases of the law, this word may denote novelty, or the condition of being previously unknown or of recent or fresh origin, but ordinarily it is a purely relative term and is employed in contrasting the date, origin, or character of one thing with the corresponding attributes of another thing of the same kind or class.

Of New. See that title.

NEW ACQUISITION. An estate derived from any source other than descent, devise, or gift from father or mother or any relative in the paternal or maternal line. Webb v. Caldwell, 198 Ark. 331, 128 S.W.2d 691, 694, 122 A.L.R. 814.

NEW AND USEFUL. The phrase used in the patent laws to describe the two qualities of an invention or discovery which are essential to make it patentable, viz., novelty, or the condition of having been previously unknown, and practical utility. In re Gould, 1 MacArthur, D.C. 410; Adams v. Turner, 73 Conn. 38, 46 A. 247; Lowell v. Lewis, 1 Mason, 182, F.Cas.No.8,568.

To accomplish a new and useful result within meaning of Rev.St. § 4886, 35 U.S.C.A. § 31, it is not necessary that result before unknown should be brought about, but it is sufficient if an old result is accomplished in a new and more effective way. Hirschy v. Wisconsin-Minnesota Gas & Electric Household Appliances Co., D.C.Minn., 18 F.2d 347, 354. An invention achieves a new result, where a function which had been performed by other means was performed to an efficient degree by an association of means never before combined, though all of them were old, and some of the changes seemed to be only in degree. American Ball Bearing Co. v. Finch, C.C.A.Ohio, 239 F. 885, 889.

NEW ASSETS. In the law governing the administration of estates, this term denotes assets coming into the hands of an executor or administrator after the expiration of the time when, by statute, claims against the estate are barred so far as regards recourse against the assets with which he was originally charged. Littlefield v. Eaton, 74 Me. 521; Chenery v. Webster, 8 Allen, Mass., 77.

NEW ASSIGNMENT. Under the common-law practice, where the declaration in an action is ambiguous, and the defendant pleads facts which are literally an answer to it, but not to the real claim set up by the plaintiff, the plaintiff's course is to reply by way of new assignment; i. e., allege that he brought his action not for the cause supposed by the defendant, but for some other cause to which the plea has no application. 3 Steph.Comm. 507; Sweet. Bishop v. Travis, 51 Minn. 183, 53 N.W. 461.

NEW CAUSE OF ACTION. With reference to the amendment of pleadings, this term may refer to a new state of facts out of which liability is claimed to arise, or it may refer to parties who are alleged to be entitled under the same state of facts, or it may embrace both features. Love v. Southern R. Co., 108 Tenn. 104, 65 S.W. 475, 55 L.R.A. 471; Nelson v. First Nat. Bank, 139 Ala. 578, 36 So. 707, 101 Am.St.Rep. 52.

NEW FOR OLD. In making an adjustment of a partial loss under a policy of marine insurance, the rule is to apply the old materials towards the payment of the new, by deducting the value of them from the gross amount of the expenses for repairs, and to allow the deduction of one-third new for old upon the balance. 3 Kent, Comm. 339.

NEW INN. An inn of chancery. See Inns of Chancery.

NEW MATTER. In pleading, matter of fact not previously alleged by either party in the pleadings. Walters v. Battenfield, 21 N.M. 413, 155 P. 721, 723; Continental Gin Co. v. Arnold, 52 Okl. 569, 153 P. 160, 163.

NEW PROMISE. See Promise.

NEW STYLE. The modern system of computing time was introduced into Great Britain A.D. 1752, the 3d of September of that year being reckoned as the 14th.

NEW TRIAL. See Trial.

NEW WORKS. In the civil law, by a new work is understood every sort of edifice or other work which is newly commenced on any ground whatever. When the ancient form of work is changed, either by an addition being made to it or by some part of the ancient work being taken away, it is styled also a "new work." Civ.Code La. art. 856.

NEW YEAR'S DAY. The first day of January.

The 25th of March was the civil and legal New Year's Day, till the alteration of the style in 1752, when it was permanently fixed at the 1st of January. In Scotland the year was, by a proclamation, which bears date 27th of November, 1599, ordered thenceforth to commence in that kingdom on the 1st of January instead of the 25th of March. Enc.Lond.

NEWGATE. The name of a prison in London, said to have existed as early as 1207. For centuries the condition of the place was horrible, but it has been greatly improved since 1808.

NEWLY-DISCOVERED EVIDENCE. Evidence of a new and material fact, or new evidence in relation to a fact in issue, discovered by a party to a cause after the rendition of a verdict or judgment therein. Wynne v. Newman, 75 Va. 816; People v. Priori, 164 N.Y. 459, 58 N.E. 668. Testimony discovered after trial, not discoverable before trial by exercise of due diligence. Mode v. State, 169 Ark. 356, 275 S.W. 700, 701; State v. Blackwood, 103 Wash. 529, 175 P. 168, 169; Murphy v. Skelly, 101 N.J.Eq. 793, 138 A. 882, 884, any evidence newly discovered, whether the facts existed at the time of the trial or not. In re Wood, 140 Minn. 130, 167 N.W. 358, 359. For the requirements which such evidence must meet before a new trial will be granted, State v. Luttrell, 28 N.M. 393, 212 P. 739, 741; Sanchez v. State, 199 Ind. 235, 157 N.E. 1, 3; Gonirenki v. American Steel & Wire Co., 106 Conn. 1, 137 A. 26, 28.

NEWSPAPER. A publication, usually in sheet form, intended for general circulation, and published regularly at short intervals, containing intelligence of current events and news of general interest. 4 Op.Attys.Gen. 10; Garden City News v. Hurst, 129 Kan. 365, 282 P. 720, 722.

Official Newspaper. One designated by a state or municipal legislative body, or agents empowered by them, in which the public acts, resolves, advertisements, and notices are required to be published. Albany County v. Chaplin, 5 Wyo. 74, 37 P. 370.

NEXI. Lat. In Roman law, bound; bound persons. A term applied to such insolvent debtors as were delivered up to their creditors, by whom they might be held in bondage until their debts were discharged. Calvin.; Adams, Rom.Ant. 49.

NEXT. Nearest; closest; immediately following. Green v. McLaren, 7 Ga. 107; State v. Asbell, 57 Kan. 398, 46 P. 770.

Nearest or nighest, not in the sense of propinquity alone, as, for example, three persons on three chairs, one in the midst, those on each side of the middle one are equally near, each "next" to the middle one; but it signifies also order, or succession, or relation as well as propinquity. 27 L.J.Ch. 654. 3 Q.B. 723; Couch v. Turnpike Co., 4 Johns. Ch., N. Y., 26.

NEXT DEVISEE. Person to whom remainder is given by will. Young v. Robinson, 5 N.J.L. 689.

NEXT EVENTUAL ESTATE. Estate taking effect upon happening of the event terminating accumulation. In re Shupack's Estate, 158 Misc. 873, 287 N.Y.S. 184, 196.

NEXT FRIEND. One acting for benefit of infant, married woman, or other person not sui juris, without being regularly appointed guardian. In re Boulware's Will, 144 Misc. 235, 258 N.Y.S. 522.

"Next friend" or "prochein ami" is one admitted to court to prosecute for infant. Crawford v. Amusement Syndicate Co., Mo., 37 S.W.2d 581, 584.

NEXT OF KIN. In the law of descent and distribution, this term properly denotes the persons nearest of kindred to the decedent, that is, those who are most nearly related to him by blood; but it is sometimes construed to mean only those who are entitled to take under the statute of distributions, and sometimes to include other persons. 2 Story, Eq.Jur. § 1065b; Barrett v. Egbertson, 92 N. J.Eq. 118, 111 A. 326, 327; Godfrey v. Epple, 100 Ohio St. 447, 126 N.E. 886, 11 A.L.R. 317; Close v. Benham, 97 Conn. 102, 115 A. 626, 627, 20 A.L.R. 351; Hamilton v. Erie R. Co., 219 N.Y. 343, 114 N.E. 399, 403, Ann.Cas.1918A, 928; Arnold v. O'Connor, 37 R.I. 557, 94 A. 145, L.R.A.1916C, 898; Mostenbocker v. Shawnee Gas & Electric Co., 49 Okl. 304, 152 P. 82, 83, L.R.A.1916B, 910. The words "next of kin," used simpliciter in a deed or will, mean, not nearest of kindred, but those relatives who share in the estate according to the statute of distributions, including those claiming per stirpes or by representation. Slosson v. Lynch, 43 Barb., N.Y., 147.

NEXT PRESENTATION. In the law of advowsons, the right of next presentation is the right to present to the first vacancy of a benefice.

NEXUM. Lat. In Roman law, in ancient times the nexum seems to have been a species of formal contract, involving a loan of money, and attended with peculiar consequences, solemnized with the "copper and balance." Later, it appears to have been used as a general term for any contract struck with those ceremonies, and hence to have included the special form of conveyance called "mancipatio." In a general sense it means the obligation or bond between contracting parties. Maine, Anc.Law, 305, et seq.; Hadl.Rom. Law, 247.

In Roman law, this word expressed the tie or obligation involved in the old conveyance by mancipatio ; and came latterly to be used interchangeably with (but less frequently than) the word "obligatio" itself. Brown.

NICHILLS. In English practice, debts due to the exchequer which the sheriff could not levy, and as to which he returned nil. These sums were transcribed once a year by the clerk of the nichills, and sent to the treasurer's remembrancer's office, whence process was issued to recover the "nichill" debts. Both of these offices were abolished in 1833. Mozley & Whitley.

NICKNAME. A short name; one nicked or cut off for the sake of brevity, without conveying an idea of opprobrium, and frequently evincing the strongest affection or the most perfect familiarity. North Carolina Inst. v. Norwood, 45 N.C. 74.

NIDERLING, NIDERING, or NITHING. A vile, base person, or sluggard; chicken-hearted. Spelman.

NIECE. The daughter of one's brother or sister. Ambl. 514. Capps v. State, 87 Fla. 388, 100 So. 172, 173.

In legal usage only children of brothers and sisters are called "nephews" and "nieces," children of husband's or wife's brothers and sisters being so called only by courtesy. In re Lamberton's Estate, 105 Pa.Super. 348, 161 A. 596, 597.

NIEFE. In old English law, a woman born in vassalage; a bondwoman.

NIENT. L. Fr. Nothing; not.

NIENT COMPRISE. Not comprised; not included. An exception taken to a petition because the thing desired is not contained in that deed or proceeding whereon the petition is founded. Tomlins.

NIENT CULPABLE. Not guilty. The name in law French of the general issue in tort or in a criminal action.

NIENT DEDIRE. To say nothing; to deny nothing; to suffer judgment by default.

NIENT LE FAIT. In pleading, not the deed; not his deed. The same as the plea of non est factum.

NIENT SEISI. In old pleading, not seised. The general plea in the writ of annuity. Crabb, Eng. Law, 424.

NIGER LIBER, See Liber Niger.

NIGHT. At common-law, that period between sunset and sunrise during which there is not daylight enough to discern a man's face. 1 Hale, P. C. 350; State v. Perkins, 342 Mo. 560, 116 S.W.2d 80, 81, 82.

The rule is often followed that "nighttime" begins thirty minutes after sunset and ends thirty minutes before sunrise. State v. Perkins, 342 Mo. 560, 116 S.W.2d 80, 82.

However, the limit of 9 p. m. to 6 a. m. has been fixed by statute, in England, as the period of night, in prosecutions for burglary and larceny. St. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, § 1; Brown. In American law, the common-law definition is still adhered to in some states, but in others "night" has been defined by statute. U. S. v. Lepper, D.C.N.Y., 288 F. 136, 137; Weatherred v. State, 101 Tex.Cr.R. 520, 276 S.W. 436, 437.

NIGHT MAGISTRATE. A constable of the night; the head of a watch-house.

NIGHT WALKERS. Described in the statute 5 Edw. III. c. 14, as persons who sleep by day and walk by night. Persons who prowl about at night, and are of a suspicious appearance and behavior. Persons whose habit is to be abroad at night for the purpose of committing some crime or nuisance or mischief or disturbing the peace; not now generally subject to the criminal laws except in respect to misdemeanors actually committed, or in the character of vagrants or suspicious persons. Thomas v. State, 55 Ala. 260, 261; State v. Dowers, 45 N.H. 543. In a narrower sense, a night walker is a prostitute who walks the streets at night for the purpose of soliciting men for lewd purposes. Stokes v. State, 92 Ala. 73, 9 So. 400, 25 Am.St.Rep. 22; People v. Berger, Gen.Sess., 169 N.Y.S. 319, 321.

NIGRUM NUNQUAM EXCEDERE DEBET RUBRUM. The black should never go beyond the red, [i. e., the text of a statute should never be read in a sense more comprehensive than the rubric, or title.] Tray. Lat. Max. 373.

NIHIL. Lat. Nothing. Often contracted to "nil." The word standing alone is the name of an abbreviated form of return to a writ made by a sheriff or constable, the fuller form of which would be "nihil est" or "nihil habet," according to circumstances.

NIHIL ALIUD POTEST REX QUAM QUOD DE JURE POTEST. 11 Coke, 74. The king can do nothing except what he can by law do.

NIHIL CAPIAT PER BREVE. In practice, that he take nothing by his writ. The form of judgment against the plaintiff in an action, either in bar or in abatement. When the plaintiff has commenced his proceedings by bill, the judgment is nihil capiat per billam. Co.Litt. 363.

NIHIL CONSENSUI TAM CONTRARIUM EST QUAM VIS ATQUE METUS. Nothing is so opposed to consent as force and fear. Dig. 50, 17, 116, NIHIL DAT QUI NON HABET. He gives nothing who has nothing.

NIHIL DE RE ACCRESCIT EI QUI NIHIL EV. RE QUANDO JUS ACCRESCERET HABET. Co. Litt. 188. Nothing of a matter accrues to him who, when the right accrues, has nothing in that matter.

NIHIL DICIT. He says nothing.

This is the name of the judgment which may be taken as of course against a defendant who omits to plead or answer the plaintiff's declaration or complaint within the time limited. In some jurisdictions it is otherwise known as judgment "for want of a plea." Gilder v. McIntyre, 29 Tex. 91; Falken v. Housatonic R. Co., 63 Conn. 258, 27 A. 1117; Wilbur v. Maynard, 6 Colo. 486.

Judgment taken against party who withdraws his answer is judgment nihil dicit, which amounts to confession of cause of action stated, and carries with it, more strongly than judgment by default, admission of justice of plaintiff's case. Howe v. Central State Bank of Coleman, Tex. Civ.App., 297 S.W. 692, 694.

NIHIL DICTUM QUOD NON DICTUM PRIUS. Nothing is said which was not said before. Said of a case where former arguments were repeated. Hardr. 464.

NIHIL EST. There is nothing. A form of return made by a sheriff when he has been unable to serve the writ.

"Although non est inventus is the more frequent return In such a case, yet it is by no means as full in answer to the command of the writ as is the return of nihil. That amounts to an averment that the defendant has nothing in the bailiwick, no dwelling-house, no family, no residence, and no personal presence to enable the officer to make the service required by the act of assembly. It is therefore a full answer to the exigency of the writ." Sherer v. Easton Bank, 33 Pa. 139.

NIHIL EST ENIM LIBERALE QUOD NON IDEM JUSTUM. For there is nothing generous which is not at the same time just. 2 Kent, Comm. 441, note a.

NIHIL EST MAGIS RATION! CONSENTANEUM QUAM EODEM MODO QUODQUE DISSOLVERE QUO CONFLATUM EST. Nothing is more consonant to reason than that a thing should be dissolved or discharged in the same way in which it was created. Shep.Touch. 323.

NIHIL FACIT ERROR NOMINIS CUM DE CORPORE CONSTAT. 11 Coke, 21. An error as to a name is nothing when there is certainty as to the person.

NIHIL HABET. He has nothing. The name of a return made by a sheriff to a scire facias or other writ which he has been unable to serve on the defendant.

NIHIL HABET FORUM EX SCENA. The court has nothing to do with what is not before it. Bac.Max.

NIHIL IN LEGE INTOLERABILIUS EST [QUAM] EANDEM REM DIVERSO JURE CENSERI. Nothing is more intolerable in law than that the same matter, thing, or case should be subject to different views of law. Applied to the difference of opinion entertained by different courts, as to the law of a particular case. 4 Coke 93a.

NMI INFRA REGNUM SUBDITOS MAGIS CONSERVAT IN TRANQUILITATE ET CONCORDIA QUAM DEBITA LEGUM ADMINISTRATIO. Nothing preserves in tranquillity and concora those who are subjected to the same government better than a due administration of the laws. 2 Inst. 158.

NUM INIQUIUS QUAM ZEQUITATEM NIMIS INTENDERE. Nothing is more unjust than to extend equity too far. Halk. 103.

NHL MAGIS JUSTUM EST QUAM QUOD NECESSARIUM EST. Nothing is more just than that which is necessary. Da^{y}.Ir.K.B. 12; Branch, Princ.

NIHIL NEQUAM EST PRZESUMENDUM. Nothing wicked is to be presumed. 2 P.Wms. 583.

NIML PERFECTUM EST DUM ALIQUID RESTAT AGENDUM. Nothing is perfect while anything remains to be done. 9 Coke, 9b.

NIHIL PETI POTEST ANTE ID TEMPUS QUO PER RERUM NATURAM PERSOLVI POSSIT. Nothing can be demanded before the time when, by the nature of things, it can be paid. Dig. 50, 17, 186.

NIHIL POSSUMUS CONTRA VERITATEM. We can do nothing against truth. Doct. & Stud. dial. 2, c. 6.

NIHIL PRZESCRIBITUR NISI QUOD POSSIDETUR. There is no prescription for that which is not possessed. 5 Barn. & Ald. 277.

NIHIL QUOD EST CONTRA RATIONEM EST LICITUM. Nothing that is against reason is lawful. Co.Litt. 97b.

NIHIL QUOD EST INCONVENIENS EST LICITUM. Nothing that is inconvenient is lawful. Co.Litt. 66a, 97b. A maxim very frequently quoted by Lord Coke, but to be taken in modern law with some qualification. Broom, Max. 186, 366.

NIHIL SIMUL INVENTUM EST ET PERFECTUM. Co.Litt. 230. Nothing is invented and perfected at the same moment.

NIHIL TAM CONVENIENS EST NATURAL' ./EQUITATI QUAM UNUMQUODQUE DISSOLVI EO LIGAMINE QUO LIGATUM EST. Nothing is so consonant to natural equity as that a thing should be dissolved by the same means by which it was bound. 2 Inst. 359; Broom, Max. 877.

NIHIL TAM CONVENIENS EST NATURAL' ZEQUITATI QUAM VOLUNTATEM DOMINI REM SUAM IN ALIUM TRANSFERRE RATAM HABERE. 1 Coke, 100. Nothing is so consonant to natural equity as to regard the intention of the owner in transferring his own property to another.

NIHIL TAM NATURALE EST, QUAM EO GENERE QUIDQUE DISSOLVERE, QUO COLLIGATUM EST; IDEO VERBORUM OBLIGATIO VERBIS TOLLITUR; NUDI CONSENSUS OBLIGATIO CONTRARIO CONSENSU DISSOLVITUR. Nothing is so natural as to dissolve anything in the way in which it was bound together; therefore the obligation of words is taken away by words; the obligation of mere consent is dissolved by the contrary consent. Dig. 50, 17, 35; Broom, Max. 887.

NIHIL TAM PROPRIUM IMPERIO QUAM LEGIBUS VI VERE. Nothing is so becoming to authority as to live in accordance with the laws. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 17, § 11.

NIHILIST. One advocating doctrine of nihilism. Webster. One devoted to the destruction of the present political, religious, and social institutions.

NIL. Lat. Nothing. A contracted form of "nihil," which see.

NIL AGIT EXEMPLUM LITEM QUOD LITE RESOLVIT. An example does no good which settles one question by another. Hatch v. Mann, 15 Wend. (N.Y.) 44, 49.

NIL CONSENSUI TAM CONTRARIUM EST QUAM VIS ATQUE METUS. Nothing is so opposed to consent as force and fear. Dig. 50, 17, 116.

NIL DEBET. He owes nothing. The form of the general issue in all actions of debt on simple contract.

NIL FACIT ERROR NOMINIS CUM DE CORPORE VEL PERSONA CONSTAT. A mistake in the name does not matter when the body or person is manifest. 11 Coke, 21; Broom, Max. 634.

NIL HABUIT IN TENEMENTIS. He had nothing [no interest) in the tenements. A plea in debt on a lease indented, by which the defendant sets up that the person claiming to be landlord had no title or interest.

NIL LIGATUM. Nothing bound; that is, no obligation has been incurred. Tray. Lat.Max.

NIL SINE PRUDENT! FECIT RA1IONE VETUSTAS. Antiquity did nothing without a good reason. Co.Litt. 65.

Nrr., TEMERE NOVANDUM. Nothing should be rashly changed. Jenk.Cent. 163.

NIMIA CERTITUDO CERTITUDINEM IPSAM DESTRUIT. Too great certainty destroys certainty itself. Lofft, 244.

NIMIA SUBTILITAS IN JURE REPROBATUR. Wing.Max. 26. Too much subtlety in law is discountenanced.

NIMIUM ALTERCANDO VERITAS AMITTITUR. Hob. 344. By too much altercation truth is lost.

NIMMER. A thief; a pilferer.

NISEI. Jap. Second generation. Particularly a person born in the United States of Japanese parents. 1945 Report of the Tenney Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities to the California Legislature; Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. See also Kibei.

NISI. Lat. Unless.

The word is often affixed, as a kind of elliptical expression, to the words "rule," "order," "decree," "judgment," or "confirmation," to indicate that the adjudication spoken of is one which is to stand as valid and operative unless the party affected by it shall appear and show cause against it, or take some other appropriate step to avoid it or procure its revocation. Thus a "decree nisi" is one which will definitely conclude the defendant's rights unless, within the prescribed time, he shows cause to set it aside or successfully appeals. The word, in this sense, is opposed to "absolute." And when a rule nisi is finally confirmed, for the defendant's failure to show cause against it, it is said to be "made absolute."

NISI FECERIS. The name of a clause commonly occurring in the old manorial writs, commanding that, if the lords failed to do justice, the king's court or officer should do it. By virtue of this clause, the king's court usurped the jurisdiction of the private, manorial, or local courts. Stim• Law Gloss.

NISI PRIUS. The nisi prius courts are such as are held for the trial of issues of fact before a jury and one presiding judge. In America the phrase is familiarly used to denote the forum (whatever may be its statutory name) in which the cause was tried to a jury, as distinguished from the appellate court. See 3 Bl.Comm. 58.

NISI PRIUS CLAUSE. In practice, a clause entered on the record in an action at law, authorizing the trial of the cause at nisi prius in the particular county designated. It was first used by way of continuance.

NISI PRIUS ROLL. In practice, the roll or record containing the pleadings, issue, and jury process of an action, made up for use in the nisi prius court.

NISI PRIUS WRIT. The old name of the writ of venire, which originally, in pursuance of the statute of Westminster 2, contained the nisi prius clause. Reg.Jud. 28, 75. Cowell.

Words anciently used in public and private instruments, intended to preclude, in advance, any interpretation contrary to certain declared objects or purposes. Burrill.

A clause frequent in old English statutes and letters patent, (so termed from its initial words,) importing a license from the crown to do a thing which otherwise a person would be restrained by act of parliament from doing. Crabb, Corn. Law, 570; Plowd. 501; Cowell.

A power in the crown to dispense with the laws in any particular case. This was abolished by the bill of rights at the Revolution. 1 B1. Comm. 342.

NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO. Notwithstanding the verdict. A judgment entered by order of court for the plaintiff, although there has berm a verdict for the defendant, is so called. German Ins. Co. v. Frederick, Kan., 58 F. 144, 7 C.C.A. 122; Wentworth v. Wentworth, 2 Minn. 282, Gil. 238, 72 Am.Dec. 97

Judgment non obstante veredicto originally, at common law, was a judgment entered for plaintiff "notwithstanding the verdict" for defendant; which could be done only, after verdict and before judgment, where it appeared that defendant's plea confessed the cause of action and set up matters in avoidance which, although verified by the verdict, were insufficient to constitute a defense or bar to the action. But either by statutory enactment or because of relaxation of the early common-law rule, the generally prevailing rule now is that either plaintiff or defendant may have a judgment non obstante veredicto in proper cases. 49 C.J.S.Judgments § 60.

Judgment non obstante veredicto in its broadest sense is a judgment rendered in favor of one party notwithstanding the finding of a verdict in favor of the other party, 49 C.J.S.Judgments § 59.

Under the word "Ides" in Bouvier's Law Diet., Rawle's 3d Rev., p. 1486, will be found a complete table of the calends, nones, and ides.

NONFEASANCE. Nonperformance of some act which ought to be performed, omission to perform a required duty at all, or total neglect of duty. Brooks v. Jacobs, 139 Me. 371, 31 A.2d 414, 416.

The term is not generally used to denote a breach of contract, but rather the failure to perform a duty towards the public whereby some individual sustains special damage, as where a sheriff fails to execute a writ. Sweet. Coite v. Lines, 33 Conn. 115; Gregor v. Cady, 82 Me. 131, 19 A. 108, 17 Am.St.Rep. 466.

There is a distinction between "nonfeasance" and "misfeasance" or "malfeasance"; and this distinction is often of great importance in determining an agent's liability to third persons. "Nonfeasance" means the total omission or failure of an agent to enter upon the performance of some distinct duty or undertaking which he has agreed with his principal to do; "misfeasance" means the improper doing of an act which the agent might lawfully do, or, in other words, it is the performing of his duty to his principal in such a manner as to infringe upon the rights and privileges of third persons; and "malfeasance" is a doing of an act which he ought not to do at all. Owens v. Nichols, 139 Ga. 475, 77 S.E. 635, 636; Maddock v. Riggs, 106 Kan. 808, 190 P. 12, 14, 12 A.L.R. 216.

NONNA. In old ecclesiastical law. A nun. Nonnus, a monk. Spelman.

NONPAYMENT. The neglect, failure, or refusal of payment of a debt o'r evidence of debt when due.

NONSENSE. Unintelligible matter in a written agreement or will.

NONSUIT. A term broadly applied to a variety of terminations of an action which do not adjudicate issues on the merits. McColgan v. Jones, Hubbard & Donnell, 11 Cal.2d 243, 78 P.2d 1010, 1011. Name of a judgment given against the plaintiff when he is unable to prove a case, or when he refuses or neglects to proceed to trial and leaves the issue undetermined. Carolina. Transportation & Distributing Co. v. American Alliance Ins. Co., 214 N.C. 596, 200 S.E. 411, 413.

Judgment of Nonsuit is of two kinds,--voluntary and involuntary. When plaintiff abandons his case, and consents that judgment go against him for costs, it is voluntary. But when he, being called, neglects to appear, or when he has given no evidence on which a jury could find a verdict, or when his case is put out of court by some adverse ruling precluding a recovery, it is involuntary. Freem.Judgm. § 6.

A peremptory nonsuit is a compulsory or involuntary nonsuit, ordered by the court upon a total failure of the plaintiff to substantiate his claim by evidence. Jacques v. Fourthman, 137 Pa. 428, 20 A. 802.

Motion for Nonsuit. A motion In the nature of a demurrer to the evidence. Woods v. Wikstrom, 67 Or. 581, 135 P. 192, 195; Biurrun v. Elizalde, 75 Cal.App. 44, 242 P. 109, 113.

NOTHUS. Lat. In Roman law, a natural child or a person of spurious birth.

NOTICE. Information; the result of observation, whether by the senses or the mind; knowledge of the existence of a fact or state of affairs; the means of knowledge. Abercrombie v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., 206 Ala. 615, 91 So. 311, 312; Knights and Ladies of Security v. Bell, 93 Old. 272, 220 P. 594, 597.

Knowledge of facts which would naturally lead an honest and prudent person to make inquiry constitutes "notice" of everything which such inquiry pursued in good faith would disclose. Twitchell v. Nelson, 131 Minn. 375, 155 N.W. 621, 624 ; German-American Nat. Bank of Lincoln v. Martin, 277 Ill. 629, 115 N.E. 721, 729.

In another sense, "notice" means information, an advice, or written warning, in more or less formal shape, intended to apprise a person of some proceeding in which his interests are involved, or informing him of some fact which it is his right to know and the duty of the notifying party to communicate.

Under the Negotiable Instrument Law "notice" of infirmity of instrument is actual knowledge or knowledge of such facts that taking note amounts to bad faith. Glendo State Bank v. Abbott, 30 Wyo. 98, 216 P. 700, 702, 34 A.L.R. 294.

Notice is either (1) statutory, e. made so by legislative enactment; (2) actual, which brings the knowledge of a fact directly home to the party; or (3) constructive. Constructive notice may be subdivided into : (a) Where there exists actual notice of matter, to which equity has added constructive notice of facts, which an inquiry after such matter would have elicited; and (b) where there has been a designed abstinence from inquiry for the very purpose of escaping notice. Wharton.

Actual notice has been defined as notice expressly and actually given, and brought home to the party directly. Jordan v. Pollock, 14 Ga. 145; McCray v. Clar, 82 Pa. 457: Morey v. Milliken, 86 Me. 464, 30 A. 102. The term "actual notice," however, is generally given a wider meaning as embracing two classes, express and implied; the former includes all knowledge of a degree above that which depends upon collateral inference, or which imposes upon the party the further duty of inquiry; the latter imputes knowledge to the party because he is shown to be conscious of having the means of knowledge. In this sense actual notice is such notice as is positively proved to have been given to a party directly and personally, or such as he is presumed to have received personally because the evidence within his knowledge was sufficient to put him upon inquiry. Picklesimer v. Smith, 164 Ga. 600, 139 S.E. 72, 74; White v. Fisher, 77 Ind. 65, 40 Am.Rep. 287.

Constructive notice is information or knowledge of a fact imputed by law to a person, (although he may not actually have it), because he could have discovered the fact by proper diligence, and his situation was such as to cast upon him the duty of inquiring into it. Baltimore v. Whittington, 78 Md. 231, 27 A. 984; Acer v. Westcott, 46 N.Y. 384, 7 Am. Rep. 355.

Notice is also further classified as express or implied. Express notice embraces not only knowledge, but also that which is communicated by direct information, either written or oral, from those who are cognizant of the fact communicated. Baltimore v. Whittington, 78 Md.• 231, 27 A. 984. Implied notice is one of the varieties of actual notice (not constructive) and is distinguished from "express" actual notice. It is notice inferred or imputed to a party by reason of his knowledge of facts or circumstances collateral to the main fact, of such a character as to put him upon inquiry, and which, if the inquiry were followed up with due diligence, would lead him definitely to the knowledge of the main fact. Rhodes v. Outcalt, 48 Mo. 370; Baltimore v. Whittington, 78 Md. 231, 27 A. 984; Wells v. Sheerer, 78 Ala. 147.

"Constructive notice" is a presumption of law, making it impossible for one to deny the matter concerning which notice is given, while "implied notice" is a presumption of fact, relating to what one can learn by reasonable inquiry, and arises from actual notice of circumstances, and not from constructive notice. Charles v. Roxana Petroleum Corporation, C.C.A.Okl., 282 F. 983, 988. Or as otherwise defined, implied notice may be said to exist where_ the fact in question lies open to the knowledge of the party, so that the exercise of reasonable observation and watchfulness would not fail to apprise him of it, although no one has told him of it in so many words. See City of Philadelphia v. Smith, Pa., 16 A. 493.

Averment of Notice. The statement in a pleading that notice has been given.

Immediate Notice. Under an insurance policy, notice of loss within reasonable time under circumstances of case. National Surety Co. v. Western Pac. Ry. Co., Cal., 119 C.C.A. 91, 200 F. 675, 687; Southern States Fire Ins. Co. v. Hand-Jordan Co., 112 Miss. 565, 73 So. 578, 579.

Judicial Notice. See Judicial Notice.

Legal Notice. See Legal Notice.

Personal Notice. Communication of notice orally or in writing (according to the circumstances) directly to the person affected or to be charged, as distinguished from constructive or implied notice, and also from notice imputed to him because given to his agent or representative. Loeb v. Huddleston, 105 Ala. 257, 16 So. 714; Pearson v. Lovejoy, 53 Barb., N.Y., 407.

Presumptive Notice. Implied actual notice. The difference between "presumptive" and "constructive" notice is that the former is an inference of fact which is capable of being explained or contradicted, while the latter is a conclusion of law which cannot be contradicted. Brown v. Baldwin, 121 Mo. 106, 25 S.W. 858; Brush v. Ware, 15 Pet. 98, 10 L.Ed. 672.

Public Notice. Notice given to the public generally, or to the entire community, or to all whom it may concern. Pennsylvania Training School v. Independent Mut. F. Ins. Co., 127 Pa. 559, 18 A. 392.

Reasonable Notice. Such notice or information of a fact as may fairly and properly be expected or required in the particular circumstances. Sterling Mfg. Co. v. Hough, 49 Neb. 618, 68 N.W. 1019; Mallory v. Leiby, 1 Kan. 102.

NOTICE IN LIEU OF SERVICE. In lieu of personally serving a writ of summons (or other legal process,) in English practice, the court occasionally allows the plaintiff (or other party) to give notice in lieu of service, such notice being such as will in all probability reach the party. This notice is peculiarly appropriate in the case of a foreigner out of the jurisdiction, whom it is desired to serve with a writ of summons. Sweet.

NOTICE OF ACTION. When it is intended to sue certain particular individuals, as in the case of actions against justices of the peace, it is necessary in some jurisdictions to give them notice of the action some time before.

NOTICE OF APPEARANCE. See Appearance.

NOTICE OF DISHONOR. See Dishonor.

NOTICE OF JUDGMENT. It is required by statute in several of the states that the party for whom the verdict in an action has been given shall serve upon the other party or his attorney a written notice of the time when judgment is entered.

NOTICE OF LIS PENDENS. See Lis Pendens.

NOTICE OF MOTION. A substitute for writ and declaration in common-law actions, which notifies defendant when and where he is to appear and sets forth cause of complaint. Baldwin v. Norton Hotel, 163 Va. 76, 175 S.E. 751. A notice in writing, entitled in a cause, stating that, on a certain day designated, a motion will be made to the court for the purpose or object stated. Field v. Park, 20 Johns., N.Y., 140.

NOTICE OF PROTEST. See Protest.

NOTICE OF TRIAL. A notice given by one of the parties in an action to the other, after an issue has been reached, that he intends to bring the cause forward for trial at the next term of the court.

NOTICE TO ADMIT. In the practice of the English high court, either party to an action may call on the other party by notice to admit the existence and execution of any document, in order to save the expense of proving it at the trial; and the party refusing to admit must bear the costs of proving it unless the judge certifies that the refusal to admit was reasonable. Rules of Court, xxxii. 2; Sweet.

NOTICE TO PLEAD. This is a notice which, in the practice of some states, is prerequisite to the taking judgment by default. It proceeds from the plaintiff, and warns the defendant that he must plead to the declaration or complaint within a prescribed time.

NOTICE TO PRODUCE. In practice, a notice in writing, given in an action at law, requiring the opposite party to produce a certain described paper or document at the trial. Chit.Archb.Pr. 230; 3 Chit.Gen.Pr. 834.

NOTICE TO QUIT. A written notice given by a landlord to his tenant, stating that the former desires to repossess himself of the demised premises, and that the latter is required to quit and remove from the same at a time designated, either at the expiration of the term, if the tenant is in under a lease, or immediately, if the tenancy is at will or by sufferance. The term is also sometimes applied to a written notice given by the tenant to the landlord, to the effect that he intends to quit the demised premises and deliver possession of the same on a day named. Garner v. Hannah, 6 Duer, N.Y., 270; Oakes v. Munroe, 8 Cush., Mass., 287.

NOTIFY. To give notice to; to inform by words or writing, in person or by message, or by any signs which are understood; to make known; to "notify" one of a fact is to make it known to him; to inform him by notice. Fast v. Scruggs, 164 Oki. 196, 23 P.2d 383.

In legal proceedings, and In respect to public matters, this word is generally, if not universally, used as importing a notice given by some person, whose duty it was to give it, in some manner prescribed, and to some person entitled to receive it, or be notified. Appeal of Potwine, 31 Conn. 384; Home Benefit Ass'n of Angelina County v. Jordan, Tex.Civ.App., 191 S.W. 725, 728.

NOTING. The act of a notary in minuting on a bill of exchange, after it has been presented for acceptance or payment, the initials- of his name, the date of the day, month, and year when such presentment was made, and the reason, if any has been assigned, for non-acceptance or non-payment, together with his charge. 4 Term 175.

NOTIO. Lat. In the civil law, the power of hearing and trying a matter of fact; the power or authority of a judex; the power of hearing causes and of pronouncing sentence, without any degree of jurisdiction. Calvin.

NOTITIA. Lat. Knowledge; information; intelligence; notice.

NOTITIA DICITUR A NOSCENDO; ET NOTITIA NON DEBET CLAUDICARE. Notice is named from a knowledge being had; and notice ought not to halt, [i. e., be imperfect.] 6 Coke, 29.

NOTORIAL. The Scotch form of "notarial," (q. v.). Bell.

NOTORIETY. The state of being notorious or universally well known.

Proof by Notoriety. In Scotch law, dispensing with positive testimony as to matters of common knowledge or general notoriety, the same as the "judicial notice" of English and American law. See Judicial Notice.

NOTORIOUS. Generally known and talked of, well or widely known, forming a part of common knowledge, or universally recognized. Mathis v. State, 60 Okl.Cr. 58, 61 P.2d 261, 267. Open; generally or commonly known and spoken of. McNeill v. McNeill, 166 Iowa, 680, 148 N.W. 643, 651; Record v. Ellis, 97 Kan. 754, 156 P. 712, 713, L.R.A.1916E, 654; Spicer v. Spicer, 249 Mo. 582, 155 S.W. 832, 835, Ann.Cas.1914D, 238.

In the law of evidence, matters deemed notorious do not require to be proved. There does not seem to be any recognized rule as to what matters are deemed notorious. Cases have occurred in which the state of society or public feeling has been treated as notorious; e. g., during times of sedition. Best, Ev. 354; Sweet.

NOTORIOUS INSOLVENCY. A condition of insolvency which is generally known throughout the community or known to the general class of persons with whom the insolvent has business relations.

NOTORIOUS POSSESSION. Possession that is so conspicuous that it is generally known and talked of by the public or the people in the neighborhood. Terral v. Brooks, 194 Ark. 311, 108 S.W. 2d 489, 493. Possession or character of holding in its nature having such elements of notoriety that the owner may be presumed to have notice of it and of its extent. Watrous v. Morrison, 33 Fla. 261, 14 So. 805, 39 Am.St.Rep. 139.

NOTOUR. In Scotch law, open; notorious. A. notour bankrupt is a debtor who, being under diligence by horning and caption of his creditor, retires to sanctuary or absconds or defends by force, ind is afterwards found insolvent by the court of session. Bell.

NOVA CONSTITUTIO FUTURIS FORMAM IMPONERE DEBET NON PRIETERITIS. A new state of the law ought to affect the future, not the past. 2 Inst. 292; Broom, Max. 34, 37.

NOVA CUSTUMA. The name of an imposition or duty. See Antigua Custuma.

NOVA STATUTA. New statutes. An appellation sometimes given to the statutes which have been passed since the beginning of the reign of Edward III. 1 Steph.Comm. 68.

NOVIE NARRATIONES. New counts. The collection called "Novas Narrationes" contains pleadings in actions during the reign of Edward III. It consists principally of declarations, as the title imports; but there are sometimes pleas and subsequent pleadings. The Articuli ad Novas Narrationes is usually subjoined to this little book, and is a small treatise on the method of pleading. It first treats of actions and courts, and then goes through each particular writ, and the declaration upon it, accompanied with directions, and illustrated by precedents. 3 Reeve, Eng. Law, 152; Wharton.

NOVALE. Land newly plowed and converted into tillage, and which has not been tilled before within the memory of man; also fallow land.

NOVALIS. In the civil law, land that rested a year after the first plowing. Dig. 50, 16, 30, 2.

NOVATIO NON PRIESUMITUR. Novation is not presumed. Halk. Lat. Max. 109.

NOVATION. Substitution of new contract between same or different parties. Alexander v. Manza, 22 N.J.Misc. 88, 36 A.2d 142, 148. The substitution of a new debt or obligation for an existing one. Hard v. Burton, 62 Vt. 314, 20 A. 269; McCartney v. Kipp, 171 Pa. 644, 33 A. 233. The substitution by mutual agreement of one debtor for another or of one creditor for another, whereby the old debt is extinguished. Pierce Fordyce Oil Ass'n v. Woods, Tex.Civ.App., 180 S.W. 1181, 1183; Peters v. Poro's Estate, 96 Vt. 95, 117 A. 244, 249, 25 A.L.R. 615.

The requisites of a "novation" are a previous valid obligation, an agreement of all the parties to a new contract, the extinguishment of the old obligation, and the validity of the new one. Alkire v. Acuff, 134 Okl. 43, 272 P. 405, 406; Tulsa Ice Co. v. Liley, 157 Okl. 86, 10 P.2d 1090, 1091; Cox v. Baltimore & 0. S. W. R. Co., 180 Ind. 495, 103 N.E. 337, 342, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 453.

The term was originally a technical term of the civil law, but is now in very general use in English and American jurisprudence.

In the civil law, there are three kinds of novation: Where the debtor and creditor remain the same, but a new debt takes the place of the old one; where the debt remains the same, but a new debtor is substituted; where the debt and debtor remain, but a new creditor is substituted. Wheeler v. Wardell, 173 Va. 168, 3 S.E.2d 377, 380.

NOVEL ASSIGNMENT. See New Assignment.

NOVEL DISSEISIN. See Assise of Novel Disseisin.

NOVELLIE (or NOVELLZE CONSTITUTIONES.) New constitutions; generally translated in English, "Novels." The Latin name of those constitutions which were issued by Justinian after the publication of his Code; most of them being originally written in Greek. After his death, a collection of 168 Novels was made, 154 of which had been issued by Justinian, and the rest by his successors. These were afterwards included in the Corpus Juris Civilis, (q. v.,) and now constitute one of its four principal divisions. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 80; 1 Kent, Comm. 541.

NOVELLIE LEONIS. The ordinances of the Emperor Leo, which were made from the year 887 till the year 893, are so called. These Novels changed many rules of the Justinian law. This collection contains 113 Novels, written originally in Greek, and afterwards, in 1560, translated into Latin by Agilteus. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 84.

NOVELS. The title given in English to the New Constitutions (Novellce Constitutiones) of Justinian and his successors, now forming a part of the Corpus Juris Civilis. See NovellEe.

NOVELTY. In order that there may be "novelty" so as to sustain a patent, the thing must not have been known to any one before, mere novelty of form being insufficient. Seaver v. Wm. Filene's Sons Co., D.C.Mass., 37 F.Supp. 762, 765. An objection to a patent or claim for a patent on the ground that the invention is not new or original is called an objection "for want of novelty."

NOVERCA. Lat. In the civil law, a stepmother.

NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRZESENTES. Know all men by these presents. Formal words used at the commencement of deeds of release in the Latin forms.

NOVI OPERIS NUNCIATIO. Lat. Denunciation of, or protest against, a new work.

This was a species of remedy in the civil law, available to a person who thought his rights or his property were threatened with injury by the act of his neighbor in erecting or demolishing any structure, which was called a "new work." In such case, he might go upon the ground, while the work was in progress, and publicly protest against or forbid its completion, in the presence of the workmen or of the owner or his representative.

NOVIGILD. In Saxon law, a pecuniary satisfaction for an injury, amounting to nine times the value of the thing for which it was paid. Spelman.

NOVISSIMA RECOPILACION. (Latest Compilation.) The title of a collection of Spanish law compiled by order of Don Carlos IV. in 1805. 1 White, Recop. 355.

NOVITAS. Lat. Novelty; newness; a new thing.

NOVITAS NON TAM UTILITATE PRODEST QUAM NOVITATE PERTURBAT. A novelty does not benefit so much by its utility as it disturbs by its novelty. Jenk. Cent. p. 167, case 23.

NOVITER PERVENTA, or NOVITER AD NOTITIAM PERVENTA. In ecclesiastical procedure, facts "newly come" to the knowledge of a party to a cause. Leave to plead facts noviter perventa is generally given, in a proper case, even after the pleadings are closed. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1257; Rog. Ecc. Law, 723.

NOVODAMUS. In old Scotch law, we give anew. The name given to a charter, or clause in a charter, granting a renewal of a right. Bell.

NOVUM JUDICIUM NON DAT NOVUM JUS, SED DECLARAT ANTIQUUM; QUIA JUDICIUM EST JURIS DICTUM ET PER JUDICIUM JUS EST NOVITER REVELATUM QUOD DIU FUIT VELATUM. A new adjudication does not make a new law, but declares the old; because adjudication is the utterance of the law, and by adjudication the law is newly revealed which was for a long time hidden. 10 Coke, 42.

NOVUM OPUS. Lat. In the civil law, a new work. See Novi Operis Nunciatio.

NOVUS HOMO. Lat. A new man. This term is applied to a man who has been pardoned of a crime, and so made, as it were, a "new man."

NOW. At this time, or at the present moment; or at a time contemporaneous with something done. Pike v. Kennedy, 15 Or. 426, 15 P. 637. At the present time. Nutt v. U. S., 26 Ct.C1. 15. Shubert v. Rosenberger, C.C.A.Mo., 204 F. 934, 935; Walker v. Dwelle, 187 Iowa, 1384, 175 N.W. 957, 960.

"Now" as used in a statute ordinarily refers to the date of its taking effect, but the word is sometimes used, not with reference to the moment of speaking but to a time contemporaneous with something done, and may mean at the time spoken of or referred to as well as at the time of speaking. State v. City of St. Lawrence, 101 Kan. 225, 165 P. 826.

Word "now" used in will refers to time of testator's death, Tate v. Tate, 160 Ga. 449, 128 S.E. 393, 395; but, in light of context, may apply to date of will, Merrill v. Winchester, 120 Me. 203, 113 A. 261, 264.

NOXA. Lat. In the civil law, any damage or injury done to persons or property by an unlawful act committed by a man's slave or animal. An action for damages lay against the master or owner, who, however, might escape further responsibility by delivering up the offending agent to the party injured. "Noxa" was also used as the designation of the offense committed, and of its punishment, and sometimes of the slave or animal doing the damage.

NOXA SEQUITUR CAPUT. The injury [1. e., liability to make good an injury caused by a slave] follows the head or person, [i. e., attaches to his master.] Heinecc. Elem. 1. 4, t. 8, § 1231.

NOXIE DEDITIO. The surrender of a slave who has committed a misdeed. The master may elect whether he will pay the damages assessed or surrender the slave. Hunter, Rom. Law, 166.

NOXAL ACTION. An action for damage done by slaves or animals. Sandars, Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 457.

NOXALIS ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law, an action which lay against the master of a slave, for some offense (as theft or robbery) committed or damage or injury done by the slave, which was called "noxa." Usually translated "noxal action."

NOXIA. Lat. In the civil law, an offense committed or damage done by a slave. Inst. 4, 8, 1.

NOXIOUS. Hurtful; offensive; offensive to ,the smell. Rex v. White, 1 Burrows, 337. The word "noxious" includes the complex idea both of insalubrity and offensiveness. Id. That which causes or tends to cause injury, especially to health or morals. Moubray v. G. & M. Improvement Co., 178 App.Div. 737, 165 N.Y.S. 842, 843.

NUBILIS. Lat. In the civil law, marriageable; one who is of a proper age to be married.

NUCES COLLIGERE. Lat. To collect nuts. This was formerly one of the works or services imposed by lords upon their inferior tenants. Paroch. Antiq. 495.

NUDA PACTIO OBLIGATIONEM NON PARIT. A naked agreement [i. e., without consideration] does not beget an obligation. Dig. 2, 14, 7, 4; Broom, Max. 746.

NUDA PATIENTIA. Lat. Mere sufferance.

NUDA POSSESSIO. Lat. Bare or mere possession.

NUDA RATIO ET NUDA PACTIO NON LIGANT ALIQUEM DEBITOREM. Naked reason and naked promise do not bind any debtor. Fleta, 1. 2, c. 60, § 25.

NUDE. Naked. This word is applied metaphorically to a variety of subjects to indicate that they are lacking in some essential legal requisite.

NUDE CONTRACT. One made without any consideration; upon which no action will lie, in conformity with the maxim "ex nudo pacto non oritur actio." 2 Bl.Comm. 445.

NUDE MATTER. A bare allegation of a thing done, unsupported by evidence.

NUDE PACT. One without consideration; an executory contract without a consideration; a naked promise. Oliver v. Home Service Ice Co., La.App., 161 So. 766, 770.

NUDUM PACTUM. A voluntary promise, without any other consideration than mere good will, or natural affection. Grimes v. Baker, 133 Neb. 517, 275 N.W. 860, 863.

A naked pact; a bare agreement; a promise or undertaking made without any consideration for it. Justice v. Lang, 42 N.Y. 493, 1 Am.Rep. 576; Wardell v. Williams, 62 Mich. 50, 28 N.W. 800, 4 Am.St.Rep. 814.

In Roman law. Informal agreements not coming within any of the privileged classes. They could not be sued on. The term was sometimes used with a special and rather different meaning to express the rule that a contract without delivery will not pass property. Pollock, Contracts 743. Salmond, Jurisprudence 640.

NUDUM PACTUM EST UBI NULLA SUBEST CAUSA PR)ETER CONVENTIONEM; SED UBI SUBEST CAUSA, FIT OBLIGATIO, ET PARIT ACTIONEM. A naked contract is where there is no consideration except the agreement; but, where there is a consideration, it becomes an obligation and gives a right of action. Plowd. 309; Broom, Max. 745, 750.

NUDUM PACTUM EX QUO NON ORITUR ACTIO. Nudum pactum is that upon which no action arises. Cod. 2, 3, 10; Id. 5, 14, 1; Broom, Max. 676.

NUEVA RECOPILACION. New Compilation. The title of a code of Spanish law, promulgated in the year 1567. Schm. Civil Law, Introd. 79-S1.

NUGATORY. Futile; ineffectual; invalid; destitute of constraining force or vitality. A legislative act may be "nugatory" because unconstitutional. Avery & Co. v. Sorrell, 157 Ga. 476, 121 S. E. 828, 829.

NUISANCE. That which annoys and disturbs one in possession of his property, rendering its ordinary use or occupation physically uncomfortable to him. Yaffe v. City of Ft. Smith, 178 Ark. 406, 10 S.W.2d 886, 890, 61 A.L.R. 1138. Everything that endangers life or health, gives offense to senses, violates the laws of decency, or obstructs reasonable and comfortable use of property. Hall v. Putney, 291 Ill.App. 508, 10 N.E.2d 204, 207. Annoyance; anything which essentially interferes with enjoyment of life or property. Holton v. Northwestern Oil Co., 201 N.C. 744, 161 S.E. 391, 393. That class of wrongs that arise from the unreasonable, unwarrantable, or unlawful use by a person of his own property, either real or personal, or from his own improper, indecent, or unlawful personal conduct, working an obstruction of or injury to the right of another or of the public, and producing such material annoyance, inconvenience, discomfort, or hurt, that the law will presume resulting damage. City of Phoenix v. Johnson, 51 Ariz. 115, 75 P.2d 30; Wood, Nuis. § 1; District of Columbia v. Totten, 55 App.D.C. 312, 5 F.2d 374, 380, 40 A.L.R. 1461. Anything that unlawfully worketh hurt, inconvenience, or damage. 3 Bl.Comm. 216; City of Birmingham v. Hood-McPherson Realty Co., 233 Ala. 352, 172 So. 114, 120, 108 A.L.R. 1140. Anything which is injurious to health, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, or which unlawfully obstructs the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway, is a nuisance. Civ. Code Cal. § 3479; Veazie v. Dwinel, 50 Me. 479; Bohan v. Port Jervis Gaslight Co., 122 N.Y. 18, 25 N.E. 246, 9 L.R.A. 711; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 137 U.S. 568, 11 S.Ct. 185, 34 L.Ed. 784; Ex parte Foote, 70 Ark. 12, 65 S.W. 706, 91 Am.St.Rep. 63.

In determining what constitutes a "nuisance," the question is whether the nuisance will or does produce such a condition of things as in the judgment of reasonable men is naturally productive of actual physical discomfort to persons of ordinary sensibility and ordinary tastes and habits. Meeks v. Wood, 66 Ind.App. 594, 118 N.E. 591, 592.

Nuisances are commonly classed as public and private, and mixed. A public nuisance is one which affects an indefinite number of persons, or all the residents of a particular locality, or all people coming within the extent of its range or operation, although the extent of the annoyance or damage inflicted upon individuals may be unequal. Burnham v. Hotchkiss, 14 Conn. 317; Chesbrough v. Com'rs, 37 Ohio St. 508; Lansing v. Smith, 4 Wend., N.Y., 30, 21 Am.Dec. 89. A private nuisance was originally defined as anything done to the hurt or annoyance of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments of another. 3 Bl. Comm. 216; Whittemore v. Baxter Laundry Co. 181 Mich. 564, 148 N.W. 437, 52 L.R.A.,N.S., 930, Ann.Cas.1916C, 818. As distinguished from public nuisance, it includes any wrongful act which destroys or deteriorates the property of an individual or of a few persons or interferes with their lawful use or enjoyment thereof, or any act which unlawfully hinders them in the enjoyment of a common or public right and causes them a special injury different from that sustained by the general public. Therefore, although the ground of distinction between public and private nuisances is still the injury to the community at large or, on the other hand, to a single individual, it is evident that the same thing or act may constitute a public nuisance and at the same time a private nuisance. Heeg v. Licht, 80 N.Y. 582, 36 Am.Rep. 654; Baltzeger v. Carolina Midland R. Co., 54 S.C. 242, 32 S.E. 358, 71 Am.St.Rep. 789; Willcox v. Hines, 100 Tenn. 538, 46 S.W. 297, 41 L.R.A. 278; Harris v. Poulton, 99 W.Va. 20, 127 S.E. 647, 650, 651, 40 A.L.R. 334. A mixed nuisance is of the kind last described; that is, it is one which is both public and private in its effects,-public because it injures many persons or all the community, and private in that it also produces special injuries to private rights. Kelley v. New York, 27 N.Y.S. 164, 6 Misc. 516.

Abatement of a nuisance. The removal, prostration, or destruction of that which causes a nuisance, whether by breaking or pulling it down, or otherwise removing, disintegrating, or effacing it. Ruff v. Phillips, 50 Ga. 130.

The remedy which the law allows a party injured by a nuisance of destroying or removing it by his own act, so as he commits no riot in doing it, nor occasions (in the case of a private nuisance) any damage beyond what the removal of the inconvenience necessarily requires. 3 Bl. Comm. 5, 168; 3 Steph.Comm. 361; 2 Salk. 458.

Actionable nuisance. See Actionable.

Assize of nuisance. In old practice, this was a judicial writ directed to the sheriff of the county in which a nuisance existed, in which it was stated that the party injured complained of some particular fact done ad nocumentum liberi tenementi sui, (to the nuisance of his freehold,) and commanding the sheriff to summon an assize (that is, a jury) to view the premises, and have them at the next commission of assizes, that justice might be done, etc. 3 Bl.Comm. 221.

Common nuisance. One which affects the public in general, and not merely some particular person; a public nuisance. 1 Hawk.P.C. 197; State v. Rodgers, 91 N.J.L. 212, 102 A. 433, 434.

Continuing nuisance. An uninterrupted or periodically recurring nuisance; not necessarily a constant or unceasing injury, but a nuisance which occurs so often and is so necessarily an incident of the use of property complained of that it can fairly be said to be continuous. Farley v. Gaslight Co., 105 Ga. 323, 31 S.E. 193; Kafka v. Bozio, 191 Cal. 746, 218 P. 753, 755, 29 A.L.R. 833.

Permanent nuisance. A nuisance of such a character that its continuance is necessarily an injury which will continue without change. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Allen, 118 Va. 428, 87 S.E. 558, 560. One that cannot be readily abated at small expense. Cumberland Torpedo Co. v. Gaines, 201 Ky. 88, 255 S.W. 1046, 1048

NUISANCE AT LAW. Nuisance per se (q. v.).

NUISANCE IN FACT. Acts, occupations or structures which are not nuisances per se but may become nuisances by reason of the circumstances or the location and surroundings. Asphalt Products Co. v. Marable, 65 Ga.App. 877, 16 S.E.2d 771, 772.

NUISANCE PER ACCIDENS. Nuisances in fact (q. v.).

NUISANCE PER SE. An act, occupation, or structure which is a nuisance at all times and under all circumstances, regardless of location or surroundings. Kays v. City of Versailles, 224 Mo.App. 178, 22 S.W.2d 182, 183. As, things prejudicial to public morals or dangerous to life or injurious to public rights; distinguished from things declared to be nuisances by statute, and also from things which constitute nuisances only when considered with reference to their particular location or other individual circumstances. Hundley v. Harrison, 123 Ala. 292, 26 So. 294; Whitmore v. Paper Co., 91 Me. 297, 39 A. 1032, 40 L.R.A. 377; Simpson v. Du Pont Powder Co., 143 Ga. 465, 85 S.E. 344, 345, L.R.A.1915E, 430.

NUL. No; none. A law French negative particle commencing many phrases.

NUL AGARD. No award. The name of a plea in an action on an arbitration bond, by which the defendant traverses the making of any legal award.

NUL CHARTER, NUL VENTE, NE NUL DONE VAULT PERPETUALMENT, SI LE DONOR N'EST SEISE AL TEMPS DE CONTRACTS DE DEUX DROITS, SC. DEL DROIT DE POSSESSION ET DEL DROIT DE PROPERTIE. Co. Litt. 266. No grant, no sale, no gift, is valid forever, unless the donor, at the time of the contract, is seised of two rights, namely, the right of possession, and the right of property.

NUL DISSEISIN. In pleading, no disseisin. A plea of the general issue in a real action, by which the defendant denies that there was any desseisin.

NUL NE DOIT S'ENRICHIR AUX DEPENS DES AUTRES. No one ought to enrich himself at the expense of others.

NUL PRENDRA ADVANTAGE DE SON TORT DEMESNE. No one shall take advantage of his own wrong. 2 Inst. 713; Broom, Max. 290.

NUL SANS DAMAGE AVERA ERROR OU ATTAINT. Jenk. Cent. 323. No one shall have error or attaint unless he has sustained damage.

NUL TIEL CORPORATION. No such corporation [exists]. The form of a plea denying the existence of an alleged corporation. Rialto Co. v. Miner, 183 Mo.App. 119, 166 S.W. 629, 632.

NUL TIEL RECORD. No such record. A plea denying the existence of any such record as that alleged by the plaintiff. It is the general plea in an action of debt on a judgment. Hoffheimer v. Stiefel, 17 Misc. 236, 39 N.Y.S. 714; Watters v. Freeman Bros., 16 Ga.App. 595, 85 S.E. 931.

Judgment of nul tiel record occurs when some pleading denies the existence of a record and issue is joined thereon; the record being produced is compared by the court with the statement in the pleading which alleges it; and if they correspond, the party asserting its existence obtains judgment; if they do not correspond, the other party obtains judgment of nul tiel record (no such record).

NUL TORT. In pleading, a plea of the general issue to a real action, by which the defendant denies that he committed any wrong.

NUL WASTE. No waste. The name of a plea in an action of waste, denying the committing of waste, and forming the general issue.

NULL. Naught; of no validity or effect. Usually coupled with the word "void;" as "null and void." Forrester v. Boston, etc., Min. Co., 29 Mont. 397, 74 P. 1088; Hume v. Eagon, 73 Mo.App. 276. The words "null and void," when used in a contract or statute are often construed as meaning "voidable." Burns Mortg. Co. v. Schwartz, C.C.A.N.J., 72 F.2d 991, 992; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Hall, 191 Ga. 294, 12 S.E.2d 53, 61.

NULLA BONA. Lat. No goods. The name of the return made by the sheriff to a writ of execution, when he has not found any goods of the defendant within his jurisdiction on which he could levy. Woodward v. Harbin, 1 Ala. 108; Reed v. Lowe, 163 Mo. 519, 63 S.W. 687, 85 Am.St.Rep. 578.

NULLA CURIA QUM RECORDUM NON HABET POTEST IMPONERE FINEM NEQUE ALIQUEM MANDARE CARCERI; QUIA ISTA SPECTANT TANTUMMODO AD CURIAS DE RECORDO. 8 Coke, 60. No court which has not a record can impose a fine or commit any person to prison; because those powers belong only to courts of record.

NULLA EMPTIO SINE PRETIO ESSE POTEST. There can be no sale without a price. Brown v. Bellows, 4 Pick., Mass., 189.

NULLA IMPOSSIBILIA AUT INHONESTA SUNT PRIESUMENDA; VERA AUTEM ET HONESTA ET POSSIBILIA. No things that are impossible or dishonorable are to be presumed; but things that are true .and honorable and possible. Co.Litt. 78b.

NULLA PACTIONE EFFICI POTEST UT DOLUS PRIESTETUR. By no agreement can it be effected that a fraud shall be practiced. Fraud will not be upheld, though it may seem to be authorized by express agreement. 5 Maule & S. 466; Broom, Max. 696.

NULLA VIRTUS, NULLA SCIENTIA, LOCUM SUUM ET DIGNITATEM CONSERVARE POTEST SINE MODESTIA, Co.Litt. 394. Without modesty, no virtue, no knowledge, can preserve its place and dignity.

NULLE REGLE SANS FAUTE. There is no rule without a fault.

NULLE TERRE SANS SEIGNEUR. No land without a lord. A maxim of feudal law. Guyot, Inst. Feod. c. 28.

NULLI ENIM RES SUA SERVIT JURE SERVITUTIS. No one can have a servitude over his own property. Dig. 8, 2, 26; 2 Bouv.Inst. no. 1600; Grant v. Chase, 17 Mass. 443, 9 Am.Dec. 161.

NULLI VENDEMUS, NULLI NEGABIMUS, AUT DIFFEREMUS RECTUM VEL JUSTITIAN. We neither sell nor deny, nor delay, to any person, equity or justice. State ex rel. Macri v. City of Bremerton, 8 Wash.2d 93, 111 P.2d 612, 619.

NULLITY. Nothing; no proceeding; an act or proceeding in a cause which the opposite party may treat as though it had not taken place, or which has absolutely no legal force or effect. Salter v. Hilgen, 40 Wis. 363; Jenness v. Lapeer County Circuit Judge, 42 Mich. 469, 4 N.W. 220.

Absolute Nullity. In Spanish law, nullity is either absolute or relative. The former is that which arises from the law, whether civil or criminal, the principal motive for which is the public interest, while the latter is that which affects one certain individual. Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 281. No such distinction, however, is recognized in American law, and the term "absolute nullity" is used more for emphasis than as indicating a degree of invalidity. As to the ratification or subsequent validation of "absolute nullities," see Means v. Robinson, 7 Tex. 502, 516.

NULLITY OF MARRIAGE. The entire invalidity of a supposed, pretended, or attempted marriage, by reason of relationship or incapacity of the parties or other diriment impediments. An action seeking a decree declaring such an assumed marriage to be null and void is called a suit of "nullity of marriage." It differs from an action for divorce, because the latter supposes the existence of a valid and lawful marriage. 2 Bish. Mar. & Div. §§ 289-294.

NULLIUS FILIUS. Lat. The son of nobody; a bastard. A bastard is considered nullius filius as far as regards his right to inherit. But the rule of nullius filius does not apply in other respects, and has been changed by statute in most states so as to make him the child of his mother, in respect of inheritance. State v. Chavez, 42 N.M. 569, 82 P.2d 900, 902.

NULLIUS HOMINIS AUCTORITAS APUD NOS VALERE DEBET, UT MELIORA NON SEQUEREMUR SI QUIS ATTULERIT. The authority of no man ought to prevail with us, so far as to prevent our following better [opinions] if any one should present them. Co.Litt. 383b.

NULLIUS IN BONIS. Lat. Among the property of no person.

NULLIUS JURIS. Lat. In old English law, of no legal force. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, § 24.

NULLUM ARBITRIUM. L. Lat. No award. The name of a plea in an action on an arbitration bond, for not fulfilling the award, by which the defendant traverses the allegation that there was an award made.

NULLUM CRIMEN MAJUS EST INOBEDIENTIA. No crime is greater than disobedience. Jenk.Cent. p. 77, case 48. Applied to the refusal of an officer to return a writ.

NULLUM EXEMPLUM EST IDEM OMNIBUS. No example is the same for all purposes. Co.Litt. 212a. No one precedent is adapted to all cases. A maxim in conveyancing.

NULLUM FECERUNT ARBITRIUM. L. Lat. The name of a plea to an action of debt upon an obligation for the performance of an award, by which the defendant denies that he submitted to arbitration, etc. Bac.Abr. "Arbitr." etc., G.

NULLUM INIQUUM EST PR2ESUMENDUM IN JURE. 7 Coke, 71. No iniquity is to be presumed in law.

NULLUM MATRIMONIUM, IBI NULLA DOS. No marriage, no dower. Wait v. Wait, 4 Barb., N.Y., 192, 194.

NULLUM SIMILE EST IDEM NISI QUATUOR PEDIBUS CURRIT. Co. Litt. 3. No like is identical, unless it run on all fours.

NULLUM SIMILE QUATOUR PEDIBUS CURRIT. No simile runs upon four feet, (or all fours, as it is otherwise expressed.) No simile holds in everything. Co. Litt. 3a; Ex parte Foster, 2 Story, 143, Fed.Cas.No.4960.

NULLUM TEMPUS ACT. A name given to the statute 3 Geo. III. c. 16, because that act, in contravention of the maxim "Nullum tempus occurrit regi," (no lapse of time bars the king,) limited the crown's right to sue, etc., to the period of sixty years.

NULLUM TEMPUS AUT LOCUS OCCURRIT REGI. No time or place affects the king. 2 Inst. 273; Jenk. Cent. 83; Broom, Max. 65.

OATH. Any form of attestation by which a person signifies that he is bound in conscience to perform an act faithfully and truthfully. Vaughn v. State, 146 Tex.Cr.R. 586, 177 S.W.2d 59, 60. An affirmation of truth of a statement, which renders one willfully asserting untrue statements punishable for perjury. U. S. v. Klink, D.C.Wyo., 3 F. Supp. 208, 210. An outward pledge by the person taking it that his attestation or promise is made under an immediate sense of responsibility to God. Morrow v. State, 140 Neb. 592, 300 N.W. 843, 845. A solemn appeal to the Supreme Being in attestation of the truth of some statement. State v. Jones, 28 Idaho 428, 154 P. 378, 381; Tyler, Oaths 15. An external pledge or asseveration, made in verification of statements made, or to be made, coupled with an appeal to a sacred or venerated object, in evidence of the serious and reverent state of mind of the party, or with an invocation to a supreme being to witness the words of the party, and to visit him with punishment if they be false. June v. School Dist. No. 11, Southfield Tp., 283 Mich. 533, 278 N.W. 676, 677, 116 A.L. R. 581. In its broadest sense, the term is used to include all forms of attestation by which a party signifies that he is bound in conscience to perform the act faithfully and truly. In a more restricted sense, it excludes all those forms of attestation or promise which are not accompanied by an imprecation.

The term has been variously defined: as, "a solemn invocation of the vengeance of the Deity upon the witness if he do not declare the whole truth, so far as he knows it," 1 Stark.Ev. 22; or, "a religious asseveration by which a person renounces the mercy and Imprecates the vengeance of Heaven if he do not speak the truth," 1 Leach 430: or, as "a religious act by which the party invokes God not only to witness the truth and sincerity of his promise, but also to avenge his imposture or violated faith, or, in other words, to punish his perjury if he shall be guilty of it," 10 Toullier, n. 343; Puffendorff, b. 4, c. 2, § 4. The essential idea of an oath would seem to be, however, that of a recognition of God's authority by the party taking it, and an undertaking to accomplish the transaction to which ft refers as required by his laws.

See Kissing the Book.

Assertory Oath. One relating to a past or present fact or state of facts, as distinguished from a "promissory" oath which relates to future conduct; particularly, any oath required by law other than in judicial proceedings and upon induction to office, such, for example, as an oath to be made at the custom-house relative to goods imported.

Corporal Oath. See Corporal.

Decisive or Decisory Oath. In the civil law, where one of the parties to a suit, not being able to prove his charge, offered to refer the decision of the cause to the oath of his adversary, which the adversary was bound to accept, or tender the same proposal back again, otherwise the whole was taken as confessed by him. Cod. 4, 1, 12.

Extrajudicial Oath. One not taken in any judicial proceeding, or without any authority or requirement of law, though taken formally before a proper person. State v. Scatena, 84 Minn. 281, 87 N.W. 764.

False Oath. See titles "False Oath" and "Perjury."

Judicial Oath. One taken in some judicial proceeding or in relation to some matter connected with judicial proceedings. One taken before an officer in open court, as distinguished from a "nonjudicial" oath, which is taken before an officer ex parte or out of court. State v. Dreifus, 38 La.Ann. 877.

Official Oath. One taken by an officer when he assumes charge of his office, whereby he declares that he will faithfully discharge the duties of the same, or whatever else may be required by statute in the particular case.

Poor Debtor's Oath. See Poor.

Promissory Oaths. Oaths which bind the party to observe a certain course of conduct, or to fulfill certain duties, in the future, or to demean himself thereafter in a stated manner with reference to specified objects or obligations; such, for example, as the oath taken by a high executive officer, a legislator, a judge, a person seeking naturalization, an attorney at law. Case v. People, 6 Abb. N. C., N.Y., 151. A solemn appeal to God, or, in a wider sense, to some superior sanction or a sacred or revered person in witness of the inviolability of a promise or undertaking. People ex rel. Bryant v. Zimmerman, 241 N.Y. 405, 150 N.E. 497, 499, 43 A.L.R. 909.

Purgatory Oath. An oath by which a person purges or clears himself from presumptions, charges or suspicions standing against him, or from a contempt.

Qualified Oath. One the force of which as an affirmation or denial may be qualified or modified by the circumstances under which it is taken or which necessarily enter into it and constitute a part of it; especially thus used in Scotch law.

Solemn Oath. A corporal oath. Jackson v. State, 1 Ind. 184.

Suppletory Oath. In the civil and ecclesiastical law, the testimony of a single witness to a fact is called "half-proof," on which no sentence can be founded; in order to supply the other half of proof, the party himself (plaintiff or defendant) is admitted to be examined in his own behalf, and the oath administered to him for that purpose is called the "suppletory oath," because it supplies the necessary quantum of proof on which to found the sentence. 3 Bl. Comm. 370.

This term, although without4pplication in American law in its original sense, is somefimes used as a designation of a party's oath required to be taken in authentication or support of some piece of documentary evidence which he offers, for example, his books of account.

Voluntary Oath. Such as a person may take in extrajudicial matters, and not regularly in a court of justice, or before an officer invested with authority to administer the same. Brown.

OATH AGAINST BRIBERY. One which could have been administered to a voter at an election for members of parliament. Abolished in 1854. Wharton.

OATH EX OFFICIO. The oath by which a clergyman charged with a criminal offense was formerly allowed to swear himself to be innocent; also the oath by which the compurgators swore that they believed in his innocence.' 3 BL Comm. 101, 447; Mozley & Whiteley.

OATH IN LITEM. In the civil law, an oath permitted to be taken by the plaintiff, for the purpose of proving the value of the subject-matter in controversy, when there was no other evidence on that point, or when the defendant fraudulently suppressed evidence which might have been available. Greenl. Ev. § 348; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 229; Herman v. Drinkwater, 1 Greenl., Me., 27.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE. An oath by which a person promises and binds himself to bear true allegiance to a particular sovereign or government, e. g., the United States; administered generally to high public officers and to soldiers and sailors, also to aliens applying for naturalization, and, occasionally, to citizens generally as a prerequisite to their suing in the courts or prosecuting claims before government bureaus. Rev.St. U.S. ill 3478, 31 U.S.C.A. § 204.

OATH OF CALUMNY. In the civil law, an oath which a plaintiff was obliged to take that he was not prompted by malice or trickery in commencing his action, but that he had bona ide a good cause of action. Poth. Pand. lib. 5, tt. 16, 17, s. 124.

OATH-RITE. The form used at the taking of an oath.

OB. Lat. On account of; for. Several Latin phrases and maxims, commencing with this word, are more commonly introduced by "in" (q. v.).

OB CAUSAM ALIQUAM A RE MARITIMA ORTAM. For some cause arising out of a maritime matter. 1 Pet. Adm. 92. Said to be Selden's translation of the French definition of admiralty jurisdiction, "pour le fait de la mer." Id.

OB CONTINENTIAM DELICTL On account of contiguity to the offense, i. e., being contaminated by conjunction with something illegal.

For example, the cargo of a vessel, though not contraband or unlawful, may be condemned in admiralty, along with the vessel, when the vessel has been engaged in some service which renders her liable to seizure and confiscation. The cargo is then said to be condemned ob continentiam delicti, because found in company with an unlawful service. 1 Kent, Comm. 152.

Jacksonville Loan & Imp. Co., 45 Fla. 425, 34 So. 255.

OBLIGATIO. Lat. In Roman law, a legal bond which obliges the performance of something in accordance with the law of the land. Ortolan, Inst. 2, § 1179. It corresponded nearly to our word contract. The legal relation existing between two certain persons whereby one (the creditor) is authorized to demand of the other (the debtor) a certain performance which has a money value. In this sense obligatio signifies not only the duty of the debtor, but also the right of the creditor. The fact establishing such claim and debt, as also the instrument evidencing it, is termed "obligation." Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 360.

That legal relation subsisting between two persons by which one is bound to the other for a certain performance. The passive relation sustained by the debtor to the creditor is likewise called an "obligation." Sometimes, also, the term "obligatio" is used for the oausa obligationis, and the contract itself is designated an "obligation." There are passages in which even the document which affords the proof of a contract is called an "obligation." Such applications, however, are but a loose extension of the term, which, according to its true idea, is only properly employed when it is used to denote the debt relationship, in its totality, active and passive, subsisting between the creditor and the debtor. Tomk. & J.Mod.Rom.Law, 301.

OBLIGATIO CIVILIS. An obligation enforceable by action, whether it derives its origin from the jus civile, as the obligation engendered by formal contracts or the obligation enforceable by bilaterally penal suits, or from such portion of the jus gentium as had been completely naturalized in the civil law and protected by all its remedies, such, as the obligation engendered by formless contracts.

OBLIGATIO EX CONTRACTU. An obligation arising from contract, or an antecedent jus in personam. In this there are two stages,—first, a primary or sanctioned personal right antecedent to wrong, and, afterwards, a secondary or sanctioning personal right consequent on a wrong. Poste's Gaius' Inst. 359.

OBLIGATIO EX DELICTO, or OBLIGATIO EX MALEFICIO. An obligation founded on wrong or tort, or arising from the invasion of a jus in rem. In this there is the second stage, a secondary or sanctioning personal right consequent on a wrong, but the first stage is not a personal right, (jus in, personam,) but a real right, (jus in rem,) whether a primordial right, right of status, or of property. Poste's Gaius' Inst. 359, OBLIGATIO NATURAL'S. An obligation not immediately enforceable by action; one deriving its validity from the law of nature, or one imposed by that portion of the jus gentium which is only imperfectly recognized by civil law.

These had not the binding force of the other classes, not being capable of enforcement by action, and are, therefore, not noticed by Justinian in his classification; but they had, nevertheless, a certain efficacy even in the civil law: for instance, though a debt founded upon a natural obligation could not be recovered by an action, yet if it was voluntarily paid by the debtor he could not recover it back, as he might do in the case of money paid by mistake, etc., where no natural obligation existed. L. 38, pr. D. 12. 6; Ortolan 2, § 1180.

OBLIGATIO PRJETORIA. The Romans considered that obligations derived their validity solely from positive law. At first the only ones recognized were those established in special cases in accordance with the forms prescribed by the strict jus civile. In the course of time, however, the praetorian jurisdiction, in mitigation of the primtive rigor of the law, introduced new modes of contracting obligations and provided the means of enforcing them; hence the twofold division made by Justinian of obligationes civiles and obligationes prcetorice. Inst. 1. 3. 13.

OBLIGATION. A generic word, derived from the Latin substantive "obligatio," having many, wide, and varied meanings, according to the context in which it is used. Enyeart v. City of Lincoln, 136 Neb. 146, 285 N.W. 314, 318. That which a person is bound to do or forbear; any duty imposed by law, promise, contract, relations of society, courtesy, kindness, etc. Goodwin v. Freadrich, 135 Neb. 203, 280 N.W. 917, 923. Duty. Rucks-Brandt Const. Co. v. Price, 165 Oki. 178, 23 P.2d 690. Duty imposed by law. Helvering v. British-American Tobacco Co., C.C.A., 69 F.2d 528, 530. Law or duty binding parties to perform their agreement. An undertaking to perform. State v. Citrus County, 116 Fla. 676, 157 So. 4, 97 A.L.R. 431. That which constitutes a legal or moral duty and which renders a person liable to coercion and punishment for neglecting it; a word of broad meaning, and the particular meaning intended is to be gained by consideration of its context. An obligation or debt may exist by reason of a judgment as well as an express contract, in either case there being a legal duty on the part of the one bound to comply with the promise. Schwartz v. California Claim Service, 52 Cal.App.2d 47, 125 P.2d 883, 888. Liabilities created by contract or law, Rose v. W. B. Worthen Co., 186 Ark. 205, 53 S.W.2d 15, 16, 85 A.L.R. 212; or tort. Exchange Bank v. Ford, 3 P. 449, 451, 7 Colo. 314. As legal term word originally meant a sealed bond, but it now extends to any certain written promise to pay money or do a specific thing. Lee v. Kenan, C.C.A.Fla., 78 F.2d 425, 100 A.L.R. 869. A formal and binding agreement or acknowledgment of a liability to pay a certain sum or do a certain thing. United States v. One Zumstein Briefmarken Katalog 1938, D.C. Pa., 24 F.Supp. 516, 519.

The binding power of a vow, promise, oath, or contract, or of law, civil, political, or moral, independent of a promise; that which constitutes legal or moral duty, and which renders a person liable to coercion and punishment for neglecting it. Webster.

A tie which binds us to pay or do something agreeably to the laws and customs of the country in which the obligation is made. Inst. 3, 14.

Obligation is (1) legal or moral duty, as opposed to physical compulsion; (2) a duty incumbent upon an individual, or a specific and limited number of individuals, as opposed to a duty imposed upon the world at large; (3) the right to enforce such a duty, (jus in personam,) as opposed to such a right as that of property, (jus in rem,) which avails against the world at large; (4) a bond containing a penalty, with a condition annexed, for the payment of money, performance of covenants, or the like. Mozley & Whitley.

"Obligation" is the correlative of "right." Taking the latter word in its politico-ethical sense, as a power of free action lodged in a person, "obligation" is the corresponding duty, constraint, or binding force which should prevent all other persons from denying, abridging, or obstructing such right, or interfering with its exercise. And the same is its meaning as the correlative of a "jus in rem." Taking "right" as meaning a "jus in personam," (a power, demand, claim, or privilege inherent in one person, and incident upon another,) the "obligation" is the coercive force or control imposed upon the person of incidence by the moral law and the positive law, (or the moral law as recognized and sanctioned by the positive law,) constraining him to accede to the demand, render up the thing claimed, pay the money due, or otherwise perform what is expected of him with respect to the subject-matter of the right.

A penal bond or "writing obligatory," that is, a bond containing a penalty, with a condition annexed for the payment of money, performance of covenants, or the like, and which differs from a bill, the latter being generally without a penalty or condition, though it may be obligatory. Co. Litt. 172.

A deed whereby a man binds himself under a penalty to do a thing. Com.Dig. Obligation (A) ; Taylor v. Glaser, 2 Serg. & R., Pa., 502; Denton v. Adams, 6 Vt. 40. The word has a very broad and comprehensive legal signification and embraces all instruments of writing, however informal, whereby one party contracts with another for the payment of money or the delivery of specific articles. State v. Campbell, 103 N.C. 344, 9 S.E. 410; Morrison v. Lovejoy, 6 Minn. 353, Gil. 224; Sinton v. Carter Co., 23 F. 535.

In English expositions of the Roman law, and works upon general jurisprudence, "obligation" is used to translate the Latin "obligatio." In this sense its meaning is much wider than as a technical term of English law. See Obligatio.

Absolute obligation. One which gives no alternative to the obligor, but requires fulfillment according to the engagement.

Conjunctive or alternative obligation. The former is one in which the several objects in it are connected by a copulative, or in any other manner which shows that all of them are severally comprised in the contract. This contract creates as many different obligations as there are different objects; and the debtor, when he wishes to discharge himself, may force the creditor to receive them separately. But where the things which form the object of the contract are separated by a disjunctive, then the obligation is alternative, and the performance of either of such things will discharge the obligor. The choice of performing one of the obligations belongs to the obligor, unless it is expressly agreed that it shall belong to the creditor. Civ.Code La. art. 2068; Dougl. 14; 1 Ld. Raym. 279; Galloway v. Legan, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 167. A promise to deliver a certain thing or to pay a specified sum of money is an example of an alternative obligation. Civ.Code La. arts. 2063, 2066, 2067.

Contractual obligation. One which arises from a contract or agreement.

Determinate or indeterminate obligation. A determinate obligation is one which has for its object a certain thing: as, an obligation to deliver a certain horse named Bucephalus, in which case the obligation can be discharged only by delivering the identical horse. An indeterminate obligation is one where the obligor binds himself to deliver one of a certain species: as, to deliver a horse, where the delivery of any horse will discharge the obligation.

Divisible or indivisible obligation. A divisible obligation is one which, being a unit, may nevertheless be lawfully divided, with or without the consent of the parties. An indivisible obligation is one which is not susceptible of division: as, for example, ,if I promise to pay you one hundred dollars, you cannot assign one-half of this to another, so as to give him a right of action against me for his share.

Express or implied obligation. Express or conventional obligations are those by which the obligor binds himself in express terms to perform his obligation, while implied obligations are such as are raised by the implication or inference of the law from the nature of the transaction.

Failure to meet obligations. See Failure to Meet Obligations.

Joint or several obligation. A joint obligation is one by which two or more obligors bind themselves jointly for the performance of the obligation. France v. France, 94 Or. 414, 185 P. 1108. A several obligation is one where the obligors promise, each for himself, to fulfill the engagement.

Moral obligation. A duty which is valid and binding in conscience and according to natural justice, but is not recognized by the law as adequate to set in motion the machinery of justice; that is, one which rests upon ethical considerations alone, and is not imposed or enforced by positive law. Taylor v. Hotchkiss, 81 App.Div. 470, 80 N. Y.S. 1042; Bailey v. Philadelphia, 167 Pa. 569, 31 A. 925, 46 Am.St.Rep. 691. A duty which would be enforceable by law, were it not for some positive rule, which, with a view to general benefit, exempts the party in that particular instance from legal liability. Backhaus v. Lee, 49 N.D. 821, 194 N.W. 887, 890; Longstreth v. City of Philadelphia, 245 Pa. 233, 91 A. 667.

Natural or civil obligation. A natural obligation is one which cannot be enforced by action, but which is binding on the party who makes it in conscience and according to natural justice; Blair v. Williams, 4 Litt., Ky., 41. As, for instance, when the action is barred by the act of limitation, a natural obligation still subsists, although the civil obligation is extinguished; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 197, 4 L.Ed. 529; Ogden v.

Saunders, 12 Wheat. 318, 337, 6 L.Ed. 606. A civil obligation is a legal tie, which gives the party with whom it is contracted the right of enforcing its performance by law. Civ.Code La. art. 1757; Poth. Obl. 173, 191.

Obedientlal obligation. One incumbent on parties in consequence of the situation or relationship in which they are placed. Ersk. Prin. 60.

Perfect or imperfect obligation. A perfect obligation is one recognized and sanctioned by positive law; one of which the fulfillment can be enforced by the aid of the law. Aycock v. Martin, 37 Ga. 124, 92 Am.Dec. 56. But if the duty created by the obligation operates only on the moral sense, without being enforced by any positive law, it is called an "imperfect obligation," and creates no right of action, nor has it any legal operation. The duty of exercising gratitude, charity, and the other merely moral duties are examples of this kind of obligation. Civ.Code La. art. 1757; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U.S. 600, 24 L.Ed. 793.

Personal or heritable obligation. An obligation is heritable when the heirs and assigns of one party may enforce the performance against the heirs of the other. Civ.Code La. art. 1997. It is personal when the obligor binds himself only, not his heirs or representatives. An obligation is strictly personal when none but the obligee can enforce the performance, or when it can be enforced only against the obligor. Civ.Code La. art. 1997. An obligation may be personal as to the obligee, and heritable as to the obligor, and it may in like manner be heritable as to the obligee, and personal as to the obligor. Civ.Code La. art. 1998. For the term personal obligation, as used in a different sense, see the next paragraph.

Personal or real obligation. A personal obligation is one by which the obligor binds himself to perform an act, without directly binding his property for its performance. A real obligation is one by which real estate, and not the person, is liable to the obligee for the performance.

Thus, when an estate owes an easement, as a right of way, it is the thing, and not the owner, who owes the easement. Another instance of a real obligation occurs when a person buys an estate which has been mortgaged, subject to the mortgage; he is not liable for the debt, though the estate is. In these cases the owner has an interest only because he is seized of the servient estate or the mortgaged premises, and he may discharge himself by abandoning or parting with the property. The obligation is both personal and real when the obligor has bound himself and pledged his estate for the fulfilment of the obligations. In the civil law and in Louisiana, a real obligation is one which is attached to immovable property, and it passes with such property into whatever hands the property may come, without making the third possessor personally responsible. Civ.Code La. art. 1997.

Primary obligation. An obligation which is the principal object of the contract.

For example, the primary obligation of the seller is to deliver the thing sold, and to transfer the title to it. It is distinguished from the accessory or secondary obligation to pay damages for not doing so. 1 Bouv.Inst. no. 702. The words "primary" and "direct," contrasted with "secondary," when spoken with reference to an obligation, refer to the remedy provided by law for enforcing the obligation, rather than to the character and limits of the obligation itself. Kilton v. Providence Tool Co., 22 R.I. 605, 48 A. 1039.

Primitive or secondary obligation. A primitive obligation, which in one sense may also be called a principal obligation, is one which is contracted with a design that it should itself be the first fulfilled. A secondary obligation is one which is contracted and is to be performed in case the primitive cannot be. For example, if one sells his house, he binds himself to give a title; but if he finds he cannot as when the title is in another, then his secondary obligation is to pay damages for nonperformance of the obligation.

Principal or accessory obligation. A principal obligation is one which arises from the principal object of the engagement of the contracting parties; while an accessory obligation depends upon or is collateral to the principal. See Poth. Obl. no. 182.

For example, in the case of the sale of a house and lot of ground, the principal obligation on the part of the vendor is to make title for it; the accessory obligation is to deliver all the title-papers which the vendor has relating to it, to take care of the estate until it is delivered, and the like. See, further, the title Accessory Obligation.

Pure obligation. One which is not suspended by any condition, whether it has been contracted without any condition, or, when thus contracted, the condition has been accomplished. Poth. Obl. no. 176. See simple obligation.

Simple or conditional obligation. Simple obligations are such as are not dependent for their execution on any event provided for by the parties, and which are not agreed to become void on the happening of any such event. Conditional obligations are such as are made to depend on an uncertain event. If the obligation is not to take effect until the event happens, it is a suspensive condition; if the obligation takes effect immediately, but is liable to be defeated when the event happens, it is then a resolutory condition. Civ.Code La. arts. 2020, 2021; Moss v. Smoker, 2 La.Ann. 989. A simple obligation is also defined as one which is not suspended by any condition, either because it has been contracted without condition, or, having been contracted with one, the condition has been fulfilled; and a conditional obligation is also defined as one the execution of which is suspended by a condition which has not been accomplished, and subject to which it has been contracted.

Single or penal obligation. A penal obligation is one to which is attached a penal clause, which is to be enforced if the principal obligation be not performed. A single obligation is one without any penalty: as where one simply promises to pay another one hundred dollars. This is called a single bill, when it is under seal.

Solidary obligation. In the law of Louisiana, one which binds each of the obligors for the whole debt, as distinguished from a "joint" obligation, which binds the parties each for his separate proportion of the debt. Groves v. Sentell, 14 S.Ct. 898, 153 U.S. 465, 38 L.Ed. 785. See Solidary.

OBLIGATION OF A CONTRACT. That which law in force when contract is made obliges parties to do or not to do, and remedy and legal means to carry it into effect. Harris v. Monroe Building & Loan Ass'n, La.App., 154 So. 503, 505.

As used in Const.U.S. art. 1, § 10, the term means the binding and coercive force which constrains every man to perform the agreements he has made; a force grounded in the ethical principle of fidelity to one's promises, but deriving its legal efficacy from its recognition by positive law, and sanctioned by the law's providing a remedy for the infraction of the duty or for the enforcement of the correlative right. Story, Const. § 1378; Black, Const.Prohib. § 139; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L.Ed. 606.

The "obligation of a contract" is its binding force according to the standards of law in existence when it was made. Colby v. City of Medford, 85 Or. 485, 167 P. 487, 499. The "obligation of a contract" is the duty of performance. Hays v. Port of Seattle, D.C.Wash., 226 F. 287, 293. The term includes everything within the obligatory scope of the contract, and it includes the means of enforcement. E. J. Lander & Co. v. Deemy, 46 N. D. 273, 176 N.W. 922, 925; Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. Martin-Nelly Grocery Co., 94 W.Va. 504, 119 S.E. 473, 476.

OBLIGATION SOLIDAIRE. This, in French law, corresponds to joint and several liability in English law, but is applied also to the joint and several rights of the creditors parties to the obligation.

OBLIGATIONES EX DELICTO or EX MALEFICIO. Obligations arising from the commission of a wrongful injury to the person or property of another.

"Delictum" is not exactly synonymous' with "tort," for, while it includes most of the wrongs known to the common law as torts, it is also wide enough to cover some offenses (such as theft and robbery) primarily injurious to the individual, but now only punished as crimes. Such acts gave rise to an obligatio, which consisted in the liability to pay damages.

OBLIGATIONES EX VARIIS CAUSARUM FIGURIS. Athough Justinian confined the divisions of obligations to four classes, namely obligationes ex contractu, quasi ex contractu, ex maleficio and quasi ex male ficio, there are many species of obligations which cannot properly be reduced within any of these classes. Some authorities have, consequently, established a fifth class, to receive the odds and ends which belonged nowhere else, and have given to this class the above designation, borrowed from Gaius, 1. 1, pr. § 1, D. 44, 7; Mackeldey § 474; Hadley, Rom. Law 209, etc.

OBLIGATIONES QUASI EX CONTRACTU. Often persons who have not contracted with each other, under a certain state of facts, are regarded by the Roman law as if they had actually concluded a convention between themselves. The legal relation which then takes place between these persons, which has always a similarity to a contract obligation, is therefore termed obligatio quasi ex contractu.

Such a relation arises from the conducting of affairs without authority, (negotiorum gestio) or unauthorized agency; from the management of property that is in common when the community arose from casualty, (communio ;Heiden); from the payment of what was not due (solutio indebiti); from tutorship and curatorship (tutela and cura), resembling the relation of guardian and ward; from taking possession of an inheritance (additio hereditatis and agnitio bonorum possessionis); and in many other cases. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 491.

OBLIGATIONES QUASI EX DELICTO, or OBLIGATIONES QUASI EX MALIFICIO. This class embraces all torts not coming under the denomination of delicta and not having a special form of action provided for them by law. They differed widely in character, and at common law would in some cases give rise to an action on the case, in others to an action on an implied contract. Ort. Inst. §§ 1781-1792.

OBLIGATORY PACT. See Pact.

OBLIGATORY RIGHTS. See Right

OBLIGATORY WRITING. See Writing Obligatory.

OBLIGEE. The person in favor of whom some obligation is contracted, whether such obligation be to pay money or to do or not to do something. Code La. art. 3522, no. 11 (Civ.Code, art. 3556, subd. 20). Jenkins v. Williams, 191 Ky. 165, 229 S.W. 94, 95. The party to whom a bond is given.

Obligees are either several or joint. An obligee is several when the obligation is made to him alone; obligees are joint when the obligation is made to two or more; and in that event each is not a creditor for his separate share, unless the nature of the subject or the particularity of the expression in the instrument lead to a different conclusion. 2 Pothier, Obl., Evans ed. 56; Hob. 172; Cro.Jac. 251.

The words obligee and payee have been held to have a technical and definite meaning under an act relative to promissory notes, bonds, etc., and apply only to notes, bonds, or bills whether given for the payment of money or for the performance of covenants and conditions, and not to mortgages; Hall v. Bryne, 1 Scam., Ill., 142.

OBLIGOR. The person who has engaged to perform some obligation. Code La. art. 3522, no. 12, Civ.Code, art. 3556, subd. 21. One who makes a bond.

Includes person liable for tort. Sarine v. American Lumbermen's Casualty Co. of Illinois, 258 App.Div. 653, 17 N.Y.S.2d 754, 756.

Obligors are joint and several. They are joint when they agree to pay the obligation jointly. They are several when one or more bind themselves and each of them separately to perform the obligation. In order to become an obligor, the party must actually, either himself or by his attorney, enter into the obligation and execute it as his own.

OBLIQUUS. Lat.

In the old law of descents, oblique; cross; transverse; collateral. The opposite of rectus, right, or upright.

In the law of evidence, indirect; circumstantial.

OBLITERATED CORNER. See Corner.

OBLITERATION. Erasure or blotting out of written words.

Lines drawn through the signatures of the witnesses to a will amount to an "obliteration," though the signatures be discernible. In re Kutzner's Will, 19 N.Y.S.2d 13, 16, 173 Misc. 776. Same where line is drawn through writing. Glass v. Scott, 14 Colo.App. 377, 60 P. 186; Evans' Appeal, 58 Pa. 244; Townshend v. Howard, 86 Me. 285, 29 A. 1077.

When the testator of a holographic will wrote across its face "Will revoked," and "This will is hereby revoked," and signed his name with lines beneath the signature, the will was canceled, defaced, and obliterated, within Decedent Estate Law, § 34, subds. 5, 6 (Consol.Laws, c. 13). In re Parsons' Will, 195 N.Y.S. 742, 745, 119 Misc. 26.

OBLIVION. Act of forgetting, or fact of having forgotten; forgetfulness. Official ignoring of offenses; amnesty, or general pardon; as, an act of oblivion. State or fact of being forgotten. Webster, Dict. A kind of annihilation. Gilbert v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 92 Kan. 281, 140 P. 883.

OBLIVIOUS. Evincing oblivion; forgetful; forgetting. Webster, Dict. Where thing is extinguished from mind. Gilbert v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 92 Kan. 281, 140 P. 883.

OBLOQUY. Censure and reproach. Bettner v. Holt, 70 Cal. 275, 11 Pac. 716. Blame, reprehension, being under censure, a cause or object of reproach, a disgrace. Burr v. Winnett Times Pub. Co., 80 Mont. 70, 258 P. 242, 246.

OBNOXIOUS. "Obnoxious" and "offensive" in ordinary use are synonymous, and mean objectionable, disagreeable, displeasing, and distasteful. City of Muskogee v. Morton, 128 Okl. 17, 261 P. 183, 184.

OBRA. In Spanish law, work. Obras, works or trades; those which men carry on in houses or covered places. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 6.

OBREPTIO. Lat. The obtaining a thing by fraud or surprise. Calvin. Called, in Scotch law, "obreption."

OBREPTION. Obtaining anything by fraud or surprise. Acquisition of escheats, etc., from the sovereign, by making false representations. Bell. See, also, Subreption.

OBROGARE. Lat. In the civil law, to pass a law contrary to a former law, or to some clause of it; to change a former law in some part of it. Calvin.

OBROGATION. In the civil law, the annulling a law, in whole or in part, by passing a law contrary to it. The alteration of a law. Calvin.

OBSCENE. Material is "obscene" if to average person, applying contemporary community standards, dominant theme of material taken as a whole appeals to prurient interest, if it is utterly without redeeming social importance, if it goes substantially beyond customary limits of candor in description or representation, if it is characterized by patent offensiveness, and if it is hard-core pornography. Roth v. United States, 354 U.S. 476, 77 S.Ct. 1304; Jacobellis v. Ohio, 378 U.S. 184, 84 S.Ct. 1676; Manual Enterprises, Inc. v. Day, 370 U.S. 478, 82 S.Ct. 1432; U. S. v. Klaw, C.A.N.Y., 350 F.2d 155, 164.

Offensive to chastity of mind or to modesty, expressing or presenting to the mind or view something that delicacy, purity, and decency forbids to be exposed; calculated to corrupt, deprave, and debauch the morals of the people, and promote violation of law; licentious and libidinous and tending to excite feelings of an impure or unchaste character; tending to stir the sex impulses or to lead to sexually impure and lustful thoughts; tending to corrupt the morals of youth or to lower the standards of right and wrong especially as to the sexual relation. Parmelee v. United States, 72 App.D.C. 203, 113 F.2d 729, 730.

OBSCENE BOOK or PAPER. An obscene book or paper within the act relating to nonmailable matter means one which contains immodest and indecent matter, the reading whereof would have a tendency to deprave and corrupt the minds of those in whose hands the publication might fall, and whose minds are open to such immoral influences; U. S. v. Clarke, D.C.Mo., 38 Fed. 732.

OBSCENITY. The character or quality of being obscene; conduct tending to corrupt the public morals by its indecency or lewdness. State v. Pfenninger, 76 Mo.App. 313; U. S. v. Males, D.C. Ind., 51 Fed. 41.

OBSCURE. When applied to words, statements or meanings, it signifies not perspicuous, not clearly expressed, hard to understand. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Geo. F. Fish, Inc., 148 Md. 210, 129 A. 14, 16.

OBSERVE. In the civil law, to perform that which has been prescribed by some law or usage. Dig. 1, 3, 32; Marshall County v. Knoll, 102 Iowa 573, 69 N.W. 1146.

OBSES. Lat. In the law of war, a hostage. Obsides, hostages.

OBSIGNARE. Lat. In the civil law, to seal up; as money that had been tendered and refused.

OBSIGNATORY. Ratifying and confirming.

OBSOLESCENCE. Condition or process of falling into disuse. State Line & Sullivan R. Co. v. Phillips, D.C.Pa., 17 F.Supp. 607, 609, 610.

OBSOLESCENT. Becoming obsolete; going out of use; not entirely disused, but gradually becoming so.

OBSOLETE. That which is no longer used. Becker v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., C.C.A.Mo., 120 F. 2d 403, 416. Disused; neglected; not observed.

The term is applied to statutes which have become inoperative by lapse of time, either because the reason for their enactment has passed away, or their subject-matter no longer exists, or they are not applicable to changed circumstances, or are tacitly disregarded by all men, yet without being expressly abrogated or repealed. Lemen v. Kansas Flour Mills Co., 122 Kan. 574, 253 P. 547, 548.

OBSTA PRINCIPIIS. Lat. Withstand beginnings; resist the first approaches or encroachments. Bradley, J., Boyd v. U. S., 116 U.S. 635, 6 Sup.Ct. 535, 29 L.Ed. 746.

OBSTANTE. Withstanding; hindering. See Non Obstante.

OBSTETRICS. The branch of medical science which has to do with the care of women during pregnancy and parturition. Stoike v. Weseman, 167 Minn. 266, 208 N.W. 993.

OBSTINATE DESERTION. "Obstinate" as used of desertion, which is a ground for divorce, means determined, fixed, persistent. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 91 Fla. 427, 107 So. 630, 631. Persisted in against the willingness of the injured party to have it concluded. Laing v. Laing, 110 N.J.Eq. 411, 160 A. 510, 511.

OBSTRICTION. Obligation; bond.

OBSTRUCT. To hinder or prevent from progress, check, stop, also to retard the progress of, make accomplishment of difficult and slow. Conley v. United States, C.C.A.Minn., 59 F.2d 929, 936. To be or come in the way of or to cut off the sight of an object. Silva v. Waldie, 42 N.M. 514, 82 P.2d 282, 286. To block up; to interpose obstacles; to render impassable; to fill with barriers or impediments; as to obstruct a road or way. U. S. v. Williams, 28 Fed.Cas. 633; Chase v. Oshkosh, 81 Wis. 313, 51 N.W. 560, 15 L.R.A. 553, 29 Am.St.Rep. 898. To impede; to interpose impediments, to the hindrance or frustration of some act or service; as to obstruct an officer in the execution of his duty. Davis v. State, 76 Ga. 722; Lamon v. Gold, 72 W.Va. 618, 79 S.E. 728, 730, 51 L.R.A.,N.S., 883.

As applied to navigable waters, to "obstruct" them is to interpose such impediments in the way of free and open navigation that vessels are thereby prevented from going where ordinarily they have a right to go or where they may find it necessary to go in their maneuvers. The City of Richmond, D.C.S.D.N.Y., 43 F. 88; Terre Haute Drawbridge Co. v. Halliday, 4 Ind. 36; The Vancouver, 28 F. Cas. 960.

OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE. Impeding or obstruct. ing those who seek justice in a court, or those who have duties or powers of administering justice therein. People v. Ormsby, 310 Mich. 291, 17 N.W. 2d 187, 190.

The act by which one or more persons attempt to prevent, or do prevent, the execution of lawful process. The term applies also to obstructing the administration of justice in any way-as by hindering witnesses from appearing. Melton v. Commonwealth, 160 Ky. 642, 170 S.W. 37, 42, L.R.A.1915B, 689; People v. Hebbard, 162 N.Y.S. 80, 89, 96 Misc.Rep. 617. Any act, conduct, or directing agency pertaining to pending proceedings, intended to play on human frailty and to deflect and deter court from performance of its duty and drive it into compromise with its own unfettered judgment by placing it, through medium of knowingly false assertion, in wrong position before public, constitutes an obstruction to administration of justice. State v. Shumaker, 200 Ind. 623, 157 N.E. 769, 774, 58 A.L.R. 954; Toledo Newspaper Co. v. U. S., 247 U.S. 402, 38 S.Ct. 560, 564, 62 L.Ed. 1186.

OBSTRUCTING AN OFFICER. Implies forcible resistance; State v. Le Blanc, 115 Me. 142, 98 A. 119, 120; contra, State v. Estes, 185 N.C. 752, 117 S.E. 581, 582.

To "obstruct" a public officer means to oppose that officer. It does not mean to oppose or impede the process with which the officer is armed, or to defeat its execution, but that the officer himself shall be obstructed. Knoff v. State, 18 Okl.Cr. 36, 192 P. 596, 597; Ratcliff v. State, 12 Okl.Cr. 448, 158 P. 293, 294.

OBSTRUCTING PROCEEDINGS OF LEGISLATURE. The term embraces not only things done in the presence of the legislature, but those done in disobedience of a committee. Ex parte Youngblood, 94 Tex.Cr.R. 330, 251 S.W. 509, 512.

OBSTRUCTING PROCESS. In criminal law, the act by which one or more persons attempt to prevent or do prevent the execution of lawful process.

OBSTRUCTING THE RECRUITING OR ENLISTMENT SERVICE. The phrase in Espionage Act, tit. 1, § 3 (50 USCA § 33 note), should be given a broad meaning, and includes to hinder, impede, embarrass, and retard, in whole or in part. Doe v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 253 F. 903, 906. The term does not necessarily mean actual prevention of enlistments or recruiting, it being sufficient if one interferes with such service or renders it more difficult. Rhuberg v. United States, C.C.A.Or., 255 F. 865, 869; U. S. v. Pierce, D.C.N.Y., 245 F. 878, 884. It contemplates more than a physical obstruction. O'Hare v. U. S., C.C.A.N.D., 253 F. 538, 540.

OBSTRUCTION. A hindrance, obstacle, or barrier. Carder v. City of Clarksburg, 100 W.Va. 605, 131 S.E. 349, 352. Delay, impeding or hindering. State v. Malpass, 189 N.C. 349, 127 S.E. 248, 250.

This is the word properly descriptive of an injury to anyone's incorporeal hereditament, e. g., his right to an easement, or profit a prendre; an alternative word being "disturbance." On the other hand, "infringement" is the word properly descriptive of an injury to any one's patent-rights or to his copyright. But "obstruction" is also a very general word in law, being applicable to every hindrance of a man in the discharge of his duty, (whether official, public, or private.) Brown.

"Obstruction" in highway includes anything interfering with highway easement. Andrew B. Hendryx Co. v. City of New Haven, 104 Conn. 632, 134 A. 77, 79.

"Obstruction," within a statute requiring certain precautions by those in bharge of train on appearance of obstruction, means obstacle, impediment, hindrance, bar, barrier, clog, or check. Howard & Herrin v. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 153 Tenn. 649, 284 S.W. 894, 896, 46 A.L.R. 1530; Turner v. Southern Ry. Co., 112 Miss. 359, 73 So. 62, 63.

As applied to the operation of railroads, an "obstruction" may be either that which obstructs or hinders the free and safe passage of a train, or that which may receive an injury or damage, such as it would be unlawful to inflict, if run over or against by the train, as in the case of cattle or a man approaching on the track. Louisville N. & G. R. Co. v. Reidmond, 11 Lea, Tenn., 205; South & North Alabama R. Co. v. Williams, 65 Ala. 77.

OBSTRUCTION TO NAVIGATION. Any unnecessary interference with the free movements of vessels. The Steam Dredge No. 6, D.C.N.Y., 222 F. 576, 579.

OBTAIN. To get hold of by effort; to get possession of; to procure; to acquire, in any way. State v. Bowdry, 346 Mo. 1090, 145 S.W.2d 127, 129.

The word in statute relating to obtaining money or property by false pretenses, is not limited to getting, securing, or appropriating money or property as owner. It includes as well the getting or securing of money or property by way of a loan. Tingue v. State, 90 Ohio St. 368, 108 N.E. 222, 223, Ann.Cas.1916C, 1156. As used in a confidence game statute it means to acquire the possession of, or control of, and not necessarily to acquire title to. People v. Miller, 278 Ill. 490, 116 N.E. 131, 138, L.R.A.1917E, 797.

OBTAINING MONEY BY FALSE PRETENSES. See False Pretenses.

OBTEMPER. See Obtemperare.

OBTEMPERANDUM EST CONSUETUDINI RATIONABILI TANQUAM LEGI. A reasonable custom is to be obeyed as a law. 4 Coke, 38.

OBTEMPERARE. Lat. To obey. Hence the Scotch "obtemper," to obey or comply with a judgment of a court.

OBTEST. To protest.

OBTORTO COLLO. In Roman law, taken by the neck or collar; as a plaintiff was allowed to drag a reluctant defendant to court. Adams, Rom. Ant. 242.

OBTULIT SE. Offered himself. In old practice, the emphatic words of entry on the record where one party ofered himself in court against the other, and the latter did not appear. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 417.

OBVENTIO. Lat. (from obvenire, to fall in).

In the civil law, rent; profits; income; the return from an investment or thing owned; as the earnings of a vessel. Generally used in the plural.

In old English law, the revenue of a spiritual living, so called. Also, in the plural, "offerings."

OBVENTION. See Obventio; Oblation.

OBVIOUS. Easily discovered, seen, or understood, readily perceived by the eye or the intellect, plain, synonymous with the words "plain," "clear," and "evident." Combs v. Colonial Casualty Co., 73 W. Va. 473, 80 S.E. 779, 781, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 1218. Apparent; evident; manifest. Fandeck v. Barnett & Record Co., 161 Wis. 55, 150 N.W. 537, 541; Tolfree v. Wetzler, D.C.N.J., 22 F.2d 214.

OBVIOUS DANGER. Apparent in exercise of ordinary observation and disclosed by use of eyes and other senses. Patterson v. Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co., 37 Ohio App. 316, 174 N.E. 592, 594. Plain and apparent to a reasonably observant person. Combs v. Colonial Casualty Co., 73 W.Va. 473, 80 S.E. 779, 780, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 1218.

OBVIOUS RISK. One so plain that it would be instantly recognized by a person of ordinary intelligence. City of Atlanta v. Trussell, 21 Ga.App. 340, 94 S.E. 649, 653. Within an accident policy, one which would be plain and apparent to a reasonably prudent and cautious person in the use of his faculties. Christensen v. National Travelers' Ben. Ass'n of Des Moines, Iowa, 196 Iowa 375, 194 N.W. 194, 196, 29 A.L.R. 709. It does not mean an unnecessary risk. Hickman v. Ohio State Life Ins. Co., 92 Ohio St. 87, 110 N.E. 542, 543.

OCASION. In Spanish law, accident. Las Para. das, pt. 3, tit. 32, 1. 21; White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 9, c. 2.

OCCASIO. In feudal law, a tribute which the lord imposed on his vassals or tenants for his necessity. Hindrance; trouble; vexation by suit. See, also, Occasiones.

OCCASION, n. That which provides an opportunity for the causal agency to act. Weinberg v. Richardson, 291 Ill.App. 618, 10 N.E.2d 893. Meaning not only particular time but carrying idea of opportunity, necessity, or need, or even cause in a limited sense, under G. L. c. 4, § 6, subd. 3. Commonwealth v. Tsouprakakis, 267 Mass. 496, 166 N.E. 855, 856. Condition of affairs; juncture entailing need; exigency; or juncture affording ground or reason for something. Ridout v. State, 161 Tenn. 248, 30 S.W.2d 255, 259, 71 A.L.R. 830.

OCCASION, v. To cause or bring about by furnishing the condition or opportunity for the action of some other cause. Smart v. Raymond, Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 100, 104. To give occasion to, to produce; to cause incidentally or indirectly; bring about or be the means of bringing about or producing. Industrial Commission of Ohio v. Weigandt, 102 Ohio St. 1, 130 N.E. 38, 39.

OCCASIONARI. To be charged or loaded with payments or occasional penalties.

OCCASIONES. In old English law, assarts. Spelman.

OCCUPANCY. Occupancy is a mode of acquiring property by which a thing which belongs to nobody becomes the property of the person who took possession of it with the intention of acquiring a right of ownership in it. Civ. Code La. art. 3412; Goddard v. Winchell, 86 Iowa, 71, 52 N.W. 1124, 17 L.R.A. 788, 41 Am.St.Rep. 481. The taking possession of things which before belonged to nobody, with an intention of appropriating them to one's own use. To constitute occupancy, there must be a taking of a thing corporeal, belonging to nobody, with an intention of becoming the owner of it; Co. Litt. 416.

Occupancy is sometimes used in the sense of occupation or holding possession; indeed it has come to be very generally so used in this country in homestead laws, public-land laws, and the like, Walters v. People, 21 Ill. 178; Redfield v. R. Co., 25 Barb., N.Y., 54; Act of Cong. May 29, 1830, 4 Stat. 420; but this does not appear to be a common legal use of the term, as recognized by English authorities.

There is a use of the word in public-land laws, homestead laws, "occupying-claimant" laws, cases of landlord and tenant, and like connections, which seems to require the broader sense of possession, although there is, in most of these uses, a shade of meaning discarding any prior title as a foundation of right. Perhaps both uses or views may be harmonized, by saying that in jurisprudence occupancy or occupation is possession, presented independent of the idea of a chain of title, of any earlier owner. Or "occupancy" and "occupant" might be used for assuming property which has no owner, and "occupation" and "occupier" for the more general idea of possession. Judge Bouvier's definitions seem partly founded on such a distinction, and there are indications of it in English usage. It does not appear generally drawn in American books. Abbott.

"Possession" and "occupancy," when applied to land, are nearly synonymous terms, and may exist through a tenancy. Thus, occupancy of a homestead, such as will satisfy the statute, may be by means other than that of actual residence on the premises by the widow or child. Walters v. People, 21 Ill. 178. Occupancy is always actual, as distinguished from possession, which may be actual or constructive. Occupancy is never constructive, save in the sense that land may be occupied through the actual possession of another. Davis v. State, 20 Ga.App. 68, 92 S.E. 550, 551. "Occupancy" is act of taking or holding possession and does not necessarily include residence. Kornhauser v. National Surety Co., 114 Ohio St. 24, 150 N.E. 921, 923.

Under fire policy, it must be such as ordinarily pertains to purpose to which property is adapted or devoted as described in policy. Continental Ins. Co. of New York v. Dunning, 249 Ky. 234, 60 S.W. 2d 577.

Under burglary policy it implies an actual use of the house as a dwelling place not absolutely continuous, but as a place of/usual return. Young v.

Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 202 Mo.App. 319, 215 S.W. 496, 498.

Under statute respecting adverse possession, the term was synonymous with "actual possession," as distinguished from "constructive possession." Hart v. All Persons, 26 Cal.App. 664, 148 P. 236, 240.

See Occupation; Occupy.

In International law. The taking possession of a newly discovered or conquered country with the intention of holding and ruling it.

OCCUPANT. Person having possessory rights, who can control what goes on on premises. United States v. Fox, C.C.A.N.Y., 60 F.2d 685, 688.

One who takes the first possession of a thing of which there is no owner.

One who occupies and takes possession, one who has the actual use, possession or control of a thing. Lechler v. Chapin, 12 Nev. 65; Wittkop v. Garner, 4 N.J.Misc. 234, 132 A. 339, 340.

In a special sense, one who takes possession of lands held pur autre vie, after the death of the tenant, and during the life of the cestui que vie.

Common occupant. See general occupant, below.

General occupant. At common law where a man was tenant pur autre vie, or had an estate granted to himself only (without mentioning his heirs) for the life of another man, and died without alienation during the life of cestui que vie, or him by whose life it was holden, he that could first enter on the land might lawfully retain the possession, so long as cestui que vie lived, by right of occupancy, and was hence termed a "general" or common "occupant." 1 Steph.Comm. 415.

Special occupant. A person having a special right to enter upon and occupy lands granted pur autre vie, on the death of the tenant, and during the life of cestui que vie.

Where the grant is to a man and his heirs during the life of cestui que vie, the heir, succeeds as special occupant, having a special exclusive right by the terms of the original grant. 2 Bl.Comm. 259; 1 Steph.Comm. 416.

In the United States the statute provisions of the different states vary considerably upon this subject. In New York and New Jersey, special occupancy is abolished. Virginia, and probably Maryland, follow the English statutes. In Massachusetts and other states, where the real and personal estates of intestates are distributed in the same way and manner, the question does not seem to be material. 4 Kent 27.

OCCUPANTIS FIUNT DERELICTA. Things abandoned become the property of the (first) occupant. Taylor v. The Cato, 1 Pet.Adm. 53, Fed. Cas.No.13,786.

OCCUPARE. Lat. In the civil law, to seize or take possession of; to enter upon a vacant possession; to take possession before another. Calvin.

OCCUPATILE. That which has been left by the right owner, and is now possessed by another.

OCCUPATIO. "The advisedly taking possession of that which is at the moment the property of no man, with a view of acquiring property in it for yourself." Maine, Anc.L. 245. The advised assumption of physical possession. Id. 256. See Occupancy.

OCCUPATION. Possession. Sweet; Kinneer v. Southwestern Mut. Fire Ass'n, 118 Pa.Super. 312, 179 A. 800. Where a person exercises physical control over land. Lancaster • County Bank v. Marshel, 130 Neb. 141, 264 N.W. 470, 475. Control; tenure; use.

"Occupation" of a dwelling house means living in it. The use for which premises are intended should be considered in determining what is meant by the word "unoccupied" as contained in a policy. Hoover v. Mercanti2e Town Mut. Ins. Co., 93 Mo.App. 111, 69 S.W. 42. As used in a fire insurance policy the word unoccupied, is not synonymous with vacant, but is that condition where no one has the actual use or possession of the thing or property in question, Yost v. Ins. Co., 38 Pa.Super.Ct. 594; Hardiman v. Fire Ass'n, 212 Pa. 383, 61 A. 990.

A putting out of a man's freehold in time of war. Co.Litt. s. 412.

Actual occupation. An open, visible occupancy as distinguished from the constructive one which follows the legal title. Cutting v. Patterson, 82 Minn. 375, 85 N.W. 172; People v. Ambrecht, 11 Abb.Prac., N.Y., 97; Bennett v. Burton, 44 Iowa 550.

Vocation. That which principally takes up one's time, thought, and energies; especially, one's regular business or employment; also whatever one follows as the means of making a livelihood. Dorrell v. Norida Land & Timber Co., 53 Idaho, 793, 27 P.2d 960; Texas Co. v. Amos, 77 Fla. 327, 81 So. 471, 472; Childers v. Brown, 81 Or. 1, 158 P. 166, 168, Ann.Cas.1918D, 170. Particular business, profession, trade, or calling which engages individual's time and efforts, employment in which one regularly engages or vocation of his life. Harris v. Southern Carbon Co., La.App., 162 So. 430, 434; Evans v. Woodman Acc. Ass'n, 171 P. 643, 644, 102 Kan. 556, L.R.A.1918D, 122; Industrial Commission of Ohio v. Roth, 120 N.E. 172, 173, 98 Ohio St. 34, 6 A.L.R. 1463.

OCCUPATION TAX. A tax imposed upon an occupation or the prosecution of a business, trade, or profession; not a tax on property, or even the capital employed in the business, but an excise tax on the business itself; to be distinguished from a "license tax," which is a fee or exaction for the privilege of engaging in the business, not for its prosecution. Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N.E. 672; Appeal of Banger, 109 Pa. 95; Pullman Palace Car Co. y. State, 64 Tex. 274, 53 Am. Rep. 758.

OCCUPATIONAL. Of or pertaining to an occupation, trade or work. Morgan v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., La.App., 22 So.2d 595, 597.

OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE. Disease gradually contracted in usual and ordinary course of employment, because thereof, and incidental thereto. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Lancaster, Tex.Civ.App., 71 S.W.2d 318, 319.

OCCUPATIONAL DUTIES. Those of insured's ordinary and usual occupation, and not those of unusual, casual and temporary employment. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Lorton, 97 Colo. 545, 51 P.2d 693, 694.

OCCUPATIVE. Pertaining to or involving occupation or the right of occupation. Webster.

OCCUPAVIT. Lat. In old English law, a writ that lay for one who was ejected out of his land or tenement in time of war. Cowell.

OCCUPIER. An occupant; one who is in the enjoyment of a thing.

A tenant, though absent, is, generally speaking, the occupier of premises; 1 B. & C. 178; but not a servant or other person who may be there virtute officii; 26 L.J.C.P. 12; 47 L.J.Ex. 112; L.R. 1 Q.B. 72.

OCCUPY. To take or enter upon possession of; to hold possession of; to hold or keep for use; to possess; to tenant; to do business in. People v. Roseberry, 23 Cal.App.2d 13, 71 P.2d 944. Actual use, possession, and cultivation. Jackson v. Sill, 11 Johns., N.Y., 202, 6 Am.Dec. 363.

The term, under fire policy, implies use by some person according to purpose for which it is designed, and does not imply that some one shall remain in building all of the time without interruption, but merely that there shall not be a cessation of occupancy for any considerable length of time. Washington Fire Ins. Co. v. Cobb, Tex.Civ.App., 163 S.W. 608, 612; Southern Nat. Ins. Co. v. Cobb, Tex.Civ.App., 180 S.W. 155, 156. As used in connection with a homestead, it does not always require an actual occupancy, but may sometimes permit a constructive occupancy. Kerns v. Warden, 88 Okl. 297, 213 P. 70, 72.

See Occupation; Occupancy.

OCCUPYING CLAIMANT. An occupant claiming right under statute to recover for improvements he has placed on the land subsequently found not to be his. Kelly v. Watkins, 135 Okl. 276, 276 P. 191, 192.

OCCUPYING CLAIMANT ACTS. Statutes providing for the reimbursement of a bona fide occupant and claimant of land, on its recovery by the true owner, to the extent to which lasting improvements made by him have increased the value of the land, and generally giving him a lien therefor. Jones v. Great Southern Hotel Co., 86 F. 370, 30 C.C.A. 108.

OCCUR. To meet one's eye; to be found or met with; to present itself; to appear; hence, to befall in due course; to happen. Grenada Bank v. Petty, 174 Miss. 415, 164 So. 316, 318. To arise; begin. Murphy v. People, 78 Colo. 276, 242 P. 57, 59.

OCCURRENCE. A coming or happening; any incident or event, especially one that happens without being designed or expected. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank v. Arrington, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 378, 382.

OCEAN. The main or open sea; the high sea; that portion of the sea which does not lie within the body of any country and is not subject to the territorial jurisdiction or control of any country, but is open, free, and common to the use of all nations. U. S. v. Rodgers, 14 S.Ct. 109, 150 U.S. 249, 37 L.Ed. 1071; U. S. v. New Bedford Bridge, 27 Fed.Cas. 120.

OCHIERN. In old Scotch law, a name of dignity; a freeholder. Skene's de Verb. Sign.

OCHLOCRACY. Government by the multitude. A form of government wherein the populace has the whole power and administration in its own hands. The abuse of a democracy. Mob rule.

OCTAVE. In old English law, the eighth day inclusive after a feast; one of the return days of writs. 3 Bl.Comm. 278.

OCTO TALES. Lat. Eight such; eight such men; eight such jurors. The name of a writ, at common law, which issues when upon a trial at bar, eight more jurors are necessary to fill the panel, commanding the sheriff to summon the requisite number. 3 Bl.Comm. 364; Decem Tales.

OCTROI. Fr. In French law, originally, a toll or duty, which, by the permission of the seigneur, any city was accustomed to collect on liquors and some other goods, brought within its precincts, for the consumption of the inhabitants. Afterwards appropriated to the use of the king. Steph. Lect. p. 361.

OCULIST. A duly licensed physician specializing in the diseases of the eye. Stern v. Flynn, 154 Misc. 609, 278 N.Y.S. 598.

ODD LOT BUSINESS. The dealing in a smaller number of shares than the unit of trading on the floor of the stock exchange. People ex rel. Berdan v. Goldfogle, 213 App.Div. 702, 211 N.Y.S. 107.

ODD LOT DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine, if the effects of an accident have not been removed, it is not sufficient, to entitle an employer to have a reduction in the weekly compensation ordered by the court under the Workmen's Compensation Act, that it appears the workman has the physical capacity to do some kind of work different from the general kind of work which he was engaged in at the time of the accident, but it must also be shown that the workman, either by his own efforts or that of his employer, can actually get such work. Olneyville Wool Combing Co. v. Di Donato, 65 R.I. 154, 13 A.2d 817. Zelinckas v. Ford Motor Co., 294 Mich. 494, 293 N.W. 732.

ODERUNT PECCARE BONI, VIRTUTIS AMORE; ODERUNT PECCARE MALI, FORMIDINE PAN. Good men hate to sin through love of virtue; bad men, through fear of punishment.

ODHAL. Complete property, as opposed to feudal tenure. The transposition of the syllables of "odhal" makes it "allodh," and hence, according to Blackstone, arises the word "allod" or "allodial," (q. v.). "Allodh" is thus put in contradistinction to "f eeodh." Mozley & Whiteley.

ODIO ET ATIA. See De Odio et Atia.

ODIOSA ET INHONESTA NON SUNT IN LEGE PRIESUMANDA. Odius and dishonest acts are not presumed in law. Co. Litt. 78; Jackson v. Miller, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 228, 231, 21 Am.Dec. 316.

ODIOSA NON PRIESUMUNTUR. Odius things are not presumed. Burrows, Sett. Cas. 190.

ODIUM. Means hatred and dislike. In venue statute, it implies such a general ill feeling toward a party to an action as will render it uncertain whether the cause can be tried by impartial triers, free from an atmosphere impregnated with malice or corrupting prejudices. Brow v. Levy, 3 Ind.App. 464, 29 N.E. 417.

ODIOUS. Synonymous with infamous. Poison v. Polson, 140 Ind. 310, 39 N.E. 498.

ECONOMICUS. L. Lat. In old English law. The executor of a last will and testament. Cowell.

ECONOMUS. Lat. In the civil law. A manager or administrator. Calvin.

OEDEMA. A bogging down of the kidneys, heart and lungs because of heavy load of gas poison, entering through the lungs and infecting the tissues and organs of the whole system. Ogletree v. Jones, 44 N.M. 567, 106 P.2d 302.

OF. A term denoting that from which anything proceeds; indicating origin, source, descent, and the like; as, he is of a race of kings; he is of noble blood. Stone v. Riggs, 43 Okl. 209, 142 P. 298, 299. Associated with or connected with, usually in some causal relation, efficient, material, formal, or final. Harlan v. Industrial Accident Commission, 194 Cal. 352, 228 P. 654, 657.

The word has been held equivalent to after, 10 L.J.Q.B. 10; at, or belonging to, Davis v. State, 38 Ohio St. 506; in possession of, Bell County v. Hines, Tex.Civ.App., 219 S.W. 556, 557; Stokes v. Great Southern Lumber Co., D.C.Miss., 21 F.2d 185, 186; manufactured by, 2 Bing. N.C. 668; by, Hannum v. Kingsley, 107 Mass. 355; residing at, Porter v. Miller, 3 Wend. (N.Y.) 329; 8 A. & E. 232; from, State v. Wong Fong, 75 Mont. 81, 241 P. 1072, 1074; in, Kellogg v. Ford, 70 Or. 213, 139 P. 751, 752.

OF COUNSEL. A phrase commonly applied in practice to the counsel employed by a party in a cause, and particularly to one employed to assist in the preparation or management of a cause, or its presentation on appeal, but who is not the principal attorney of record for the party.

OF COURSE. As a matter of right. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 29 Cal. 281; Jones v. McGonigle, 327 Mo. 457, 37 S.W.2d 892, 74 A.L.R. 550. Any action or step taken in the course of judicial proceedings which will be allowed by the court upon mere application, without any inquiry or contest, or which may be effectually taken without even applying to the court for leave. Merchants' Bank of St. Joseph v. Crysler, C.C.A.Mo., 67 F. 390, 14 C.C.A 444; Petit v. Petit, 45 Misc. 155, 91 N.Y.S. 979.

OF FORCE. In force; extant; not obsolete; existing as a binding or obligatory power.

OF GRACE. This phrase had its origin in an age when kings dispensed their royal favors at the hands of chancellors, but has no rightful place in American jurisprudence. Sullivan v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., 208 Pa. 540, 57 A. 1065, 66 L.R. A. 712. A term applied to any permission or license granted to a party in the course of a judicial proceeding which is not claimable as a matter of course or of right, but is allowed by the favor or indulgence of the court. See Walters v. McElroy, 151 Pa. 549, 25 A. 125.

OF NEW. A Scotch expression, closely translated from the Latin "de novo," (q. v.).

OF RECORD. Recorded; entered on the records; existing and remaining in or upon the appropriate records.

A mortgage to be "of record" must be recorded in the county in which it is properly and legally .recordable for purpose of constructive notice. Riley v. Commonwealth, 275 Ky. 370, 121 S.W.2d 921.

Under statute providing that recognizances shall be "of record", the term means of record in the sense that it is taken by inferior tribunals-that they have been taken and certified to the clerk of the court of record and by him recorded. King v. State, 18 Neb. 375, 25 N.W. 519.

OF RIGHT. As a matter of course. Atkins v. Garrett, D.C.La., 252 F. 280, 282. See "Of Course."

OF THE BLOOD. A technical legal phrase meaning to be descended from the person referred to or from the same common stock and from a common ancestor. In re Easter's Estate, 24 Cal.2d 191, 148 P.2d 601.

OFFA EXECRATA. In old English law. The morsel of execration; the corsned, (q. v.). 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 21.

OFFENDER. Commonly used in statutes to indicate person implicated in the commission of a crime and includes person guilty of a misdemeanor. State ex rel. Smith v. Jameson, 70 S.D. 503, 19 N.W.2d 505, 508.

OFFENSE. A crime or misdemeanor; a breach of the criminal laws. People v. Brenta, 64 Cal. App. 91, 220 P. 447; State v. Hirsch, 91 Vt. 330, 100 A. 877, 879; Ex parte Brady, 116 Ohio St. 512, 157 N.E. 69, 70. State v. Johnson, 212 N.C. 566, 194 S.E. 319, 322.

It is used as a genus, comprehending every crime and misdemeanor, or as a species, signifying a crime not indictable, but punishable summarily or by the forfeiture of a penalty. In re Terry, C.C.Cal., 37 F. 649.

The word "offense," while sometimes used in various senses, generally implies a crime or a misdemeanor infringing public as distinguished from mere private rights, and punishable under the criminal laws, though it may also include the violation of a criminal statute for which the remedy is merely a civil suit to recover the penalty. Commonwealth v. Brown, 264 Pa. 85, 107 A. 676, 678.

Under a statute, declaring that one guilty of an offense• or fault causing another damage is obliged to repair it, "offense or fault" has the same meaning as "tort" ; Panama R. Co. v. Rock, C.C.A.Canal Zone, 272 F. 649, 651; and.

a criminal contempt has been held to be an "offense." Creekmore v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 237 F. 743, 754, L.R.A. 1917C, 845; Ex parte Grossman, 267 U.S. 87, 45 S.Ct. 332, 335, 69 L. Ed. 527, 38 A.L.R. 131.

Continuing offense. A transaction or a series of acts set on foot by a single impulse, and operated by an unintermittent force, no matter how long a time it may occupy. State v. Brown, 10 Okl.Cr. 52, 133 P. 1143, 1144; Ex parte Dunn, 33 Okl.Cr. 190, 242 P. 574.

Criminal offense. Includes misdemeanors as well as felonies. People v. Scalisi, 324 Ill. 131, 154 N.E. 715, 721. It is an offense which subjects the offender to indictment. Latimer v. Wilson, 103 N. J.L. 159, 134 A. 750, 751.

Quasi offense. One which is imputed to the person who is responsible for its injurious consequences, not because he himself committed it, but because the perpetrator of it is presumed to have acted under his commands.

Same offense. As used in a provision against double jeopardy, the term means the same crime, not the same transaction, acts, circumstances, or situation. State v. Billotto, 104 Ohio St. 13, 135 N.E. 285, 287; U. S. v. Bostow, D.C.Ala., 273 F. 535, 538.

Second offense. One committed after conviction for a first offense. Hoist v. Owen, C.C.A.Fla., 24 F. 2d 100. See State v. Snyder, 30 N.M. 40, 227 P. 613, 618; Meyers v. State, 193 Wis. 126, 213 N.W. 645, 646; Staniforth v. State, 24 Ohio App. 208, 156 N.E. 924.

It is the previous conviction, and not the indictment, which is the basis of the charge of a second offense. People v. Boardman, 172 App.Div. 733, 159 N.Y.S. 577.

OFFENSIVE. In the law relating to nuisances and similar matters, this term means noxious, causing annoyance, discomfort, or painful or disagreeable sensations. In ordinary use, the term is synonymous with "obnoxious" and means objectionable, disagreeable, displeasing and distasteful. Moller v. Presbyterian Hospital, 65 App.Div. 134, 72 N.Y.S. 483; City of Muskogee v. Morton, 128 Old. 17, 261 P. 183, 184.

Oei[c]k|NSIVE AND DEFENSIVE LEAGUE. In international law. A league binding the contract. ing powers not only to aid each other in case of aggression upon either of them by a third power, but also to support and aid each other in active and aggressive measures against a power with which either of them may engage in war.

0t .1[i] ENSIVE LANGUAGE. Language adapted to give offense; displeasing or annoying language. People v. Whitman (Co. Ct.) 157 N.Y.S. 1107, 1109.

01[i]/[i] ENSIVE WEAPON. As occasionally used in criminal law and statutes, a weapon primarily meant and adapted for attack and the infliction of injury, but practically the term includes anything that would come within the description of a "deadly" or "dangerous" weapon. State v. Dineen, 10 Minn. 411 (Gil. 325) ; Rex v. Grice, 7 Car. & P. 803; Rex v. Noakes, 5 Car. & P. 326. Pistol has been held to be "offensive weapon" within statute punishing assault with intent to rob. Reed v. Commonwealth, 281 Ky. 189, 135 S.W.2d 867, 870, 872.

OFFER, v. To bring to or before; to present for acceptance or rejection; to hold out or proffer; to make a proposal to; to exhibit something that may be taken or received or not. Morrison v. Springer, 15 Iowa 346; People v. Ah Fook, 62 Cal. 494.

To attempt or endeavor; to make an .effort to effect some object, as, to offer to bribe; in this sense used principally in criminal law. State v. Armijo, 19 N.M. 345, 142 P. 1126, 1127.

In trial practice, to "offer" evidence is to state its nature and purport, or to recite what is expected to be proved by a given witness or document, and demand its admission. Unless under exceptional circumstances, the term is not to be taken as equivalent to "introduce." Harris v. Tomlinson, 130 Ind. 426, 30 N.E. 214.

The word "offer," as used in a statute providing that the buyer, to rescind a sale, must offer within a reasonable time to return the goods, is synonymous with the word "tender." Collins v. Skillings, 224 Mass. 275, 112 N.E. 938. 939, Ann.Cas.1918D, 424.

OFFER, n. A proposal; a proposal to do a thing.

An attempt; endeavor. Webster.

An offer of evidence. See the verb "offer," supra.

An act on the part of one person whereby he gives to another the legal power of creating the obligation called contract. In re Larney's Estate, 148 Misc. 871, 266 N.Y.S. 564.

An offer, as an element of a contract, is a proposal to make a contract. It must be made by the person who is to make the promise, and it must be made to the person to whom the promise is made. It may be made either by words or by signs, either orally or in writing, and either personally or by a messenger; but in whatever way it is made, it is not in law an offer until it comes to the knowledge of the person to whom it is made; Langd.Contr. 151; 6 H.L.Cas. 112. See Sunburst Oil & Gas Co, v. Neville, 79 Mont. 550, 257 P. 1016, 1019.

An "offer" must be so definite in its terms, or require such definite terms in acceptance, that the promises and performances to be rendered by each party are reasonably certain. Wadge v. Crestwood Acres, 128 N.J.L. 551, 27 A.2d 148, 150.

An "offer to sell" merely contemplates the proffer, proposal, presentation, or exhibition of something to another for acceptance or rejection. Frissell v. Nichols, 94 Fla. 403, 114 So. 431, 433.

OFFER OF COMPROMISE. An offer to settle a dispute or difference amicably for the purpose of avoiding a lawsuit and without admitting liability. Freeman v. Vandruff, 126 Okl. 238, 259 P. 257, 259.

OFFERINGS. In English ecclesiastical law. Personal tithes, payable by custom to the parson or vicar of a parish, either occasionally, as at sacraments, marriages, churching of women, burials, etc., or at constant times, as at Easter, Christmas, etc. See Obventio.

01+ ERTORIUM. In English ecclesiastical law. The offerings of the faithful, or the place where they are made or kept; the service at the time of the Communion.

OFFICE. Right to exercise public or private employment, and to take the fees and emoluments thereunto belonging, whether public, as those of magistrates, or private, as of bailiffs, receivers, or the like. 2 Bl.Comm. 36. Blair v. Marye, 80 Va. 495; Worthy v. Barrett, 63 N.C. 202; Shelf. Mortm. 797; Cruise, Dig. Index; Com. v. Sutherland, 3 S. & R., Pa., 149. A right, and correspondent duty, to exercise a public trust. Whitehead v. Clark, 146 Tenn. 660, 244 S.W. 479, 482. A public charge or employment; U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. 102, Fed. Cas. No. 15,747, per Marshall, C. J.; Lamar v. Splain, 42 App.D.C. 300, 305. An employment on behalf of the government in any station or public trust, not merely transient, occasional, or incidental. See Eason v. Majors, 111 Neb. 288, 196 N.W. 133, 134, 30 A.L.R. 1419.

An "assigned duty" or "function." Synonyms are "post", "appointment", "situation", "place", "position", and "office" commonly suggests a position of (especially public) trust or authority. Also right to exercise a public function or employment, and to take the fees and emoluments belonging to it. Frazier v. Elmore, 180 Tenn. 232, 173 S.W.2d 563, 565. A public charge or employment, and he who performs the duties of the office is an officer. Although an office is an employment, it does not follow that every employment is an office. A man may be employed under a contract, express or implied, to do an act, or to perform a service, without becoming an officer. But, if the duty be a continuing one, which is defined by rule prescribed by the government, which an individual is appointed by the government to perform, who enters upon the duties appertaining to his status, without any contract defining them, it seems very difficult to distinguish such a charge or employment from an office, or the person who performs the duty from an officer. Lacy v. State, 13 Ala. App. 212, 68 So. 706, 710. In the constitutional sense, the term implies an authority to exercise some portion of the sovereign power, either in making, executing, or administering the laws. State v. Christmas, 126 Miss. 358, 88 So. 881, 882.

The most frequent occasions to use the word arise with reference to a duty and power conferred on an individual by the government; and, when this is the connection, "public office" is a usual and more discriminating expression. But a power and duty may exist without immediate grant from government, and may be properly called an "office;" as the office of executor, the office of steward. Here the individual acts towards legatees or towards tenants in performance of a duty, and in exercise of a power not derived from their consent, but devolved on him by an authority which quoad hoc is superior. Abbott.

A place for the regular transaction of business. Bradley v. Certigue Mining & Dredging Co., 157 N.Y.S. 275, 276, 93 Misc. 519. For the word "office" as used of a place for transacting public business, see Corn. v. White, 6 Cush., Mass., 181.

"Office" is frequently used in the old books as an abbreviation for "inquest of office," (q. v.).

As to various particular offices, see Land Office, Petty Bag Office, Post Office, etc.

Civil office. Distinguished from military. Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569.

County office. As used in a primary election law, an office filled by the electorate of the entire county. Hamilton v. Monroe, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S. W. 304, 306, District office. As used in a primary election law, an office filled by the electorate of a district. Hamilton v. Monroe, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 304, 306.

Judicial office. See Judicial.

Lucrative office. See Lucrative.

Military office. Such as are held by soldiers and sailors for military purposes.

Ministerial office. One which gives the officer no discretion as to the matter to be done, and requires him to obey mandates of a superior. Vose v. Deane, 7 Mass. 280; Savacool v. Boughton, 5 Wend., N.Y., 170, 21 Am.Dec. 181; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569. It is a general rule that a judicial office cannot be exercised by deputy, while a ministerial office may.

Office book. Any book for the record of official or other transactions, kept under authority of the state, in public offices not connected with the courts.

Office copy. A copy or transcript of a deed or record or any filed document, made by the officer having it in custody or under his sanction, and by him sealed or certified.

A copy made by an officer of the court, bound by law to make it, is equivalent to an exemplification, though it is sometimes called an "office copy"; Steph.Dig.Ev. art. 77. Copies of public records„ whether judicial or otherwise, made by a public officer authorized by law, to make them, are often termed "office copies," e. g. copies of recorded deeds; Elwell v. Cunningham, 74 Me. 127. A copy made by an officer of the court, who is authorized to make it by a rule of court, but not required by law to make it, is equivalent to an exemplification in the same cause and court, but in other causes or courts is not admissible unless it can be proved as an examined copy; Steph.Dig.Ev. art. 78. These are called "office copies"; Kellogg v. Kellogg, 6 Barb. (N.Y.) 130.

Office found. In English law. Inquest of office found; the finding of certain facts by a jury on an inquest or inquisition of office. 3 Bl.Comm. 258, 259. This phrase has been adopted in American law. 2 Kent, Comm. 61. See Phillips v. Moore, 100 U.S. 212, 25 L.Ed. 603; Finch v. Goldstein, 245 N.Y. 300, 157 N.E. 146, 147.

Office grant. A designation of a conveyance made by some officer of the law to effect certain purposes, where the owner is either unwilling or unable to execute the requisite deeds to pass the title; such, for example, as a tax-deed. 3 Washb. Real Prop. *537.

Office hours. That portion of the day during which public offices are usually open for the transaction of business.

Officer of honor. See Honor.

Office of judge. A criminal suit in an ecclesiastical court, not being directed to the reparation of a private injury, is regarded as a proceeding emanating from the office of the judge, and may be instituted by the mere motion of the judge. But, in practice, these suits are instituted by private individuals, with the permission of the judge or his surrogate; and the private prosecutor in any such case is, accordingly, said to "promote the office of the judge." Mozley & Whiteley.

Political office. Civil offices are usually divided into three classes,-political, judicial, and ministerial. Political offices are such as are not immediately connected with the administration of justice, or with the execution of the mandates of a superior, such as the president or the head of a department. Fitzpatrick v. U. S., 7 Ct.C1. 293.

Principal office. The principal office of a corporation is its headquarters, or the place where the chief or principal affairs and business of the corporation are transacted. Usually it is the office where the company's books are kept, where its meetings of stockholders are held, and where the directors, trustees, or managers assemble to discuss and transact the important general business of the company; but no one of these circumstances is a controlling test. See Jossey v. Georgia & A. Ry., 102 Ga. 706, 28 S.E. 273; Middletown Ferry Co. v. Middletown, 40 Conn. 69; In re Lone Star Shipbuilding Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 6 F.2d 192, 196. Synonymous with "principal place of business," being the place where the principal affairs of a corporation are transacted. Foreman & Clark Mfg. Co. v. Bartle, 125 Misc.Rep. 759, 211 N.Y.S. 602, 604.

Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. Yaselli v. Goff, C.C.A., 12 F.2d 396, 403, 56 A.L.R. 1239; Lacey v. State, 13 Ala.App. 212, 68 So. 706, 710; Curtin v. State, 61 Cal.App. 377, 214 P. 1030, 1035; Shelmadine v. City of Elkhart, 75 Ind.App. 493, 129 N.E. 878. State ex rel. Colorado River Commission v. Frohmiller, 46 Ariz. 413, 52 P.2d 483, 486.

Where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as denotes duration and continuance, with independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio St. 33, 29 N.E. 593.

State office. This term as used in a primary election law, means offices to be filled by the electorate of the entire state. Hamilton v. Monroe, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 304, 306.

OFFICER. The incumbent of an office; one who is lawfully invested with an office. Evans v. Beattie, 137 S.C. 496, 135 S.E. 538, 554; State v. Bratton, 148 Tenn. 174, 253 S.W. 705, 706. One who is charged by a superior power (and particularly by government) with the power and duty of exercising certain functions.

One who is invested with some portion of the functions of the government to be exercised for the public benefit. Fox v. Lantrip, 162 Ky. 178, 172 S.W. 133, 136; In a popular sense, an officer is one holding a position of trust and authority in any kind of an organization-civil, military, political, ecclesiastical, or social. Illinois Commerce Commission v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 320 Ill. 214, 150 N.E. 678, 682. The word "officer," as used in state statutes or constitutions, is sometimes held to refer only to elective officers; Cunningham v. Rockwood, 222 Mass. 574, 111 N. E. 409, 411, Ann.Cas.1917C, 1100; and sometimes to both appointive and elective officers; State v. Campbell, 94 Ohio St. 403, 115 N.E. 29, 31.

An "officer" is distinguished from an "employee" in the greater importance, dignity, and independence of his position, in requirement of oath, bond, more enduring tenure, and fact of duties being prescribed by law. Bowden v. Cumberland County, 123 Me. 359, 123 A. 166, 169; McClendon v. Board of Health of City of Hot Springs, 141 Ark. 114, 216 S.W. 289, 290; Jefferson County v. Case, 244 Ala. 56, 12 So.2d 343, 346.

In determining whether one is an "officer" or "employee," important tests are the tenure by which a position is held, whether its duration is defined by the statute or ordinance creating it, or whether it is temporary or transient or for a time fixed only by agreement; whether it is created by an appointment or election, or merely by a contract of employment by which the rights of the parties are regulated; whether the compensation is by a salary or fees fixed by law, or by a sum agreed upon by the contract of hiring. Hyde v. Board of Com'rs of Wells County, 209 Ind. 245, 198 N.E. 333, 337.

For obstructing an officer, see that title.

For definitions of the various classes and kinds of officers, see the titles "Commissioned Officers," "Executive," "Fiscal," "Judicial," "Legislative," "Ministerial," "Municipal," "Naval," "Non-Commissioned," "Peace," "State," and "Subordinate".

Civil officer. The word "civil," as regards civil officers, is commonly used to distinguish those officers who are in public service but not of the military. U. S. v. American Brewing Co., D.C.Pa., 296 F. 772, 776; State v. Clarke, 21 Nev. 333, 31 P. 545, 18 L.R.A. 313, 37 Am.St.Rep. 517. Hence, any officer of the United States who holds his appointment under the national government, whether his duties are executive or judicial, in the highest or the lowest departments of the government, with the exception of officers of the army and navy, is a "civil officer." 1 Story, Const. § 792. See, also, Com'rs v. Goldsborough, 90 Md. 193, 44 A. 1055.

Military officer. Officer who has command in the army. Non-commissioned officer is not officer in the sense in which that word is generally used; Babbitt v. U. S., 16 Ct.C1. 214.

Officer de facto. As distinguished from an officer de jure; this is the designation of one who is in the actual possession and administration of the office, under some colorable or apparent authority, although his title to the same, whether by election or appointment, is in reality invalid or at least formally questioned. Norton v. Shelby County, 6 S.Ct. 1121, 118 U.S. 425, 30 L.Ed. 78; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449, 9 Am.Rep. 409. One who has the reputation of being the officer he assumes to be, and yet is not a good officer in point of law. 6 East 368; City of Terre Haute v. Burns, 69 Ind. App. 7, 116 N.E. 604, 608; Johnson v. State, 27 Ga. App. 679, 109 S.E. 526, 527, Official acts of officer de facto are binding on others. McNatt v. State, 130 Tex.Cr.R. 42, 91 S.W.2d 1068, 1069.

A de facto officer is also distinguished from a "usurper" who has neither lawful title nor color of right. Smith v. City of Jefferson, 75 Or. 179, 146 P. 809, 812.

To constitute an officer de facto it is not a necessary prerequisite that there shall have been an attempted exercise of competent prima facie power of appointment or election; a de facto officer being one whose title is not good in law, but who is in fact In the unobstructed possession of an office and is discharging its duties in full view of the public, in such manner and under such circumstances as not to present the appearance of being an intruder or usurper. U. S. v. Royer, 45 S.Ct. 519, 520, 268 U.S. 394, 69 L.Ed. 1011. A person is a "de facto officer" where the duties of the officer are exercised-First, without a known appointment or election, but under such circumstances of reputation or acquiescence as were calculated to induce people, without inquiry, to submit to or invoke his action, supposing him to be the officer he assumed to be. Second, under color of a known and valid appointment or election, but where the officer has failed to conform to some precedent requirement or condition, as to take an oath, give a bond, or the like. Third, under color of a known election or appointment, void because the officer was not eligible, or because there was a want of power in the electing or appointing body, or by reason of some defect or irregularity in its exercise, such ineligibility, want of power, or defect being unknown to the public. Fourth, under color of an election or appointment by or pursuant to a public unconstitutional law, before the same is adjudged to be such. Wendt v. Berry, 154 Ky. 586, 157 S.W. 1115, 1118, 45 L.R.A.,N.S., 1101, Ann.Cas.1915C, 493.

Officer de jure. One who is in all respects legally appointed and qualified to exercise the office. People v. Brautigan, 310 Ill. 472, 142 N.E. 208, 211.

Officer of justice. ON. Upon; as soon as; near to; along; along side of; adjacent to; contiguous to; at the time of; following upon; in; during; at or in contact with upper surface of a thing. Slaughter v. Robinson, 52 Utah, 273, 173 P. 456, 458; Hinton v. Vinson, 180 N.C. 393, 104 S.E. 897, 900; Stuckey v. Jones, Tex.Civ.App., 240 S.W. 565, 566.

ON ACCOUNT. In part payment; in partial satisfaction of an account. The phrase is usually contrasted with "in full."

See, also, On or About and On the Person.

ON ACCOUNT OF WHOM IT MAY CONCERN. When a policy of insurance expresses that the insurance is made "on account of whom it may concern," it will cover all persons having an insurable interest in the subject-matter at the date of the policy and who were then contemplated by the party procuring the insurance. 2 Pars.Mar.Law, 30.

ON ALL FOURS. A phrase used to express the idea that a case at bar is in all points similar to another. The one is said to be on all fours with the other when the facts are similar and the same questions of law are involved.

ON CALL. There is no legal difference between an obligation payable "when demanded" or "on demand" and one payable "on call" or "at any time called for." In each case the debt is payable immediately. Bowman v. McChesney, 22 Grat. (Va.) 609; Citizens' Bank of Waynesboro v. Mobley, 166 Ga. 543, 144 S.E. 119, 121, 58 A.L.R. 1383.

The term "on call," according to the evidence, is a term known to persons engaged in the cotton business, and means that cotton placed "on call" is sold, but the price remains unfixed, and that the owner has until a certain set date in the future to name the market price of the cotton on any day between the day the cotton is placed "on call" and the set day as the price at which the owner is entitled to a settlement for the cotton. Bennett v. Weil Bros., 28 Ga.App. 266, 110 S.E. 744.

ON DEFAULT. In case of default; upon failure of stipulated action or performance; upon the occurrence of a failure, omission, or neglect of duty.

ON DEMAND. A promissory note payable "on demand" is a present debt, and is payable without any demand. Dominion Trust Co. v. Hildner, 243 Pa. 253, 90 A. 69.

ON FILE. Filed; entered or placed upon the files; existing and remaining upon or among the proper files. Slosson v. Hall, 17 Minn. 95 (Gil. 71) ; Snider v. Methvin, 60 Tex. 487.

ON OR ABOUT. A phrase used in reciting the date of an occurrence or conveyance, or the location of it to escape the necessity of being bound by the statement of an exact date, or place; approximately; about; without substantial variance from; near. Parker v. State, 63 Ind.App. 671, 113 N.E. 763, 764; Render v. Commonwealth, 206 Ky. 1, 266 S.W. 914, 916; Thompson v. U. S., C.C.A.N.J., 283 F. 895, 897; Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. v. Erie R. Co., 216 N.Y.S. 486, 489, 127 Misc.Rep. 466; Petty v. Giles, 29 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 804, 125 F.2d 177, 181.

As used in statutes making it an offense to carry a weapon "on or about" the person, it is generally held that the word "on" means connected with or attached to, and that "about" is a comprehensive term having a broader meaning than "on," and conveying the idea of being near by, in close proximity, within immediate reach, or conveniently accessible. As applied to motor vehicles, therefore, it is commonly held that an occupant of the front seat of an automobile is carrying a weapon "about" his person where the weapon is on or under the seat, or between the cushion and the back of the seat, or on a shelf behind the seat, or in a pocket on the door or on the back of the seat, or in the glove compartment, or on the floor. There are, however, a few decisions to the contrary. The cases are collected and analyzed in Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed. § 5528.90.

ON OR BEFORE. These words, inserted in a stipulation to do an act or pay money, entitle the party stipulating to perform at any time before the day; and upon performance, or tender and refusal, he is immediately vested with all the rights which would have attached if performance were made on the day. Davis v. Burns, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W. 476, 480; McGrory Stores Corporation v. Goldberg, 95 N.J.Eq. 152, 122 A. 113.

ON STAND. A term used in the law of landlord and tenant. A tenant of a farm who cannot carry away manure but has the right to sell it to his successor, is said to have the right of on stand on the farm for it till he can sell it; he may maintain trespass for the taking of it by the incoming tenant before it is sold. 16 East 116.

ON THE PERSON. In common parlance, when it is said that someone has an article on his person, it means that it is either in contact with his person or is carried in his clothing. Corn. v. Lanzetti, 97 Pa.Super. 126.

Accordingly, where a statute punishes the carrying of a weapon "on the person," an occupant of an automobile does not violate the statute by carrying therein a weapon detached from his person, as, e. g., where the weapon is under the cushion of the seat. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 5528.88.

ONCE A FRAUD, ALWAYS A FRAUD. 13 Vin. Abr. 539.

ONCE A MORTGAGE, ALWAYS A MORTGAGE. This rule signifies that an instrument originally intended as a mortgage, and not a deed, cannot be converted into anything else than a mortgage by any subsequent clause or agreement.

ONCE A RECOMPENSE, ALWAYS A RECOMPENSE. 19 Vin.Abr. 277.

ONCE IN JEOPARDY. A phrase used to express the condition of a person charged with crime, who has once already, by legal proceedings, been put in danger of conviction and punishment for the same offense. Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 121 Pa. 109, 15 A. 466, 1 L.R.A. 451, 6 Am.St.Rep. 757.

ONCE QUIT AND CLEARED, EVER QUIT AND CLEARED. (Scotch, anis quit and clenged, ay quit and clenged.) Skene, de Verb. Sign. voc. "Iter.," ad fin.

ONCUNNE. L. Fr. Accused. Du Cange.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND POUNDS CLAUSE. A precautionary stipulation inserted in a deed making a good tenant to the prcecipe in a common recovery. 1 Prest.Conv. 110.

ONE PERSON, ONE VOTE. State legislative districting which gives equal legislative representation to all citizens of all places. The rule was established in Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 568, 84 S.Ct. 1362, 1385, which required that the seats in both houses of a bicameral state legislature be apportioned on a population basis.

ONE THIRD NEW FOR OLD. See New for Old.

ONE YEAR. A calendar year, regardless of whether it be a leap year or otherwise. Rev.St. 1925, art. 23. Douglas v. Acacia Mut. Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 118 S.W.2d 643.

ONERANDO PRO RATA PORTION'S. A writ that lay for a joint tenant or tenant in common who was distrained for more rent than his proportion of the land comes to. Reg.Orig. 182.

ONERARI NON. In pleading. The name of a plea, in an action of debt, by which the defendant says that he ought not to be charged.

ONERATIO. Lat. A lading; a cargo.

ONERATUR NISI. See O. Ni.

ONERIS FERENDI. Lat. In the civil law. The servitude of support; a servitude by which the wall of a house is required to sustain the wall or beams of the adjoining house.

ONEROUS. A contract, lease, share, or other right is said to be "onerous" when the obligations attaching to it counter-balance or exceed the advantage to be derived from it, either absolutely or with reference to the particular possessor. Sweet.

As used in the civil law and in the systems derived from it, (French, Scotch, Spanish, Mexican,) the term also means based upon, supported by, or relating to a good and valuable consideration, i. e., one which imposes a burden or charge in return for the benefit conferred.

ONEROUS CAUSE. In Scotch law. A good and legal consideration.

ONEROUS CONTRACT. See Contract.

ONEROUS DEED. In Scotch law. A deed given for a valuable consideration. Bell.

ONEROUS GIFT. A gift made subject to certain charges imposed by the donor on the donee.

ONEROUS TITLE. A title acquired by the giving of a valuable consideration, as the payment of money or rendition of services or the performance of conditions or assumption or discharge of liens or charges. Scott v. Ward, .13 Cal. 458; Kircher v. Murray, C.C.Tex., 54 F. 617; Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576; Civ.Code La. 1900, art. 3556.

ONLY. Solely; merely; for no other purpose; at no other time; in no otherwise; alone; of or by itself; without anything more; exclusive; nothing else or more.

ONOMASTIC. A term applied to the signature of an instrument, the body of which is in a different handwriting from that of the signature. Best, Ev. 315.

ONROERENDE AND VAST STAAT. Dutch. Immovable and fast estate, that is, land or real estate. The phrase is used in Dutch wills, deeds, and antenuptial contracts of the early colonial period in New York. Spraker v. Van Alstyne, 18 Wend., N.Y., 208.

ONUS. Lat. A burden or load; a weight. The lading, burden, or cargo of a vessel. A charge; an incumbrance. Cum onere, (q. v.,) with the incumbrance.

ONUS EPISCOPALE. Ancient customary payments from the clergy to their diocesan bishop, of synodals, pentecostals, etc.

ONUS IMPORTANDI. The charge of importing merchandise, mentioned in St. 12 Car. II. c. 28.

ONUS PROBANDI. Burden of proving; the burden of proof. The strict meaning of the term "onus probandi" is that, if no evidence is adduced by the party on whom the burden is cast, the issue must be found against him. Davis v. Rogers, 1 Houst. (Del.) 44.

OPE CONSILIO. Lat. By aid and counsel. A civil law term applied to accessaries, similar in import to the "aiding and abetting" of the common law. Often written "ope et consilio." Burrill.

OPEN, v. To render accessible, visible, or available; to submit or subject to examination, inquiry, or review, by the removal of restrictions or impediments.

Open a case. In practice. To open a case is to begin it; to make an initiatory explanation of its features to the court, jury, referee, etc., by outlining the nature of the transaction on which it is founded, the questions involved, and the character and general course of the evidence to be adduced.

Open a commission. To enter upon the duties under a commission, or commence to act under a commission, is so termed in English law. Thus, the judges of assize and nisi prius derive their authority to act under or by virtue of commissions directed to them for that purpose; and, when they commence acting under the powers so committed to them, they are said to open the commissions; and the day on which they so commence their proceedings is thence termed the "commission day of the assizes." Brown.

Open a court. To open a court is to make a formal announcement, usually by the crier or bailiff, that its session has now begun and that the business before the court will be proceeded with.

Open a credit. To accept or pay the draft of a correspondent who has not furnished funds. Pardessus, no. 296.

Open a deposition. To break the seals by which it was secured, and lay it open to view, or to bring it into court ready for use.

Open a judgment. To lift or relax the bar of finality and conclusiveness which it imposes so as to permit a re-examination of the merits of the action in which it was rendered. This is done at the instance of a party showing good cause why the execution of the judgment would be inequitable. It so far annuls the judgment as to prevent its enforcement until the final determination upon it, but does not in the meantime release its lien upon real estate. Insurance Co. v. Beale, 110 Pa. 321, 1 A. 926.

Open a rule. To restore or recall a rule which has been made absolute to its conditional state, as a rule nisi, so as to readmit of cause being shown against the rule. Thus, when a rule to show cause has been made absolute under a mistaken impression that no counsel had been instructed to show cause against it, it is usual for the party at whose instance the rule was obtained to consent to have the rule opened, by which all the proceedings subsequent to the day when cause ought to have been shown against it are in effect nullified, and the rule is then argued in the ordinary way. Brown.

Open a street or highway. To establish it by law and make it passable and available for public travel. Wilcoxon v. San Luis Obispo, 101 Cal. 508, 35 P. 988; Patterson v. City of Baltimore, 130 Md. 645, 101 A. 589, 591; Royal v. City of Des Moines, 195 Iowa, 23, 191 N.W. 377, 383.

Open bids. To open bids received on a foreclosure or other judicial sale is to reject or cancel them for fraud, mistake, or other cause, and order a resale of the property. Andrews v. Scotton, 2 Bland (Md.) 644.

Open the door. If one party to litigation puts in evidence part of document or correspondence or conversation which is detrimental to the opposing party, the latter may introduce balance of document, correspondence or conversation in order to explain or rebut adverse inferences which might arise from the fragmentary or incomplete character of evidence introduced by his adversary. U. S. v. Corrigan, C.C.A.N.Y., 168 F.2d 641, 645.

Open the pleadings. To state briefly at a trial before a jury the substance of the pleadings. This is done by the junior counsel for the plaintiff at the commencement of the trial.

OPEN, adj. Patent; visible; apparent; notorious; not clandestine; not closed, settled, fixed, or terminated. Pratt v. Boggs, 171 Ky. 106, 186 S. W. 901, 902; Dale v. Hart/on, D.C.Wash., 289 F. 493, 495.

As to open "Account," "Corporation," "Entry," "Insolvency," "Lewdness," "Policy," "Possession," and "Verdict," see those titles.

Open bulk. In the mass; exposed to view; not tied or sealed np. In re Sanders, C.C.N.C., 52 F. 802, 18 L.R.A. 549.

Open court. This term may mean either a court which has been formally convened and declared open for the transaction of its proper judicial business, or a court which is freely open to the approach of all decent and orderly persons in the character of spectators. Conover v. Bird, 56 N.J.Law, 228, 28 A. 428. Gomes v. Ulibarri, 23 N.M. 501, 169 P. 301, 302; U. S. v. Ginsberg, 243 U.S. 472, 37 S.Ct. 422, 425, 61 L.Ed. 853; Gillham v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas, Tex. Civ.App., 241 S.W. 512, 514.

Open doors. In Scotch law. "Letters of open doors" are process which empowers the messenger, or officer of the law, to break open doors of houses or rooms in which the debtor has placed his goods. Bell.

Open-end agreement. An agreement between employer and injured employee for compensation for indefinite period, approved by the labor commissioner, having effect of judgment so long as facts on which the award was predicated continue. Healey's Case, 124 Me. 54, 126 A. 21, 22.

Open fields, or meadows. In English law. Fields which are undivided, but belong to separate owners; the part of each owner is marked off by boundaries until the crop has been carried off, when the pasture is shared promiscuously by the joint herd of all the owners. Elton, Commons, 31; Sweet.

Open law. The making or waging of law. Magna Charta, c. 21.

Open - lot. One bounded upon all sides by streets. Illinois Surety Co. v. O'Brien, C.C.A.Ohio, 223 F. 933, 938.

Open mortgage clause. See Union Mortgage Clause.

Open sea. The expanse and mass of any great body of water, as distinguished from its margin or coast, its harbors, bays, creeks, inlets. The Cuzco, D.C.Wash., 225 F. 169, 176.

Open season. That portion of the year wherein the laws for the preservation of game and fish permit the killing of a particular species of game or the taking of a particular variety of fish.

Open shop. In trade union cant, one where nonunion men are employed. George J. Grant Const. Co. v. St. Paul Bldg. Trades Council, 136 Minn. 167, 161 N.W. 520, 521. A shop in which union and nonunion workmen are employed indiscriminately. Shine v. Fox Bros. Mfg. Co., 156 F. 357, 86 C.C.A. 311. The term is frequently used in a depreciatory seise, as implying that the operator of such a shop, by employing nonunion men, is in effect discriminating against trade unions, and hampering their advancement.

Open theft. In Saxon law. The same with the Latin "furtum manifestum," (q. v.).

OPENING. In American practice. The beginning; the commencement; the first address of the counsel.

OPENING STATEMENT OF COUNSEL. Outline of anticipated proof. Speer v. Shipley, 149 Kan. 15, 85 P.2d 999, 1001. Its purpose is to advise the jury of facts relied upon and of issues involved, and to give jury a general picture of the facts and the situations so that jury will be able to understand the evidence. State v. Erwin, 101 Utah 365, 120 P.2d 285, 313.

OPENTIDE. The time after corn is carried out of the fields.

OPERA. A composition of a dramatic kind, set to music and sung, accompanied with musical instruments, and enriched with appropriate costumes, scenery, etc. The house in which operas are represented is termed an "opera-house." Rowland v. Kleber, 1 Pittsb.R. (Pa.) 71.

OPERARII. Such tenants, under feudal tenures, as held some little portions of land by the duty of performing bodily labor and servile works for their lord.

OPERATE. This word, when used with relation to automobiles, signifies a personal act in working the mechanism of the automobile; that is, the driver operates the automobile for the owner, but the owner does not operate the automobile unless he drives it himself. Beard v. Clark, Tex.Civ. App., 83 S.W.2d 1023, 1025.

Similarly, as used in some statutes authorizing substituted service on the nonresident owner of an automobile, the word "operate" is limited to the personal act of the owner; but under other statutes, substituted service is authorized when the automobile was being operated by another with the owner's consent, whether express or implied. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm.Ed., § 5914. In the context of some automobile liability policies, the word "operate" may be construed as describing the personal act of the insured owner in working the mechanism of the automobile. Id., § 3941. As used in accident policies insuring against injuries while operating a motor vehicle "operate" does not contemplate a constant and unceasing motion but includes those stops which an automobile driver ordinarily makes, such as a stop to change or repair a tire. Id., § 4127.

OPERATIO. One day's work performed by a tenant for his lord.

OPERATION. Exertion of power; the process of operating or mode of action; an effect brought about in accordance with a definite plan; action; activity. Little Rock v. Parish, 36 Ark. 166; Fleming Oil Co. v. South Penn Oil Co., 37 W.Va. 653, 17 S.E. 203, National Exchange Bank and Trust Co. of Steubenville v. New York Life Ins. Co., D.C.Pa., 19 F.Supp. 790, 791. In surgical practice, the term is of indefinite import, but may be approximately defined as an act or succession of acts performed upon the body of a patient, for his relief or restoration to normal conditions, either by manipulation or the use of surgical instruments or both, as distinguished from therapeutic treatment by the administration of drugs or other remedial agencies. See Akridge v. Noble, 114 Ga. 949, 41 S.E. 78.

Criminal operation. In medical jurisprudence. An operation to procure an abortion. Miller v. Bayer, 94 Wis. 123, 68 N.W. 869.

Operation of law. This term expresses the manner in which rights, and sometimes liabilities, devolve upon a. person by the mere application to the particular transaction of the established rules of law, without the act or co-operation of the party himself.

OPERATIVE. A workman; a laboring man; an artisan; particularly one employed in factories. Cocking v. Ward, Tenn.Ch.App., 48 S.W. 287; In re City Trust Co., 121 F. 706, 58 C.C.A. 126.

OPERATIVE PART. That part of a conveyance, or of any instrument intended for the creation or transference of rights, by which the main object of the instrument is carried into effect. It is distinguished from introductory matter, recitals, formal conclusion, etc.

OPERATIVE WORDS, in a deed or lease, are the words which effect the transaction intended to be consummated by the instrument.

OPERIS NOVI NUNTIATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A protest or warning against [of] a new work. Dig. 39, 1.

OPETIDE. The ancient time of marriage, from Epiphany to Ash-Wednesday.

OPHTHALMOLOGIST. One who is skilled in, or practices, ophthalmology. Practice of "oculists" and "ophthalmologists" has relation to practice of medicine and surgery in treatment of diseases of eye, while practice of "optometry" relates to measurement of powers of vision and adaptation of lenses for aid thereof. New Jersey State Board of Optometrists v. S. S. Kresge Co., 113 N.J.L. 287, 174 A. 353, 357. See Oculist.

OPINIO EST DUPLEX, SCILICET, OPINIO VULGARIS, ORTA INTER GRAVES ET DISCRETOS, ET QUIE VULTUM VERITATIS HABET; ET OPINIO TANTUM ORTA INTER LEVES ET VULGARES HOMINES, ABSQUE SPECIE VERITATIS. 4 Coke, 107. Opinion is of two kinds, namely, common opinion, which springs up among grave and discreet men, and which has the appearance of truth, and opinion which springs up only among light and foolish men, without the semblance of truth.

OPINIO QUIE FAVET TESTAMENTO EST TENENDA. The opinion which favors a will is to be followed. 1 W.B1. 13, arg.

OPINION. A document prepared by an attorney for his client, embodying his understanding of the law as applicable to a state of facts submitted to him for that purpose.

The statement by a judge or court of the decision reached in regard to a cause tried or argued before them, expounding the law as applied to the case, and detailing the reasons upon which the judgment is based. Craig v. Bennett, 158 Ind. 9, 62 N.E. 273; Coffey v. Gamble, 117 Iowa, 545, 91 N.W. 813.

The words "decision" and "opinion" do not have same meaning, a "decision" of a court being its judgment, and its "opinion" being reasons given for judgment. Robertson v. Vandergrift, 119 W.Va. 219, 193 S.E. 62, 63; In re Brown's Guardianship, 6 Wash.2d 215, 107 P.2d 1104, 1106, 1107, 1108; Mosley v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., 45 N.M. 230, 114 P.2d 740, 747.

Concurring opinion. An opinion, separate from that which embodies the views and decision of the majority of the court, prepared and filed by a judge who agrees in the general result of the decision, and which either reinforces the majority opinion by the expression of the particular judge's own views or reasoning, or (more commonly) voices his disapproval of the grounds of the decision or the arguments on which it was based, though approving the final result.

Dissenting opinion. A separate opinion in which a particular judge announces his dissent from the conclusion held by a majority of the court, and expounds his own views.

Per curiam opinion. One concurred in by the entire court, but expressed as being "per curiam" or "by the court," without disclosing the name of any particular judge as being its author.

OPINION EVIDENCE. Evidence of what the witness thinks, believes, or infers in regard to facts in dispute, as distinguished from his personal knowledge of the facts themselves; not admissible exceft (under certain limitations) in the case of experts. Britt v. Carol[i]na Northern R. Co., 148 N.C. 37, 61 S.E. 601, 603. That which is given by a person of ordinary capacity who has by opportunity for practice acquired special knowledge outside limits of common observation, of value in illucidating a matter under consideration. Crosby v. Wells, 73 N.J.L. 790, 67 A. 295, 298.

In the law of evidence, opinion is an inference or conclusion drawn by a witness from facts some of which are known to him and others assumed, or drawn from facts which, though lending probability to the inference, do not evolve it by a process of absolutely necessary reasoning. Lipscomb v. State, 75 Miss. 559, 23 So. 210.

An inference necessarily involving- certain facts may be stated without the facts, the inference being an equivalent to a specification of the facts; but, when the facts are not necessarily involved in the inference (e. g., when the inference may be sustained upon either of several distinct phases of fact, neither of which it necessarily involves,) then the facts must be stated. Whart.Ev. § 510.

OPIUM. Drug consisting of inspissated juice of opium poppy. State v. Brennan, 89 Mont. 479, 300 P. 273, 275.

OPIUM JOINT. A "joint" is usually regarded as a place of meeting or resort for persons engaged in evil and secret practices of any kind, as a tramps' joint, such a place as is usually kept by Chinese for the accommodation of persons addicted to the habit of opium smoking, and where they are furnished with pipes, opium, etc., for that purpose, and called an "opium joint," or, generally speaking, a rendezvous for persons of evil habits and practices. State v. Shoaf, 179 N.C. 744, 102 S.E. 705, 706, 9 A.L.R. 426.

OPORTET QUOD CERTA RES DEDUCATUR IN DONATIONEM. It is necessary that a certain thing be brought into the gift, or made the subject of the conveyance. Bract. fol. 15b.

OPORTET QUOD CERTA RES DEDUCATUR IN JUDICIUM. Jenk.Cent. 84. A thing certain must be brought to judgment.

OPORTET QUOD CERTA SIT RES QUIE VENDITUR. It is necessary that there should be a certain thing which is sold. To make a valid sale, there must be certainty as to the thing which is sold. Bract. fol. 61b.

OPORTET QUOD CERTIE PERSONAE, TERRIE, ET CERTI STATUS COMPREHENDANTUR IN DECLARATIONE USUUM. 9 Coke, 9. It is necessary that given persons, lands, and estates should be comprehended in a declaration of uses.

OPPIGNERARE. Lat. In the civil law. To, pledge. Calvin.

OPPOSER. An officer formerly belonging to the green•wax in the exchequer.

OPPOSITE. An old word for "opponent."

OPPOSITE PARTY. Within statutes providing that opposite party shall be incompetent to testify as to matters equally within knowledge of deceased is one whose personal and financial interests, either immediate or remote, are antagonistic to like interests of protected party. Salsbury v. Sackrider, 284 Mich. 493, 280 N.W. 926.

OPPOSITION. Act of opposing or resisting; antagonism; state of being opposite or opposed; antithesis; also, a position confronting another or placing in contrast; that which is or furnishes an obstacle to some result; political party opposed to ministry or administration; or might be construed to include peaceful and orderly opposition to government. People v. Mintz, 106 Cal.App. 725, 290 P. 93, 97.

In Bankruptcy Practice. Opposition is the refusal of a creditor to assent to the debtor's discharge under the bankrupt law.

In French law. A motion to open a judgment by default and let the defendant in to a defense.

OPPRESSION. The misdemeanor committed by a public officer, who under color of his office, wrongfully inflicts upon any person any bodily harm, imprisonment, or other injury. 1 Russ. Crimes, 297; Steph.Dig.Crim.Law, 71. See U. S. v. Deaver, D.C.N.C., 14 F. 597. An act of cruelty, severity, unlawful exaction, or excessive use of authority. Ramsbacker v. Hohman, 80 Mont. 480, 261 P. 273, 276, an act of subjecting to cruel and unjust hardship; an act of domination. Baker v. Peck, 1 Cal.App.2d 231, 36 P.2d 404, 406.

OPPRESSOR. A public officer who unlawfully uses his authority by way of oppression, (q. v.).

OPPROBRIUM. In the civil law. Ignominy; infamy; shame.

OPTICIAN. Persons engaged in optometry, who confine themselves entirely to the work of making lenses in accordance with prescriptions given by physicians or oculists, are known as "opticians"; others, who manufacture the lenses, either according to their own judgment or the prescription of physicians, and also examine the eyes to ascertain whether there are any such defects visible as can be corrected by the application of lenses, are known as "optometrists." Martin v. Baldy, 249 Pa. 253, 94 A. 1091, 1092.

OPTIMA EST LEGIS INTERPRES CONSUETUDO. Custom is the best interpreter of the law. Dig. 1, 3, 37; Broom, Max. 931; Lofft, 237.

OPTIMA EST LEX QU1E MINIMUM RELINQUIT ARBITRIO JUDICIS; OPTIMUS JUDEX QUI MINIMUM SIBI. That law is the best which leaves least to the discretion of the judge; that judge is the best who leaves least to his own. Bac. Aphorisms, 46; 2 Dwar.St. 782. That system of law is best which confides as little as possible to the discretion of the judge; that judge the best who relies as little as possible on his own opinion. Broom, Max. 84; 1 Kent, Comm. 478.

OPTIMA STATUTI INTERPRETATRIX EST (OMNIBUS PARTICULIS EJUSDEM INSPECTIS) IPSUM STATUTUM. The best interpreter of a statute is (all its parts being considered) the statute itself. Wing.Max. p. 239, max. 68; 8 Coke, 117b.

OPTIMACY. Nobility; men of the highest rank.

OPTIMAM ESSE LEGEM, QUIE MINIMUM RELINQUIT ARBITRIO JUDICIS; ID QUOD CERTITUDO EJUS PR1ESTAT. That law is the best which leaves the least discretion to the judge; and this is an advantage which results from its certainty. Bac.Aphorisms, 8.

OPTIMUS INTERPRES RERUM USUS. Use or usage is the best interpreter of things. 2 Inst. 282; Broom, Max. 917, 930, 931.

OPTIMUS INTERPRETANDI MODUS EST SIC LEGES INTERPRETARI UT LEGES LEGIBUS CONCORDANT. 8 Coke, 169. The best mode of interpretation is so to interpret laws that they may accord with each other.

OPTIMUS JUDEX, QUI MINIMUM SIBI. He is the best judge who relies as little as possible on his own discretion. Bacon, Aph. 46; Broom, Max. 84.

OPTIMUS LEGUM INTERPRES CONSUETUDO. 4 Inst. 75. Custom is the best interpreter of the laws.

OPTION. In English ecclesiastical law. A customary prerogative of an archbishop, when a bishop is consecrated by him, to name a clerk or chaplain of his own to be provided for by such suffragan bishop; in lieu of which it is now usual for the bishop to make over by deed to the archbishop, his executors and assigns, the next presentation of such dignity or benefice in the bishop's disposal within that see, as the archbishop himself shall choose, which is therefore called his "option." 1 Bl.Comm. 381; 3 Steph.Comm. 63, 64; Cowell.

In contracts. A privilege existing in one person, for which he has paid money, which gives him the right to buy certain merchandise or certain specified securities from another person, if he chooses, at any time within an agreed period, at a fixed price, or to sell such property to such other person at an agreed price and time. U the option gives the choice of buying or not buying, it is denominated a "call." If it gives the choice of selling or not, it is called a "put." If it is a combination of both these, and gives the privilege of either buying or selling or not, it is called a "straddle" or a "spread eagle." These terms are used on the stock-exchange. Plank v. Jackson, 128 Ind. 424, 26 N.E. 568; Osgood v. Bauder, 75 Iowa, 550, 39 N.W. 887, 1 L.R.A. 655.

A continuing offer or contract by which owner stipulates with another that latter shall have right to buy property at fixed price within certain time, and an agreement is only an "option" when no obligation rests on party 'to make any payment except such as may be agreed on between parties as consideration to support option until he has made up his mind within time specified to complete purchase. Gibbs v. Piper, Del., 153 A. 674, 676.

It is but continuing offer, which is merged in contract resulting from acceptance thereof. Helvering v. Bartlett, C.C.A. 4, 71 F.2d 598, 599.

OPTIONAL WRIT. In old England practice. That species of original writ, otherwise called a "prcecipe," which was framed in the alternative, commanding the defendant to do the thing required, or show the reason wherefore he had not done it. 3 Bl.Comm. 274.

OPTOMETRIST. One who is skilled in, or practices, optometry. Webster, Diet. See Oculist.

OPTOMETRY. The employment of any means other than the use of drugs for the measurement of the powers of vision and the adaptation of lenses for the correction and aid thereof. Martin v. Baldy, 249 Pa. 253, 94 A. 1091, 1092; People v. Griffith, 280 Ill. 18, 117 N.E. 195, 196; New Jersey State Board of Optometrists v. S. S. Kresge Co., 113 N.J.Law, 287, 174 A. 353, 356.

OPUS. Lat. Work; labor; the product of work or labor.

OPUS LOCATUM. The product of work let for use to another; or the hiring out of work or labor to be done upon a thing.

OPUS MANIFICUM. In old English law. Labor done by the hands; manual labor; such as making a hedge, digging a ditch. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 48, § 3.

OPUS NOVUM. In the civil law. A new work. By this term was meant something newly built upon land, or taken from a work already erected. He was said opus novum facere (to make a new work) who, either by building or by taking anything away, changed the former appearance of a work. Dig. 39, 1, 1, 11.

OR, n. A term used in heraldry, and signifying gold; called "sol" by some heralds when it occurs in the arms of princes, and "topaz" or "carbuncle" when borne by peers. Engravers represent it by an indefinite number of small points. Wharton.

OR, conj. A disjunctive particle used to express an alternative or to give a choice of one among two or more things. It is also used to clarify what has already been said, and in such cases, means "in other words," "to-wit," or "that is to say." Peck v. Board of Directors of Public Schools for Parish of Catahoula, 137 La. 334, 68 So. 629, 630; Travelers' Protective Ass'n v. Jones, 75 Ind. App. 29, 127 N.E. 783, 785.

Or is frequently misused; and courts will construe it to mean "and" where it was so used. State v. Circuit Court of Dodge County, 176 Wis. 198, 186 N.W. 732, 734; Northern Commercial Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Alaska, 217 F. 33, 36; Spillman v. Succession of Spillman, 147 La. 47, 84 So. 489, 490; Smiley v. Lenane, 363 Ill. 66, 1 N.E.2d 213, 216. However, where the word "or" is preceded by the word "either," it is never given a conjunctive meaning. Smith v. Farley, 155 App.Div. 813, 140 N.Y.S. 990, 992.

ORA. A Saxon coin, valued at sixteen pence, and sometimes at twenty pence.

ORACULUM. In the civil law. The name of a kind of response or sentence given by the Roman emperors.

ORAL. Uttered by the mouth or in words; spoken, not written.

ORAL CONTRACT. One which is partly in writing and partly depends on spoken words, or none of which is in writing; one which, so far as it has been reduced to writing, is incomplete or expresses only a part of what is intended, but is completed by spoken words; or one which, originally written, has afterwards been changed orally. Railway Passenger, etc., Ass'n v. Loomis, 142 Ill. 560, 32 N.E. 424; Moore v. Ohl, 65 Ind.App. 691, 116 N.E. 9, 10.

ORAL EVIDENCE. Evidence given by word of mouth; the oral testimony of a witness. Bates' Ann.St.Ohio 1904, § 5262 (Gen.Code, § 11522) ; Rev.St.Wyo.1899, § 3704 (Rev.St.1931, § 89-1725). See, also, Parol Evidence.

ORAL PLEADING. Pleading by word of mouth, in the actual presence of the court. This was the ancient mode of pleading in England, and continued to the reign of Edward III. Steph.Pl. 23-26.

ORANDO PRO REGE ET REGNO. An ancient writ which issued, while there was no standing collect for a sitting parliament, to pray for the peace and good government of the realm.

ORANGEMEN. A party in Ireland who keep alive the views of William of Orange. Wharton.

ORATOR. The plaintiff in a cause or matter in chancery, when addressing or petitioning the court, used to style himself "orator," and, when a woman, "oratrix." But these terms have long gone into disuse, and the customary phrases now are "plaintiff" or "petitioner."

In Roman law, the term denoted an advocate.

ORATRIX. A female petitioner; a female plaintiff in a bill in chancery was formerly so called.

ORBATION. Deprivation of one's parents or children, or privation in general. Little used.

ORCINUS LIBERTUS. Lat. In Roman law. A freedman who obtained his liberty by the direct operation of the will or testament of his deceased master was so called, being the freedman of the deceased, (orcinus,) not of the hceres. Brown.

ORDAIN. To institute or establish; to make an ordinance; to enact a constitution or law. State v. Dallas City, 72 Or. 337, 143 P. 1127, 1131, Ann. Cas.1916B, 855. To confer on a person the holy orders of priest or deacon. Kibbe v. Antram, 4 Conn. 134.

ORDAINERS. An elected body of 21 members appointed by Parliament in 1310 to make ordinances for the good of the realm. The whole administration passed into their hands. Stubbs, Early Plantagenets.

ORDEAL. The most ancient species of trial, in Saxon and old English law, being peculiarly distinguished by the appellation of "judicium Dei," or "judgment of God," it being supposed that supernatural intervention would rescue an innocent person from the danger of physical harm to which he was exposed in this species of trial. The ordeal was of two sorts,—either fire ordeal or water ordeal; the former being confined to persons of higher rank, the latter to the common people. 4 Bl.Comm. 342.

Fire ordeal. The ordeal by fire or red-hot iron, which was performed either by taking up in the hand a piece of red-hot iron, of one, two, or three pounds weight, or by walking barefoot and blindfolded over nine red-hot plowshares, laid length. wise at unequal distances. 4 Bl.Comm. 343; Cowell..

Water Ordeal

In Saxon and old English law. The ordeal or trial by water. The hot-water ordeal was performed by plunging the bare arm up to the elbow in boiling water, and escaping unhurt thereby. The cold-water ordeal was performed by casting the person suspected into a river or pond of cold water, when, if he floated therein, without any action of swimming it was deemed an evidence of his guilt; but, if he sunk, he was acquitted. 4 Bl.Comm. 343.

ORDEFFE, or ORDELFE. A liberty whereby a man claims the ore found in his own land; also, the ore lying under land. Cowell.

ORDELS. In old English law. The right of administering oaths and adjudging trials by ordeal within a precinct or liberty. Cowell.

ORDENAMIENTO. In Spanish law. An order emanating from the sovereign, and differing from a cedula only in form and in the mode of its promulgation. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 93, note.

ORDENAMIENTO DE ALCALA. A collection of Spanish law promulgated by the Cortes in the year 1348. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 75.

ORDER. A mandate, precept; a command or direction authoritatively given; a rule or regulation. Brady v. Interstate Commerce Commission, D.C. W.Va., 43 F.2d 847, 850.

The distinction between "order" and "requisition" is that the first is a mandatory act, the latter a request. Mills v. Martin, 19 Johns. (N.Y.) 7.

An informal bill of exchange or letter of request whereby the party to whom it is addressed is directed to pay or deliver to a person therein named the whole or part of a fund or other property of the person making the order, and which is in the possession of the drawee. People v. Smith, 112 Mich. 192, 70 N.W. 466, 67 Am.St.Rep. 392; State v. Nevins, 23 Vt. 521. A designation of the person to whom a bill of exchange or negotiable promissory note is to be paid.

It is also used to designate a rank, class, or division of men; as the order of nobles, order of knights, order of priests, etc.

Orders are also issued by subordinate legislative authorities. Such are the English orders in council, or orders issued by the privy council in the name of the king, either in exercise of the royal prerogative or in pursuance of an act of parliament. The rules of court under the judicature act are grouped together in the form of orders, each order dealing with a particular subject-matter. Sweet.

In French law. The name order (ordre) is given to the operation which has for its object to fix the rank of the preferences claimed by the creditors in the distribution of the price [arising from the sale] of an immovable affected by their liens. Dalloz, mot "Ordre."

Practice

Every direction of a court or judge made or entered in writing, and not included in a judgment. An application for an order is a motion. Code Civ. Proc.Cal. § 1003; Code N.Y. § 400 (Civil Practice Act, § 113). Tyvand v. McDonne, 37 N.D. 251, 164 N.W. 1, 3; First Nat. Bank v. Poling, 42 Idaho 636, 248 P. 19, 20.

General

Agreed order. See Agreed.

Charging order. The name bestowed, in English practice, upon an order allowed by St. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, § 14, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, to be granted to a judgment creditor, that the property of a judgment debtor in government stock, or in the stock of any public company in England, corporate or otherwise, shall (whether standing in his own name or in the name of any person in trust for him) stand charged with the payment of the amount for which judgment shall have been recovered, with interest. 3 Steph.Comm. 587, 588.

Decretal order. In chancery practice. An order made by the court of chancery, in the nature of a decree, upon a motion or petition. Thompson v. McKim, 6 Har. & J. Md. 319; Bissell Carpet Sweeper Co. v. Goshen Sweeper Co., 19 C.C.A. 25, 72 F. 545. An order in a chancery suit made on motion or otherwise not at the regular hearing of a cause, and yet not of an interlocutory nature, but finally disposing of the cause, so far as a decree could then have disposed of it. Mozley & Whiteley.

Final order. One which either terminates the action itself, or decides some matter litigated by the parties, or operates to divest some right; or one which completely disposes of the subject-matter and the rights of the parties. Salem King's Products Co. v. La Follette, 100 Or. 11, 196 P. 416, 417; Stockham v. Knollenberg, 133 Md. 337, 105 A. 305, 307; Marchant & Taylor v. Mathews County, 139 Va. 723, 124 S.E. 420, 423.

General orders. Orders or rules of court, promulgated for the guidance of practitioners and the regulation of procedure in general, or in some general branch of its jurisdiction; as opposed to a rule or an order made in an individual case; the rules of court.

Interlocutory order. An order which decides not the cause, but only settles some intervening matter relating to it; as when an order is made, on a motion in chancery, for the plaintiff.to have an injunction to quiet his possession till the hearing of the cause. Termes de la Ley; Gas & Electric Securities Co. v. Manhattan & Queens Traction Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 266 F. 625, 632; Johnson v. Roberson, 171 N.C. 194, 88 S.E. 231; Theo. Hirsch Co. v. Scott, 87 Fla. 336, 100 So. 157, 158; Salmons v. Rugyeri, 103 N.J.Law, 596, 137 A. 568, 569; Simons v. Morris, 325 Ill. 199, 156 N.E. 280; Joyce v. Nona Mills Co., 142 La. 934, 77 So. 854.

Money order. See Money.

Restraining order. In equity practice. An order which may issue upon the filing of an application for an injunction forbidding the defendant to do. the threatened act until a hearing on the application can be had. Though the term is sometimes used as a synonym of "injunction," a restraining order is properly distinguishable from an injunction, in that the former is intended only as a restraint upon the defendant until the propriety of granting an injunction, temporary or perpetual, can be determined, and it does no more than restrain the proceedings until such determination. Wetzstein v. Boston, etc., Min. Co., 25 Mont. 135, 63 P. 1043. Mason v. Milligan, 185 Ind. 319, 114 N.E. 3; Labbitt v. Bunston, 80 Mont. 293, 260 P. 727, 730. In English law, the term is specially applied to an order restraining the Bank of England, or any public company, from allowing any dealing with some stock or shares specified in the order. It is granted on motion or petition. Hunt,. Eq. p. 216.

Speaking order. An order which contains matter which is explanatory or illustrative of the mere direction which is given by it is sometimes thus. called. Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1, 35 P. 437.

Stop order. The meaning of a stop order given to a broker is to wait until the market price of the particular security reaches a specified figure, and:

then to "stop" the transaction by either selling or buying, as the case may be, as well as possible. Porter v. Wormser, 94 N.Y. 431.

Order and disposition of goods and chattels. When goods are in the "order and disposition" of a bankrupt, they go to his trustee, and have gone so since the time of James L Wharton.

Order nisi. A provisional or conditional order, allowing a certain time within which to do some required act, on failure of which the order will be made absolute.

Order of discharge. In England. An order made under the bankruptcy act of 1869, by a court of bankruptcy, the effect of which is to discharge a bankrupt from all debts, claims, or demands provable under the bankruptcy.

Order of filiation. An order made by a court or judge having jurisdiction, fixing the paternity of a bastard child upon a given man, and requiring him to provide for its support.

Order of revivor. In English practice. An order as of course for the continuance of an abated suit. It superseded the bill of revivor.

ORDERLY. A hospital attendant who does general work. Phillips v. Buffalo General Hospital, 239 N.Y. 188, 146 N.E. 199, 200.

ORDERS. The directions as to the course and purpose of a voyage given by the owner of the vessel to the captain or master. For other meanings, see Order.

ORDERS OF THE DAY. Any member of the English house of commons who wishes to propose any question, or to "move the house," as it is termed, must, in order to give the house due notice of his intention, state the form or nature of his motion on a previous day, and have it entered in a book termed the "order-book;" and the motions so entered, the house arranges, shall be considered on particular days, and such motions or matters, when the day arrives for their being considered, are then termed the "orders of the day." Brown. A similar practice obtains in the legislative bodies of this country.

ORDINANCE. A rule established by authority; a permanent rule of action; a law or statute. In a more limited sense, the term is used to designate the enactments of the legislative body of a municipal corporation. State v. Swindell, 146 Ind. 527, 45 N.E. 700, 58 Am.St.Rep. 375; Bills v. Goshen, 117 Ind. 221, 20 N.E. 115, 3 L.R.A. 261.

The name has also been given to certain enactments, more general in their character than ordinary statutes, and serving as organic laws, yet not exactly to be called "constitutions." Such was the "Ordinance for the government of the North-West Territory," enacted by congress in 1787.

Strictly, a bill or law which might stand with the old law, and did not alter any statute in force at the time, anc' which became complete by the royal assent on the parlia. ment roll, without any entry on the statute roll. A bill or law which might at any time be amended by the parliament, without any statute. Hale, Com. Law. An ordinance was otherwise distinguished from a statute by the circumstance that the latter required the threefold assent of king, lords, and commons, while an ordinance might be ordained by one or two of these constituent bodies. See 4 Inst. 25.

ORDINANCE OF 1647. A law passed by the Colony of Massachusetts, still in force, in a modified form, whereby the state owns the great ponds within its confines, which are held in trust for public uses. Watuppa Reservoir Co. v. Fall River, 147 Mass. 548, 18 N.E. 465, 1 L.R.A. 466.

ORDINANCE OF 1648. A law of England relating to admiralty jurisdiction. See Bened. Adm. 99. It expired in 1660.

ORDINANCE OF 168L An ordinance of France relating to maritime affairs. See Bened. Adm. I 173.

ORDINANCE OF 1787. A statute for the government of the Northwest Territory. Religious and legal freedom, encouragement of education, just treatment of the Indians, the future division into States, and the exclusion of slavery were ordained. Webster, Dict.

ORDINANCE OF THE FOREST. In English law. A statute made touching matters and causes of the forest. 33 & 34 Edw. 1.

ORDINANCES OF EDWARD I. Two laws and ordinances published by Edward I. in the second year of his reign, at Hastings, relating to admiralty jurisdiction. These are said to have been the foundation of a consistent usage for a long time. See Bened. Adm. § 55.

ORDINANDI LEX. Lat. The law of procedure, as distinguished from the substantial part of the law.

ORDINARIUS ITA DICITUR QUTA HABET ORDINARIAM JURISDICTIONEM, IN JURE PROPRIO, ET NON PROPTER DEPUTATIONEM. Co.Litt. 96. The ordinary is so called because he has an ordinary jurisdiction in his own right, and not a deputed one.

ORDINARY, n. At common law. One who has exempt and immediate jurisdiction in causes ecclesiastical. Also a bishop; and an archbishop is the ordinary of the whole province, to visit and receive appeals from inferior jurisdictions. Also a commissary or official of a bishop or other ecclesiastical judge having judicial power; an archdeacon; officer of the royal household. Wharton.

In American law. A judicial officer, in several of the states, clothed by statute with powers in regard to wills, probate, administration, guardianship, etc. Darrow v. Darrow, 201 Ala. 477, 78 So. 383, 384. A public house where food and lodging are furnished to the traveler and his beast, at fixed rates, open to whoever may apply for accommodation, and where intoxicating liquor is sold at retail. Talbott v. Southern Seminary, 131 Va. 576, 109 S.E. 440, 441, 19 A.L.R. 534; City of Chicago v. R. & X. Restaurant, 369 Ill. 65, 15 N'.E.2d 725, 727, 117 A.L.R. 1313.

In Scotch law. A single judge of the court of session, who decides with or without a jury, as the case may be. Brande.

In the civil law. A judge who has authority to take cognizance of causes in his own right, and not by deputation. Murden v. Beath, 1 Mill. Const., S.C., 269.

Ordinary of assize and sessions. In old English law. A deputy of the bishop of the diocese, anciently appointed to give malefactors their• neckverses, and judge whether they read or not; also to perform divine services for them, and assist in preparing them for death. Wharton.

Ordinary of Newgate. The clergyman who is attendant upon condemned malefactors in that prison to prepare them for death; he records the behavior of such persons. Formerly it was the custom of the ordinary to publish a small pamphlet upon the execution of any remarkable criminal. Wharton.

ORDINARY, adj. Regular; usual; normal; common; often recurring; according to established order; settled; customary; reasonable; not characterized by peculiar or unusual circumstances; belonging to, exercised by, or characteristic of, the normal or average individual. Albrecht v. Schultz Belting Co., 299 Mo. 12; 252 S.W. 400, 402; State v. Coulter, Mo.Sup., 204 S.W. 5; Albrecht v. Schultz Belting Co., 299 Mo. 12, 252 S.W. 400, 402; Wiener v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, Mo. App., 170 S.W.2d 174, 178.

As to ordinary "Care," "Diligence," "Negligence," see those titles.

Ordinary calling. Those things which are repeated daily or weekly in the course of business. Ellis v. State, 5 Ga.App. 615, 63 S.E. 588.

Ordinary conveyances. Those deeds of transfer which are entered into between two or more persons, without an assurance in a superior court of justice. Wharton.

Ordinary course of business. The transaction of business according to the usages and customs of the commercial world generally or of the particular community or (in some cases) of the particular individual whose acts are under consideration. Rison v. Knapp, 20 Fed.Cas. 835; Christianson v. Farmers' Warehouse Ass'n, 5 N.D. 438, 67 N.W. 300, 32 L.R.A. 730.

Ordinary dangers incident to employment. Those commonly and usually pertaining to and incident to it, which a reasonably prudent person might anticipate, and do not include danger by acts of negligence, unless habitual and known to the servant. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Smith, Tex. Civ.App., 197 S.W. 614, 618.

Ordinary expense. An expense is "ordinary" if it is in an ordinary class, if in the ordinary course of the transaction of municipal business or the maintenance of municipal property it may and is likely to become necessary; and it will be assumed that if by law a specific duty is imposed, and the mode of performance is prescribed, so that no discretion is left with the officer, the expense necessarily incurred in discharging the duty is a "necessary expense." Dexter Horton Trust & Savings Bank v. Clearwater County, D.C.Idaho, 235 F. 743, 750; Arthur v. Horwege, 28 Cal.App. 738, 153 P. 980, 981; State v. Carter, 31 Wyo. 401, 226 P. 690, 693.

Ordinary handling. As in a railroad's baggage tariff, providing that cases marked "Fragile" and likely to be damaged by ordinary handling will not be accepted, except at owner's risk, means merely ordinary wear and tear necessarily incidental to transportation of such articles, where reasonable care is used. Perkins v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 232 Mass. 336, 122 N.E. 306, 307.

Ordinary hazards of occupation. Those arising without negligence on part of master. Chesapeake & 0. Ry. Co. v. Coleman, 220 Ky. 64, 294 S.W. 809, 810.

Ordinary inspection. As applied to railroad equipment. That degree of care and of inspection which ordinarily prudent railroad companies, their officers and employees, commonly use under similar circumstances. Canadian Northern Ry. Co. v. Senske, C.C.A.Minn., 201 F. 637, 642.

Ordinary kerosene. The kerosene sold in the open market, kerosene of a lawful grade and quality ordinarily sold for the general use of the public for illuminating purposes. Standard Oil Co. v. Reagan, 15 Ga.App. 571, 84 S,E. 69, 76.

Ordinary persons. Men of ordinary care and diligence in relation to any particular thing. Ford v. Engleman, 118 Va. 89, 86 S.E. 852, 855.

Ordinary proceeding. Such a proceeding as was known to the common law and was formerly conducted in accordance with the proceedings of the common-law courts, and as is generally known under the modern Codes to be such a proceeding as is started by the issuance of a summons, and results in a judgment enforceable by execution. Dow v. Lillie, 26 N.D. 512, 144 N.W. 1082, 1084, L.R.A.1915D, 754.

Ordinary repairs. Such as are necessary to make good the usual wear and tear or natural and unavoidable decay and keep the property in good condition. Abell v. Brady, 79 Md. 94, 28 A. 817; Clark Civil Tp. v. Brookshire, 114 Ind. 437, 16 N.E. 132; Syracuse Malleable Iron Works v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 94 Misc. 411, 157 N.Y.S. 572, 574; Farmers' Handy Wagon Co. v. Casualty Co. of America, 184 Iowa, 773, 169 N.W. 178; Springfield Light, Heat & Power Co. v. Philadelphia Casualty Co., 184 Ill.App. 175, 178.

Ordinary risks. Those incident to the business, and do not imply the result of the master's negligence. The expression "extraordinary risks" is generally used to describe risks arising from the negligence of the master, and they are generally held not to be assumed unless known or obvious. Emanuel v. Georgia & F. Ry. Co., 142 Ga. 543, 83 S.E. 230, 231; Arundell v. American Oilfields Co.,

31 Cal.App. 218, 160 P. 159, 165; Emerick v. Slavonian Roman Greek Catholic Union, 93 N.J.Law, 282, 108 A. 223; Neary v. Georgia Public Service Co., 27 Ga.App. 238, 107 S.E. 893, 896.

Ordinary seaman. A sailor who is capable of performing the ordinary or routine duties of a seaman, but who is not yet so proficient in the knowledge and practice of all the various duties of a sailor at sea as to be rated as an "able" seaman.

Ordinary services of administrators include all the services incident to the closing and distribution of an estate, and not merely the receiving and disbursing of the funds and to justify an allowance of further compensation the administrator must have rendered services of an extraordinary character necessary to the protection of the estate, and, if he employs another to perform services which he is required to perform under the law, he cannot charge such services as an expense of administration. In re Carmody's Estate, 163 Iowa, 463, 145 N.W. 16, 17.

Ordinary skill in an art. That degree of skill which men engaged in that particular art usually employ; not that which belongs to a few men only, of extraordinary endowments and capacities. Baltimore Baseball Club Co. v. Pickett, 78 Md. 375, 28 A. 279, 22 L.R.A. 690, 44 Am.St.Rep. 304. Burrichter v. Bell, 196 Iowa 529, 194 N.W. 947, 948.

Ordinary travel. Moving a house along a village street is not using the street for the purpose of ordinary travel; and the statutory requirement that a telephone company shall locate its lines so as not to interfere with the safety and convenience of "ordinary travel" does not make it the duty of the company to remove its wires from the street to permit the passage of a house along the same. Collar v. Bingham Lake Rural Telephone Co., 132 Minn. 110, 155 N.W. 1075, 1076, L.R.A.1916C, 1249.

Ordinary written law. Law made, within constitutional restrictions, by the Legislature. State v. Marcus, 160 Wis. 354, 152 N.W. 419, 422.

ORDINATION. Ceremony by which a bishop confers on a person the privileges and powers necessary for the execution of sacerdotal functions in the church. Phillim.Ecc.Law, 110.

A statute by which a municipal corporation is organized and created is its "organic act" and the limit of its power, so that all acts beyond the scope of the powers there granted are void. Tharp v. Blake, Tex.Civ.App., 171 S.W. 549, 550.

ORGANIC LAW. The fundamental law, or constitution, of a state or nation, written or unwritten; that law or system of laws or principles which defines and establishes the organization of its government. St. Louis v. Dorr, 145 Mo. 466, 46 S.W. 976, 42 L.R.A. 686, 68 Am.St.Rep. 575.

ORGANIZE. To establish or furnish with organs; to systematize; to put into working order; to arrange in order for the normal exercise of its appropriate functions. City of Beaumont v. City of Beaumont Independent School Dist., Tex.Civ. App., 164 S.W.2d 753, 756.

The word "organize," as used in railroad and other charters, ordinarily signifies the choice and qualification of all necessary officers for the transaction of the business of the corporation. This is usually done after all the capital stock has been subscribed for. New Haven & D. R. Co. v. Chapman, 38 Conn. 66.

ORGANIZED COUNTY. A county which has its lawful officers, legal machinery, and means for carrying out the powers and performing the duties pertaining to it as a quasi municipal corporation. In re Section No. 6, 66 Minn. 32, 68 N.W. 323; City of Beaumont v. City of Beaumont Independent School Dist., Tex.Civ.App., 164 S.W.2d 753, 757.

ORGILD. In Saxon law. Without recompense; as where no satisfaction was to be made for the death of a man killed, so that he was judged lawfully slain. Spelman.

ORIGINAL. Primitive; first in order; bearing its own authority, and not deriving authority from an outside source; as original jurisdiction, original writ, etc. As applied to documents, the original is the first copy or archetype; that from which another instrument is transcribed, copied, or imitated. Arenson v. Jackson, 97 Misc.Rep. 606, 162 N.Y.S. 142, 143; State v. Lee, 173 La. 770, 138 So. 662.

A carbon impression of a letter written on a typewriter, made by the same stroke of the keys as the companion impression, is an "original." Either impression is primary evidence of the contents of the letter, and notice to produce the original mailed letter in order to introduce one of the retained copies in evidence is not necessary. U. S. Fire Ins. Co. of City of New York v. L. C. Adam Mercantile Co., 117 Old. 73, 245 P. 885, 887.

Original appointment. Within statute providing for suspension of civil servants in inverse order of original appointment, means appoint. ment for probationary term ripening into permanent appointment, and not mere provisional or temporary appointment. Civil Service Law, § 31; Const. art. 5, § 6, amended in 1929. Koso v. Greene, 260 N.Y. 491, 184 N.E. 65, 66.

employed in the same way. State v. City of Victoria, 97 Kan. 638, 156 P. 705, 708.

Original promise. An original promise, without the statute of frauds, is one in which the direct and leading object of the promisor is to further or promote some purpose or interest of his own, although the incidental effect may be the payment of the debt of another. Umpqua Valley Bank of Roseburg v. Wilson, 120 Or. 396, 252 P. 563, 565; Olson v. McQueen, 24 N.D. 212, 139 N.W. 522, 524.

Original process. See Process.

Original vein. Is used to describe the different veins found within the same surface boundaries and may refer to the relative importance or value of the different veins, or the relations to each other, or to the time of discovery, but most frequently is used to distinguish between the discovery vein and other veins within the same surface boundaries. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co., D.C. Wash., 271 F. 105, 111.

Original Writ. See Writ.

Single original. An original instrument which is executed singly, and not in duplicate.

ORIGINALIA. In English law. Transcripts sent to the remembrancer's office in the exchequer out of the chancery, distinguished from recorda, which contain the judgments and pleadings in actions tried before the barons. The treasurer-remembrancer's office was abolished in 1833.

ORIGINE PROPRIA NEMINEM POSSE VOLUNTATE SUA EXIMI MANIFESTUM EST. It is evident that no one is able of his own pleasure, to do away with his proper origin. Code 10, 38, 4; Broom, Max. 77.

ORIGO REI INSPICI DEBET. The origin of a thing ought to be regarded. Co.Litt. 248b.

ORNEST. In old English law. The trial by battle, which does not seem to have been usual in England before the time of the Conqueror, though originating in the kingdoms of the north, where it was practiced under the name of "holmgang," from the custom of fighting duels on a small island or holm. Wharton.

ORPHAN. Any person (but particularly a minor or infant) who has lost both (or one) of his or her parents. More particularly, a fatherless child. Chicago Guaranty Fund Life Soc. v. Wheeler, 79 Ill.App. 241; Stewart v. Morrison, 38 Miss. 419; Downing v. Shoenberger, 9 Watts, Pa., 299.

ORPHANAGE PART. That portion of an intestate's effects which his children were entitled to by the custom of London. This custom appears to have been a remnant of what was once a general law all over England, namely, that a father should not by his will bequeath the entirety of his personal estate away from his family, but should leave them a third part at least, called the "children's part," corresponding to the "bairns' part" or legitim of Scotch law, and also (although not in amount) to the legitima quarta of Roman law. (Inst. 2, 18.) This custom of London was abolished by St. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 94. Brown.

ORPHANOTROPlit In the civil law. Managers of houses for orphans.

ORPHANS' COURT. In American law. Courts of probate jurisdiction, in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

ORTOLAGIUM. A garden plot or hortilage.

ORWIGE, SINE WITA. In old English law. Without war or feud, such security being provided by the laws, for homicides under certain circumstances, against the foehth, or deadly feud, on the part of the family of the slain. Anc.Inst.Eng.

OSCULI, JUS. The right to kiss. According to the old phraseology there could be no marriage within the circle of the jus osculi—the seventh degree. Second cousins (sixth degree) could not marry. Muirhead, Rom.L. 26.

OSTENDIT VOBIS. Lat. In old pleading. Shows to you. Formal words with which a demandant began his count. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 38, § 2.

OSTENSIBLE AGENCY. An implied or presumptive agency, which exists where one, either intentionally or from want of ordinary care, induces another to believe that a third person is his agent, though he never in fact employed him. First Nat. Bank v. Elevator Co., 11 N.D. 280, 91 N.W. 437. It is, strictly speaking, no agency at all, but is in reality based entirely upon estoppel. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. v. Bear Butte Valley Bank, 63 S.D. 262, 257 N.W. 642.

OSTENSIBLE AUTHORITY. Such authority as a principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care, causes or allows a third person to believe that the agent possesses. National Cash Register Co. v. Wichita Frozen Food Lockers, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W.2d 781, 787.

OSTENSIBLE PARTNER. One whose name appears to the world as such, though he have no interest in the firm. Civ.Code 1910, § 3157. Roberts v. Curry Grocery Co., 18 Ga.App. 53, 88 S.E. 796.

OSTENSIO. A tax anciently paid by merchants, etc., for leave to show or expose their goods for sale in markets. Du Cange.

OSTENTUM. Lat. In the civil law. A monstrous or prodigious birth. Dig. 50, 16, 38.

OSTEOPATH. One who practices osteopathy. State v. Chase, 76 N.H. 553, 86 A. 144.

OSTEOPATHY. A method or system of treating various diseases of the human body without the use of drugs, by manipulation applied to various nerve centers, rubbing, pulling, and kneading parts of the body, flexing and manipulating the limbs, and the mechanical readjustment of any bones, muscles, or ligaments not in the normal position, with a view to removing the cause of the disorder and aiding the restorative force of nature in cases where the trouble originated in misplacement of parts, irregular nerve action, or defective circulation. State v. Liffring, 61 Ohio St. 39, 55 N.E. 168, 76 Am.St.Rep. 358; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 64 N.E. 862, 59 L.R.A. 190.

A system of treatment based on the theory that diseases are chiefly due to deranged mechanism of the bones, nerves, blood vessels, and other tissues, and can be remedied by manipulations of these parts. Special attention is given to the readjustment of any bones, muscles, or ligaments not in the normal position. Waldo v. Poe, D.C. Wash., 14 F.2d 749, 751; Arnold v. Schmidt, 155 Wis. 55, 143 N.W. 1055, 1058; State ex rel. Wheat v. Moore, 154 Kan. 193, 117 P.2d 598, 602. The term does not include the practice of optometry. Ex parte Rust, 181 Cal. 73, 183 P. 548, 550, nor, at least under some statutes, the practice of medicine or surgery. State v. Sawyer, 36 Idaho, 814, 214 P. 222.

OSTIA REGNI. Lat. Gates of the kingdom. The ports of the kingdom of England are so called by Sir Matthew Hale. De Jure Mar. pt. 2, c. 3.

OSTIUM ECCLESIÆ. Lat. In old English law. The door or porch of the church, where dower was anciently conferred.

OSWALD'S LAW. The law by which was effected the ejection of married priests, and the introduction of monks into churches, by Oswald, bishop of Worcester, about A.D. 964. Wharton.

OSWALD'S LAW HUNDRED. An ancient hundred in Worcestershire, so called from Bishop Oswald, who obtained it from King Edgar, to be given to St. Mary's Church in Worcester. It was exempt from the sheriff's jurisdiction, and comprehends 300 hides of land. Camd. Brit.

OTER LA TOUAILLE. In the laws of Oleron. To deny a seaman his mess. Literally, to deny the table-cloth or victuals for three meals.

OTHER. Different or distinct from that already mentioned; additional, or further. City of Ft. Smith v. Gunter, 106 Ark. 371, 154 S.W. 181, 183; State v. Blumenthal, 136 Ark. 532, 203 S.W. 36, 37, L.R.A.1918E, 482.

Following an enumeration of particular classes "other" must be read as "other such like," and includes only others of like kind and character. Van Pelt v. Hilliard, 75 Fla. 792, 78 So. 693, 697, L.R.A.1918E, 639; Baker v. Baker, 82 N.J.Eq. 150, 91 A. 729, 730; George H. Dingledy Lumber Co. v. Erie R. Co., 102 Ohio St. 236, 131 N.E. 723, 726.

OTHERWISE. In a different manner; in another way, or in other ways. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. New York Life Ins. Co., D.C. Md., 14 F.Supp. 721, 726.

OTHESWORTHE. In Saxon law. Oathsworth; oathworthy; worthy or entitled to make oath. Bract. fols. 185, 292b.

OUGHT. This word, though generally directory only, will be taken as mandatory if the context requires it. Pract. fol. 185, 292b; Life Ass'n v. St. Louis County Assessors, 49 Mo. 518.

OUNCE. The twelfth part; the twelfth part of a pound troy or the sixteenth part of a pound avoirdupois.

OUNCE LANDS. Certain districts or tracts of lands in the Orkney Islands were formerly so called, because each paid an annual tax of one ounce of silver.

OURLOP. The lierwite or fine paid to the lord by the inferior tenant when his daughter was debauched. Cowell.

OUST. To put out; to eject; to remove or deprive; to deprive of the possession or enjoyment of an estate or franchise.

OUSTER. In practice. A putting out; dispossession; amotion of possession. A species of injuries to things real, by which the wrong-doer gains actual occupation of the land, and compels the rightful owner to seek his legal remedy in order to gain possession. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 1063, § 2454a; Pursel v. Reading Iron Co., C.C.A. Pa., 232 F. 801, 807; Lucas v. Ferris, 95 Conn. 619, 112 A. 165, 167; Hardman v. Brown, 77 W. Va. 478, 88 S.E. 1016, 1019.

Actual Ouster. Does not mean a physical eviction, but a possession attended with such circumstances as to evince a claim of exclusive right and title, and a denial of the right of the other tenants to participate in the profits. Burns v. Byrne, 45 Iowa 287; Miller v. State, 121 Conn. 43, 183 A. 17, 20.

OUSTER LE MAIN. L. Fr. Literally, out of the hand.

1. A delivery of lands out of the king's hands by judgment given in favor of the petitioner in a monstrans de droit.

2. A delivery of the ward's lands out of the hands of the guardian, on the former arriving at the proper age, which was twenty-one in males, and sixteen in females. Abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24. Mozley & Whiteley.

OUSTER LE MER. L. Fr. Beyond the sea; a cause of excuse if a person, being summoned, did not appear in court. Cowell.

OUT-BOUNDARIES. A term used in early Mexican land laws to designate certain boundaries within which grants of a smaller tract, which designated such out-boundaries, might be located by the grantee. U. S. v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 7 S.Ct. 1015, 121 U.S. 325, 30 L.Ed. 949.

OUT OF BENEFIT. A term descriptive of insurance policy holders who have been suspended for nonpayment of premiums. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Otis, 122 Ark. 219, 183 S.W. 183, 184, L.R.A. 1916E, 875.

OUT OF COURT. He who has no legal status in court is said to be "out of court," i. e., he is not before the court. Thus, when the plaintiff in an action, by some act of omission or commission, shows that he is unable to maintain his action, he is frequently said to put himself "out of court." Brown. The expression is colloquially applied to a litigant party when his case breaks down, equivalent to saying, "he has not a leg to stand on;" Moz. & W.

The phrase is also used with reference to agreements and transactions in regard to a pending suit which are arranged or take place between the parties or their counsel privately and without being referred to the judge or court for authorization or approval. Thus, a case which is cornpromised, settled, and withdrawn by private agreement of the parties, after its institution, is said to be settled "out of court." So attorneys may make agreements with reference to the conduct of a suit or the course of proceedings therein; but if these are made "out of court," that is, not made in open court or with the approval of the judge, it is a general rule that they will not be noticed by the court unless reduced to writing. Welsh v. Blackwell, 14 N. J. Law, 345.

OUT OF POCKET RULE. Determination for damages for fraudulent misrepresentations which permits recovery of difference between price paid and actual value of property acquired. Zeliff v. Sabatino, 104 A.2d 54, 55, 15 N.J. 70; Zeliff v. Sabatino, 98 A.2d 679, 681, 27 N.J.Super. 13; Jacobs v. Levin, 137 P.2d 500, 501, 58 Cal.App.2d Supp. 913.

Also called out-of-pocket loss rule.

OUT OF REPAIR. In a West Virginia statute relating to streets, sidewalks, and the like, this term means unsafe for reasonable use in the ordinary modes of travel by day or night, whether the danger exists overhead or on the surface.

OUT OF TERM. At a time when no term of the court is being held; in the vacation or interval which elapses between terms of the court. See McNeill v. Hodges, 99 N.C. 248, 6 S.E. 127.

OUT OF THE STATE. In reference to rights, liabilities, or jurisdictions arising out of the common law, this phrase is equivalent to "beyond sea," which see.

In other connections, it means physically beyond the territorial limits of the particular state in question, or constructively so, as in the case of a foreign corporation. Foster v. Givens, 67 F. 684, 14 C.C.A. 625; Larson v. Aultman & Taylor Co., 80 Wis. 281, 56 N.W. 915, 39 Am.St.Rep. 893. But a foreign corporation maintaining an agent within the state is not deemed to be "out of the state," within various statutes. Hamilton v. North. Pac. S. S. Co., 84 Or. 71, 164 P. 579, 581; American Surety Co. of New York v. Blake, 45 Idaho 159, 261 P. 239, 240.

OUT OF TIME. A mercantile phrase applied to a ship or vessel that has been so long at sea as to justify the belief of her total loss. In another sense, a vessel is said to be out of time when, computed from her known day of sailing, the time that has elapsed exceeds the average duration of similar voyages at the same season of the year. The phrase is identical with "missing ship." 2 Duer, Ins. 469.

OUTAGE. A tax or charge formerly imposed by the state of Maryland for the inspection and marking of hogsheads of tobacco intended for export. Turner v. Maryland, 2 S.Ct. 44, 107 U.S. 38, 27 L. Ed. 370.

OUTBUILDING. Something used in connection with a main building. Com. v. Intoxicating Liquors, 140 Mass. 287, 3 N.E. 4. A small building appurtenant to a main building, and generally separated from it; an outhouse. Bruce v. McClees, 110 N.J.Eq. 92, 158 A. 849, 850.

OUTCAST. This term, applied to a person, has been held to be libelous per se, because it represents him as being a degraded and disgraced character. Herald Pub. Co. v. Feltner, 158 Ky. 35, 164 S.W. 370, 372.

OUTCROP. In mining law. The edge of a stratum which appears at the surface of the ground; that portion of a vein or lode which appears at the surface or immediately under the soil and surface debris. Duggan v. Davey, 4 Dak. 110, 26 N.W. 887; Stevens v. Williams, 23 Fed.Cas. 40. The term is not, in itself, definitive of quantity or area in respect of the mineral involved. Sloss-Sheffield Iron & Steel Co. v. Payne, 186 Ala. 341, 64 So. 617, 618.

OUTER BAR. In the English courts, barristers at law have been divided into two classes, viz., king's counsel, who are admitted within the bar of the courts, in seats specially reserved for themselves, and junior counsel, who sit without the bar; and the latter are thence frequently termed barristers of the "outer bar," or "utter bar," in contradistinction to the former class. Brown.

OUTER DOOR. In connection with the rule, statutory or otherwise, forbidding an officer to break open the outer door to serve civil process, this term designates the door of each separate apartment, where there are different apartments having a common outer door. Fourette v. Griffin, 92 Conn. 388, 103 A. 123, 124, L.R.A.1918D, 876; Schork v. Calloway, 205 Ky. 346, 265 S.W. 807, 808.

OUTER HOUSE. The name given to the great hall of the parliament house in Edinburgh, in which the lords ordinary of the court of session sit as single judges to hear causes. The term is used colloquially as expressive of the business done there in contradistinction to the "Inner House," the name given to the chambers in which the first and second divisions of the court of session hold their sittings. Bell.

OUTFANGTHEF. A liberty or privilege in the ancient common law, whereby a lord was enabled to call any man dwelling in his manor, and taken for felony in another place out of his fee, to judgment in his own court. Du Cange. See Infangenthef.

OUTFIT. Originally, as applying to ships, those objects connected with a ship which were necessary for the sailing of her, and without which she would not in fact be navigable. But in ships engaged in whaling voyages the word has acquired a much more extended signification. Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Metc. (Mass.) 364.

An allowance made by the 'United States government to one of its diplomatic representatives, as an ambassador, a minister plenipotentiary, or charge d'affaires, but not a consul, for the expense of his equipment on going from the United States to any foreign country.

Equipment. U. S. v. Richard & Co., 8 Ct.Cust. App. 231, 233.

OUTGO. In taxation, a flow of disservice (negative service) or negative income ;—distinguished from "income," or the flow of capital service. U. S. v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., D.C.N.Y., 238 F. 231, 234.

OUTHEST, or OUTHOM. A calling men out to the army by sound of horn. Jacob.

OUTHOUSE. Any house necessary for the purposes of life, in which the owner does not make his constant or principal residence. State v. O'Brien, 2 Root (Conn.) 516. A building subservient to, yet distinct from, the principal mansion-house, located either within or without the curtilage. State v. Brooks, 4 Conn. 446; Jones v. Hungerford, 4 Gill. & J. (Md.) 402, 2 Cr. & D. 479. Parks v. State, 22 Ga.App. 621, 96 S.E. 1050, 1051.

A smaller or subordinate building connected with a dwelling, usually detached from it and standing at a little distance from it, not intended for persons to live in, but to serve some purpose of convenience or necessity; as a barn, a dairy, a toolhouse, and the like.

Under statutes, such a building may be subservient to and adjoin a business building as well as a dwelling house. State v. Marks, 45 Idaho, 92, 260 P. 697, 698.

OUTLAND. The Saxon thanes divided their hereditary lands into inland, such as lay nearest their dwelling, which they kept to their own use, and outland, which lay beyond the demesnes, and was granted out to tenants, at the will of the lord, like copyhold estates. This outland they subdivided into two parts. One part they disposed among those who attended their persons, called "theodans," or lesser thanes; the other part they allotted to their husbandmen, or churls. Jacob.

OUTLAW. In English law. One who is put out of the protection or aid of the law. 22 Viner, Abr. 316; Bacon Abr. Outlawry; 2 Sell.Pr. 277; Doctr. Plac. 331; 3 Bla.Comm. 283, 284.

OUTSTANDING TERM. A term in gross at law, which, in equity, may be made attendant upon the inheritance, either by express declaration or by implication.

OUTSTROKE. To mine by outstroke is to take out mineral from adjoining property through the tunnels and shafts of the demised premises. Percy La Salle Mining & Power Co. v. Newman Mining, Milling & Leasing Co., D.C.Colo., 300 F. 141, 142.

OUTSUCKEN MULTURES. In Scotch law. Outtown multures; multures, duties, or tolls paid by persons voluntarily grinding corn at any mill to which they are not thirled, or bound by tenure. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 2, p. 140.

OUVERTURE DES SUCCESSIONS. In French law. The right of succession which arises to one upon the death, whether natural or civil, of another.

OVE. L. Fr. With. Modern French avec.

OVELL. L. Fr. Equal.

OVELTY. In old English law. Equality.

OVER. Above; overhead. Detamore v. Hindley, 83 Wash. 322, 145 P. 462, 464. Through. Kynerd v. Hulen, C.C.A.Tex., 5 F.2d 160, 161. More than; in excess of. People v. Shupe, 306 Ill. 31, 137 N.E. 515, 516.

Continued;—sometimes written on one page or sheet to indicate a continuation of matter on a separate sheet. In re Johnston's Estate, 64 Cal. App. 197, 221 P. 382, 384.

In conveyancing. The word Is used to denote a contingent limitation intended to take effect on the failure of a prior estate. Thus, in what is commonly called the "name and arms clause" in a will or settlement there is generally a proviso that if the devisee fails to comply with the condition the estate is to go to some one else. This is a limitation or gift over. Wats.Comp.Eq. 1110; Sweet.

OVER SEA. Beyond the sea; outside the limits of the state or country. Gustin v. Brattle, Kirby, Conn. 300. See Beyond Sea.

OVERAWE. To subjugate or restrain by awe, or profound reverence. Collum v. State, 21 Ala.App. 220, 107 So. 35.

OVERBRAIDED. Of ropes, made by having a certain number of strands laid over a center already braided. Macomber & Whyte Rope Co. v. Hazard Mfg. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 211 F. 976, 979.

OVERBREAK. In blasting, that portion of material removed which is outside and beyond slopes indicated by slope stakes. Porter v. State, 141 Wash. 51, 250 P. 449.

OVERCHARGE. Of public utilities, a charge collected above a lawful tariff rate, a charge of more than is permitted by law. Taylor-Williams Coal Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 97-Ohio St. 224, 119 N.E. 459, 460; Crook v. Baltimore & 0. R. Co., 32 Ohio App. 263, 167 N.E. 899, 900. An unreasonable or discriminatory charge. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Associated Press, 228 N.Y. 370, 127 N.E. 256, 259; Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Mills Bros., 101 Ohio St. 173, 128 N.E. 81, 82.

OVERCOME. As used in a statute providing that a presumption may be overcome by other evidence, this term is not synonymous with overbalance or outweigh, but requires merely that such evidence counterbalance the presumption, where the party relying on it has the burden of proof. Hansen v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na^{y}. Co., 97 Or. 190, 191 P. 655, 656.

OVERCYTED, or OVERCYHSED. Proved guilty or convicted. Blount.

OVERDRAFT. The act of checking out more money than one has on deposit in a bank. Bank of Jeanerette v. Druilhet, 149 La. 505, 89 So. 674, 678; State v. Larson, 119 Wash. 259, 205 P. 373, 374. It is in the nature of a loan made at the request of the depositor, and implies a promise to pay. Becker v. Fuller, 99 Misc.Rep. 672, 164 N.Y.S. 495.

OVERDRAW. To draw upon a person or a bank, by bills or checks, to an amount in excess of the funds remaining to the drawer's credit with the drawee, or to an amount greater than what is due. See State v. Jackson, 21 S.D. 494, 113 N.W. 880, 16 Ann.Cas. 87.

The term has a definite and well-understood meaning. Money is drawn from the bank by him who draws the check, not by him who receives the money; and it is drawn upon the account of the individual by whose check it is drawn, though it be paid to and for the benefit of another. No one can draw money from bank upon his own account, except by means of his own check or draft, nor can he overdraw his account with the bank in any other manner. State v. Stimson, 24 N.J.Law, 478, 484.

OVERDUE. Due and more than due; delayed or unpaid. Bliss v. California Co-op. Producers, Cal. App., 156 P.2d 259, 260.

A negotiable instrument or other evidence of debt is overdue when the day of its maturity is past and it remains unpaid. La Due v. First Nat. Bank, 31 Minn. 33, 16 N.W. 426.

A vessel is said to be overdue when she has not reached her destination at the time when she might ordinarily have been expected to arrive.

OVERFLOWED LANDS. Those that are covered by nonnavigable waters (not including lands between high and low water mark of navigable streams or bodies of water, nor lands covered and uncovered by ordinary daily ebb and flow of normal tides of navigable waters). Miller v. Bay-To-Gulf, 141 Fla. 452, 193 So. 425, 427.

OVERHAUL. To inquire into; to review; to disturb. "The merits of a judgment can never be overhauled by an original suit." 2 H.B1. 414.

To examine thoroughly, as machinery, with a view to repairs. Holloway v. Wheeler, Tex.Civ. App., 261 S.W. 467, 468.

OVERHEAD. All administrative or executive costs incident to the management, supervision, or conduct of the capital outlay, or business;—distinguished from "operating charges," or those items that are inseparably connected with the productive end and may be seen as the work progresses, and are the subject of knowledge from observation. Lytle, Campbell & Co. v. Somers, Fitler & Todd Co., 276 Pa. 409, 120 A. 409, 410, 27 A.L.R. 41. Continuous expenses of a business: the expenses and obligations incurred in connection with operation; expenses necessarily incurred in organization. office expenses, engineering, inspection, supervision, and management during construction; and general expenditures in financial or industrial enterprise which cannot be attributed to any one department or product, excluding cost of materials, labor, and selling. Guillot v. State Highway Commission of Montana, 102 Mont. 14)9, 56 P.2d 1072, 1075.

"Overhead charges" is a term which, as applied to a public service corporation, includes the expense that would necessarily be incurred in the reproduction of the property; the legal expenses of organization and expenses for office, engineering, inspection, supervision, and management during construction; fire and casualty insurance, tax es and interest during the period, contractors profits, and other minor expenses of like chart ter. Bonbright v. Geary, D.C.Ariz., 210 F. 44, 54.

OVERHERNISSA. In Saxon law. Contumacy or contempt of court. Leg. IEthel, c. 25.

OVER-INSURANCE. See Double Insurance.

OVERISSUE. To issue in excessive quantity; to issue in excess of fixed legal limits. Thus, "over-issued stock" of a private corporation is capital stock issued in excess of the amount limited and prescribed by the charter or certificate of incorporation. Hayden v. Charter Oak Driving Park, 63 Conn. 142, 27 A. 232.

OVERLIVE. To survive; to live longer than another. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, no. 58; 1 Leon. 1.

OVERLOAD. To cause to bear too heavy a burden; to load too heavily. But to say of a business, such as an insurance business, that it is overloaded, implies nothing defamatory on its face in the sense of imputing dishonesty, lack of fair dealing, want of fidelity, integrity, or business ability. Talbot v. Mack, 41 Nev. 245, 169 P. 25, 29..

OVERLYING RIGHT. Right of owner of land to take water from ground underneath for use on his land within basin or watershed. Right is based on ownership of land and is appurtenant thereto. City of Pasadena v. City of Alhambra, 207 P.2d 17, 28, 33 Ca1.2d 908.

OVERPLUS. What is left beyond a certain amount; the residue; the surplus; the remainder of a thing. Lyon v. Tomkies, 1 Mees. & W. 603.

OVERRATE. In its strictest signification, a rating by way of excess and not one which ought not to have been made at all. 2 Ex. 352.

OVERREACHING CLAUSE. In a resettlement, a clause which saves the powers of sale and leasing annexed to the estate for life created by the original settlement, when it is desired to give the tenant for life the same estate and powers under the resettlement. The clause is so called because it provides that the resettlement shall be overreached by the exercise of the old powers. If the resettlement were executed without a provision to this effect, the estate of the tenant for life and the annexed powers would be subject to any charges for portions, etc., created under the original settlement. 3 Da^{y}.Conv. 489; Sweet.

OVERRIDE. An estate carved out of working interest under an oil or gas lease. Youngblood v. Seewald, D.C.Okl., 194 F.Supp. 417, 420.

OVERRIDING ROYALTY. As applied to an existing oil and gas lease is a given percentage of the gross production payable to some person other than the lessor or persons claiming under him. Homestake Exploration Corporation v. Schoregge, 81 Mont. 604, 264 P. 388, 392. An interest carved out of the lessee's share of the oil. Wright v. Brush, C.C.A.Kan., 115 F.2d 265, 267.

OVERRULE. To supersede; annul; make void; reject by subsequent action or decision. A judicial decision is said to be overruled when a later decision, rendered by the same court or by a superior court in the same system, expresses a judgment upon the same question of law directly opposite to that which was before given, thereby depriving the earlier opinion of all authority as a precedent. The term is not properly applied to conflicting decisions on the same point by co-ordinate or independent tribunals. It also signifies that a majority of the judges of a court have decided against the opinion of the minority, in which case the minority judges are said to be overruled.

To refuse to sustain, or recognize as sufficient, an objection made in the course of a trial, as to the introduction of particular evidence, etc.

OVERS. In the meat packing business, the increase in the weight of meat resulting from salt put on it. G. H. Hammond Co. v. Joseph Mercantile Co., 144 Ark. 108, 222 S.W. 27, 28.

OVERSAMESSA. In old English law. A forfeiture for contempt or neglect in not pursuing a malefactor. 3 Inst. 116.

OVERSEER. A superintendent or supervisor; a public officer whose duties involve general superintendence of routine affairs.

OVERSEERS OF HIGHWAYS. The name given, in some of the states, to a board of officers of a city, township, or county, whose special function is the construction and repair of the public roads or highways.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR. Persons appointed or elected to take care of the poor with moneys furnished to them by the public authority. Their duties are regulated by local statutes.

OVERSMAN. In Scotch law. An umpire appointed by a submission to decide where two arbiters have differed in opinion, or he is named by the arbiters themselves, under powers given them by the submission. Bell.

OVERT. Open; manifest; public; issuing in action, as distinguished from that which rests merely in intention or design. Commonwealth v. Barnes, 107 Pa.Super. 46, 162 A. 670, 675.

Market Overt. See Market.

OVERT ACT. In criminal law. An open, manifest act from which criminality may be implied. An outward act done in pursuance and manifestation of an intent or design. An open act, which must be manifestly proved. 3 Inst. 12. United States v. Haupt, D.C.Ill., 47 F.Supp. 836, 839.

An overt act essential to establish an attempt to commit a crime is an act done to carry out the intention, and it must be such as would naturally effect that result unless prevented by some extraneous cause. People v. Mills, 178 N.Y. 274, 70 N.E. 786, 67 L.R.A. 131; State v. Enanno, 96 Conn. 420, 114 A. 386, 389. It must be something done that directly moves toward the crime, and brings the accused nearer to its commission than mere acts of preparation or of planning, and will apparently result, in the usual and natural course of events, if not hindered by extraneous causes, in the commission of the crime itself. Powell v. State, 128 Miss. 107, 90 So. 625, 626; State v. Roby, 194 Iowa 1032, 188 N.W. 709, 714.

In reference to the crime of treason, and the provision of the federal constitution that a person shall not be convicted thereof unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same "overt act," the term means a step, motion, or action really taken in the execution of a treasonable purpose, as distinguished from mere words, and also from a treasonable sentiment, design, or purpose not issuing in action. It is an act in furtherance of the crime. U. S. v. Fricke, D.C.N.Y., 259 F. 673, 676. One which manifests the intention of the traitor to commit treason. Archb. Cr.P1. 379; 4 Bla.Comm. 79; Co. 3d Inst. 12; Re Boliman, 4 Cranch, 75, 2 L.Ed. 554; U. S. v. Pryor, 3 Wash.C.C. 234, Fed.Cas.No.16,096.

An overt act which will justify the exercise of the right of self-defense is such as would manifest to the mind of a reasonable person a present intention to kill him or do him great bodily harm. Cooke v. State, 18 Ala.App. 416, 93 So. 86, 88.

An overt act which completes crime of conspiracy to violate federal law is something apart from conspiracy and is an act to effect the object of the conspiracy, and need be neither a criminal act, nor crime that is object of conspiracy, but must accompany or follow agreement and must be done in furtherance of object of agreement. Marino v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 91 F.2d 691, 694, 695, 113 A.L.R. 975.

OVERT WORD. An open, plain word, not to be misunderstood. Cowell.

OVERTAKE. To come or catch up with in a course of motion. Ringwald v. Beene, 170 Tenn. 116, 92 S.W.2d 411, 413.

OVERTIME. After regular working hours; beyond the regular fixed hours. Ferguson v. Port Huron & Sarnia Ferry Co., D.C.Mich., 13 F.2d 489, 492; Goodman v. Moss, 43 N.Y.S.2d 381, 385.

OVERTIME WAGE. Portion of wages paid employee for services rendered beyond regularly fixed working hours. Goodman v. Moss, 43 N.Y.S.2d 381, 385.

OVERTURE. An opening; a proposal.

OWE. To be bound to do or omit something, especially to pay a debt. Robinson v. Ramsey, 161 Ga. 1, 129 S.E. 837, 839; Humphreys v. County Court, 90 W.Va. 315, 110 S.E. 701, 703.

OWELTY. Equality; an equalization charge. Bagg v. Osborn, 169 Minn. 126, 210 N.W. 862, 863.

This word is used in law in several compound phrases, as follows:

Owelty of exchange. A sum of money given, when two persons have exchanged lands, by the owner of the less valuable estate to the owner of the more valuable, to equalize the exchange.

Owelty of partition. A sum of money paid by one of two coparceners or co-tenants to the other, when a partition has been effected between them, but, the land not being susceptible of division into exactly equal shares, such payment is required to make the portions respectively assigned to them of equal value. Littleton, § 251; Co. Litt. 169a; Long v. Long, 1 Watts (Pa.) 265; 16 Viner, Abr. 223, pl. 3. Reed v. Deposit Co., 113 Pa. 578, 6 A. 163. The power to grant owelty has been exercised by the courts of equity from time immemorial. Town of Morganton v. Avery, 179 N.C. 551, 103 S.E. 138.

Owelty of services. In the feudal law, the condition obtaining when there is lord, mesne, and tenant, and the tenant holds the mesne by the same service that the mesne holds over the lord above him. Tomlins.

OWING. Unpaid. A debt, for example, is owing while it is unpaid, and whether it be due or not. Coquard v. Bank of Kansas City, 12 Mo.App. 261; Musselman v. Wise, 84 Ind. 248; Jones v. Thompson, 1 El., Bl. & El. 64; Succession of Guidry, 40 La.Ann. 671, 4 So. 893.

OWLERS. In English law. Persons who carried wool, etc., to the sea-side by night, in order that it might be shipped off contrary to law. Jacob.

OWLING. In English law. The offense of transporting wool or sheep out of the kingdom; so called from its being usually carried on in the night. 4 Bl. Comm. 154.

OWN. To have a good legal title; to hold as property; to have a legal or rightful title to; to have; to possess. Shepherd v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 112 Me. 350, 92 A. 189; McKennon v. Warnick, 115 Or. 163, 236 P. 1051, 1052; Miller-Link Lumber Co. v. Stephenson, Tex.Civ.App., 265 S.W. 215, 220; Melvin v. Scowley, 213 Ala. 414, 104 So. 817, 820. The term does not necessarily signify absolute ownership in fee. Rydeen v. Clearwater County, 139 Minn. 329, 166 N.W. 334, 335; Makemson v. Dillon, 24 N.M. 302, 171 P. 673, 676; Bush v. State, 128 Ark. 448, 194 S.W. 857. It is not synonymous with "acquire." State v. District Court of Third Judicial Dist. in and for Granite County, 79 Mont. 1, 254 P. 863, 865.

OWNED BY. Although these words may be used synonymously with "belonging to" or "forming part of"; Gilpatric v. City of Hartford, 98 Conn. 471, 120 A. 317, 319; in a stricter sense they denote an absolute and unqualified title, whereas the words "belonging to" do not import that the whole title to property or thing is meant, for a thing may belong to one who has less than an unqualified and absolute title; Baltimore Dry Docks & Ship Building Co. v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co., C.C.A.Md., 262 F. 485, 488.

OWNER. The person in whom is vested the ownership, dominion, or title of property; proprietor. Garver v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 69 Iowa 202, 28 N.W. 555; McGowan v. Morgan, 145 N.Y.S. 787, 160 App. Div. 588; Cayce Land Co. v. Southern Ry. Co., 111 S.C. 115, 96 S.E. 725, 727; Staples v. Adams, Payne & Gleaves, C.C.A.Va., 215 F. 322, 325. He who has dominion of a thing, real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal, which he has a right to enjoy and do with as he pleases, even to spoil or destroy it, as far as the law permits, unless he be prevented by some agreement or covenant which restrains his right. Miller-Link Lumber Co. v. Stephenson, Tex.Civ.App., 265 S.W. 215, 220; Newborn v. Peart, 121 Misc.Rep. 221, 200 N.Y.S. 890, 892; Hare v. Young, 26 Idaho, 682, 146 P. 104, 106; Johnson v. Crookshanks, 21 Or. 339, 28 P. 78.

The word is not infrequently used to describe one who has dominion or control over a thing, the title to which is in another. Robinson v. State, 7 Ala.App. 172, 62 So. 303, 306. Thus, it may denote the buyer under a conditional sale agreement; Lennon v. L. A. W. Acceptance Corporation of Rhode Island, 48 R.I. 363, 138 A. 215, 217; a lessee; E. Corey & Co. v. H. P. Cummings Const. Co., 118 Me. 34, 105 A. 405, 407; Texas Bank & Trust Co. of Beaumont v. Smith, 108 Tex. 265, 192 S.W. 533, 534, 2 A.L.R. 771; Hacken v. Isenberg, 288 Ill. 589, 124 N.E. 306, 308; Grattan v. Trego, C.C.A.Kan., 225 F. 705, 708; a pledgee; American Nat. Bank of Tucumcari v. Tarpley, 31 N.M. 667, 250 P. 18, 20; Baxter v. Moore, 56 Ind.App. 472, 105 N.E. 588, 589; and a person for whose benefit a ship is operated on a particular voyage, and who directs and controls it, its officers and crew; Potter v. American Union. Line, 185 N.Y.S. 542, 843, 114 Misc.Rep. 101 (see, also, Petition of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., D.C.N.Y., 18 F.2d 782, 784).

The term is, however, a nomen generalissimum, and its meaning is to be gathered from the connection in which it is used, and from the subject-matter to which it is applied. Warren v. Lower Salt Creek Drainage Dist. of Logan County, 316 Ill. 345, 147 N.E. 248, 249. The primary meaning of the word as applied to land is one who owns the fee and who has the right to dispose of the. property, but the term also includes one having a possessory right to land or the person occupying or cultivating it. Dunbar v. Texas Irr. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 195 S.W. 614, 616; McCarthy v. Hansel, 4 Ohio App. 425; Thompson v. Thompson, 79 Or. 513, 155 P. 1190, 1191; McLevis v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 165 Minn. 468, 206 N.W. 940, 942; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Oakley, 135 Wash. 279, 237 P. 990, 992; In re Opinion of the Justices, 234 Mass. 597, 127 N.E. 525, 529. Sometimes it includes a lessee; Tobin v. Gartiez, 44 Nev. 179, 191 P. 1063, 1064; but not always; Smith v. Improvement Dist. No. 14 of Texarkana, 108 Ark. 141, 156 S.W. 455, 456, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 696. A mortgagee may be deemed an "owner"; Lindholm v. Hamilton, 159 Minn. 81, 198 N.W. 289, 290; Blaine County Bank v. Noble, 55 Okl. 361, 155 P. 532, 534; Burrill Nat. Bank v. Edminister, 119 Me. 367, 111 A. 423, 424; Merriman v. City of New York, 227 N.Y. 279, 125 N.E. 500, 502; but under different statutes or circumstances, an opposite result may be reached; Huebner v. Lashley, 239 Mich. 50, 214 N.W. 107, 108. The term may likewise, on occasion, include mortgagors; Hendricks v. Town of Julesburg, 55 Colo. 59, 132 P. 61, 63; Smith v. Craver, 89 Wash. 243, 154 P. 156, 158; Borough of Princeton v. State Board of Taxes and Assessments, 96 N.J.L. 334, 115 A. 342, 344.

In theft and burglary cases, the "owner" is the person in possession, having care, control, and management at the time. Cantrell v. State, 105 Tex.Cr.R. 560, 289 S.W. 406, 407; Allen v. State, 94 Tex.Cr.R. 646, 252 S.W. 505; Carson v. State, 30 Okl.Cr. 438, 236 P. 627, 628.

In embezzlement, the principal to whom an agent looks for authority, under whose control he acts, and from whom he receives compensation and takes direction, is the owner within the meaning of statute. Coney v. State, 100 Tex.Cr.R. 380, 272 S.W. 197, 199.

Equitable owner. One who is recognized in equity as the owner of property, because the real and beneficial use and title belong to him, although the bare legal title is vested in another, e. g., a trustee for his benefit. One who has a present title in land which will ripen into legal ownership upon the performance of conditions subsequent. Hawkins v. Stiles, Tex.Civ.App., 158 S.W. 1011, 1021. There may therefore be two "owners" in respect of the same property, one the nominal or legal owner, the other the beneficial or equitable owner. In re Fulham's Estate, 96 Vt. 308, 119 A. 433, 437.

General owner. He who has the primary or residuary title to it; as distinguished from a special owner, who has a special interest in the same thing, amounting to a qualified ownership, such, for example, as a bailee's lien. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Logan, 74 N.Y. 581. One who has both the right of property and of possession.

General and beneficial owner. The person whose interest is primarily one of possession and enjoyment in contemplation of an ultimate absolute ownership;—not the person whose interest is primarily in the enforcement of a collateral pecuniary claim, and does not contemplate the use or enjoyment of the property as such. Ex parte State, 206 Ala. 575, 90 So. 896.

Joint owners. Two or more persons who jointly own and hold title to property, e. g., joint tenants, and also partners and tenants in common. In re Huggins' Estate, 96 N.J.Eq. 275, 125 A. 27, 30. In its most comprehensive sense, the term embraces all cases where the property in question is owned by two or more persons regardless of the special nature of their relationship or how it came into being. Halferty v. Karr, 188 Mo.App. 241, 175 S W. 146, 147.

An estate by entirety is a "joint ownership" of a husband and wife as at common law notwithstanding legislative enactments touching joint tenancy. Cullum v. Rice, 236 Mo.App. 1113, 162 S.W.2d 342, 344.

Legal owner. One who is recognized and held responsible by the law as the owner of property. In a more particular sense, one in whom the legal title to real estate is vested, but who holds it in trust for the benefit of another, the latter being called the "equitable" owner.

Part owners. Joint owners; co-owners; those who have shares of ownership in the same thing, particularly a vessel.

Real owners. Those who must be joined in actions of scire facias sur mortgage under Pennsylvania statutes are the present owners of the title under which the mortgagor claimed when he executed the mortgages, and do not include persons claiming by titles antagonistic to the mortgagor. Orient Building & Loan Ass'n v. Gould, 239 Pa. 335, 86 A. 863.

Record owner. This term, particularly used in statutes requiring notice of tax delinquency or sale, means the owner of record, not the owner described in the tax roll; Okanogan Power & Irrigation Co. v. Quackenbush, 107 Wash. 651, 182 P. 618, 619, 5 A.L.R. 966; the owner of the title at time of notice; Hunt v. State, 110 Tex. 204, 217 S. W. 1034, 1035.

Reputed owner. One who has to all appearances the title to, and possession of, property; one who, from all appearances, or from supposition, is the owner of a thing. Lowell Hardware Co. v. May, 59 Colo. 475, 149 P. 831, 832. He who has the general credit or reputation of being the owner or proprietor of goods. Santa Cruz Rock Pa[y]. Co. v. Lyons, 5 Cal.Unrep.Cas. 260, 43 P. 601.

This phrase is chiefly used in English bankruptcy practice, where the bankrupt is styled the "reputed owner" of goods lawfully in his possession, though the real owner may be another [P]erson. The word "reputed" has a much weaker sense than its derivation would appear to warrant; importing merely a supposition or opinion derived or made up from outward appearances, and often unsupported by fact. The term "reputed owner" is frequently employed in this sense. 2 Steph.Comm. 206, Riparian owner. See Riparian.

Sole and unconditional owner. An expression commonly used in fire insurance policies, in which the word "sole" means that no one else has any interest in the property as owner, and "unconditional" means that the quality of the estate is not limited or affected by any condition. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Creekmore, 69 Okl. 238, 171 P. 874, 876; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. McCain, 141 Miss. 394, 106 So. 529. To be "unconditional and sole," the interest or ownership of the insured must be completely vested, not contingent or conditional, nor in common or jointly with others, but of such nature that the insured must alone sustain the entire loss if the property is destroyed; and this is so whether the title is legal or equitable. Socicero v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 90 Fla. 820, 106 So. 879; Livingstone v. Boston Ins. Co., 255 Pa. 1, 99 A. 212, 213.

It is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of "sole and unconditional ownership" that the insured is the sole equitable owner and has the full equitable title. Turner v. Home Ins. Co., 195 Mo.App. 138, 189 S.W. 626, 628; Alliance Ins. Co. v. Enders, C.C.A.Idaho, 293 F. 485, 489. It is enough that the insured is equitably entitled to immediate and absolute legal ownership. Exchange Underwriters' Agency of Royal Exchange Assur. of London, England, v. Bates, 195 Ala. 161, 69 So. 956, 960. The term contemplates beneficial and practical proprietorship and not necessarily technical title. Royal Ins. Co. v. Drury, 150 Md. 211, 132 A. 635, 640, 43 A.L.R. 582. See Giles v. Citizens' Ins. Co. of Missouri, 32 Ga.App. 207, 122 S.E. 890, 891.

Special owner. One who has a special interest in an article of property, amounting to a qualified ownership of it, such, for example, as a bailee's lien; as distinguished from the general owner, who has the primary or residuary title to the same thing. Frazier v. State, 18 Tex.App. 441. Some person holding property with the consent of, and as representative of, the actual owner. Mathieu v. Roberts, 31 N.M. 469, 247 P. 1066, 1068.

OWNER'S RISK. An expression employed by carriers with the object of relieving them from responsibility. See [1906] T. S. 973 (So. Afr.) ; Heiskell v. Furness, Withy & Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 4 F.2d 977, 978.

OWNERSHIP. Collection of rights to use and enjoy property, including right to transmit it to others. Trustees of Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 92 N.H. 473, 33 A.2d 665, 673. The complete dominion, title, or proprietary right in a thing or claim. The entirety of the powers of use and disposal allowed by law. See Property.

The right of one or more persons to possess and use a thing to the exclusion of others. Civ. Code Cal. § 654. The right by which a thing belongs to some one in particular, to the exclusion of all other persons. Civ. Code La. art. 488. The exclusive right of possession, enjoyment, and disposal; Thompson v. Kreutzer, 112 Miss. 165, 72 So. 891; involving as an essential attribute the right to control, handle, and dispose; Hardinge v. Empire Zinc Co., 17 Ariz. 75, 148 P. 306, 310.

Ownership is divided into perfect and imperfect. Ownership is perfect when it is perpetual, and when the thing is unincumbered with any real right towards any other person than the owner. On the contrary, ownership is imperfect when it is to terminate at a certain time or on a condition, or if the thing which is the object of it, being an immovable, is charged with any real right towards a third person; as a usufruct, use, or servitude. When an immovable is subject to a usufruct, the owner of it is said to possess the naked ownership. Civ.Code La. art. 490; Maestri v. Board of Assessors, 110 La. 517, 34 So. 658.

In criminal law. In connection with burglary, "ownership" means any possession which is rightful as against the burglar. Seaba v. State, 33 Okl. Cr. 59, 242 P. 779, 780; State v. Bige, 195 Iowa, 1342, 193 N.W. 17, 21. It is synonymous with occupancy. State v. Harrison, Mo.Sup., 285 S.W. 83, 87; Carneal v. State, 86 Tex.Cr.R. 274, 216 S.W. 626. When considered as an element of larceny, "ownership" means the same as "possession." People v. Edwards, 72 Cal.App. 102, 236 P. 944, 950.

Exclusive ownership. See Exclusive Ownership.

OXFILD. A restitution anciently made by a hundred or county for any wrong done by one that was within the same. Lamb.Arch. 125.

OXGANG. In old English law. As much land as an ox could till. Co. Litt. 5a. A measure of land of uncertain quantity. In the north of England a division of a carucate. According to some, fifteen acres. Co. Litt. 69a; Crompton, Jurisd. 220. According to Balfour, the Scotch oxengang, or oxgate, contained twelve acres; but this does not correspond with ancient charters. Bell, Dict. Ploughgate. Skene and Spelman say thirteen acres. Cowell; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 347.

See Librata Terrae.

OYER. In Old Practice. Hearing; the hearing a deed read, which a party sued on a bond, etc., might pray or demand, and it was then read to him by the other party; the entry on the record being, "et ei legitur in hcec verba," (and it is read to him in these words). Steph. Pl. 67, 68; 3 Bl. Comm. 299; 3 Salk. 119.

In Modern practice. A copy of a bond or specialty sued upon, given to the opposite party, in lieu of the old practice of reading it.

OYER AND TERMINER. A half French phrase applied in England to the assizes, which are so called from the commission of oyer and terminer directed to the judges, empowering them to "inquire, hear, and determine" all treasons, felonies, and misdemeanors. This commission is now issued regularly, but was formerly used only on particular occasions, as upon sudden outrage or insurrection in any place. In the United States, the higher criminal courts are called "courts of oyer and terminer." Burrill.

OYER DE RECORD. A petition made in court that the judges, for better proof's sake, will hear or look upon any record. Cowell.

OYEZ. Hear ye. A word used in courts by the public crier to command attention when a proclamation is about to be made. Usually pronounced "0 yes." 4 Bla.Comm. 340, n.

P. P. L Policy proof of interest, i. e., in the event of loss, the insurance policy is to be deemed sufficient proof of interest. Frank B. Hall & Co. v. Jefferson Ins. Co., D.C.N.Y., 279 F. 892, 893.

P. S. An abbreviation for "Public Statutes;" also for "postscript."

P. S. I. A. An abbreviation for "pounds per square inch absolute." Application of Corneil, 347 F.2d 563, 564, 52 C.C.P.A. 1718.

PAAGE. In old English law. A toll for passage through another's land. The same as "pedage."

PACARE. L. Lat. To pay.

PACATIO. Payment. Mat. Par. A. D. 1248.

PACE. A measure of length containing two feet and a half, being the ordinary length of a step. The geometrical pace is five feet long, being the length of two steps, or the whole space passed over by the same foot from one step to another.

PACEATUR. Lat. Let him be freed or discharged.

PACI SUNT MAXIME CONTRARIA VIS ET INJURIA. Co. Litt. 161. Violence and injury are the things chiefly hostile to peace.

PACIFICATION. The act of making peace between two hostile or belligerent states; reestablishment of public tranquillity.

PACIFIST. One who seeks to maintain peace and to abolish war; one who refuses or is unwilling for any purpose to bear arms because of conscientious considerations, and who is disposed to encourage others in such refusal. U. S. v. Schwimmer, Ill., 49 S.Ct. 448, 451, 279 U.S. 644, 73 L.Ed. 889.

PACK. To deceive by false appearances; to counterfeit; to delude; to put together in sorts with a fraudulent design. To pack a jury is to use unlawful, improper, or deceitful means to have the jury made up of persons favorably disposed to the party so contriving, or who have been or can be improperly influenced to give the verdict he seeks. The term imports the improper and corrupt selection of a jury sworn and impaneled for the trial of a cause. Mix v. Woodward, 12 Conn. 289.

PACK OF WOOL. A horse load, which consists of seventeen stone and two pounds, or two hundred and forty pounds weight. Fleta, L 2, c. 12; Cowell.

PACKAGE. A bundle put up for transportation or commercial handling; a thing in form to become, as such, an article of merchandise or delivery from hand to hand. A parcel is a small package; "parcel" being the diminutive of "package." Each of the words denotes a thing in form suitable for transportation or handling, or sale from hand to hand. Haley v. State, 42 Neb. 556, 60 N.W. 962, 47 Am.St.Rep. 718; State v. Parsons, 124 Mo. 436, 27 S.W. 1102, 46 Am.St.Rep. 457. As ordinarily understood in the commercial world, it means a shipping package. Noble v. People, 67 Colo. 429, 180 P. 562, 563. Where a bale of cotton was held not a package; contra, Lamb v. Transp. Co., 2 Daly (N. Y.) 454.

In old English law. One of various duties charged in the port of London on the goods imported and exported by aliens, or by denizens the sons of aliens. Tomlins. Now abolished. Whart. Lex.

Original package. See Original.

PACKED PARCELS. The name for a consignment of goods, consisting of one large parcel made up of several small ones, (each bearing a different address,) collected from different persons by the immediate consignor, (a carrier,) who unites them into one for his own profit, at the expense of the railway by which they are sent, since the railway company would have been paid more for the carriage of the parcels singly than together. Wharton.

PACKER. A person employed in England by merchants to receive and (in some instances) to select goods from manufacturers, dyers, calenders, etc., and pack the same for exportation. Arch. Bankr., 11th ed. 37.

In the United States, one engaged in the business of slaughtering and packing cattle, sheep, and hogs, and preparing their products for sale. See Williams v. Schehl, 84 W.Va. 499, 100 S.E. 280, 282.

PACT. A bargain; compact; agreement. This word is used in writings on Roman law and on general jurisprudence as the English form of the Latin "pactum," (which see.)

Nude Pact. A translation of the Latin "nudum pactum," a bare or naked pact, that is, a promise or agreement made without any consideration on the other side, which is therefore not enforceable.

Obligatory Pact. In Civil Law. An informal obligatory declaration of consensus, which the Roman law refused to acknowledge. Sohm, Rom. L. 321.

Pact De Non Alienando. An agreement not to alienate incumbered (particularly mortgaged) property. This stipulation, sometimes found in mortgages made in Louisiana, and derived from the Spanish law, binds the mortgagor not to sell or incumber the mortgaged premises to the prejudice of the mortgagee; it does not avoid a sale made to a third person, but enables the mortgagee to proceed directly against the mortgaged property in a proceeding against the mortgagor alone and without notice to the purchaser. See Dodds v. Lanaux, 45 La.Ann. 287, 12 So. 345.

PACTA CONVENTA QUIE NEQUE CONTRA LEGES NEQUE DOLO MALO INITA SUNT OMNI MODO OBSERVANDA SUNT. Agreements which are not contrary to the laws nor entered into with a fraudulent design are in all respects to be observed. Cod. 2, 3, 39; Broom, Max. 698, 732.

PACTA DANT LEGEM CONTRACTUI. Hob. 118. The stipulations of parties constitute the law of the contract. Agreements give the law to the contract. Halkers, Max. 118.

PACTA PRIVATA JURI PUBLICO DEROGARE NON POSSUNT. 7 Coke, 23. Private compacts cannot derogate from public right.

PACTA QUIE CONTRA LEGES CONSTITUTIONESQUE, VEL CONTRA BONOS MORES FIUNT, NULLAM VIM HABERE, INDUBITATI JURIS EST. That contracts which are made against law or against good morals have no force is a principle of undoubted law. Cod. 2, 3, 6; Broom, Max. 695.

PACTA QUIE TURPEM CAUSAM CONTINENT NON SUNT OBSERVANDA. Agreements founded upon an immoral consideration are not to be observed. Dig. 2, 14, 27, 4; Broom, Max. 732; 2 Pet. 539, 7 L.Ed. 508.

PACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A bargaining or agreeing of which pactum (the agreement itself) was the result. Calvin. It is used, however, as the synonym of "pactum."

FACTIONAL. Relating to or generating an agreement; by way of bargain or covenant.

FACTIONS. In international law. Contracts between nations which are to be performed by a single act, and of which execution is at an end at once. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 100.

PACTIS PRIVATORUM JURI PUBLICO NON DEROGATUR. Private contracts do not derogate from public law. Broom, Max. 695; per Dr. Lushington, Arg. 4 Cl. & F. 241; Arg. 3 Id. 621.

PACTITIOUS. Settled by covenant.

PACTO ALIQUOD LICITUM EST, QUOD SINE PACTO NON ADMITTITUR. Co. Litt. 166. By special agreement things are allowed which are not otherwise permitted.

PACTUM. Lat.

In the civil law. A pact. An agreement or convention without specific name, and without consideration, which, however, might, in its nature, produce a civil obligation. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 3, tit. 14, § 775; Merlin, Rep. Pacte.

In Roman law. With some exceptions, those agreements that the law does not directly enforce, but which it recognizes only as a valid ground of defense, were called "pacta." Those agreements that are enforced, in other words, are supported by actions, are called "contractus." The exceptions are few, and belong to a late period. Hunter, Rom. Law, 546.

Nudum Pactum. A bare or naked pact or agreement; a promise or undertaking made without any consideration for it, and therefore not enforceable.

PACTUM COMMISSORIUM. An agreement of forfeiture. See Lex Commissoria.

PACTUM CONSTITUTIE PECUNIZE. In the Civil Law. An agreement by which a person appointed to his creditor a certain day, or a certain time, at which he promised to pay; or it may be defined simply an agreement by which a person promises a creditor to pay him. There is a striking conformity between the pactum constitutce pecunice, as above defined, and our indebitatus assumpsit. 4 Co. 91, 95. See 1 H.Bla. 550, 850; Brooke, Abr. Action sur le Case (Pl. 7, 69, 72) ; 4 B. & B. 295; 1 Chitty, Pl. 89.

PACTUM DE NON ALIENANDO. A pact or agreement binding the owner of property not to alienate it, intended to protect the interests of another; particularly an agreement by the mortgagor of real estate that he will not transfer the title to a third person until after satisfaction of the mortgage. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 461. A. clause inserted in mortgages in Louisiana to secure to the mortgage creditor the right to foreclose his mortgage by executory process directed solely against the mortgagor, and to give him the right to seize and sell the mortgaged property, regardless of any subsequent alienations. Avegno v. Schmidt, 35 La.Ann. 585; Shields v. Schiff, 124 U.S. 355, 8 S.Ct. 510, 31 L.Ed. 445.

PACTUM DE NON PETENDO. In the civil law. An agreement not to sue. A simple convention whereby a creditor promises the debtor that he will not enforce his claim. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 542.

PACTUM DE QUOTA LITIS. In the civil law. An agreement by which a creditor promised to pay a portion of a debt difficult to recover to a person who undertook to recover it. Wharton.

PAD. To stuff or furnish with padding. A charge that a contractor padded his pay roll would imply a charge of deceit or artifice. Smith v. Aultman, 30 Ga.App. 507, 118 S.E. 459.

PADDER. A robber; a foot highwayman; a foot-pad.

PADDOCK. A small inclosure for deer or other animals.

PAGA. In Spanish law. Payment. Las Partidas, pt. 5, tit. 14, 1. 1. Pagamento, satisfaction.

PAGARCHUS. A petty magistrate of a pagus or little district in the country.

PAGE. One side of a leaf, as of a book, manuscript or letter. Roberts Bros. Co. v. Grein, 129 Misc. 406, 221 N.Y.S. 321, 322.

PAGODA. A gold or silver coin, of several kinds and values, formerly current in India. It was valued at the United States custom-house, at $1.94.

PAGUS. A county. Jacob.

PAIN. A disagreeable feeling, usually in its intenser degrees, resulting from, or accompanying, deranged or otherwise abnormal action of the physical powers. Merriam v. Hamilton, 64 Or. 476, 130 P. 406, 407.

PAINE FORTE ET DURE. See Peine Forte et Dure.

PAINS AND PENALTIES, BILLS OF. The name given to acts of parliament to attaint particular persons of treason or felony, or to inflict pains and penalties beyond or contrary to the common law, to serve a special purpose. They are in fact new laws, made pro re nata. See, also, Bill of Pains and Penalties.

PAINTING. A likeness, image, or scene depicted with paints. Cent. Dict. The term does not necessarily mean anything upon which painting has been done by a workman, but rather something of value as a painting and something on which skill has been bestowed in producing it. Colored imitations of rugs and carpets and colored working designs, each of them valuable and designed by skilled persons and hand painted, but having no value as works of art, are not "paintings," within the meaning of a statute on the liability of carriers. 3 Ex. Div. 121.

PAIRING-OFF. In the practice of legislative bodies, a species of negative proxies, by which two members, who belong to opposite parties or are on opposite sides with regard to a given question, mutually agree that they will both be absent from voting, either for a specified period or when a division is had on the particular question. By this mutual agreement a vote is neutralized on each side of the question, and the relative numbers on the division are precisely the same as if both members were present. May, Parl. Pr. 370. It is said to have originated in the house of commons in Cromwell's time.

PAIS, PAYS. Fr. The country; the neighborhood.

A trial per pais signifies a trial by the country; that is, by jury.

An assurance by matter in pais is an assurance transacted between two or more private persons "in the country;" that is, upon the very spot to be transferred.

Matter in pais signifies matter of fact, probably because matters of fact are triable by the country; i. e., by jury.

Estoppels in pais are estoppels by conduct, as distinguished from estoppels by deed or by record.

Conveyances in pais are ordinary conveyances between two or more persons in the country; s e., upon the land to be transferred.

See, also, In Pais; Matter In Pais.

PALMARIUM. In civil law. A conditional fee for professional services in, addition to the lawful charge.

PALMER ACT. A name given to the English statute 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, enabling a person accused of a crime committed out of the jurisdiction of the central criminal court, to be tried in that court.

PALMING OFF DOCTRINE. Rule of law itself by which it is determined whether a given state of facts constitutes "unfair competition." Soft-Lite Lens Co. v. Ritholz, 301 Ill.App. 100, 21 N.E. 2d 835, 838.

PALMISTRY. The practice of telling fortunes by a feigned interpretation of the lines and marks on the hand. Also, a trick with the hand. 2 Exch. Div. 268.

PALPABLE. Easily perceptible, plain, obvious, readily visible, noticeable, patent, distinct, manifest. State v. Department of Public Works, 143 Wash. 67, 254 P. 839, 844; Alabama Fuel & Iron Co. v. Minyard, 210 Ala. 299, 97 So. 918, 921. People v. Hughey, 382 Ill. 136, 47 N.E.2d 77, 80.

PAMPHLET. A small book, bound in paper covers, usually printed in octavo form, and stitched. U. S. v. Chase, 10 S.Ct. 756, 135 U.S. 255, 34 L.Ed. 117.

PAMPHLET LAWS. The name given in some states, such as Pennsylvania, to the publication, in pamphlet or book form, containing the acts passed by the state legislature at each of its biennial sessions.

PANDECTS. A compilation of Roman law, consisting of selected passages from the writings of the most authoritative of the older jurists, methodically arranged, prepared by Tribonian with the assistance of sixteen associates, under a commis-3ion from the emperor Justinian. This work, which is otherwise called the "Digest," because in his compilation the writings of the jurists were reduced to order and condensed quasi digestive, comprises fifty books, and is one of the four great works composing the Corpus Juris Civilis. It was first published in A. D. 533, when Justinian gave to it the force of law.

PANDER, n. One who caters to the lust of others; a male bawd, a pimp, or procurer. Hewitt v. State, 71 Tex.Cr.R. 243, 158 S.W. 1120, 1125.

PANDER, v. To pimp; to cater to the gratification of the lust of another. State v. Thibodeaux, 136 La. 935, 67 So. 973, 974. To entice or procure a female, by promises, threats, fraud, or artifice, to enter any place in which prostitution is practiced, for the purpose of prostitution. Boyle v. State, 110 Ark. 318, 161 S.W. 1049, 1051; Crawford & Moses' Dig. § 2707; Humphries v. State, 79 Tex.Cr.R. 637, 186 S.W. 332, 334; To take and detain a female for the purpose of sexual intercourse, on pretense of marriage. Crawford & Moses' Dig. (Ark.) § 2703.

PANDOXATRIX. An ale-wife; a. woman that both brewed and sold ale and beer.

PANEL. The roll or slip of parchment returned by the sheriff in obedience to a venire facias, containing the names of the persons whom he has summoned to attend the court as jurymen. Beasley v. People, 89 Ill. 571; People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 592; Co. Litt. 158b.

A list of jurors returned by a sheriff, to serve at a particular court or for the trial of a particular action. Pen.Code Cal. § 1057. The word may be used to denote either the whole body of persons summoned as jurors for a particular term of court, or those selected by the clerk by lot. State v. Gurlagh, 76 Iowa, 141, 40 N.W. 141.

In Scotch law. The prisoner at the bar, or person who takes his trial before the court of justiciary for any crime. This name is given to him after his appearance. Bell.

PANIER, in the parlance of the English bar societies, is an attendant or domestic who waits at table and gives bread, (panis,) wine, and other necessary things to those who are dining. The phrase was in familiar use among the knights templar, and from them has been handed down to the learned societies of the inner and middle temples, who at the present day occupy the halls and buildings once belonging to that distinguished order, and who have retained a few of their customs and phrases. Brown.

PANIS. Lat. In old English law. Bread; loaf; a loaf. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 9. See Mandato, Panes De.

PANNAGE. A common of pannage is the right of feeding swine on mast and acorns at certain seasons in a commonable wood or forest. Elton, Commons, 25; Williams, Common, 168.

PANTOMIME. A dramatic performance in which gestures take the place of words. See 3 C. B. 871.

PAPAL SUPREMACY. The supremacy which the Pope claimed not only over the Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, but over all other Christian princes. The theory was that they stood to the Pope as feudal vassals to a supreme lord; as such, the Pope claimed the right to enforce the duties due to him from his feudal subordinates through an ascending scale of penalties culminating in the absolution of the prince's subjects from the bonds of allegiance, and in the disposition of the sovereign himself. The papal supremacy was overthrown in England by acts of the Parliament which met in 1529 and was dissolved in 1536, ending in the Act of Supremacy. Hannis Taylor, Science of Jurispr.; Boyce, Holy Rom. Emp.; Freeman, Sel. Hist. Essays; 2 Phill. Intern. Law.

PAPER. A manufactured substance composed of fibres (whether vegetable or animal) adhering together in forms consisting of sheets of various sizes and of different thicknesses, used for writing or printing or other purposes to which flexible sheets are applicable. .4 H. & N. 470.

A written or printed document or instrument. A document filed or introduced in evidence in a suit at law, as, in the phrase "papers in the case" and in "papers on appeal." Any writing or printed document, including letters, memoranda, legal or business documents, and books of account, as in the constitutional provision which protects the people from unreasonable searches and seizures in respect to their "papers" as well as their houses and persons. A written or printed evidence of debt, particularly a promissory note or a bill of exchange, as in the phrases "accommodation paper" and "commercial paper."

Books are not paper within the meaning of the tariff act; Pott v. Arthur, 104 U.S. 735, 26 L.Ed. 909.

The term "papers" does not mean newspapers or perhaps even include them within the meaning of a statute, the object of which is to prevent a jury from receiving any evidence, papers, or documents not authorized by the court. State v. Jackson, 9 Mont. 508, 24 P. 216. But the word includes photographs of deceased showing the nature of his wounds. People v. Balestieri, 23 Cal.App. 708, 139 P. 821, 823.

Generally, the words "documents" and "papers" refer to particular instruments and writings bearing upon specific transactions, whereas "books of accounts" and "records" have reference to serial, continuous, and more permanent memorials of a concern's business and affairs. Cudahy Packing Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 15 F.2d 133, 136.

In English practice. The list of causes or cases intended for argument, called "the paper of causes." 1 Tidd, Pr. 504. See Paper Days.

In General

Accommodation paper. See that title.

Commercial paper. See Commercial.

Paper blockade. See Blockade.

Paper book. In practice. A printed collection or abstract, in methodical order, of the pleadings, evidence, exhibits, and proceedings in a cause, or whatever else may be necessary to a full understanding of it, prepared for the use of the judges upon a hearing or argument on appeal. Copies of the proceedings on an issue in law or demurrer, of cases, and of the proceedings on error, prepared for the use of the judges, and delivered to them previous to bringing the cause to argument. 3 Bl. Comm. 317; Archb. New Pr. 353; 5 Man. & G. 98. In proceedings on appeal or error in a criminal case, copies of the proceedings with a note of the points intended to be argued, delivered to the judges by the parties before the argument. Archb. Grim. Pl. 205; Sweet.

Paper credit. Credit given on the security of any written obligation purporting to represent property.

Paper days. In English law. Certain days in term-time appointed by the courts for hearings or arguments in the cases set down in the various special papers.

Paper hangings. In tariff acts, tinted or decorative paper used for covering walls, ceiling, etc.;—distinguished from "hanging paper," meaning such paper, whether or not tinted or decorative. Downing & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 451, 454.

Paper mill. See Paper office.

Paper money. Bills drawn by a government against its own credit, engaging to pay money, but which do not profess to be immediately convertible into specie, and which are put into compulsory circulation as a substitute for coined money.

Paper office. In English law. An ancient office in the palace of Whitehall, where all the public writings, matters of state and council, proclamations, letters, intelligences, negotiations of the queen's ministers abroad, and generally all the papers and dispatches that pass through fhe offices of the secretaries of state, are deposited. Also an office or room in the court of queen's bench where the records belonging to that court are deposited; sometimes called "paper-mill." Wharton.

Paper title. See Title.

PAPIAN POPP1EAN LAW. See Lex Papia Poppea.

PAPIST. One who adheres to the communion of the Church of Rome. The word seems to be considered by the Roman Catholics themselves as a nickname of reproach, originating in their maintaining the supreme ecclesiastical power of the pope. Wharton.

PAR. In commercial law. Equal; equality. An equality subsisting between the nominal or face value of a bill of exchange, share of stock, etc., and its actual selling value. When the values are thus equal, the instrument or share is said to be "at par;" if it can be sold for more than its nominal worth, it is "above par;" if for less, it is "below par." Conover v. Smith, 83 Cal.App. 227, 256 P. 835, 838; Town of Buffalo v. Walker, 126 Okl. 6, 257 P. 766, 770; Boston & M. R. R. v. U. S., C.C. A.Mass., 265 F. 578, 579.

Par of exchange. In mercantile law. The precise equality or equivalency of any given sum or quantity of money in the coin of one country, and the like sum or quantity of money in the coin of any other foreign country into which it is to be exchanged, supposing the money of such country to be of the precise weight and purity fixed by the mint standard of the respective countries. Story, Bills, § 30. Murphy v. Kastner, 50 N.J.Eq. 220, 24 A. 564; Blue Star S. S. Co. v. Keyser, D.C.Fla., 81 F. 510; Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend., N.Y., 224. The par of the currencies of any two countries means the equivalence of a certain amount of the currency of the one in the currency of the other, supposing the currency of both to be of the precise weight and purity fixed by their respective mints. The exchange between the two countries is said to be at par when bills are negotiated on this footing; i. e., when a bill for £100 drawn on London sells in Paris for 2,520 frs., and vice versa. Bowen, Pol. Econ. 284, 11 East, 267.

PAR. Lat. Equal.

Par delictum. Equal guilt. "This is not a case of par delictum. It is oppression on one side and submission on the other. It never can be predicated as par delictum when one holds the rod and the other bows to it." 6 Maule & S. 165. See In Pari Delicto.

Par oneri. Equal to the burden or charge, or to the detriment or damage.

PAR IN PAREM IMPERIUM NON HABET. Jenk.Cent. 174. An equal has no dominion over an equal.

PARACHRONISM. Error in the computation of time.

PARACIUM. The tenure between parceners, viz., that which the youngest owes to the eldest without homage or service. Domesday.

PARAGE, or PARAGIUM. An equality of blood or dignity, but more especially of land, in the partition of an inheritance between co-heirs. Co. Litt. 166b. More properly, however, an equality of condition among nobles, or persons holding by a noble tenure. Thus, when a fief is divided among brothers, the younger hold their part of the elder by parage; e., without any homage or service. Also the portion which a woman may obtain on her marriage. Cowell.

PARAGRAPH. A distinct part of a discourse or writing, any section or subdivision of writing or chapter which relates to particular point, whether consisting of one or many sentences. Lehmann v. Revell, 354 Ill. 262, 188 N.E. 531, 540.

An entire or integral statement of a cause of action equivalent to a count at common law. Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C.C.A. 304, 63 F. 488.

A part or section of a statute, pleading, affidavit, etc., which contains one article, the sense of which is complete. McClellan v. Hein, 56 Neb. 600, 77 N.W. 120; Hill v. Fairhaven & W. R. Co., 75 Conn. 177, 52 A. 725; Marine v. Packham, 3 C.C.A. 210, 52 F. 579. The term in an act of congress will be construed to mean section whenever to do so accords with the legislative intent; Alfrey v. Colbert, 93 C.C.A. 517, 168 F. 231.

PARALLEL. Extending in the same direction and in all parts equidistant; having the same direction or tendency. Postal Tel. C. Co. v. R. Co., 88 Va. 920, 14 S.E. 803.

In the specification of a patent the word has been construed in its popular sense of going side by side and not in its purely mathematical sense; 2 App.Cas. 423; and so in Fratt v. Woodward, 32 Cal. 231, 91 Am.Dec. 573; Williams v. Jackson, 5 Johns. (N.Y.) 489; where it was held that parallel lines were not necessarily straight lines. For two lines of street railway to be "parallel," within the meaning of a statute, it may not be necessary that the two lines should be parallel for the whole length of each or either route. Exact parallelism is not contemplated. Cronin v. Highland St. Ry. Co.. 144 Mass. 254, 10 N.E. 833. And see East St. Louis Connecting Ry., Co. v. Jarvis, 34 C.C.A. 639, 92 F. 735; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 16 S.Ct. 714, 161 U.S. 677, 40 L. Ed. 849.

PARALYSIS. In its popular rather than medical sense, signifies that the part of the body so afflicted, as an arm, is numb. Hudson v. Kansas City Rys. Co., Mo.Sup., 246 S.W. 576, 578.

PARAMOUNT. Above; upwards. Kelh. Norm. Dict. Paramount especifió, above specified. Plowd. 209a. Higher; superior; pre-eminent; of the highest rank or nature. Board of Com'rs of Big Horn County v. Bench Canal Drainage Dist., 56 Wyo. 285, 108 P.2d 590, 594. Malone v. Kansas City Rys. Co., Mo.App., 232 S.W. 782, 785. That which is superior; usually applied to the highest lord of the fee of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, as distinguished from the mesne (or intermediate) lord. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 135.

PARAMOUNT EQUITY. An equitable right or claim which is prior, superior, or preferable to that with which it is compared.

PARAMOUNT TITLE. In the law of real property, properly one which is superior to the title with which it is compared, in the sense that the former is the source or origin of the latter. It is, however, frequently used to denote a title which is simply better or stronger than another, or will prevail over it. Isaacs v. Maupin, 191 Ky. 527, 231 S.W. 49, 51. But this use is scarcely correct, unless the superiority consists in the seniority of the title spoken of as "paramount." Hoopes v. Meyer, 1 Nev. 444; Jones & Brindisi, Inc., v. Bernstein, 119 Misc.Rep. 697, 197 N.Y.S. 263, 265.

PARANOIA. See Insanity.

PARAPH. A flourish at the end of a signature. In the Middle Ages this was a sort of rude safeguard against forgery. Webster, Dict.

Also, as in Louisiana, the signature itself, such as the official signature of a notary. Harz v. Gowland, 126 La. 674, 52 So. 986-988.

PARAPHERNA. In the civil law. Goods brought by wife to husband over and above her dowry (dos). Voc. Jur. Utr.; Fleta, lib. 5, c. 23, § 6; Mack. C. L. § 529.

In mediaeval times the "res parapherna" were all the goods other than the "dos." These the husband did not own and of them the wife could make her will. 3 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 426.

PARAPHERNAL PROPERTY. See Paraphernalia.

PARAPHERNALIA. The separate property of a married woman, other than that which is included in her dowry, or dos.

The separate property of the wife is divided into dotal and extradotal. Dotal property is that which the wife brings to the husband to assist him in bearing the expenses of the marriage establishment. Extradotal property, otherwise called "paraphernal property," is that which forms no part of the dowry. Civ. Code La. art. 2335. It is property brought to the marriage by one of the spouses.

There can be no such thing as paraphernal property prior to marriage; Le Boeuf v. Melancon, 131 La. 148, 59 So. 102.

Those goods which a woman is allowed to have, after the death of her husband, besides her dower, consisting of her apparel and ornaments, suitable to her rank and degree. 2 Bl. Comm. 436.

Those goods which a wife could bequeath by her testament. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 427.

PARAPHERNAUX, BIENS. Fr. In French law. All the wife's property which is not subject to the regime dotal; and of these articles the wife has the entire administration; but she may allow the husband to enjoy them, and in that case he is not liable to account. Brown.

PARASCEVE. The sixth day of the last week in Lent, particularly called "Good Friday." In English law, it is a dies non juridicus.

PARASYNEXIS. In the civil law. A conventicle, or unlawful meeting.

PARATITLA. In the civil law. Notes or abstracts prefixed to titles of law, giving a summary of their contents. Cod. 1, 17, 1, 12. An abbreviated explanation of some titles or books of the Code or Digest.

PARATUM HABEO. Lat. I have him in readiness. The return by the sheriff to a capias ad respondendum, signifying that he has the defendant in readiness to be brought into court. This was a fiction, where the defendant was at large. Afterwards he was required, by statute, to take bail from the defendant, and he returned cepi corpus and bailbond. But still he might be ruled to bring in the body; White v. Fitler, 7 Pa. 533.

PARATUS EST VERIFICARE. Lat. He is ready to verify. The Latin form for concluding a pleading with a verification, (q. v.).

PARAVAIL. Inferior; subordinate. Tenant paravail signified the lowest tenant of land, being the tenant of a mesne lord. He was so called because he was supposed to make "avail" or profit of the land for another. Cowell; 2 Bl. Comm. 60.

PARCEL, v. To divide an estate. Bac. Abr. Conditions (0).

PARCEL, n. A small package or bundle. See Package.

The word "parcel" is not a sufficient description of the property alleged in an indictment to have been stolen. The prisoner was indicted for stealing "one parcel, of the value of one shilling, of the goods," etc. The parcel in question was taken from the hold of a vessel, out of a box broken open by the prisoner. Held an insufficient description; 7 Cox, C. C. 13.

A part or portion of land. State v. Jordan, 36 Fla. 1, 17 So. 742; Johnson v. Sirret, 153 N.Y. 51, 46 N.E. 1035; Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Town of Churdan, 196 Iowa 1057, 195 N.W. 996, 997. A part of an estate. Martin v. Cole, 38 Iowa, 141; 1 Comyns, Dig. Abatement (H 51), Grant (E 10). It may be synonymous with lot. Terre Haute v. Mack, 139 Ind. 99, 38 N.E. 468.

PARCEL MAKERS. Two officers in the exchequer who formerly made the parcels or items of the escheators' accounts, wherein they charged them with everything they had levied for the king during the term of their office. Cowell.

PARCELLA TERME. A parcel of land.

PARCELS. A description of property, formally set forth in a conveyance, together with the boundaries thereof, in order to its easy identification.

PARCELS, BILL OF. An account of the items composing a parcel or package of goods, transmitted with them to the purchaser. See, further, Bill of Parcels under "Bill," 8.

PARCENARY. The state or condition of holding title to lands jointly by parceners, before the common inheritance has been divided. Center v. Kramer, 112 Ohio St. 269, 147 N.E. 602, 605.

PARCENER. A joint heir; one who, with others, holds an estate in co-parcenary, (q. v.). Gibson v. Johnson, 331 Mo. 1198, 56 S.W.2d 783, 88 A.L.R. 369.

PARCHMENT. Sheep-skins dressed for writing, so called from Pergamus, Asia Minor, where they were invented. Used for deeds, and used for writs of summons in England previous to the judicature act, 1875. Wharton.

The skin of a lamb, sheep, goat, young calf, or other animal, prepared for writing on; also, any of various papers made in imitation thereof. Webster, Dict.

PARCO FRACTO. Pound-breach; also the name of an old English writ against one who violently breaks a pound and takes beasts which, for some trespass done, or some other just cause, were lawfully impounded.

PARCUS. A park, (q. v.). A pound for stray cattle. Spelman.

PARDON. An act of grace, proceeding from the power intrusted with the execution of the laws, which exempts the individual on whom it is bestowed from the punishment the law inflicts for a crime he has committed. tr. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 160, 8 L.Ed. 640; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 380, 18 L.Ed. 366; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 15 L. Ed. 421; Moore v. State, 43 N.J.Law, 241, 39 Am. Rep. 558; Ex parte Rice, 72 Tex.Cr.R. 587, 162 S. W. 891, 899; People v. Hale, 64 Cal.App. 523, 222 P. 148, 151; Ex parte Miers, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 592, 64 S.W.2d 778.

It releases punishment and blots out the existence of guilt, so that in the eyes of the law the offender is as innocent as if he had never committed the offense. U. S. ex rel. Palermo v. Smith, C.C.A.N.Y., 17 F.2d 534, 535; Ex parte Jones, 25 Okl.Cr. 347, 220 P. 978, 34 A.L.R. 206. It implies guilt and does not proceed on the theory of innocence of the person pardoned. State v. Cullen, 14 Wash.2d 105, 127 P.2d 257, 259.

A "pardon" releases the offender from the entire punishment prescribed for the offense, and from all the disabilities consequent on his conviction, while by a "parole" a convict is merely released before the expiration of his term, to remain subject during the remainder thereof to supervision by the public authority, and to return to imprisonment on violation of the condition of the parole. Board of Prison Com'rs v. De Moss, 157 Ky. 289, 163 S.W. 183, 187.

A pardon, to be effective, must be accepted; Burdick v. U. S., 35 S.Ct. 267, 268, 236 U.S. 79, 59 L.Ed. 476; but a commutation is merely a cessation of the exercise of sovereign authority, and does not obliterate guilt nor restore civil rights, and need not be accepted by the convict to be operative; Chapman v. Scott, D.C.Conn., 10 F.2d 156, 159; In re Charles, 115 Kan. 323, 222 P. 606, 608. A commutation is simply a remission of a part of the punishment, a substitution of a less penalty for the one originally imposed; State v. District Court of Eighteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Blaine County, 73 Mont. 541, 237 P. 525, 527; while a "pardon" avoids or terminates punishment for crime; U. S. v. Commissioner of Immigration at Port of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 162, 165.

The distinction between amnesty and pardon is one rather of philological interest than of legal importance. Knote v. U. S., 95 U.S. 149, 153, 24 L.Ed. 442, 443. This is so as to their ultimate effect, but there are incidental differences of importance. They are of different character and have different purposes. The one overlooks offense; the other remits punishment. The first is usually addressed to crimes against the sovereignty of the state, to political offenses, forgiveness being deemed more expedient for the public welfare than prosecution and punishment. The second condones infractions of the peace of the state. Amnesty is usually general, addressed to classes or even communities-a legislative act, or under legislation, constitutional or statutory-the act of the supreme magistrate. There may or may not be distinct acts of acceptance. If other rights are dependent upon it and are asserted, there is affirmative evidence of acceptance. Burdick v. U. S., 35 S.Ct. 267, 236 U.S. 79, 271, 59 L.Ed. 476. "Pardon" applies only to the individual, releases him from the punishment fixed by law for his specific offense, but does not affect the criminality of the same or similar acts when performed by other persons or repeated by the same person.

Absolute or Unconditional Pardon. One which frees the criminal without any condition whatever. That which reaches both the punishment prescribed for the offense and the guilt of the offender. It obliterates in legal contemplation the offense itself. Ex parte Collins, 32 Okl.Cr. 6, 239 P. 693, 696. It goes no further than to restore the accused to his civil rights and remit the penalty imposed for the particular offense of which he was convicted in so far as it remains unpaid. State v. Cullen, 14 Wash.2d 105, 127 P.2d 257, 259.

Conditional Pardon. One to, which a condition is annexed, performance of which is necessary to the validity of the pardon. Ex parte Hunt, 10 Ark. 284; State v. Fuller, 1 McCord, S.C., 178. A pardon which does not become operative until the grantee has performed some specific act, or where it becomes void when some specific event transpires. Ex parte Collins. 32 Okl.Cr. 6, 239 P. 693, 697. One granted on the condition that it shall only endure until the voluntary doing of some act by the person pardoned, or that it shall be revoked by a subsequent act on his part, as that he shall leave the state and never return. Ex parte Janes, 1 Nev. 319; State V. Wolfer, 53 Minn. 135, 54 N.W. 1065, 19 L.R.A. 783, 39 Am.St. Rep. 582; State v. Barnes, 32 S.C. 14, 10 S.E. 611, 6 L.R.A. 743, 17 Am.St.Rep. 832; People v. Burns, 77 Hun, 92, 28 N.Y.S. 300.

Full pardon. One freely and unconditionally absolving party from all legal consequences, direct and collateral, of crime and conviction. Warren v. State, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 71, 74 S.W.2d 1006, 1008.

Executive pardon. See Executive Pardon.

General Pardon. One granted to all the persons participating in a given criminal or treasonable offense (generally political), or to all offenders of a given class or against a certain statute or within certain limits of time. But "amnesty" is the more appropriate term for this. It may be express, as when a general declaration is made that all offenders of a certain class shall be pardoned, or implied, as in case of the repeal of a penal statute. Roberts v. State, 2 Over. (Tenn.) 423.

Partial pardon. That which remits only portion of punishment or absolves from only portion of legal consequences of crime. Warren v. State, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 71, 74 S.W.2d 1006, 1008.

PARDONERS. In old English law. Persons who carried about the pope's indulgences, and sold them to any who would buy them.

PARENS. Lat. In Roman law. A parent; originally and properly only the father or mother of the person spoken of; but also, by an extension of its meaning, any relative, male or female, in the line of direct ascent.

"PARENS" EST NOMEN GENERALE AD OMNE GENUS COGNATIONIS. "Parent" is a name general for every kind of relationship. Co. Litt. 80; Littleton § 108; Mag. Cart. Joh. c. 50.

PARENS PATRIÆ. Father of his country; parent of the country. In England, the king. In the United States, the state, as a sovereign-referring to the sovereign power of guardianship over persons under disability; In re Turner, 94 Kan. ns, 145 P. 871, 872, Ann.Cas.1916E, 1022; such as minors, and insane and incompetent persons; McIntosh v. Dill, 86 Okl. 1, 205 R 917, 925.

PARENT. The lawful father or the mother of a person. Appeal of Gibson, 154 Mass. 378; 28 N.E. 296; Ellis v. Hewitt, 15 Ga.App. 693, 84 S.E. 185, 187; In re Tombo, 86 Misc. 361, 149 N.Y.S. 219, 221; One who procreates, begets, or brings forth offspring. McDonald v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, Tex.Civ.App., 267 S.W. 1074, 1075.

This word is distinguished from "ancestors" in including only the immediate progenitors of the person, while the latter embraces his more remote relatives in the ascending line. The word "parents" should therefore not ordinarily be construed to include grandparents. In re Spooner's Estate, 172 Wis. 174, 177 N.W. 598, 600. But by the civil law, grandfathers and grandmothers, and other ascendants, were, in certain cases, considered parents. Dict. de Jur. Parents; Corn. v. Anderson, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 55; 2 Kent 159; 5 East 223.

The term literally can apply only to a father or mother related by blood, including the parent of an illegitimate child; Commonwealth v. Wibner, 73 Pa.Super.Ct. 349, 351; and excluding a stepfather or stepmother or one standing in loco parentis; State v. District Court of Second Judicial Dist. of Montana in and for Silver Bow County, 66 Mont. 427, 213 P. 802, 804; State v. Barger, 14 Ohio App. 127, 128; In re Remske, 95 Misc. 330, 160 N.Y.S. 715, 716; Coakley v. Coakley, 216 Mass. 71, 102 N.E. 930, 932, Ann. Cas.1915A, 867. In statutes, however, the word is commonly construed as including a stepmother; State v. Juvenile Court of Ramsey County, 163 Minn. 312, 204 N.W.

21, 22, (see. also, Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., v. Cole, 124 Miss. 299, 86 80. 802, 804); and likewise adopting parents; Ransom v. New York C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 93 Ohio St. 223, 112 N.E. 586, L.R.A.1916E, 704; Commonwealth v. Kirk, 212 Ky. 646, 279 S.W. 1091, 1092, 44 A.L.R. 816; In re Yates' Estate, 108 Kan. 721, 196 P. 1077; but not as including the father of an illegitimate child; People v. Rupp, 219 Ill.App. 269, 271; Howard v. U. S., D.C.Ky., 2 F.2d 170, 173; Ex parte Newsome, 212 Ala. 168, 102 So. 216, 218; People v. Fitzgerald, 167 App.Div. 85, 152 N.Y.S. 641, 643; State ex rel. Canfield v. Porterfield, 222 Mo.App. 553, 292 S.W. 85, 86.

PARENTELA. The sum of those persons who trace descent from one ancestor. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 296.

In old English law. Parentela, or de parentela se tollere, signified a renunciation of one's kindred and family. This was, according to ancient custom, done in open court, before the judge, and in the presence of twelve men, who made oath that they believed it was done for a just cause. We read of it in the laws of Henry I. After such abjuration, the person was incapable of inheriting anything from any of his relations, etc. Enc. Lond.

PARENTHESIS. Part of a sentence occurring in the middle thereof, and inclosed between marks like ( ), the omission of which part would not injure the grammatical construction of the rest of the sentence. Wharton; In re Schilling, 53 Fed. 81, 3 C.C.A. 440. A word, phrase, or sentence, by way of comment or explanation, inserted in, or attached to, a sentence which would be grammatically complete without it. State v. Morgan, 133 La. 1033, 63 So. 509, 512.

PARENTICIDE. One who murders a parent; also the crime so committed.

PARENTUM EST LIBEROS ALERE ATIAM NOTHOS. It is the duty of parents to support their children even when illegitimate. Lofft, .222.

PARERGON. One work executed in the intervals 'of another; a subordinate task. Particularly, the name of a work on the Canons, in great repute, by Ayliffe.

PARES. Lat. A person's peers or equals; as the jury for the trial of causes, who were originally the vassals or tenants of the lord, being the equals or peers of the parties litigant; and, as the lord's vassals judged each other in the lord's courts, so the sovereign's vassals, or the lords themselves, judged each other in the sovereign's courts. 3 Bl. Comm. 349.

PARES CURIE. Peers of the court. . Vassals who were bound to attend the lord's court.

PARES REGNI. Peers of the realm. Spelman.

PARESIS. In medical jurisprudence. Progressive general paralysis, involving or leading to the form of insanity known as "dementia paralytica." Popularly, but not very correctly, called "softening of the brain." See Insanity.

The term is applied to a group of mental and bodily symptoms, developing usually late in life and as a result of previous syphilis. The condition differs from the various insanities, in that definite alterations of the surface of the brain and its membranes are found, in the form of chronic inflammation. Loss of memory, passionate outbursts, delusions of grandeur, restlessness and insomnia, with final absolute dementia, are the chief mental symptoms, while physically muscular weakness, tremor, particularly of the lips and tongue, ataxia, and various convulsive seizures are seen. Losh v. Winters Nat. Bank & Trust Co., Ohio App., 46 N.E.2d 443, 448.

PARI CAUSA. Lat. With equal right; upon an equal footing; equivalent in rights or claims.

PARI DELICTO. Lat. In equal fault; in a similar offense or crime; equal in guilt or in legal fault. See In Pari Delicto.

PARI MATERIA. Lat. Of the same matter; on the same subject; as, laws pari materia must be construed with reference to each other. Bac.Abr. "Statute," I, 3; Dupont v. Mills, Del., 196 A. 168, 177, 119 A.L.R. 174.

PARI MUTUEL. A mutual stake or wager; a betting pool. Utah State Fair Ass'n v. Green, 68 Utah, 251, 249 P. 1016, 1028. See, also, Pompano Horse Club v. Eastern Racing Ass'n, 324 Mass. 393, 86 N.E.2d 903, 906.

PARI PASSU. Lat. By an equal progress; equably; ratably; without preference. Coote, Mortg. 56. Used especially of creditors who, in marshalling assets, are entitled to receive out of the same fund without any precedence over each other.

PARI PASSU BONDS. A name given in Scotland to certain bonds secured upon lands which share an equal benefit of the security. Where several securities are created over the same lands by separate bonds and dispositions in security, they would ordinarily have priority according to the date of registration of the sasine or bond, as the case may be. If it is intended to have them rank as pari passu, it is usual to insert a clause in each bond declaring that they shall be so-ranked without regard to their priority of registration. 9 Jurid. Rev. 74.

PARI RATIONE. Lat. For the like reason; by like mode of reasoning.

PARIA COPULANTUR PARIBUS. Like things-unite with like. Bac. Max.

PARIBUS SENTENTIIS REUS ABSOLVITUR. Where the opinions are equal, [where the court is equally divided,] the defendant is acquitted. 4 Inst. 64.

PARIES. Lat. In the civil law. A wall. Paries est, sive murus, sive maceria est. Dig. 50, 16, 157.

PARIES COMMUNIS. A common wall; a party-wall. Dig. 29, 2, 39.

PARIS, DECLARATION OF. See Declaration.

PARISH. In English ecclesiastical law. A circuit of ground, committed to the charge of one parson or vicar, or other minister having cure of souls therein. 1 Bl. Comm. 111. Wilson v. State, 34 Ohio St. 199. The precinct of a parish church, and the particular charge of a secular priest. Cowell. An ecclesiastical division of a town or district, subject to the ministry of one pastor. Brande.

In New England. A division of a town, originally territorial, but which now constitutes a quasi-corporation, consisting of those connected with a certain church. Weston v. Hunt, 2 Mass. 501. Synonymous with church and used in the same sense as society. Ayres v. Weed, 16 Conn. 299. A corporation established for the maintenance of public worship, which may be coterminous with a town, or include only part of it, A precinct or parish is a corporation established solely for the purpose of maintaining public worship, and its powers are limited to that object. It may raise money for building and keeping in repair its meetinghouse and Supporting its minister, but for no other purpose. A town is a civil and political corporation, established for municipal purposes. They may both subsist together-in the same territory, and be composed of the same persons. Milford v. Godfrey, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 91.

In Pennsylvania the term has no legal significa. tion and is used merely in its general sense. If used there in ecclesiastical divisions, it has just such importance and significance as may be given it under ecclesiastical regulations. In re St. Casimir's Polish Roman Catholic Church of Shenandoah, 273 Pa. 494, 117 A. 219, 220.

In Louisiana. A territorial division of the state corresponding to what is elsewhere called a "county." Sherman v. Parish of Vermillion, 51 La.Ann. 880, 25 So. 538; Attorney General v. Detroit Common Council, 112 Mich. 148, 70 N.W. 450, 37 L.R.A. 211.

PARISH APPRENTICE. In English law. The children of parents unable to maintain them may, by law, be apprenticed, by the guardians or overseers of their parish, to such persons as may be willing to receive them as apprentices. Such children are called "parish apprentices." 2 Steph. Comm. 230.

PARISH CHURCH. This expression has various significations. It is applied sometimes to a select body of Christians, forming a local spiritual association, and sometimes to the building in which the public worship of the inhabitants of, a parish IS celebrated; but the true legal notion of a parochial church is a consecrated place, having attached to it the rights of burial and the administration of the sacraments. Story, J., Pawlet v. Clark, 9 Cranch, 326, 3 L.Ed. 735.

PARISH CLERK. In English law. An officer, in former times often in holy orders, and appointed to officiate at the altar; now his duty consists chiefly in making responses in church to the minister. By common law he has a freehold in his office, but it seems now to be falling into desuetude. 2 Steph. Comm. 700; Mozley & Whiteley.

PARISH CONSTABLE. A petty constable exercising his functions within a given parish. Mozley & Whiteley. See Constable.

PARISH COURT. The name of a court established in each parish. in Louisiana, and corresponding to the county courts or common pleas courts in the other states. It has a limited civil jurisdiction, besides general probate powers.

PARISH OFFICERS. Church-wardens, overseers, and constables.

PARISH PRIESTS. In English law. The parson; a minister who holds a parish as a benefice. If the predial tithes are appropriated, he is called "rector;" if impropriated, "vicar." Wharton.

PARISHIONERS. Members of a parish. In England, for many purposes they form a body politic.

PARITOR. A beadle; a summoner to the courts of civil law.

PARITY. Equality. Arkansas State Highway Commission v. Otis & Co., 182 Ark. 242, 31 S.W.2d 427, 431.

PARIUM JUDICIUM. The judgment of peers; trial by a jury of one's peers or equals.

PARK, v. Voluntarily and temporarily to leave an automobile, especially on a street or highway, when not in use. Kastler v. Tures, 191 Wis. 120, 210 N.W. 415, 417; Ex parte Corvey, 220 Mo.App. 602, 287 S.W. 879, 881; Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., §§ 1191-1212, 2160.50, 5963.

PARK, n. In American law. An inclosed pleasure-ground in or near a city, set apart for the recreation of the public. Riverside v. MacLain, 210 Ill. 308, 71 N.E. 408, 66 L.R.A. 288, 102 Am.St. Rep. 164; People v. Green, 52 How. Prac., N.Y., 440; Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 28 P. 839, 16 L.R.A. 145; Ehmen v. Gothenburg, 50 Neb. 715, 70 N.W. 237. A pleasure ground for the recreation of the public to promote its health and enjoyment. Booth v. City of Minneapolis, 163 Minn. 223, 203 N.W. 625, 626; Williams v. Gallatin, 229 N.Y. 248, 128 N.E. 121, 122, 18 A.L.R. 1238.

A piece of ground enclosed for purposes of pleasure, exercise, amusement, or ornament. Perrin v. R. Co., 36 N. Y. 120; Blank v. Browne, 216 N.Y.S. 664, 668, 217 App. Div. 624. A place for the resort of the public for recreation, air, and light; a place open for everyone. Price v. Plainfield, 40 N.J.L. 613; Kennedy v. City of Nevada, 222 Mo.App.

459, 281 S.W. 56, 58; Baird v. Board of Recreation Com'rs of Village of South Orange, 108 N.J.Eq. 91, 154 A. 204, 208.

A detached tract of ground set apart and maintained for public use, generally of quite sizable proportions devoted to purposes of ornamentation and recreation, usually platted out with trees and ornamented in a way pleasing to the eye as well as furnishing an opportunity for open-air recreation. Kupelian v. Andrews, 233 N.Y. 278, 135 N. E. 502, 503; Ramstad v. Carr, 31 N. D. 504, 154 N.W. 195, 200, L.R.A.1916B, 1160; Los Angeles County v. Dodge, 51 Cal.App. 492, 197 P. 403, 409.

As applied to pleasure grounds and spaces or open places for public use or public recreation owned by towns, the term is largely one of quite modern usage, and until recent years such places were in popular speech spoken of as "squares" and "commons." Woodward v. City of Des Moines, 182 Iowa 1102, 165 N.W. 313, 314.

In English law. A tract of inclosed ground privileged for keeping wild beasts of the chase, particularly deer; an inclosed chase extending only over a man's own grounds. 2 Bl. Comm. 38; 13 Car. II, c. 10. A pound. Reg. Orig. 166; Cowell.

PARK-BOTE. To be quit of inclosing a park or any part thereof.

PARKER. A park-keeper.

PARKING. In municipal law and administration. A strip of land, lying either in the middle of the street or in the space between the building line and the sidewalk, or between the sidewalk and the driveway, intended to be kept as a park-like space, that is, not built upon, but beautified with turf, trees, flowerbeds, etc. See Downing v. Des Moines, 124 Iowa 289, 99 N.W. 1066. See, also, Parkway.

PARKING METER. A clock set on a post, measuring time of parking. It provides mechanical assistance in the enforcement of parking limitation. Cassidy v. City of Waterbury, 130 Conn. 237, 33 A.2d 142, 144; Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 78.10.

PARKING PLACE. A place where motor vehicles may be left parked or standing and removed by the owner at pleasure. Mobile Light & R. Co., 211 Ala. 525, 101 So. 177, 178, 34 A.L.R. 921.

PARKWAY. An ornamental part of a street which may be used for recreation purposes. Kupelian v. Andrews, 233 N.Y. 278, 135 N.E. 502. In that sense, substantially synonymous with "parking" (q. v.). Also, an attractive street or highway, ornamented with shrubbery and the like. Municipal Securities Corporation v. Kansas City, 265 Mo. 252, 177 S.W. 856, 860.

PARLE HILL, or PARLING HILL. A hill where courts were anciently held. Cowell.

PARLIAMENT. The supreme legislative assembly of Great Britain and Ireland, consisting of the king or queen and the three estates of the realm, viz., the lords spiritual, the lords temporal, and the commons. 1 Bl. Comm. 153.

High Court of Parliament. In English law. The English parliament, as composed of the/house of peers and house of commons; or the house of lords sitting in its judicial capacity.

PARLIAMENTARY. Relating or belonging to, connected with, enacted by or proceeding from, or characteristic of, the English parliament in particular, or any legislative body in general.

PARLIAMENTARY AGENTS. Persons who act as solicitors in promoting and carrying private bills through parliament. They are usually attorneys or solicitors, but they do not usually confine their practice to this particular department. Brown.

PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE. A committee of members of the house of peers or of the house of commons, appointed by either house for the purpose of making inquiries, by the examination of witnesses or otherwise, into matters which could not be conveniently inquired into by the whole house. Wharton.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW. The general body of enacted rules and recognized usages which governs the procedure of legislative assemblies and other deliberative bodies.

PARLIAMENTARY TAXES. See Tax.

PARLIAMENTUM. L. Lat. A legislative body in general or the English parliament in particular.

PARLIAMENTUM DIABOLICUM. A parliament held at Coventry, 38 Hen. VI., wherein Edward, Earl of March, (afterwards King Edward IV.,) and many of the chief nobility were attainted, was so called; but the acts then made were annulled by the succeeding parliament. Jacob.

PARLIAMENTUM INDOCTUM. Unlearned or lack-learning parliament. A name given to a parliament held at Coventry in the sixth year of Henry IV. under an ordinance requiring that no lawyer should be chosen knight, citizen, or burgess; "by reason whereof," says Sir Edward Coke, "this parliament was fruitless, and never a good law made thereat." 4 Inst. 48; 1 Bl. Comm. 177.

PARLIAMENTUM INSANUM. A parliament assembled at Oxford, 41 Hen. III., so styled from the madness of their proceedings, and because the lords came with armed men to it, and contentions grew very high between the king, lords, and commons, whereby many extraordinary things were done. Jacob.

PARLIAMENTUM RELIGIOSORUM. In most convents there has been a common room into which the brethren withdrew for conversation; conferences there being termed "parliamentum." Likewise, the societies of the two temples, or inns of court, call that assembly of the benchers or governors wherein they confer upon the common affairs of 'their several houses a "parliament." Jacob.

PAROCHIA EST LOCUS QUO DEGIT POPULUS ALICUJUS ECCLESIZE. 5 Coke, 67. A parish is a place in which the population of a certain church resides.

PAROCHIAL. Relating or belonging to a parish.

PAROCHIAL CHAPELS. In English law. Places of public worship in which the rites of sacrament and sepulture are performed.

PAROL. A word; speech; hence, oral or verbal; expressed or evidenced by speech only; not expressed by writing; not expressed by sealed instrument.

The pleadings in an action are also, in old law French, denominated the "parol," because they were formerly actual viva voce pleadings in court, and not mere written allegations, as at present. Brown.

As to parol "Agreement," "Arrest," "Demurrer," "Lease," and "Promise," see those titles.

PAROL EVIDENCE. Oral or verbal evidence; that which is given by word of mouth; the ordinary kind of evidence, given by witnesses in court. 3 Bl.Comm. 369. In a particular sense, and with reference to contracts, deeds, wills, and other writings, parol evidence is the same as extraneous evidence or evidence aliunde. See, also, Aliunde; Extraneous Evidence; Oral Evidence.

PAROL EVIDENCE RULE. Under this rule, when parties put their agreement in writing, all previous oral agreements merge in the writing and a contract as written cannot be modified or changed by parol evidence, in the absence of a plea of mistake or fraud in the preparation of the writing. Russell v. Halteman's Adm'x, 287 Ky. 404, 153 S.W.2d 899, 904. But rule does not forbid a resort to parol evidence not inconsistent with the matters stated in the writing. Elkins v. Super-Cold Southwest Co., Tex.Civ.App., 157 S.W. 2d 946, 947.

Under this rule, parol or extrinsic evidence is not admissible to add to, subtract from, vary or contradict judicial or official records or documents, or written instruments which dispose of property or are contractual in nature, and which are valid, complete, unambiguous and unaffected by accident or mistake. Wheeler, Kelly & Hagny Inv. Co. v. Curts, 158 Kan. 312, 147 P.2d 737, 740.

PAROLE. In military law. A promise given by a prisoner of war, when he has leave to depart from custody, that he will return at the time appointed, unless discharged. Webster.

An engagement by a prisoner of war, upon being set at liberty, that he will not again take up arms against the government by whose forces he was captured, either for a limited period or while hostilities continue.

In criminal law. A conditional release; condition being that, if prisoner makes good, he will receive an absolute discharge from balance of sentence, but, if he does not, he will be returned to serve unexpired time. In re Eddinger, 236 Mich. 668, 211 N.W. 54, 55; Crooks v. Sanders, 123 S.C. 28, 115 S.E. 760, 762, 28 A.L.R. 940; Board of Prison Com'rs v. De Moss, 157 Ky. 289, 163 S.W. 183, 187; Duehay v. Thompson, C.C.A. Wash., 223 F. 305, 307; In re Sutton, 50 Mont. 88, 145 P. 6, 8, Ann.Cas.1917A, 1223. Release of convict from imprisonment on certain conditions to be observed by him, and suspension of sentence during liberty thus granted. Ex parte Foster, 60 Okl.Cr.App. 50, 61 P.2d 37, 39.

PARS RATIONABILIS. That part of a man's goods which the law gave to his widow and children. 2 Bl.Comm. 492.

PARS REA. A party defendant. St. Marlbr. c. 13.

PARS VISCERUM MATRIS. Part of the bowels of the mother; i. e., an unborn child.

PARSON. The rector of a church; one that has full possession of all the rights of a parochial church. The appellation of "parson," however it may be depreciated by familiar, clownish, and indiscriminate use, is the most legal, most beneficial, and most honorable title that a parish priest can enjoy, because such a one, Sir Edward Coke observes, and he only, is said vicem seu personam ecclesice gerere, (to represent and bear the person of the church.) 1 Bl.Comm. 384.

PARSON IMPARSONEE. In English law. A clerk or parson in full possession of a benefice. Cowell.

PARSON MORTAL. A rector instituted and inducted for his own life. But any collegiate or conventional body, to whom a church was forever appropriated, was termed "persona immortalis." Wharton.

PARSONAGE. A certain portion of lands, tithes, and offerings, established by law, for the maintenance of the minister who has the cure of souls. Tomlins.

The word is more generally used for the house set apart for the residence of the minister. Mozley & Whiteley. See Wells' Estate v. Congregational Church, 63 Vt. 116, 21 A. 270; Everett v. First Presbyterian Church, 53 N.J.Eq. 500, 32 A. 747; State v. Kittle, 87 W.Va. 526, 105 S.E. 775, 776; St. Joseph's Church v. City of Detroit, 189 Mich. 408, 155 N.W. 588, 590.

PART. An integral portion, something essentially belonging to a larger whole; that which together with another or others makes up a whole. First-Mechanics Nat. Bank of Trenton v. Norris, 134 N.J.Eq. 229, 34 A.2d 746, 749. A portion, share, or purpart. One of two duplicate originals of a conveyance or covenant, the other being called "counterpart." Also, in composition, partial or incomplete; as part payment, part performance. Cairo v. Bross, 9 Ill.App. 406.

PART AND PERTINENT. In the Scotch law of conveyancing. Formal words equivalent to the English "appurtenances." Bell.

As to part "Owner," "Payment," and "Performance," see those titles.

PARTAGE. In French law. A division made between co-proprietors of a particular estate held by them in common. It is the operation by means of which the goods of a succession are divided among the co-heirs; while licitation (q. v.) is an adjudication to the highest bidder of objects which are not divisible. Duverger.

PARTE INAUDITA. Lat. One side being unheard. Spoken of any action which is taken ex parte.

PARTE NON COMPARENTE. Lat. The party not having appeared. The condition of a cause called "default."

PARTE QUACUMQ1UE INTEGRANTE SUBLATA, TOLLITUR TOTUM. An integral part being taken away, the whole is taken away. 8 Coke, 41.

PARTEM ALIQUAM RECTE INTELLIGERE NEMO POTEST, ANTEQUAM TOTUM, ITERUM ATQUE ITERUM, PERLEGERIT. 3 Coke, 52. No one can rightly understand any part until he has read the whole again and again.

PARTES FINIS NIHIL HABUERUNT. In old pleading. The parties to the fine had nothing; that is, had no estate which could be conveyed by it. A plea to a fine which had been levied by a stranger. 2 Bl.Comm. 357; 1 P.Wms. 520.

PARTIAL. Relating to or constituting a part; not complete; not entire or universal; not general or total. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Baker, Tex.Civ.App., 65 S.W.2d 344, 346.

PARTIAL ACCOUNT. An account of an executor, administrator, guardian, etc., not exhibiting his entire dealings with the estate or fund from his appointment to final settlement, but covering only a portion of the time or of the estate. Marshall v. Coleman, 187 Ill. 556, 58 N.E. 628.

PARTIAL AVERAGE. Another name for particular average. Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 19 Fed. Cas. 370. See Average.

PARTIAL DEPENDENCY. Test as to existence of such dependency for purpose of workmen's compensation is whether contributions were relied on by claimants to aid and maintain them in present position in life and whether they were to substantial degree depending on support or aid of employee at time of death. Ritzman v. Industrial Commission, 353 Ill. 34, 186 N.E. 545, 546. Federal Underwriters Exchange v. Hinkle, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W.2d 122, 124.

PARTIAL EVICTION. That which takes place when the possessor is deprived of only a portion of his rights in the premises.

PARTIAL EVIDENCE. That which goes to establish a detached fact, in a series tending to the fact in dispute.

It may be received, subject to be rejected as incompetent, unless connected with the fact in dispute by proof of other facts; for example, on an issue of title to real property, evidence of the continued possession of a remote occupant is partial, for it is of a detached fact, which may or may not be afterwards connected with the fact in dispute. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1834; Or. Laws 1920, § 696 (Code 1930, § 9-111).

PARTIAL INSANITY. Mental unsoundness always existing, although only occasionally manifest; monomania. 3 Add. 79.

PARTIAL LOSS. A loss of a part of a thing or of its value, or any damage not amounting (actually or constructively) to its entire destruction; as contrasted with total loss.

Partial loss is one in which the damage done to the thing insured is not so complete as to amount to a total loss, either actual or constructive. In every such case the underwriter is liable to pay such proportion of the sum which would be payable on total loss as the damage sustained by the subject of insurance bears to the whole value at the time of insurance. 2 Steph.Comm. 132, 133; Crump. Ins. § 331; Mozley & Whiteley. Partial loss implies a damage sustained by the ship or cargo, which falls upon the respective owners of the property so damaged; and, when happening from any peril insured against by the policy, the owners are to be indemnified by the underwriters, unless in cases excepted by the express terms of the policy. Padelford v. Boardman, 4 Mass. 548; Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 65; Willard v. Insurance Co., 30 Mo. 35.

PARTIAL PAYMENT. See Payment.

PARTICEPS. Lat. A participant; a sharer; anciently, a part owner, or parcener.

PARTICEPS CRIMINIS. A participant in a crime; an accomplice. One who shares or co-operates in a criminal offense, tort, or fraud. Alberger v. White, '117 Mo. 347, 23 S.W. 92; Statct v. Fox, 70 N.J.L. 353, 57 A. 270.

PARTICIPATE. To receive or have a part or share of; to partake of; experience in common with others; to have or enjoy a part or share in common with others; partake; as to "participate" in a discussion. To take a part in; as to participate in joys or sorrows. Bew v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 95 N.J.L. 533, 112 A. 859, 860, 14 A.L.R. 983. To take equal shares and proportions; to share or divide. 6 Ctl. 696. Participate in an estate. To take as tenants in common. 28 Bea^{y}. 266.

PARTICIPES PLURES SUNT QUASI UNUM CORPUS IN EO QUOD UNUM JUS HABENT, ET OPORTET QUOD CORPUS SIT INTEGRUM, ET QUOD IN NULLA PARTE SIT DEFECTUS. Co. Litt. 4. Many parceners are as one body, inasmuch as they have one right, and it is necessary that the body be perfect, and that there be a defect in no part.

PARTICULA. A small piece of land.

PARTICULAR. Relating to a part or portion of anything; separate; sole; single; individual; specific; local; comprising a part only; partial in extent; not universal. Opposed to general. State v. Patterson, 60 Idaho 67, 88 P.2d 493, 497. Minneapolis Steel & Machinery Co. v. Casey Land Agency, 51 N.D. 832, 201 N.W. 172, 175.

As to particular "Average," "Custom," "Estate," "Malice," and "Partnership," see those titles.

PARTICULAR LIEN. A particular lien is a right to retain a thing for some charge or claim growing out of, or connected with, the identical thing.

Right to retain property of another on account of labor employed or money expended on that specific property, and such lien may arise by implication of law, usages of a trade, or by express contract, General Motors Acceptance Corporation v. Vaughn, 358 Ill. 541, 193 N.E. 483, 485.

PARTICULAR STATEMENT. This term, in use in Pennsylvania, denotes a statement which a plaintiff may be required to file, exhibiting in detail the items of his claim, (or its nature, if single,) with the dates and sums. It is a species of declaration, but is informal and not required to be methodical. Dixon v. Sturgeon, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 28.

PARTICULAR TENANT. The tenant of a particular estate. 2 Bl.Comm. 274. See Estate.

PARTICULARITY, in a pleading, affidavit, or the like, is the detailed statement of particulars.

PARTICULARS. The details of a claim, or the separate items of an account. When these are stated in an orderly form, for the information of a defendant, the statement is called a "bill of particulars," (q. v.).

PARTICULARS OF BREACHES AND OBJECTIONS. In an action brought, in England, for the infringement of letters patent, the plaintiff is bound to deliver with his declaration (now with his statement of claim) particulars (i. e., details) of the breaches which he complains of. Sweet.

PARTICULARS OF CRIMINAL CHARGES. A prosecutor, when a charge is general, is frequently ordered to give the defendant a statement of the acts charged, which is called, in England, the "particulars" of the charges.

PARTICULARS OF SALE. When property such as land, houses, shares, reversions, etc., is to be sold by auction, it is usually described in a document called the "particulars," copies of which are distributed among intending bidders. They should fairly and accurately describe the property. Dart, Vend. 113; 1 Da^{y}. Con^{y}. 511.

PARTIDA. Span. Part; a part. See Las Partidas.

PARTIES. The persons who take part in the performance of any act, or who are directly interested in any affair, contract, or conveyance, or who are actively concerned in the prosecution and defense of any legal proceeding. U. S. to Use of Edward Hines Lumber Co. v. Henderlong, C.C.Ind., 102 F. 2; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 672, 18 L. Ed. 427; Green v. Bogue, 15 S.Ct. 975, 158 U.S. 478, 39 L.Ed. 1061; Hughes v. Jones, 116 N.Y. 67, 22 N. E. 446, 5 L.R.A. 637, 15 Am.St.Rep. 386. See also Party.

In the Roman civil law, the parties were designated as "actor" and "recs." In the common law, they are called "plaintiff" and "defendant;" in real actions, "demandant" and "tenant;" in equity, "complainant" or "plaintiff" and "defendant;" in Scotch law, "pursuer" and "defender;" in admiralty practice, "libelant" and "respondent;" in appeals, "appellant" and "respondent," sometimes, "plaintiff in error" and "defendant in error;" in criminal proceedings, "prosecutor" and "prisoner."

Classification

Formal, or proper parties are those who have no interest in the controversy between the immediate litigants, but have an interest in the subject-matter which may be conveniently settled in the suit, and thereby prevent further litigation; they may be male parties or not, at the option of the complainant. Chadbourne v. Coe, 2 C.C.A. 327, 51 F. 479; Sexton v. Sutherland, 37 N.D. 500, 164 N.W. 278, 281; Consolidated Gas Co. of New York v. Newton, D.C.N.Y., 256 F. 238, 245; State v. Municipal Savings & Loan Co., 111 Ohio St. 178, 144 N.E. 736, 740. Necessary parties are those parties who have such an interest in the subject-matter of a suit in equity, or whose rights are so involved in the controversy, that no complete and effective decree can be made, disposing of the matters in issue and dispensing complete justice, unless they are before the court in such a manner as to entitle them to be heard in vindication or protection of their interests. Chandler v. Ward, 188 Ill. 322, 58 N.E. 919; Chadbourne v. Coe, 2 C. C.A. 327, 51 F. 480; Burrill v. Garst, 19 R.I. 38, 31 A. 436; Castle v. Madison, 113 Wis. 346, 89 N. W. 156; Iowa County Sup'rs v. Mineral Point R.

Co., 24 Wis. 132. Nominal parties are those who are joined as plaintiffs or defendants, not because they have any real interest in the subject-matter or because any relief is demanded as against them, but merely because the technical rules of pleading require their presence on the record. It should be noted that some courts make a further distinction between "necessary" parties and "indispensable" parties. Thus, it is said that the supreme court of the United States divides parties in equity suits into three different classes: (1) Formal parties, who have no interest in the controversy between the immediate litigants, but have such an interest in the subject-matter as may be conveniently settled in the suit, and thereby prevent further litigation; (2) necessary parties, who have an interest in the controversy, but whose interests are separable from those of the parties before the court, and will not be directly affected by a decree which does complete and full justice between them; (3) indispensable parties, who not only have an interest in the subject-matter of the controversy, but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting their interests or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final determination may be wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience. Hicklin v. Marco, 6 C.C.A.10, 56 F. 552, citing Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 139, 15 L.Ed. 158; Ribon v. Railroad Co., 16 Wall. 450, 21 L.Ed. 367; Williams v. Bankhead, 19 Wall. 571, 22 L.Ed. 184; Kendig v. Dean, 97 U.S. 425, 24 L.Ed. 1061; Barmore v. Darragh, Tex.Civ.App., 227 S.W. 522, 523; Jones v Bryant, 204 Ill.App. 609; Sexton v. Sutherland, 37 N.D. 500, 164 N.W. 278, 281; Hughes v. Yates, 195 Ind. 182, 144 N.E. 863, 864; Hyams v. Old Dominion Co., 113 Me. 337, 93 A. 899; Tupelo Townsite Co. v. Cook, 52 Okl. 703, 153 P. 164, 167; Shedd v. American Maize Products Co., 60 Ind. App. 146, 108 N.E. 610, 621.

PARTIES AND PRIVIES. Parties to a deed or contract are those with whom the deed or contract is actually made or entered into. By the term "privies," as applied to contracts, is frequently meant those between whom the contract is mutually binding, although not literally parties to such contract. Thus, in the case of a lease, the lessor and lessee are both parties and privies, the contract being literally made between the two, and also being mutually binding; but, if the lessee assign his interest to a third party, then a privity arises between the assignee and the original lessor, although such assignee is not literally a party to the original lease. Brown.

PARTIES IN INTEREST. Under General Order 6 (11 U.S.C.A. § 53) respecting transfer of bankruptcy proceedings for the greatest convenience of "parties in interest," the term "parties in interest" includes not only general creditors, but prior and secured creditors as well, and also the bankrupt and every other party, whose pecuniary interest is affected by the proceedings. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co, D.C.Ohio, 272 F. 527, 532.

PARTITIO. Lat. In the civil law. Partition; division. This word did not always signify dimidium, a dividing into halves. Dig. 50, 16, 164, 1.

PARTITIO LEGATA. A testamentary partition. This took place where the testator, in his will, directed the heir to divide the inheritance and deliver a designated portion thereof to a named legatee. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, §§ 781, 785.

rARTITION. The dividing of lands held by joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common, into distinct portions, so that they may hold them in severalty. And, in a less technical sense, any division of real or personal property between coowners or co-proprietors. Meacham v. Meacham, 91 Tenn. 532, 19 S.W. 757; Hudgins v. Sansom, 72 Tex. 229, 10 S.W. 104; Weiser v. Weiser, 5 Watts, Pa., 279, 30 Am.Dec. 313; Thomason v. Thompson, 123 Okl. 218, 253 P. 99, 102; Gillespie v. Jackson, 153 Tenn. 150, 281 S.W. 929, 932.

Partition does not create or convey a new or additional title or interest but merely severs the unity of possession. Noble v. Beach, 21 CaL2d 91, 130 P.2d 426, 430. Cleveland v. Milner, 141 Tex. 120, 170 S.W.2d 472, 475.

Owelty of partition. See Owelty.

Partition, deed of. In conveyancing. A species of primary or original conveyance between two or more joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common, by which they divide the lands so held among them in severalty, each taking a distinct part. 2 Bl.Comm. 323, 324.

Partition of a Succession. The partition of a succession is the division of the effects of which the succession is composed, among all the co-heirs, according to their respective rights. Partition is voluntary or judicial. It is voluntary when it is made among all the co-heirs present and of age, and by their mutual consent. It is judicial when it is made by the authority of the court, and according to the formalities prescribed by law. Every partition is either definitive or provisional. Definitive partition is that which is made in a permanent and irrevocable manner. Provisional partition is that which is made provisionally, either of certain things before the rest can be divided, or even of everything that is to be divided, when the parties are not in a situation to make an irrevocable partition. Civ. Code La. art. 1293, et seq.

PARTNER. A member of copartnership or firm; one who has united with others to form a partnership in business. See Partnership.

Parties intending to do a thing which in law constitutes partnership are "partners," whether their purpose was lo create or avoid relation. Pearl Bowling & Co. v. Hensley & Hensley, 259 Ky. 651, 83 S.W.2d 31, 32.

Dormant Partners

Those whose names are not known or do not appear as partners, but who nevertheless are silent partners, and partake of the profits, and thereby become partners, either absolutely to all intents and purposes, or at all events in respect to third parties. Dormant partners, in strictness of language, mean those who are merely passive in the firm, whether known or unknown, in contradistinction to those who are active and conduct the business of the firm, as principals. Story, Partn. § 80; Rowland v. Estes, 190 Pa. 111, 42 A. 528; National Bank of Salem v. Thomas, 47 N.Y. 15; Metcalf v. Officer, C.C.Iowa, 2 F. 640; Pooley v. Driver, 5 Ch.Div. 458.

Liquidating Partner

The partner who, upon the dissolution or insolvency of the firm, is appointed to settle its accounts, collect assets, adjust claims, and pay debts.

Nominal Partner

One whose name appears in connection with the business as a member of the firm, but who has no real interest in it.

Ostensible Partner

One whose name appears to the world as such, or who is held out to all persons having dealings with the firm in the character of a partner, whether or not he has any real interest in the firm. Civ.Code Ga.1910, § 3157.

Quasi Partners

Partners of lands, goods, or chattels who are not actual partners are sometimes so called. Poth. de Societe, App. no. 184.

Secret Partner

A dormant partner; one whose connection with the firm is really or professedly concealed from the world. In re Victor, D.C.Ga., 246 F. 727, 731.

Silent Partner, Sleeping Partner

Popular names for dormant partners or special partners.

Solvent Partner

This term does not mean one who has assets sufficient to pay his debts, but one who is not in bankruptcy, so that his property is open to joint creditors' appropriation by legal action and not subject to distribution in bankruptcy proceedings. Robinson v. Security Co., 87 Conn. 268, 87 A. 879, 881, Ann.Cas.1915C, 1170.

Special Partner

A member of a limited partnership, who furnishes certain funds to the common stock, and whose liability extends no further than the fund furnished. A partner whose responsibility is restricted to the amount of his investment. 3 Kent, Comm. 34.

Surviving Partner

The partner who, on the dissolution of the firm by the death of his copartner, occupies the position of a trustee to settle up its affairs.

PARTNERSHIP. A voluntary contract between two or more competent persons to place their money, effects, labor, and skill, or some or all of them, in lawful commerce or business, with the understanding that there shall be a proportional sharing of the profits and losses between them. Story, Partn. § 2; Colly. Partn. § 2; 3 Kent, Comm. 23. Preston v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 174 Or. 553, 149 P.2d 957, 961, 962. An association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit. Uniform Partnership Act, § 6(1). Schleicker v. Krier, 218 Wis. 376, 261 N.W. 413. A synallagmatic and commutative contract made between two or more persons for the mutual participation in the profits which may accrue from property, credit, skill, or industry, furnished in determined proportions by the parties. Civ. Code La. art. 2801.

Partnership is where two or more persons agree to carry on any business or adventure together, upon the terms of mutual participation in its profits and losses. Mozley & Whitley. And see Macomber v. Parker, 13 Pick., Mass., 181; Bucknam v. Barnum, 15 Conn. 71; Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Ross, 29 Ohio St. 431; In re Gibb's Estate, 157 Pa. 59, 27 A. 383, 22 L.R.A. 276; Wild v. Davenport, 48 N.J.L. 129, 7 A. 295, 57 Am.Rep. 552; Morse v. Pacific Ry. Co., 191 Ill. 356, 61 N.E. 104. It is in effect a contract of mutual agency, each partner acting as a principal in his own behalf and as agent for his copartners, and general rules of law applicable to agents apply with equal force in determining rights and liabilities of partners. Lindley v. Seward, Ind. App., 5 N.E.2d 998, 1006.

Commercial partnership. Trading partnership (q. v.).

General partnership. A partnership in which the parties carry on all their trade and business, whatever it may be, for the joint benefit and profit of all the parties concerned, whether the capital stock be limited or not, or the contributions thereto be equal or unequal. Story, Partn. § 74; Bigelow v. Elliot, 3 Fed.Cas. 351; Eldridge v. Troost, 3 Abb.Prac., N.S. (N.Y.) 23.

Limited partnership. A partnership consisting of one or more general partners, jointly and severally responsible as ordinary partners, and by whom the business is conducted, and one or more special partners, contributing in cash payments a specific sum as capital to the common stock, and who are not liable for the debts of the partnership beyond the fund so contributed. 1 Rev.St.N.Y. 764; Moorhead v. Seymour (City Ct. N.Y.) 77 N.Y.S. 1054; Taylor v. Webster, 39 N.J.Law, 104.

Mining partnership. See that title.

Particular partnership. One existing where the parties have united to share the benefits of a single individual transaction or enterprise. Spencer v. Jones, Tex.Civ.App., 47 S.W. 665.

Partnership assets. Property of any kind belonging to the firm as such (not the separate property of the individual partners) and available to the recourse of the creditors of the firm in the first instance.

Partnership at will. One designed to continue for no fixed period of time, but only during the pleasure of the parties, and which may be dissolved by any partner without previous notice.

Partnership debt. One due from the partnership or firm as such and not (primarily) from one of the individual partners.

Partnership in commendam. A partnership formed by a contract by which one person or partnership agrees to furnish another person or partnership a certain amount, either in property or money, to be employed by the person or partnership to whom it is furnished, in his or their own name or firm, on condition of receiving a share in the profits, in the proportion determined by the contract, and of being liable to losses and expenses to the amount furnished and no more. Civ. Code La. art. 2839.

Secret partnership. One where the existence of certain persons as partners is not avowed to the public by any of the partners. Deering v. Flanders, 49 N.H. 225.

Special partnership. At common law. One formed for the prosecution of a special branch of business, as distinguished from the general business of the parties, or for one particular venture or subject. Bigelow v. Elliot, 3 Fed.Cas. 351. A joint adventure. McDaniel v. State Fair of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 286 S.W. 513, 517. Under statutes. A limited partnership (q. v.).

Subpartnership. One formed where one partner in a firm makes a stranger a partner with him in his share of the profits of that firm.

Trading partnership. See that title.

Universal partnership. One in which the partners jointly agree to contribute to the common fund of the partnership the whole of their property, of whatever character, and future, as well as present. Poth. Societe, 29; Civ. Code La. art. 2829.

PARTURITION. The act of giving birth to a child.

PARTUS. Lat. Child; offspring; the child just before it is born, or immediately after its birth.

PARTUS EX LEGITIMO THORO NON CERTIUS NOSCIT MATREM QUAM GENITOREM SUUM. Fortes. 42. The offspring of a legitimate bed knows not his mother more certainly than his father.

PARTUS SEQUITUR VENTREM. The offspring follows the mother; .the brood of an animal belongs to the owner of the dam; the offspring of a slave belongs to the owner of the mother, or follow the condition of the mother. A maxim of the civil law, which has been adopted in the law of England in regard to animals, though never allowed in the case of human beings. 2 Bl.Comm. 390, 94; Fortes. 42.

PARTY, n. A person concerned or having or taking part in any affair, matter, transaction, or proceeding, considered individually. See Parties.

"Party" is a technical word, and has a precise meaning in legal parlance. By it is understood he or they by or against whom a suit is brought, whether in law or equity; the party plaintiff or defendant, whether composed of one or more individuals, and whether natural or legal persons, (they are parties in the writ, and parties on the record ;) and all others who may be affected by the suit, indirectly or consequentially, are persons interested, but not parties. Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. 405.

"Party" is not restricted to strict meaning of plaintiff or defendant in a lawsuit, being defined as one concerned in or privy to a matter as in the relation of accessory or confidant, and again a partial person, one who takes sides. State v. Orr, 53 Idaho 452, 24 P.2d 679.

Party aggrieved. Under statutes permitting any party aggrieved to appeal, one whose right has been directly and injuriously affected by action of court. Freeman v. Thompson, 216 N.C. 484, 5 S.E.2d 434, 436. Singer v. Allied Factors, 216 Minn. 443, 13 N.W.2d 378, 380.

Party and party. This phrase signifies the contending parties in an action; e., the plaintiff and defendant, as distinguished from the attorney and his client. It is used in connection with the subject of costs, which are differently taxed between party and party and between attorney and client. Brown.

Party injured. As used in divorce statute giving right of action only to party injured means party wronged by action of the other. Byers v. Byers, 223 N.C. 85, 25 S.E.2d 466, 469.

Party to be charged. A phrase used in the statute of frauds, meaning the party against whom the contract is sought to be enforced. Dominion Oil Co. v. Pou, Tex.Civ.App., 253 S.W. 317, 320; Kingfisher Mill & Elevator Co. v. Westbrook, 79 Okl. 188, 192 P. 209, 212. The party to be charged in the action—that is, the defendant. Jones v. School Dist. No. 48, 137 Ark. 414, 208 S.W. 798, 799; Graham v. Henderson Elevator Co., 60 Ind.App. 697, 111 N.E. 332, 335; Also, the vendor. Henry v. Reeser, 153 Ky. 8, 154 S.W. 371, 373; Kaiser v. Jones, 157 Ky. 607, 163 S.W. 741, 742; The owner of the realty rather than the party attempted to be charged or held liable in an action based on the memorandum. Lusky v. Keiser, 128 Tenn. 705, 164 S.W. 777, 778, L.R.A.1915C, 400.

Real party. In statutes requiring suits to be brought in the name of the "real party in interest," this term means the person who is actually and substantially interested in the subject-matter, as distinguished from one who has only a nominal, formal, or technical interest in it or connection with it. Hoagland v. Van Etten, 22 Neb. 681, 35 N.W. 870; Gruber v. Baker, 20 Nev. 453, 23 P. 858, 9 L.R.A. 302; Chew v. Brumagen, 13 Wall. 504, 20 L.Ed. 663. Gay v. Jackson County Board of Education, 205 Ky. 277, 265 S.W. 772, 773; Taylor v. Hurst, 186 Ky. 71, 216 S.W. 95, 96; Rothwell v. Knight, 37 Wyo. 11, 258 P. 576, 582.

Third parties. A term used to include all persons who are not parties to the contract, agreement, or instrument of writing by which their interest in the thing conveyed is sought to be affected. Morrison v. Trudeau (La.) 1 Mart., N.S., 384. But it is difficult to give a very definite idea of third persons; for sometimes those who are not parties to the contract, but who represent the rights of the original parties, as executors, are not to be considered third persons. 1 Bouvier, Inst. n. 1335. In statutes the words may have special meanings, and are often used to refer to creditors. Flemming v. Drake, 163 Ga. 872, 137 S.E. 268, 270; For other uses, see Behr v. Soth, 170 Minn. 278, 212 N.W. 461, 463; In re Thomas, D.C.N.Y., 283 F. 676; Cartwright v. Ennis, 215 Ky. 3, 284 S.W. 87; Oakdale Bank & Trust Co. v. Young & Leggett, 2 La. App. 586, 589; Bogdon v. Fort, 75 Colo. 231, 225 P. 247, 248; Churchill v. Stephens, 91 N.J.Law, 195, 102 A. 657, 658.

PARTY, adj. Relating or belonging to, or composed of, two or more parts or portions, or two or more persons or classes of persons.

Party jury. A jury de medietate linguce; (which title see.)

Party structure. A structure separating buildings, stories, or rooms which belong to different owners, or which are approached by distinct staircases or separate entrances from without, whether the same be a partition, arch, floor, or other structure. (St. 18 & 19 Viet. c. 122, § 3.) Mozley & Whiteley.

Party-wall. A wall built partly on the land of one owner, and partly on the land of another, for the common benefit of both in supporting timbers used in the construction of contiguous buildings. Brown v. Werner, 40 Md. 19. In the primary and most ordinary meaning of the term, a party-wall is (1) a wall of which the two adjoining owners are tenants in common. But it may also mean (2) a wall divided longitudinally into two strips, one belonging to each of the neighboring owners ; (3) a wall which belongs entirely to one of the adjoining owners, but is subject to an easement or right in the other to have it maintained as a dividing wall between the two tenements, (the term is so used in some of the English building acts;) or (4) a wall divided longitudinally into two moieties, each moiety being subject to a cross-easement in favor of the owner of the other moiety. Sweet. Gates v. Friedman, 83 W.Va. 710, 98 S. E. 892, 893; 'Carroll Blake Const. Co. v. Boyle, 140 Tenn. 166, 203 S.W. 945, 946; Smoot v. Heyl, 33 S. Ct. 336, 337, 227 U.S. 518, 57 L.Ed. 621; Feder v. Solomon, 3 N.J.Misc. 1189, 131 A. 290; Freedman v. Kensico Realty Co., 99 N.J.Eq. 115, 131 A. 916, 917.

PARUM. Lat. Little; but little.

PARUM CAVET NATURA. Nature takes little heed. Vandenheuvel v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N.Y.) 127, 166.

PARUM CAVISSE VIDETUR. Lat. In Roman law. He seems to have taken too little care; he seems to have been incautious, or not sufficiently upon his guard. A form of expression used by the judge or magistrate in pronouncing sentence of death upon a criminal. Festus, 325; Tayl. Civil Law, 81; 4 Bl.Comm. 362, note.

PARUM DIFFERUNT QUIE RE CONCORDANT. 2 Bulst. 86. Things which agree in substance differ but little.

PARUM EST LATAM ESSE SENTENTIAM NISI MANDETUR EXECUTIONI. It is little Cor to little purpose] that judgment be given unless it be committed to execution. Co. Litt. 289.

PARUM PROFICIT SCIRE QUID FIERI DEBET, SI NON COGNOSCAS QUOMODO SIT FACTURUM. 2 Inst. 503. It profits little to know what ought to be done, if you do not know how it is to be done.

PARVA SERJEANTIA. Petty serjeanty (q. v.).

PARVISE. An afternoon's exercise or moot for the instruction of young students, bearing the same name originally with the Parvisice (littlego) of Oxford. Wharton.

PARVUM CAPE. See Petit Cape.

PAS. In French. Precedence; right of going foremost.

PASCH. The passover; Easter.

PASCHA. In old English law and practice. Easter. De termino Paschce, of the term of Easter. Bract. fol. 246b.

PASCHA CLAUgUM. The octave of Easter, or Low-Sunday, which closes that solemnity.

PASCHA FLORIDUM. The Sunday before Easter, called "Palm-Sunday."

PASCHA RENTS. In English ecclesiastical law. Yearly tributes paid by the clergy to the bishop or archdeacon at their Easter visitations.

PASCUA. A particular meadow or pasture land set apart to feed cattle.

PASCUA SILVA. In the civil law. A feeding wood; a wood devoted to the feeding of cattle. Dig. 50, 16, 30, 5.

PASCUAGE. The grazing or pasturage of cattle.

PASS, v. In practice. To utter or pronounce; as when the court passes sentence upon a prisoner. Also to proceed; to be rendered or given; as when judgment is said to pass for the plaintiff in a suit.

In legislative parlance, a bill or resolution is said to pass when it is agreed to or enacted by the house, or when the body has sanctioned its adoption by the requisite majority of votes; in the same circumstances, the body is said to pass the bill or motion.

When an auditor appointed to examine into any accounts certifies to their correctness, he is said to pass them; i. e., they pass through the examination without being detained or sent back for inaccuracy or imperfection. Brown.

The term also means to examine into anythjng and then authoritatively determine the disputed questions which it involves. In this sense a jury is said to pass upon the rights or issues in litigation before them.

In the language of conveyancing, the term means to move from one person to another; to be transferred or conveyed from one owner to another; as in the phrase "the word 'heirs' will pass the fee."

To publish; utter; transfer; circulate; impose fraudulently. This is the meaning of the word when the offense of passing counterfeit money or a forged paper is spoken of.

"Pass," "utter," "publish," and "sell" are in some respects convertible terms, and, in a given case, "pass" may include utter, publish, and sell. The words "uttering" and "passing," used of notes, do not necessarily import that they are transferred as genuine. The words include any delivery of a note to another for value, with intent that it shall be put into circulation as money. U. S. v. Nelson, 1 Abb. 135, Fed. Cas. No. 15,861; Smith v. State, 13 Ga.App. 663, 79 S.E. 764, 766.

Passing a paper is putting it off in payment or exchange. Uttering it is a declaration that it is good, with an intention to pass, or an offer to pass it.

PASS, n. Permission to pass; a license to go or come; a certificate, emanating from authority, wherein it is declared that a designated person is permitted to go beyond certain boundaries which, without such authority, he could not lawfully pass. Also a ticket issued by a railroad or other transportation company, authorizing a designated person to travel free on its lines, between certain points or for a limited time.

PASSAGE. A way over water; an easement giving the right to pass over a piece of private water. Travel by sea; a voyage over water; the carriage of passengers by water; money paid for such carriage.

Enactment; the act of carrying a bill or resolution through a legislative or deliberative body in accordance with the prescribed forms and requisites; the emergence of the bill in the form of a law, or the motion in the form of a resolution. jewels for the purpose of reducing or smelting them into a different form and reselling the product. Gen. Code Ohio, I 6338.

PAWNEE. The person receiving a pawn, or to whom a pawn is made; the person to whom goods are delivered by another in pledge.

PAWNOR. The person pawning goods or delivering goods to another in pledge.

PAX ECCLESI1E. Lat. In old English law. The peace of the church. A particular privilege attached to a church; sanctuary (q. v.). Crabb, Eng. Law, 41; Cowell.

PAX REGIS. Lat. The peace of the king; that is, the peace, good order, and security for life and property which it is one of the objects of government to maintain, and which the king, as the personification of the power of the state, is supposed to guaranty to all persons within the protection of the law.

This name was also given, in ancient times, to a certain privileged district or sanctuary. The pax regis, or verge of the court, as it was afterwards called, extended from the palace-gate to the distance of three miles, three furlongs, three acres, nine feet, nine palms, and nine barleycorns. Crabb, Eng. Law, 41.

PAY, n. Compensation. Smith v. Jones, 102 Conn. 471, 129 A. 50, 51, 43 A.L.R. 952; Christopherson v. Reeves, 44 S.D. 634, 184 N.W. 1015, 1017. A fixed and definite amount given by law to persons in military service in consideration of and as compensation for their personal services. Sherburne v. U. S., 16 Ct.C1. 496.

PAY, v. To discharge a debt; to deliver to a creditor the value of a debt, either in money or in goods, for his acceptance. Beals v. Home Ins. Co., 36 N.Y. 522. Carpenter v. Dummit, 221 Ky. 67, 297 S.W. 695, 700; Vollmer v. Automobile Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 207 App.Div. 67, 202 N.Y.S. 374, 375.

The term, however, is sometimes limited to discharging an indebtedness by the use of money. Krahn v. Goodrich, 164 Wis. 600, 160 N.W. 1072, 1075. In re Bailey's Estate, 276 Pa. 147, 119 A. 907, 909.

PAYABLE. Capable of being paid; suitable to be paid; admitting or demanding payment; justly due; legally enforceable. In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 74 Fla. 250, 77 So. 102, 103.

A sum of money is said to be payable when a person is under an obligation to pay it. "Payable" may therefore signify an obligation to pay at a future time, but, when used without qualification, "payable" means that the debt is payable at once, as opposed to "owing." Sweet. And see First Nat. Bank v. Greenville Nat. Bank, 84 Tex. 40, 19 S.W. 334; Easton v. Hyde, 13 Minn. 91, Gil. 83.

PAYABLE AFTER SIGHT. Payable after acceptance of bill or protest for nonacceptance. Waggoner Banking Co. v. Gray County State Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W. 922, 925.

PAYABLE ON DEMAND. A bill payable on demand is payable on its date or within a reasonable time without grace. Waggoner Banking Co. v. Gray County State Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W. 922, 925.

At common law an instrument is payable on demand where no time for payment is expressed, unless the circumstances show a different intention. Coleman v. Page's Estate, 202 S.C. 486, 25 S.E.2d 559.

PAYEE. In mercantile law. The person in whose favor a bill of exchange, promissory note, or check is made or drawn; the person to whom Or to whose order a bill, note, or check is made payable. 3 Kent, Comm. 75; Thomson v. Findlater Hardware Co., Tex.Civ.App., 156 S.W. 301, 303.

PAYER, or PAYOR. One who pays, or who is to make a payment; particularly the person who is to make payment of a bill or note. Correlative to "payee."

PAYING QUANTITIES. This phrase, as used in oil and gas leases, when applied to the production of oil, means such a quantity as will pay a profit on the cost of operating the well. Pine v. Webster, 118 Okl. 12, 246 P. 429, 430; Waring v. Lockett, Tex.Civ.App., 118 S.W.2d 1000. Sufficient quantities to pay a reasonable profit on the whole sum required to be expended, including the cost of drilling, equipping, and operating the well. Pelham Petroleum Co. v. North, 78 Okl. 39, 188 P. 1069, 1073; Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co., Tex. Civ.App., 210 S.W. 851, 853.

If the well pays a profit, even small, over operating expenses, it produces in paying quantities, though it may never repay its cost, and the operation as a whole may prove unprofitable. Gypsy Oil Co. v. Marsh, 121 Okl. 135, 248 P. 329, 333, 48 A.L.R. 876; Masterson v. Amarillo Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 253 S.W. 908, 915.

PAYMASTER. An officer of the army or navy whose duty is to keep the pay-accounts and pay the wages of the officers and men. Any official charged with the disbursement of public money.

PAYMASTER GENERAL. In English law. The officer who makes the various payments out of the public money required for the different departments of the state by issuing drafts on the Bank of England. Sweet. In American law, the officer at the head of the pay corps of the army is so called, also the naval officer holding corresponding office and rank with reference to the pay department of the navy.

PAYMENT. The fulfilment of a promise, or the performance of an agreement.

A discharge of an obligation or debt, and part payment, if accepted, is a discharge pro tanto. Hattrem v. Burdick, 138 Or. 660, 6 P.2d 18, 19.

In a more restricted legal sense payment is the performance of a duty, promise, or obligation, or discharge of a debt or liability, by the delivery of money or other value by a debtor to a creditor, where the money or other valuable thing is tendered and accepted as extinguishing debt or obligation in whole or in part. Also the money or other thing so delivered. Root v. Kelley, 39 Misc. 530, 80 N.Y.Supp. 482; Moulton v. Robison, 27 N.H. 554; Clay v. Lakenan, 101 Mo.App. 563, 74 S.W. 391; Roberts v. Vonnegut, 58 Ind.App. 142, 104 N.E. 321, 326; Buhl Highway Dist. v. Allred, 41 Idaho 54, 238 P. 298, 304.

Satisfaction of a debt in coin of the realm. Hettrick Mfg. Co. v. Barish, 120 Misc.Rep. 673, 199 N.Y.S. 755, 760.

"Payment" implies discharge of an obligation according to its terms or by something given or received of agreed value equal to the debt or liability. Crutchfield v. Johnson & Latimer, 243 Ala. 73, 8 So.2d 412, 414. "Payment" of a debt involves both tender by debtor with intention to pay debt, and acceptance by creditor. In re McElmurray, D.C. S.C., 47 F.Supp. 15, 19. Anything delivered and accepted in discharge of obligation is payment of debt. Barret v. Clarke, 226 Ky. 109, 9 S.W.2d 1091, 1093.

Though "payment" in a broad sense includes money or anything else of value which the creditor accepts in satisfaction of his debt, it means in its restricted sense full satisfaction paid by money and not by exchange or compromise or by an accord and satisfaction. Roach v. McDonald, 187 Ala. 64, 65 So. 823. "Payment" is generally understood to mean a discharge by a compliance with the terms of the obligation or its equivalent, while in an "accord and satisfaction" the discharge is effected by the performance of terms other than those originally agreed on. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 197 S.W. 478, 480.

The execution and delivery of negotiable papers is not payment unless it is accepted by the parties in that sense. Seamen v. Muir, 72 Or. 583, 144 P. 121, 123; Cleve v. Craven Chemical Co., C.C.A.N.C., 18 F.2d 711, 712, 52 A.L.R. 980 ; Morrison v. Chapman, 155 App. Div. 509, 140 N.Y.S. 700, 702; Reid v. Topper, 32 Ariz. 381, 259 P. 397, 399; People v. Davis, 237 Mich. 165, 211 N.W. 36, 37.

Pleading. When the defendant alleges that he has paid the debt or claim laid in the declaration, this is called a "plea of payment."

General

Part payment. The reduction of any debt or demand by the payment of a sum less than the whole amount originally due. Young v. Perkins, 29 Minn. 173, 12 N.W. 515; Moffitt v. Carr, 48 Neb. 403, 67 N.W. 150, 58 Am.St.Rep. 696.

Partial payments. The United States rule of partial payments is to apply the payment, in the first place, to the discharge of the interest then due. If the payment exceeds the interest, the surplus goes toward discharging the principal, and the subsequent interest is to be computed on the balance of principal remaining due. If the payment be less than the interest, the surplus of the interest must not be taken to augment the principal; but interest continues on the former principal until the period of time when the payments, taken together, exceed the interest then due, to discharge which they are applied, and the surplus, if any, is to be applied towards the discharge of the principal, and the interest is to be computed on the balance as aforesaid, and this process continues until final settlement. Langton v. Kops, 41 N.D. 442, 171 N.W. 334, 336.

Payment into court. In practice. The act of a defendant in depositing the amount which he admits to be due, with the proper officer of the court, for the benefit of the plaintiff and in answer to his claim.

Voluntary payment. A payment made by a debtor of his own will and choice, as distinguished from one' exacted from him by process of execution or other compulsion. Redmond v. New York, 125 N.Y. 632, 26 N.E. 727; Rumford Chemical Works v. Ray, 19 R.I. 456, 34 A. 814; St. Johns Electric Co. v. City of St. Augustine, 81 Fla. 588, 88 So. 387; Greene v. E. H. Taylor, Jr. & Sons, 184 Ky. 739, 212 S.W. 925, 928. Payments may be voluntary which are made unwillingly as a choice of evils. Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Teasley, 198 Ala. 673, 73 So. 969, 971. But money paid under a mistake of the facts is not ordinarily treated as ,falling within the rule that money paid with full knowledge of all the facts relating to the claim paid constitutes a voluntary payment, and cannot be recovered back. Strong & Jarvis v. Oldsmobile Co. of Vermont, 96 Vt. 355, 120 A. 100, 102.

PAYS. Fr. Country. Trial per pays, trial by jury, (the country.) See Pais.

PEACE. The concord or final agreement hi a fine of land. 18 Edw. I. modus levandi finis.

The tranquility enjoyed by a political society, internally by the good order which reigns among its members, and externally by the good understanding it has with all other nations. Applied to the internal regulations of a nation, peace imports, in a technical sense, not merely a state of repose and security as opposed to one of violence or warfare, but likewise a state of public order and decorum. Hamm.N.P. 139; 12 Mod. 566; People v. Johnson, 86 Mich. 175, 48 N.W. 870, 13 L.R.A. 163, 24 Am.St.Rep. 116; State v. Reichman, 135 Tenn. 685, 188 S.W. 597, 601, Ann.Cas. 1918B, 889; Catlette v. U. S., C.C.A.W.Va., 132 F.2d 902, 906.

Articles of the peace. See Articles.

Bill of peace. See Bill.

Breach of peace. See Breach.

Conservator of the peace. See Conservator.

Justice of the peace. See that title.

Peace and quietude. Public tranquillity and bedience to law, and that public order and security which is commanded by the laws of a particular sovereign, lord or superior. Weakley v. State, 168 Ark. 1087, 273 S.W. 374, 377.

Peace of God. The words, "in the peace of God and the said commonwealth, then and there being," as used in indictments for homicide and in the definition of murder, mean merely that it is not murder to kill an alien enemy in time of war, provided such killing occur in the actual exercise of war. Whart.Cr.Law, § 310; State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341 (Gil. 315).

Peace of God and the church. In old English law. That rest and cessation which the king's subjects had from trouble and suit of law between the terms and on Sundays and holidays. Cowell; Spelman.

Peace of the state. The protection, security, and immunity from violence which the state undertakes to secure and extend to all persons within its jurisdiction and entitled to the benefit of its laws. This is part of the definition of murder, it being necessary that the victim should be "in the peace of the state," which now practically includes all persons except armed public enemies. See Murder. And see State v. Dunkley, 25 N.C. 121.

Peace officers. This term is variously defined by statute in the different states; but generally it includes sheriffs and their deputies, constables, marshals, members of the police force of cities, and other officers whose duty is to enforce and preserve the public peace. People v. Clinton, 28 App.Div. 478, 51 N.Y.S. 115; Jones v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 65 S.W. 92.

Public peace. The peace or tranquillity of the community in general; the good order and repose of the people composing a state or municipality. State v. Mancini, 91 Vt. 507, 101 A. 581, 583; State ex rel. Pollock v. Becker, 289 Mo. 660, 233 S.W. 641, 649. That invisible sense of security which every man feels so necessary to his comfort, and for which all governments are instituted. Redfield, J., in State v. Benedict, 11 Vt. 236, 34 Am.Dec. 688.

Public peace and quiet. Peace, tranquillity, and order and freedom from agitation or disturbance, the security, good order, and decorum guaranteed by civil society and by the law. State v. Brooks, 146 La. 325, 83 So. 637, 639.

PEACEABLE. Free from the character of force, violence, or trespass; as, a "peaceable entry" on lands. "Peaceable possession" of real estate is such as is acquiesced in by all other persons, including rival claimants, and not disturbed by any forcible attempt at ouster nor by adverse suits to recover the possession or the estate. Stanley v. Schwalby, 13 S.Ct. 418, 147 U.S. 508, 37 L.Ed. 259; Allaire v. Ketcham, 55 N.J.Eq. 168, 35 A. 900; North Fort Worth Townsite Co. v. Taylor, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 505; Mascall v. Murray, 76 Or. 637, 149 P. 517, 519.

PECULATION. The unlawful appropriation, by a depositary of public funds, of the property of the government intrusted to his care, to his own use, or that of others. Domat.Supp. au Droit Public, 1. 3, tit. 5; Bork v. People, 91 N.Y. 16.

The fraudulent misappropriation by one to his own use of money or goods intrusted to his care. White v. Commonwealth, 158 Va. 462, 164 S.E. 375, 3/8.

PECULATUS. Lat. In the civil law. The offense of stealing or embezzling the public money. 4 Bl.Comm. 121, 122.

PECULIAR, adj. Particular or special. Wolf v. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, 336 Mo. 746, 81 S. W.2d 323, 330.

PECULIAR, n. In ecclesiastical law. A parish or church in England which has jurisdiction of ecclesiastical matters within itself, and independent of the ordinary, and is subject only to the metropolitan.

PECULIARS, COURT OF. In English law. A branch of and annexed to the court of arches. It has a jurisdiction over all those parishes dispersed through the province of Canterbury, in the midst of other dioceses, which are exempt from the ordinary's jurisdiction, and subject to the metropolitan only.

PECULIUM. Lat. In Roman law. Such private property as might be held by a slave, wife, or son who was under the patria potestas, separate from the property of the father or master, and in the personal disposal of the owner.

PECULIUM CASTRENSE. In Roman law. That kind of peculium which a son acquired in war, or from his connection with the camp, (castrum.) Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 9, § 474.

PECUNIA. Lat. Originally and radically, property in cattle, or cattle themselves. So called because the wealth of the ancients consisted in cattle. Co.Litt. 207b.

In old English law. Goods and chattels. Spelman.

In the civil law. Property in general, real or personal; anything that is actually the subject of private property. In a narrower sense, personal property; fungible things. In the strictest sense, money. This has become the prevalent, and almost the exclusive, meaning of the word.

PECUNIA CONSTITUTA. In Roman law. Money owing (even upon a moral obligation) upon a day being fixed (constituta) for its payment, became recoverable upon the implied promise to pay on that day, in an action called "de pecunia constituta," the implied promise not amounting (of course) to a stipulatio. Brown.

PECUNIA DICITUR A PECUS, OMNES ENIM VETERUM DIVITIZE IN ANIMALIBUS CONSISTEBANT. Co.Litt. 207. Money (pecunia) is so called from cattle, (pecus,) because all the wealth of our ancestors consisted in cattle.

PECUNIA NON NUMERATA. In the civil law. Money not paid. The subject of an exception or plea in certain cases. Inst. 4, 13, 2.

PECUNIA NUMERATA. Money numbered or counted out; e., given in payment of a debt.

PECUNIA TRAJECTITIA. In the civil law. A loan in money, or in wares which the debtor purchases with the money to be sent by sea, and whereby the creditor, according to the contract, assumes the risk of the loss from the day of the departure of the vessel till the day of her arrival at her port of destination. Interest does not necessarily arise from this loan, but when is stipulated for it is termed "nauticum fcenus," (maritime interest,) and, because of the risk which the creditor assumes, he is permitted to receive a higher interest than usual. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 433.

PECUNIARY. Monetary; relating to money; financial; consisting of money or that which can be valued in money. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Benjamin, Tex.Civ.App., 202 S.W. 996, 998; In re Foster's Will, 143 Misc. 191, 256 N.Y.S. 383, 387.

As to pecuniary "Consideration," "Damages," and "Legacy," see those titles.

PECUNIARY BENEFITS. Include such things only as can be valued in money. Dallas Ry. & Terminal Co. v. Moore, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 104.

PECUNIARY CAUSES. In English ecclesiastical practice. Causes arising from the withholding of ecclesiastical dues, or the doing or neglecting some act relating to the church whereby some damage accrues to the plaintiff. 3 B1.Comm. 88.

PECUNIARY CONDITION. Within statute relative to obtaining goods by false pretenses, comprehends, not only money in hand, but property and all other assets of value constituting an existing fact that go to make up financial responsibility as a basis of credit. Dennis v. State, 16 Ala. App. 115, 75 So. 707, 708.

PECUNIARY LOSS. A loss of money, or of something by which money or something of money value may be acquired. Green v. Hudson River R. Co., 32 Barb. (N.Y.) 33.

As applied to a dependent's loss from death pecuniary loss means the reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit from the continued life of the deceased, to be inferred from proof of assistance by way of money, services, or other material benefits rendered prior to death. Standard Forgings Co. v. Holmstrom, 58 Ind.App. 306, 104 N.E. 872, 875; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Holloway's Adm'r, 168 Ky. 262, 181 S.W. 1126, 1129. "Pecuniary loss" is a term employed judicially to discriminath between a material loss which is susceptible of pecuniary valuation, and that inestimable loss of the society and companionship of the deceased relative upon which, in the nature of things, it IS not possible to set a pecuniary valuation. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 33 S.Ct. 192, 196, 227 U.S. 59, 57 L.Ed. 417, Ann.Cas.1914C, 176.

PEDONES. Foot-soldiers.

PEEPING TOM. A person who makes it a habit of sneaking up .to windows and peeping in, for the purpose generally of seeing the women of the household in the nude. Browder v. Cook, D.C. Idaho, 59 F.Supp. 225, 231.

PEERAGE. The rank or dignity of a peer or nobleman. Also the body of nobles taken collectively.

PEERESS. A woman who belongs to the nobility, which may be either in her own right or by right of marriage.

PEERS. In feudal law. The vassals of a lord who sat in his court as judges of their co-vassals, and were called "peers," as being each other's equals, or of the same condition. The nobility of Great Britain, being the lords temporal having seats in parliament, and including dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons.

Equals; those who are a man's equals in rank and station; thus "trial by a jury of his peers" means trial by jury of citizens. In re Grilli, 110 Misc. 45, 179 N.Y.S. 795, 797. For "judgment of his peers," see Judgment.

PEERS OF FEES. Vassals or tenants of the same lord, who were obliged to serve and attend him in his courts, being equal in function. These were termed "peers of fees," because holding fees of the lord, or because their business in court was to sit and judge, under their lords, of disputes arising upon fees; but, if there were too many in one lordship, the lord usually chose twelve, who had the title of peers, by way of distinction; whence, it is said, we derive our common juries and other peers. Cowell.

PEINE FORTE ET DURE. L. Fr. In old English law. A special form of punishment for those who, being arraigned for felony, obstinately "stood mute," that is, refused to plead or to put themselves upon trial. It is described as a combination of solitary confinement, slow starvation, and crushing the naked body with a great load of iron. This atrocious punishment was vulgarly called "pressing to death." PELLIPARIUS. A leather-seller or skinner. Jacob.

PELLOTA. The ball of a foot. 4 Inst. 308.

PELLS, CLERK (or MASTER) OF THE. Formerly, an officer in the English exchequer, who entered every teller's bill on the parchment rolls, i. e., "pens," commonly two in number, one being the pell or roll of receipts, and the other the pell or roll of disbursements.

PELT-WOOL. The wool pulled off the skin or pelt of dead sheep. 8 Hen. VI. c. 22.

PENAL. Punishable; inflicting a punishment; containing a penalty, or relating to a penalty. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Dewey Portland Cement Co., 113 Okl. 142, 242 P. 257.

PENAL ACTION. In practice. An action upon a penal statute; an action for the recovery of a penalty given by statute. 3 Steph. 535, 536; Smith Engineering Works v. Custer, 194 Okl. 318, 151 P.2d 404, 407, 408. An action which enforces a forfeiture or penalty for transgressing the law. The term "penal" is broader than "criminal," and relates to actions which are not necessarily criminal as well. The term "penalty" in its broad sense is a generic term which includes fines as well as other kinds of punishment, but in its narrowest sense is the amount recovered for violation of the statute law of the state or a municipal ordinance, which violation may or may not be a crime, and the term applies mostly to a pecuniary punishment. The word "forfeiture" is frequently used in civil as well as criminal law, and it is also used in actions for a penalty, although the action is a civil one. Silberman v. Skouras Theatres Corporation, 11 N.J.Misc. 907, 169 A. 170, 171.

Distinguished from a popular or qui tam action, in which the action is brought by the informer, to whom part of the penalty goes. A penal action or information is brought by an officer, and the penalty goes to the king. 1 Chit. Gen.Pr. 25, note; 2 Archb. Pr. 188. But in American law, the term includes actions brought by informers or other private persons, as well as those instituted by governments or public officers. In a broad sense, the term has been made to include all actions in which there may be a recovery of exemplary or vindictive damages, as suits for libel and slander, or in which special, double, or treble damages are given by statute, such as actions to recover money paid as usury or lost in gaming. See Bailey v. Dean, 5 Barb., N.Y., 303; Ashley v. Frame, 4 Kan.App. 265, 45 P. 927; Cole v. Groves, 134 Mass. 472. But in a more particular sense it means (1) an action on a statute which gives a certain penalty to be recovered by any person who will sue for it. Gawthrop v. Fairmont Coal Co., 74 W.Va. 39, 81 S.E. 560, 561; McNeely v. City of Natchez, 148 Miss. 268, 114 So. 484, 487, or (2) an action in which the judgment against the defendant is in the nature of a fine or is intended as a punishment, actions in which the recovery is to be compensatory in its purpose and effect not being penal actions but civil suits, though they may carry special damages by statute. Moller v. U. S., 6 C.C.A. 459, 57 F. 490; Atlanta v. Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works, 61 C.C.A. 387, 127 F. 23, 64 L.R.A. 721.

PENAL BILL. An instrument formerly in use, by which a party bound himself to pay a certain sum or sums of money, or to do certain acts, or, in default thereof, to pay a certain specified sum by way of penalty; thence termed a "penal sum." These instruments have been superseded by the use of a bond in a penal sum, with conditions. Brown.

PENAL BOND. A promise to pay a named sum of money, the penalty, with a condition underwritten that, if a stipulated collateral thing, other than the payment of money, be done or forborne, the obligation shall be void. Maryland Casualty Co. v, Kansas City, Mo., C.C.A.Mo., 128 F.2d 998, 1004.

PENAL CLAUSE. A secondary obligation entered into for purpose of enforcing performance of a primary obligation, and nature of penalty is by way of compensation for damages and not as punishment for failure to perform obligation. Civ.Code, art. 2117. Reimann v. New Orleans Public Service, 191 La. 1079, 187 So. 30, 31, 32. Also a clause in a statute declaring a penalty for a violation of the preceding clauses.

PENAL LAWS. Those which prohibit an act and impose a penalty for the commission of it. 2 Cro.Jac. 415. Strictly and properly speaking, a penal law is one imposing a penalty or punishment (and properly a pecuniary fine or mulct) for some offense of a public nature or wrong committed against the state. Kilton v. Providence Tool Co., 22 R.I. 605, 48 A. 1039; Wellman v. Mead, 93 Vt. 322, 107 A. 396, 397; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State, 73 Fla. 609, 74 So. 595, 600. Strictly speaking, statutes giving a private action against a wrongdoer are not penal in their nature, neither the liability imposed nor the remedy given being penal. If the wrong done is to the individual, the law giving him a right of action is remedial, rather than penal, though the sum to be recovered may be called a "penalty" or may consist in double or treble damages. See Huntington v. Attrill, 13 S.Ct. 224, 146 U.S. 657, 36 L.Ed. 1123; Diversey v. Smith, 103 Ill. 390, 42 Am.Rep. _14; Cullinan v. Burkhard, 41 Misc. 321, 84 N.Y.S. 825; Credit Men's Adjustment Co. v. Vickery, 62 Colo. 214, 161 P. 297, 298.

Where a statute is both penal and remedial, as where it is penal in one part and remedial in the other, it should be considered as a "penal statute" when it is sought to enforce the penalty, and as a "remedial statute" when it is sought to enforce the remedy. Collins v. Kidd, D.C.Tex., 38 F.Supp. 634, 637.

PENAL SERVITUDE. In English criminal law, is a punishment which consists in keeping an offender in confinement, and compelling him to labor. Steph.Crim.Dig. 2.

PENAL STATUTES. See Penal Laws.

PENAL SUM. A sum agreed upon in a bond, to be forfeited if the condition of the bond is not fulfilled.

PENALTY. The sum of money which the obligor of a bond undertakes to pay in the event of his omitting to perform or carry out the terms imposed upon him by the conditions of the bond. Brown. Stennick v. J. K. Lumber Co., 85 Or. 444, 161 P. 97, 106. An agreement to pay a greater sum, to secure the payment of a less sum. - It is conditional, and can be avoided by the payment of the less sum before the contingency agreed upon shall happen. By what name it is called is immaterial. McClain v. Continental Supply Co., 66 Old. 225, 168 P. 815, 816. A punishment; a punishment imposed by statute as a consequence of the commission of an offense. People v. Nedrow, 122 Ill. 363, 13 N.E. 533; State of Iowa v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., C.C., 37 F. 497, 3 L.R.A. 554; Miller v. Bopp, 136 La. 788, 67 So. 831. Also money recoverable by virtue of a statute imposing a payment by way of punishment. City of Buffalo v. Neubeck, 209 App.Div. 386, 204 N.Y.S. 737, 738. State v. Franklin, 63 Utah, 442, 226 P. 674, 676. Brown v. Cornmins Distilleries Corporation, D.C.Ky., 56 F.Supp. 941, 942.

To constitute a "punishment" or "penalty" there must be a deprivation of property or some right, such as the enjoyment of liberty. State v. Cowen, 231 Iowa 1117, 3 N. W.2d 176, 179, 182.

PENANCE. In ecclesiastical law. An ecclesiastical punishment inflicted by an ecclesiastical court for some spiritual offense. Ayl.Par. 420.

PENCIL. An instrument made of plumbago, red chalk, or other suitable substance, for writing without ink.

PENDENCY. Suspense; the state of being pendent or undecided; the state of an action, etc., after it has been begun, and before the final disposition of it.

PENDENS. Lat. Pending; as lis pendens, a pending suit.

PENDENT JURISDICTION. Original jurisdiction resting under federal claim extends to any nonfederal claim against same defendant if the federal question is substantial and the federal and nonfederal claims constitute a single cause of action. Fullerton v. Monongahela Connecting R. Co., D.C.Pa., 242 F.Supp. 622, 626. Such jurisdiction exists, even though it is determined that no cause of action is made out under federal grounds. Taussig v. Wellington Fund, Inc., D.C.Del., 187 F.Supp. 179, 191. The test is whether substantially the same evidence will prove both the federal and nonfederal claims. Wagner v. World Wide Automobiles Corp., D.C.N.Y., 201 F.Supp. 22, 24.

PENDENTE LITE. Lat. Pending the suit; during the actual progress of a suit; during litigation. In re Morrissey's Will, 91 N.J.Eq. 289, 107 A. 70, 71.

PENDENTE LITE NIHIL INNOVETUR. Co. Litt. 344. During a litigation nothing new should be introduced.

PENDENTES. In the civil law. The fruits of the earth not yet separated from the ground; the fruits hanging by the roots. Ersk.Inst. 2, 2, 4.

PENDICLE. In Scotch law. A piece or parcel of ground.

PENDING. Begun, but not yet completed; during; before the conclusion of; prior to the completion of; unsettled; undetermined; in process of settlement or adjustment. Thus, an action or suit is "pending" from its inception until the rendition of final judgment. Midkiff v. Colton, C.C. A.W.Va., 242 F. 373, 381; Ex parte Craig, C.C.A. N.Y., 274 F. 177, 187; United States v. 2,049.85 Acres of Land, More or Less, in Nueces County, Tex., D.C.Tex., 49 F.Supp. 20, 22. A criminal case is pending, in the sense that a court may correct its records, until the judgment is fully satisfied. Dunn v. State, 18 Okl.Cr. 493, 196 P. 739, 741.

The term "pending appeal" may refer to the time before appeal, and while an appeal is impending. Cincinnati, H. & D. Ry. Co. v. McCullom, 183 Ind. 556, 109 N.E. 206, 209, Ann.Cas.1917E, 1165.

PENETRATION. A term used in criminal law, and denoting (in cases of alleged rape) the insertion of the male part into the female parts to however slight an extent; and by which insertion the offense is complete without proof of emission. Brown.

PENITENTIALS. A compilation or list of sins and other penances, compiled in the Eastern Church and in the extreme west about the sixth century. Stubbs, Canon Law, in 1 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Amer. L. H. 252.

PEN ITENTIARY. A prison or place of punishment; the place of punishment in which convicts sentenced to confinement and hard labor are confined by the authority of the law. Millar v. State, 2 Kan. 175; Bowers v. Bowers, 114 Ohio St. 568, 151 N.E. 750, 751; State v. Rardon, 221 Ind. 154, 46 N.E.2d 605, 609.

PENNON. A standard, banner, or ensign carried in war.

PENNY. An English coin, being the twelfth part of a shilling. It was also used in America during the colonial period.

PENNYWEIGHT. A Troy weight, equal to twenty-four grains, or one-twentieth part of an ounce.

PENSAM. The full weight of twenty ounces.

PENSIO. Lat. In the civil law. A payment, properly, for the use of a thing. A rent; a payment for the use and occupation of another's house.

PENSION. A stated allowance out of the public treasury granted by government to an individual, or to his representatives, for his valuable services to the country, or in compensation for loss or damage sustained by him in the public service. Frisbie v. U. S., 15 S.Ct. 586, 157 U.S. 160, 39 L.Ed. 657; State ex rel. Wander v. Kimmel, 256 Mo. 611, 165 S.W. 1067, 1072; Dickey v. Jackson, 181 Iowa, 1155, 165 N.W. 387, 389; Hawkins v. Randolph, 149 Ark. 124, 231 S.W. 556, 559..

"Pensions" are in the nature of bounties of the government, which it has the right to give, withhold, distribute, or recall at Its discretion. Pecoy v. City of Chicago, 265 Ill. 78, 106 N,E. 435, 436; Rohe v. City of Covington, 255 Ky. 164, 73 S.W.2d 19, 20.

In civil, Scotch, and Spanish law. A rent; an annual rent.

In English practice. An annual payment made by each member of the inns of court. Cowell; Holthouse. Also an assembly of the members of the society of Gray's Inn, to consult of their affairs.

PENSION OF CHURCHES. In English ecclesiastical law. Certain sums of money paid to clergymen in lieu of tithes. A spiritual person may sue in the spiritual court for a pension originally granted and confirmed by the ordinary, but, where it is granted by a temporal person to a clerk, he cannot; as, if one grant an annuity to a parson, he must sue for it in the temporal courts. Cro. Eliz. 675.

PENSION WRIT. A peremptory order against a member of an inn of court who is in arrear for his pensions, (that is, for his periodical dues), or for other duties. Cowell.

PENSIONARY PARLIAMENT. A parliament of Charles II which was prolonged for nearly 18 years.

PENSIONER. One who is supported by an allowance at the will of another; a dependent. It is usually applied (in a public sense) to those who receive pensions or annuities from government, who are chiefly such as have retired from places of honor and emolument. Jacob.

Persons making periodical payments are sometimes so called. Thus, resident undergraduates of the university of Cambridge, who are not on the foundation of any college, are spoken of as "pensioners." Mozley & Whiteley.

The head of one of the Inns of Court, otherwise the Treasurer. Pension was used to designate meetings of the Benchers in Gray's Inn.

PENT-ROAD. A road shut up or closed at its terminal points. Wolcott v. Whitcomb, 40 Vt. 41.

PENTECOSTALS. In ecclesiastical law. Pious oblations made at the feast of Pentecost by parishioners to their priests, and sometimes by inferior churches or parishes to the principal mother churches. They are also called "Whitsun farthings." Wharton.

PEON. In Mexico. A debtor held by his creditor in a qualified servitude to work out the debt; a serf. Webster.

In India. A footman; a soldier; an inferior officer; a servant employed in the business of the revenue, police, or judicature.

PEONAGE. The state or condition of a peon as above defined; a condition of enforced servitude, by which the servitor is restrained of his liberty and compelled to labor in liquidation of some debt or obligation, real or pretended, against his will. Peonage Cases, D.C.Ala., 123 F. 671; In re Lewis,

C.C.Fla., 114 F. 963; Pierce v. U. S., C.C.A.Ga., 146 F.2d 84, 86.

PEONIA. In Spanish law. A portion of land which was formerly given to a simple soldier on the conquest of a country. It is now a quantity of land of different size in different provinces. In the Spanish possessions in America it measured fifty feet front and one hundred feet deep. 2 White, N.Rec. 49; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet., U.S. 444, 9 L.Ed. 1137. See Caballeria.

PEOPLE. A state; as the people of the state of New York. A nation in its collective and political capacity. Nesbitt v. Lushington, 4 Term R. 783; U. S. v. Quincy, 6 Pet. 467, 8 L.Ed. 458; U. S. v. Trumbull, D.C.Cal., 48 F. 99. The aggregate or mass of the individuals who constitute the state. Solon v. State, 54 Tex.Cr.R. 261, 114 S.W. 349; Loi Hoa v. Nagle, C.C.A.Cal., 13 F.2d 80, 81.

In a more restricted sense, and as generally used in constitutional law, the entire body of those citizens of a state or nation who are invested with political power for political purposes, that is, the qualified voters or electors. Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 543, 15 N.W. 609; Boyd v. Nebraska, 12 S.Ct. 375, 143 U.S. 135, 36 L.Ed. 103; In re Incurring of State Debts, 19 R.I. 610, 37 A. 14; In re Opinion of the Justices, 226 Mass. 607, 115 N.E. 921, 922; State v. City of Albuquerque, 31 N.M. 576, 249 P. 242, 247.

In neutrality laws, a government recognized by the United States. The Three Friends, D.C.Fla., 78 F. 175.

The word "people" may have various significations according to the connection in which it is used. When we speak of the rights of the people, or of the government of the people by law, or of the people as a non-political aggregate, we mean all the inhabitants of the state or nation, without distinction as to sex, age, or otherwise. But when reference is made to the people as the repository of sovereignty, or as the source of governmental power, or to popular government, we are in fact speaking of that selected and limited class of citizens to whom the constitution accords the elective franchise and the right of participation in the offices of government. Black, Const. Law 3d Ed. p, 30.

PEPPERCORN. A dried berry of the black pepper. In English law, the reservation of a merely nominal rent, on a lease, is sometimes expressed by a stipulation for the payment of a peppercorn.

PER. Lat. By, through, or by means of. Lea v. Helgerson, Tex.Civ.App., 228 S.W. 992, 993. When a writ of entry is sued out against the alienee of the original intruder or disseisor, or against his heir to whom the land has descended, it is said to be brought "in the per," because the writ then states that the tenant had not entry but by (per) the original wrong-doer. 3 B1.Comm. 181.

Words "by," "per," "pro," used to signature and adding description thereto, such as agent, shows that person signed official name alone and not personally. Agricultural Bond & Credit Corporation v. Courtenay Farmers' Co-op. Ass' n, 64 N.D. 253, 251 N.W. 881.

PER IES ET LIBRAM. Lat. In Roman law. The sale per ces et libram (with copper and scales) was a ceremony used in transferring res mancipi, in the emancipation of a son or slave, and in one of the forms of making a will. The parties having assembled, with a number of witnesses, and one who held a balance or scales, the purchaser struck the scales with a copper coin, repeating a formula by which he claimed the subject-matter of the transaction as his property, and handed the coin to the vendor.

PER ALLUVIONEM. Lat. In the civil law. By alluvion, or the gradual and imperceptible increase arising from deposit by water.

PER ALLUVIONEM ID VIDETUR ADJICI QUOD ITA PAULATIM ADJICITUR UT INTELLIGERE NON POSSUMUS QUANTUM QUOQUO MOMENTO TEMPORIS ADJICIATUR. That is said to be added by alluvion which is so added little by little that we cannot tell how much is added at any one moment of time. Dig. 41, 1, 7, 1; Fleta, 1. 3, c. 2, § 6.

PER AND CUL When a writ of entry is brought against a second alienee or descendant from the disseisor, it is said to be in the per and cui, because the form of the writ is that the tenant had not entry but by and under a prior alienee, to whom the intruder himself demised it, 3 Bl. Comm. 181.

PER AND POST. To come in in the per is to claim by or through the person last entitled to an estate; as the heirs or assigns of the grantee. To come in in the post is to claim by a paramount and prior title; as the lord by escheat.

PER ANNULUM ET BACULUM. L. Lat. In old English law. By ring and staff, or crozier. The symbolical mode of conferring an ecclesiastical investure. 1 B1.Comm. 378, 379.

PER ANNUM. Lat. By the year. A phrase still in common use. Ramsdell v. Hulett, 50 Kan. 440, 31 P. 1092; Matheson v. Marion County Lumber Co., 95 S.C. 352, 78 S.E. 970, 971.

PER AUTRE VIE. L. Fr. For or during another's life; for such period as another person 'shall live.

PER AVERSIONEM. Lat. In the civil law. By turning away. A term applied to that kind of sale where the goods are taken in bulk, and not by weight or measure, and for a single price; or where a piece of land is sold as containing in gross, by estimation, a certain number of acres. Poth.Cont.Sale, nn. 256, 309. So called because the buyer acts without particular examination or discrimination, turning his face, as it were, away. Calvin.

PER BOUCHE. L. Fr. By the mouth; orally. 3 How. State Tr. 1024.

PER CAPITA. Lat. By the heads or polls; according to the number of individuals; share and share alike. This term, derived from the civil law, is much used in the law of descent and distribution, and denotes that method of dividing an intestate estate by which an equal share is given to each of a number of persons, all of whom stand in equal degree to the decedent, without reference to their stocks or the right of representation. It is the antithesis of per stirpes, (q. v.). Buxton v. Noble, 146 Kan. 671, 73 P.2d 43, 47. MacGregor v. Roux, 198 Ga. 520, 32 S.E.2d 289, 291.

PER CENT. An abbreviation of the Latin "per centum," meaning by the hundred, or so many parts in the hundred, or so many hundredths. Blakeslee v. Mansfield, 66 Ill.App. 119.

PER CONSEQUENS. Lat. By consequence; consequently. Yearb. M. 9 Edw. III. 8.

PER CONSIDERATIONEM CURVE. Lat. In old practice. By the consideration (judgment) of the court. Yearb. M. 1 Edw. II. 2.

PER CURIAM. Lat. By the court. A phrase used in the reports to distinguish an opinion of the whole court from an opinion written by any one judge. Sometimes it denotes an opinion written by the chief justice or presiding judge. Clarke v. Western Assur. Co., 146 Pa. 561, 23 A. 248, 15 L.R.A. 127, 28 Am.St.Rep. 821.

PER DIEM. By the day; an allowance or amount of so much per day. Webster.

Generally, as used in connection with compensation, wages or salary, means pay for a day's service. Scroggie v. Scarborough, 162 S.C. 218, 160 S.E. 596, 599.

Constitution held to limit compensation which any legislature may fix for its successors to mileage and "per diem" ; hence, statute authorizing allowance of personal expenses to legislature was unconstitutional. Gallarno v. Long, 214 Iowa 805, 243 N.W. 719, 725.

Per diem is sometimes and by some courts held to be Included in the term fees and sometimes otherwise, and the two terms are not always synonymous. Anderson v. Beadle County, 51 S.D. 6, 211 N.W. 968, 969.

Term "per diem" as used in constitutional provision fixing compensation of members is synonymous with salary. Peay v. Nolan, 157 Tenn. 222, 7 S.W.2d 815, 817, 60 A.L.R. 408.

PER EUNDEM. Lat. By the same. This phrase is commonly used to express "by, or from the mouth of, the same judge." So "per eundem in eadem" means "by the same judge in the same case."

PER EXTENSUM. Lat. In old practice. At length.

PER FORMAM DONI. L. Lat. In English law. By the form of the gift; by the designation of the giver, and not by the operation of law. 2 Bl. Comm. 113, 191.

PER FRAUDEM. Lat. By fraud. Where a plea alleges matter of discharge, and the replication avers that the discharge was fraudulently obtained and is therefore invalid, it is called a "replication per fraudem."

PER INCURIAM. Lat. Through inadvertence. 35 Eng. Law & Eq. 302.

PER INDUSTRIAM HOMINIS. Lat. In old English law. By human industry. A term applied to the reclaiming or taming of wild animals by art, industry, and education. 2 Bl.Comm. 391.

PER INFORTUNIUM. Lat. By misadventure: In criminal law, homicide per infortunium is committed where a man, doing a lawful act, without any intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another. 4 Bl.Comm. 182. See Homicide.

PER LEGEM ANGLIE. Lat. By the law of England; by the curtesy. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 54, § 18.

PER LEGEM TERRZE. Lat. By the law of the land; by due process of law. U. S. v. Kendall, 26 Fed.Cas. 748; Appeal of Ervine, 16 Pa. 263, 55 Am. Dec. 499.

PER METAS ET BUNDAS. L. Lat. In old English law. By metes and bounds.

PER MINAS. Lat. By threats. See Duress.

PER MISADVENTURE. In old English law. By mischance. 4 Bl.Comm. 182. The same with per inf ortunium (q. v.).

PER MITTER LE DROIT. L. Fr. By passing the right. One of the modes by which releases at common law were said to inure was "per mitter le droit," as where a person who had been disseised released to the disseisor or his heir or feoffee. In such case, by the release, the right which was in the releasor was added to the possession of the releasee, and the two combined perfected the estate. Miller v. Emans, 19 N.Y. 387.

PER MITTER L'ESTATE. L. Fr. By passing the estate. At common law, if two or more are seised, either by deed, devise, or descent, as joint tenants or coparceners of the same estate, and one of them releases to the other, this is said to inure by way of "per mitter l'estate." Miller v. Emans, 19 N.Y. 388.

PER MY ET PER TOUT. L. Fr. By the half and by the whole. A phrase descriptive of the mode in which joint tenants hold the joint estate, the effect of which, technically considered, is that for purposes of tenure and survivorship each is the holder of the whole, but for purposes of alienation each has only his own share, which is presumed in law to be equal. 1 Washb.Real Prop. 406.

PER PALS, TRIAL. Trial by the country; i. e., by jury,

PER PROCURATION. By proxy; by one acting as an agent with special powers; as under a letter of attorney. These words "give notice to all persons that the agent is acting under a special and limited authority." 10 C.B. 689. The phrase is commonly abbreviated to "per proc.," or "p. p.," and is more used in the civil law and in England than in American law.

PER QUIE SERVITIA. Lat. A real action by which the grantee of a seigniory could compel the tenants of the grantor to attorn to himself. It was abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27, § 35.

PER QUOD. Lat. Whereby. When the declaration in an action of tort, after stating the acts complained of, goes on to allege the consequences of those acts as a ground of special damage to the plaintiff, the recital of such consequences is prefaced by these words, "per quod," whereby; and sometimes the phrase is used as the name of that clause of the declaration.

Words "actionable per quod" are those not actionable per se upon their face, but are only actionable in consequence of extrinsic facts showing circumstances under which they were said or the damages resulting to slandered party therefrom. Smith v. Mustain, 210 Ky. 445, 276 S.W. 154, 155, 44 A.L.R. 386.

PER QUOD CONSORTIUM AMISIT. Lat. In old pleading. Whereby he lost the company [of his wife.] A phrase used in the old declarations in actions of trespass by a husband for beating or ill using his wife, descriptive of the special damage he had sustained. 3 Bl.Comm. 140; Cro.Jac. 501, 538; Crocker v. Crocker, C.C.Mass., 98 F. 703.

PER QUOD SERVITIUM AMISIT. Lat. In old pleading. Whereby he lost the service [of his servant.] A phrase used in the old declarations in actions of trespass by a master, for beating or ill using his servant, descriptive of the special damage he had himself sustained. 3 Bl.Comm. 142; 9 Coke, 113a; Callaghan v. Lake Hopatcong Ice Co., 69 N.J.Law, 100, 54 A. 223. This action is commonly brought by the father for the seduction of his daughter, in which case very slight evidence of the relation of master and servant is necessary; but still some loss of service, or some expense, must be shown; 5 B. & P. 466; 5 Price, 641; Kendrick v. McCrary, 11 Ga. 603; Phelin v. Kenderdine, 20 Pa. 354.

PER RATIONES PERVENITUR AD LEGITIMAM RATIONEM. Litt. § 386. By reasoning we come to true reason.

PER RERUM NATURAM FACTUM NEGANTIS NULLA PROBATIO EST. It is in the nature of things that he who denies a fact is not bound to give proof.

PER SALTUM. Lat. By a leap or bound; by a sudden movement; passing over certain proceedings. 8 East, 511.

PER SAMPLE. By sample. A purchase so made is a collateral engagement that the goods shall be of a particular quality. 4 B. & Ald. 387.

PER SE. Lat. By himself or itself; in itself; taken alone; inherently; in isolation; unconnected with other matters. Findley v. Wilson, 115 Okl. 280, 242 P. 565, 568; Rowan v. Gazette Printing Co., 74 Mont. 326, 239 P. 1035, 1037.

PER STIRPES. Lat. By roots or stocks; by representation. This term, derived from the civil law, is much used in the law of descents and distribution, and denotes that method of dividing an intestate estate where a class or group of distributees take the share which their deceased would have been entitled to, taking thus by their right of representing such ancestor, and not as so many individuals. In re Shoch's Estate, 271 Pa. 165, 114 A. 505, 506; Petition of Gee, 44 R.I. 132, 115 A. 716, 717; Buxton v. Noble, 146 Kan. 671, 73 P.2d 43, 47.

PER TOTAM CURIAM. L. Lat. By the whole court. A common phrase in the old reports.

PER TOUT ET NON PER MY. L. Fr. By the whole, and not by the moiety. Where an estate in fee is given to a man and his wife, they cannot take the estate by moieties, but both are seised of the entirety, per tout et non per my. 2 Bl.Comm. 182.

PER UNIVERSITATEM. Lat. In the civil law. By an aggregate or whole; as an entirety. The term described the acquisition of an entire estate by one act or fact, as distinguished from the acquisition of single or detached things.

PER VADIUM. L. Lat. In old practice. By gage. Words in the old writs of attachment or pone. 3 Bl.Comm. 280.

PER VARIOS ACTUS LEGEM EXPERIENTIA FACIT. By various acts experience frames the law. 4 Inst. 50.

PER VERBA DE FUTURO. Lat. By words of the future [tense.] A phrase applied to contracts of marriage. 1 Bl.Comm. 439; 2 Kent, Comm. 87.

PER VERBA DE PRAZESENTI. Lat. By words of the present [tense.] A phrase applied to contracts of marriage. 1 Bl.Comm. 439.

PER VISUM ECCLESIiE. Lat. In old English law. By view of the church; under the supervision of the church. The disposition of intestates' goods per visum ecclesice was one of the articles confirmed to the prelates by King John's Magna Charta. 3 Bl.Comm. 96.

PER VIVAM VOCEM. Lat. In old English law. By the living voice; the same with viva voce. Bract. fol. 95.

PER YEAR, in a contract, is equivalent to the word "annually." Curtiss v. Howell, 39 N.Y. 211; Larson v. Augustana Colonization Ass'n of North America, 155 Minn. 1, 192 N.W. 108.

PERAMBULATION. The act or custom of walking over the boundaries of a district or piece of land, either for the purpose of determining them or of preserving evidence of them. Thus, in many parishes in England, it is the custom for the parishioners to perambulate the boundaries of the parish in rogation week in every year. Such a custom entitles them to enter any man's land and abate nuisances in their way. 'Phillim.Ecc. Law, 1867; Hunt, Bound. 103; Sweet; Greenville v. Mason, 57 N.H. 385.

The custom has now largely fallen into disuse. Cent. Dict.

PERAMBULATIONE FACIENDA, WRIT DE. In English law. The name of a writ which is sued by consent of both parties when they are in doubt as to the bounds of their respective estates. It is directed to the sheriff to make perambulation, and to set the bounds and limits between them in certainty. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 133.

PERCA. A perch of land; sixteen and one-half • feet. See Perch.

PERCEIVABLE RISK. Risk which indefinite and uncertain. Martin v. Hodson, 93 N.H. 66, 35 A.2d 402, 404.

PERCEPTION. Taking into possession. Thus, perception of crops or of profits is reducing them to possession. Used of money, it means the counting out and payment of a debt. Also used for food due to soldiers. Vicat, Voc.Jur.

PERCEPTURA. In old records. A wear; a place in a river made up with banks, dams, etc., for the better convenience of preserving and taking fish. Cowell.

PERCH. A measure of land containing five yards and a half, or sixteen feet and a half in length; otherwise called a "rod" or "pole." Cowell.

As a unit of solid measure, a perch of masonry or stone or brick work contains, according to some authorities and in some localities, sixteen and one-half cubic feet, but elsewhere, or according to others, twenty-five. Unless defined by statute, it is a very indefinite term and must be explained by evidence. Harris v. Rutledge, 19 Iowa 388, 87 Am. Dec. 441; Sullivan v. Richardson, 33 Fla. 1, 14 So. 692.

PERCOLATE. As used in the cases relating to the right of land-owners to use water on their premises, designates any flowage of sub-surface water other than that of a running stream, open, visible, clearly to be traced. Mosier v. Caldwell, 7 Nev. 363.

PERCOLATING WATERS. See Water.

PERDIDA. A synonym of damages. Ponce De Leon v. Coca Cola Bottling Co., D.C.Puerto Rico, 75 F.Supp. 966.

PERDONATIO UTLAGARLZE. L. Lat. A pardon for a man who, for contempt in not yielding obedience to the process of a court, is outlawed, and afterwards of his own accord surrenders. Reg.Orig. 28.

PERDUELLIO. Lat. In Roman law. Hostility or enmity towards the Roman republic; traitorous conduct on the part of a citizen, subversive of the authority of the laws or tending to overthrow the government. Calvin; Vicat.

PERDURABLE. As applied to an estate, perdurable signifies lasting long or forever. Thus, a disseisor or tenant in fee upon condition has as high and great an estate as the rightful owner or tenant in fee-simple absolute, but not so perdurable. The term is chiefly used with reference to the extinguishment of rights by unity of seisin, which does not take place unless both the right and the land out of which it issues are held for equally high and perdurable estates. Co.Litt. 313a, 313b; Gale Easem. 582; Sweet.

PEREGRINI. Lat. The name given to aliens in Rome. The class of peregrine embraced at the same time both those who had no capacity in law (capacity for rights or jural relations,) namely, the slaves, and the members of those nations which had not established amicable relations with the Roman people. Say. Dr. Rom. § 66.

PEREMPT. In ecclesiastical procedure, to waive or bar an appeal by one's own act so as partially to comply with or acquiesce in a sentence of a court. Phill.Eccl.L. 1275; Rog.Eccl.L. 47.

PEREMPTION. A nonsuit; also a quashing or killing.

PEREMPTORIUS. Lat. In the civil law. That which takes away or destroys forever; hence, exceptio peremptoria, a plea which is a perpetual bar. Calvin.

PEREMPTORY. Imperative; absolute; conclusive; positive; not admitting of question, delay, or reconsideration. Positive; final; 'decisive; not admitting of any alternative. Self-determined; arbitrary; not requiring any cause to be shown. Wolfe v. State, 147 Tex.Cr.R. 62, 178 S.W.Zd 274, 279.

As to peremptory "Challenge," "Defense," "Instruction," "Mandamus," "Nonsuit," "Plea," and "Writ," see those titles.

PEREMPTORY DAY. A day assigned for trial or. hearing in court, absolutely and without further opportunity for postponement.

PEREMPTORY EXCEPTIONS. In the civil law. Any defense which denies entirely the ground of action. Those exceptions which tend to the dismissal of the action.

PEREMPTORY PAPER. A list of the causes which were enlarged at the request of the parties, or which stood over from press of business in court.

PEREMPTORY RULE. In practice. An absolute rule; a rule without any condition or alternative of showing cause.

PEREMPTORY UNDERTAKING. An undertaking by a plaintiff to bring on a cause for trial at the next sittings or assizes. Lush, Pr. 649.

PERFECT. Complete; finished; executed; enforceable; without defect; merchantable; marketable. Sliosberg v. New York Life Ins. Co., 217 App.Div. 67, 216 N.Y.S. 215, 220; Tucker v. Thraves, 50 Okl. 691, 702, 151 P. 598, 601; Satterthwaite v. Van Dissen, 99 Okl. 233, 226 P. 583, 584.

As to perfect "Equity," "Obligation," "Ownership," "Title," and "Usufruct," see those titles.

PERFECT ATTESTATION CLAUSE. One that asserts performance of all acts required to be done to make valid testamentary disposition. In re Johnson's Will, Prerog., 115 N.J.Eq. 249, 171 A. 307, 309.

PERFECT CONDITION. In a statement of the rule that, when two claims exist in "perfect condition" between two persons, either may insist on a set-off, this term means that state of a demand when it is of right demandable by its terms. Taylor v. New York, 82 N.Y. 17.

PERFECT INSTRUMENT. An instrument such as a deed or mortgage is said to become perfect when recorded (or registered) or filed for record, because it then becomes good as to all the world. Wilkins v. McCorkle, 112 Tenn. 688, 80 S.W. 834.

PERFECT MACHINE. In patent law. A perfected invention; not a perfectly constructed machine, but a machine so constructed as to embody all the essential elements of the invention, in a form that would make them practical and operative so as to accomplish the result.

But it is not necessary that it should accomplish that result in the most perfect manner, and be in a condition where it was not susceptible of a higher degree of perfection in its mere mechanical construction. American Hide, etc., Co. v. American Tool, etc., Co., 4 Fish.Pat.Cas. 299, 1 Fed. Cas. 647.

PERFECT TRUST. An executed trust, (q. v.).

PERFECTED. Brought to a state of perfection, completed. Krause v. Henry, Ohio App., 35 N.E. 2d 169, 170.

PERFECTING BAIL. Certain qualifications of a property character being required of persons who tender themselves as bail, when such persons have justified, i. e., established their sufficiency by satisfying the court that they possess the requisite qualifications, a rule or order of court is made for their allowance, and the bail is then said to be perfected, i. e., the process of giving bail is finished or completed. Brown.

PERFECTUM EST CIUI NIHIL DEEST SECUNDUM SIVE PERFECTIONIS VEL NATURE MODUM. That is perfect to which nothing is wanting, according to the measure of its perfection or nature. Hob. 151.

PERFIDY. The act of one who has engaged his faith to do a thing, and does not do it, but does the contrary. Wolff, Inst. § 390. Faithlessness, treachery, violation of a promise or vow or a trust reposed. Streeter v. Emmons County Farmers' Press, 57 N.D. 438, 222 N.W. 455, 458.

PERFORM. To perform an obligation or contract is to execute, fulfill, or accomplish it according to its terms. This may consist either in action on the part of the person bound by the contract or in omission to act, according to the nature of the subject-matter; but the term is usually applied to any action in discharge of a contract other than payment.

PERFORMANCE. The fulfillment or accomplishment of a promise, contract, or other obligation according to its terms.

Part Performance. The doing some portion, yet not the whole, of what either party to a contract has agreed to do. Borrow v. Borrow, 34 Wash. 684, 76 P. 305.

The "part performance" necessary to take oral contract to sell realty out of the statute of frauds must be of such character that it is impossible or impracticable to place the parties in status quo and payment in full is not sufficient. Rork v. Orcutt, 53 N.Y.S.2d 354, 356. The possession necessary to constitute "part performance" which will take an oral agreement, purporting to convey an interest in land, out of the operation of the statute of frauds must be unequivocal and in consequence of the contract. Guckenberger v. Shank, 110 Ind.App. 442, 37 N.E.2d 708, 714.

Specific Performance. Performance of a contract in the specific form in which it was made, or according to the precise terms agreed upon. This is frequently compelled by a bill in equity filed for the purpose. 2 Story, Eq.P1. § 712, et seq. The actual accomplishment of a contract by a party bound to fulfil} it. Guadalupe County Board of Education v. O'Bannon, 26 N.M. 606, 195 P. 801, 803; Municipal Gas Co. v. Lone Star Gas Co., Tex. Civ.App., 259 S.W. 684, 689. The doctrine of specific performance is that, where damages would be an inadequate compensation for the breach of an agreement, the contractor will be compelled to perform specifically what he has agreed to do. Sweet. As the exact fulfillment of an agreement is not always practicable, the phrase may mean, in a given case, not literal, but substantial performance. Waterm.Spec.Perf. § 1.

PERGAMENUM. In old practice. Parchment. In pergameno scribi facit. 1 And. 54.

PERICARDITIS. In medical jurisprudence. An inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart.

PERICULOSUM EST RES NOVAS ET INUSITATAS INDUCERE. Co.Litt. 379a. It is perilous to introduce new and untried things.

PERICULOSUM EXISTIMO QUOD BONORUM VIRORUM NON COMPROBATUR EXEMPLO. 9 Coke, 97b. I consider that dangerous which is not approved by the example of good men.

PERICULOSUS. Lat. Dangerous; perilous.

PERICULUM. Lat. In the civil law. Peril; danger; hazard; risk.

PERICULUM REI VENDITA, NONDUM TRADIME, EST EMPTORIS. The risk of a thing sold, and not yet delivered, is the purchaser's. 2 Kent, Comm. 498, 499, PERIL. The risk, hazard, or contingency insured against by a policy of insurance.

Peril within humanitarian doctrine means certain peril, not bare possibility of injury. Thomasson v. Henwood, 235 Mo.App. 1211, 146 S.W.2d 88, 91.

PERILS OF THE LAKES. As applied to navigation of the Great Lakes, this term has the same meaning as "perils of the sea." See infra.

PERILS OF THE SEA. In maritime and insurance law. Natural accidents peculiar to the sea, which do not happen by the intervention of man, nor are to be prevented by human prudence. 3 Kent, Comm. 216. Hence to recover on marine policy insuring against loss by perils of sea, vessel must be seaworthy when it is sent to sea. Read v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 219 Wis. 580, 263

N.W. 632. Perils of the sea are from (1) storms and waves; (2) rocks, shoals, and rapids; (3) other obstacles, though of human origin; (4) changes of climate; (5) the confinement necessary at sea; (6) animals peculiar to the sea; (7) all other dangers peculiar to the sea. Civ.Code Cal. § 2199. All losses caused by the action of wind and water acting on the property insured under extraordinary circumstances, either directly or mediately, without the intervention of other independent active external causes, are losses by "perils of the sea or other perils and dangers," within the meaning of the usual clause in a policy of marine insurance. Baily, Perils of Sea, 6. In an enlarged sense, all losses which occur from maritime adventure may be said to arise from the perils of the sea; but underwriters are not bound to this extent. They insure again4t losses from extraordinary occurrences only; such as stress of weather, winds and waves, lightning, tempests, etc. These are understood to be meant by the phrase "the perils of the sea," in a marine policy, and not those ordinary perils which every vessel must encounter. American-Hawaiian S. S. Co. v. Bennett & Goodall, 125 C.C.A. 172, 207 F. 510, 513; The Mary F. Barrett, C.C.A.Pa., 279 F. 329, 331; Delanty v. Yang Tsze Ins. Ass'n, 127 Wash. 238, 220 P. 754, 758; Western Assur. Co. of Toronto, Canada, v. Shaw, C.C.A.Pa., 11 F.2d 495, 496; Union Marine Ins. Co. v. Chas. D. Stone & Co., C.C.A.Ill., 15 F.2d 937, 939.

" 'Perils of the sea' means all marine casualties resulting from the violent action of the elements, as distinguished from their natural, silent influence upon the fabric of tire vessel; casualties which may, and not consequences which must, occur." Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. v. Becker S. S. Co., D.C.N.Y., 49 F.2d 648, 650.

PERINDE VALERE. A dispensation granted to a clerk, who, being defective in capacity for a benefice or other ecclesiastical function, is de facto admitted to it. Cowell.

PERIOD, Any point, space, or division of time.

"The word has its etymological meaning, but it also has a distinctive signification, according to the subject with which it may be used in connection. It may mean any portion of complete time, from a thousand years or less to the period of a day; and when used to designate an act to be done or to be begun, though its completion may take an uncertain time, as, for instance, the act of exportation, it must mean the day on which the exportation commences, or it would be an unmeaning and useless word in its connection in the statute. Sampson v. Peaslee, 20 How. 579, 15 L. Ed. 1022.

PERIODICAL. Recurring at fixed intervals; to be made or done, or to happen, at successive periods separated by determined intervals of time; as periodical payments of interest on a bond.

PERIPHRASIS. Circumlocution; use of many words to express the sense of one.

PERISH. To come to an end; to cease to be; to die.

PERISHABLE. Subject to speedy and natural decay. But, where the time contemplated is necessarily long, the term may embrace property liable merely to material depreciation in value from other causes than such decay. Callahan v. Danziger, 172 Cal. 738, 158 P. 760, 761; Marston v. Rue, 92 Wash. 129, 159 P. 111, 113; In re Pedlow, C.C. A.N.Y., 209 F. 841, 842; Falmouth Co-op. Marketing Ass'n v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 237 Mich. 406, 212 N.W. 84, 85.

PERISHABLE COMMODITY. A relative term used ordinarily by courts and lawyers to describe a product, like fruit or fresh vegetables, which quickly deteriorates in quality and value. In re Rosenbaum Grain Corporation, C.C.A.I11., 83 F. 2d 391, 393.

PERISHABLE GOODS. Goods which decay and lose their value if not speedily put to their intended use. Kleinpeter v. Ferrara, 179 La. 193, 153 So. 689.

PERJURI SUNT QUI SERVATIS VERBIS JURAMENTI DECIPIUNT AURES EORUM QUI ACCIPIUNT. 3 Inst. 166. They are perjured, who, preserving the words of an oath, deceive the ears of those who receive it.

PERJURY. In criminal law. The willful assertion as to a matter of fact, opinion, belief, or knowledge, made by a witness in a judicial proceeding as part of his evidence, either upon oath or in any form allowed by law to be substituted for an oath, whether such evidence is given in open court, or in an affidavit, or otherwise, such assertion being material to the issue or point of inquiry and known to such witness to be false. 2 Whart.Crim.Law, § 1244; People v. Glenn, 294 Ill. 333, 128 N.E. 532, 533; Mathes v. State, 15 Okl.Cr. 382, 177 P. 120; Commonwealth v. Hinkle, 177 Ky. 22, 197 S.W. 455, 456; People v. Rendigs, 123 Misc.Rep. 32, 205 N.Y.S. 133, 136.

To constitute "perjury" an oath must be administered by one authorized to do so. People v. Gade, City Ct., 6 N. Y.S.2d 1018, 1021.

Perjury shall consist in willfully, knowingly, absolutely, and falsely swearing, either with or without laying the hand on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, or affirming, in a matter material to the issue or point in question, in some judicial proceeding, by a person to whom a lawful oath or affirmation is administered. Code Ga. 1882, § 4460 (Pen. Code 1910, § 259). Every person who, having taken an oath that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly before any competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any of the cases in which such an oath may by law be administered, willfully, and contrary to such oath, states as truth any material matter which he knows to be false, is guilty of perjury. Pen. Code Cal. § 118. The willful giving, under oath, in a judicial .proceeding or course of justice, of false testimony material to the issue or point of inquiry. 2 Bish.Crim. Law, § 1015. Perjury, at common law, is the "taking of a willful false oath by one who, being lawfully sworn by a competent court to depose the truth in any judicial proceeding, swears absolutely and falsely in a matter material to the point in issue, whether he believed or not." Comm. v. Powell, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 10; Cothran v. State, 39 Miss. 541. It will be observed that, at common law, the crime of perjury can be committed only in the course of a suit or judicial proceeding. But statutes have very generally extended both the definition and the punishment of this offense to willful false swearing in many different kinds of affidavits and depositions, such as those required to be made in tax returns, pension proceedings, transactions at the custom house, and various other administrative or non-judicial proceedings.

PERMANENT. Fixed, continuing, lasting, stable, enduring, abiding, not subject to change. Generally opposed in law to "temporary," but not always meaning "perpetual." Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Milton, 160 Ga. 168, 127 S.E. 140, 141, 40 A.L.R. 1382; Roseburg Nat. Bank v. Camp, 89 Or. 67, 173 P. 313, 316. Richards v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 184 Wash. 595, 55 P.2d 1067, 1071.

As to permanent "Alimony," "Injunction," and "Trespass," see those titles.

PERMANENT ABODE. A domicile or fixed home, which the party may leave as his interest or whim may dictate, but which he has no present intention of abandoning. Moffett v. Hill, 131 Ill. 239, 22 N.E. 821; Berry v. Wilcox, 44 Neb. 82, 62 N.W. 249, 48 Am.St.Rep. 706.

PERMANENT BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. One which issues its stock, not all at once or in series, but at any time when application is made therefor. Cook v. Equitable B. & L. Ass'n, 104 Ga. 814, 30 S.E. 911.

PERMANENT DISABILITY. Within insurance policies does not mean that disability must continue throughout life of insured, but it connotes idea that disability must be something more than temporary, and at least presumably permanent. Commonwealth Life Ins. Co. v. Ovesen, 257 Ky. 622, 78 S.W.2d 745, 746; Equitable Life Ins. Co. of Iowa v. Gerwick, 50 Ohio App. 277, 197 N.E. 923, 926; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S. v. Preston, 253 Ky. 459, 70 S.W.2d 18.

PERMANENT EMPLOYMENT. Provided for by contract, means only that employment is to continue indefinitely and until either party wishes to sever relation for some good reason. Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters of Pacific, Cal.App., 158 P.2d 426, 429; Alabama Mills v. Smith, 237 Ala. 296, 186 So. 699, 701.

PERMISSION. A license to do a thing; an authority to do an act which, without such authority, would have been unlawful.

PERMISSIONS. Negations of law, arising either from the law's silence or its express declaration. Ruth.Inst. b. 1, C. 1.

PERMISSIVE. Allowed; allowable; that which may be done.

PERMISSIVE USE. See Use.

PERMISSIVE WASTE. See Waste.

PERMIT, v. To suffer, allow, consent, let; to give leave or license; to acquiesce, by failure to prevent, or to expressly assent or agree to the doing of an act. State v. Waxman, 93 N.J.Law, 27, 107 A. 150; State v. Peters, 112 Ohio St. 249, 147 N.E. 81, 84; Little Falls Fibre Co. v. Henry Ford & Son, 126 Misc. 126, 212 N.Y.S. 630, 634; Lemery v. Leonard, 99 Or. 670, 196 P. 376, 378; Armstrong's Adm'r v. Sumne & Ratterman Co., 211 Ky. 750, 278 S.W. 111, 113; Atwater v. Lober, 133 Misc. 652, 233 N.Y.S. 309, 313.

PERMIT, n. A license or instrument granted by the officers of excise (or customs), certifying that the duties on certain goods have been paid, or secured, and permitting their removal from some specified place to another. Wharton. A written license or warrant, issued by a person in authority, empowering the grantee to do some act not forbidden by law, but not allowable without such authority.

PERMUTATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Exchange; barter. Dig. 19, 4.

PERMUTATION. The exchange of one movable subject for another; barter.

PERMUTATIONE. A writ to an ordinary, commanding him to admit a clerk to a benefice upon exchange made with another. Reg.Orig. 307.

PERNANCY. Taking; a taking or receiving; as of the profits of an estate. Actual pernancy of the profits of an estate is the taking, perception, or receipt of the rents and other advantages arising therefrom. 2 Bl.Comm. 163.

PERNOR OF PROFITS. He who receives the profits of lands, etc.; he who has the actual pernancy of the profits.

PERNOUR. L. Fr. A taker. Le pernour ou le detenour, the taker or the detainer. Britt. c. 27.

PERPARS. L. Lat. A purpart; a part of the inheritance.

PERPETRATOR. Generally, this term denotes the person who actually commits a crime or delict, or by whose immediate agency it occurs. But, where a servant of a railroad company is killed through the negligence of a co-employee, the company itself may be regarded as the "perpetrator" of the act, within the meaning of a statute giving an action against the perpetrator. Philo v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Iowa, 47.

PERPETUA LEX EST NULLAM LEGEM HUMANAM AC POSITIVAM PERPETUAM ESSE, ET CLAUSULA QUIE ABROGATIONEM EXCLUDIT AB INITIO NON VALET. It is a perpetual law that no human and positive law can be perpetual, and a clause [in a law] which precludes the power of abrogation is void ab initio. Bac. Max. p. 77, in reg. 19.

PERPETUAL. Never ceasing; continuous; enduring; lasting; unlimited in respect of time; continuing without intermission or interval. Scanlan v. Crawshaw, 5 Mo.App. 337.

As to perpetual "Curacy," "Injunction," "Lease," and "Statute," see those titles.

PERPETUAL EDICT. In Roman law. Originally the term "perpetual" was merely opposed to "occasional" and was used to distinguish the general edicts of the praetors from the special edicts or orders which they issued in their judicial capacity. But under Hadrian the edict was revised by the jurist Julianus, and was republished as a permanent act of legislation. It was then styled "perpetual," in the sense of being calculated to endure in perpetuum, or until abrogated by competent authority. Aust.Jur. 855.

PERPETUAL SUCCESSION. That continuous existence which enables a corporation to manage its affairs, and hold property without the necessity of perpetual conveyances, for the purpose of transmitting it. By reason of this quality, this ideal and artificial person remains, in its legal entity and personality, the same, though frequent changes may be made of its members. Field, Corp. § 58; Scanlan v. Crawshaw, 5 Mo.App. 340.

PERPETUATING TESTIMONY. A proceeding for taking and preserving the testimony of witnesses, which otherwise might be lost before the trial in which it is intended to be used. It is usually allowed where the witnesses are aged and infirm or are about to remove from the state. 3 Bl.Comm. 450.

PERPETUITY. Any limitation or condition which may take away or suspend the power of alienation for a period beyond life or lives in being and 21 years thereafter. Loud v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 298 Mo. 148, 249 S.W. 629, 634; Barton v. Thaw, 246 Pa. 348, 92 A. 312, 313, Ann. Cas.1916D, 570; True Real Estate Co. v. True, 115 Me. 533; 99 A. 627, 630; Melvin v. Hoffman, 290 Mo. 464, 235 S.W. 107, 115. Any limitation tending to take the subject of it out of commerce for a longer period than a life or lives in being, and twenty-one years beyond, and, in case of a posthumous child, a few months more, allowing for the term of gestation. Rand.Perp. 48. Such a limitation of property as renders it unalienable beyond the period allowed by law. Gilb. Uses, (Sugd. Ed.) 260. Ould v. Washington Hospital, 95 U.S. 303, 24 L.Ed. 450; Duggan v. Slocum, 34 C.C.A. 676, 92 F. 806; Stevens v. Annex Realty Co., 173 Mo. 511, 73 S.W. 505; Griffin v. Graham, 8 N.C. 130, 9 Am.Dec. 619; In re John's Will, 30 Or. 494, 47 P. 341, 36 L.R.A. 242. See, also, Rule Against Perpetuities.

PERPETUITY OF THE KING. That fiction of the English law which for certain political purposes ascribes to the king in his political capacity the attribute of immortality; for, though the reigning monarch may die, yet by this fiction the king never dies, i. e., the office is supposed to be reoccupied for all political purposes immediately on his death. Brown.

PERQUISITES. Anything obtained by industry or purchased with money, different from that which descends from a father or ancestor. Bract. 1. 2, c. 30, n. 3.

Profits accruing to a lord of a manor by virtue of his court-baron, over and above the yearly profits of his land; also other things that come casually and not yearly. Mozley & Whiteley.

In Modern Use. Emoluments or incidental profits attaching to an office or official position, beyond the salary or regular fees. Harris County v. Hammond, Tex.Civ.App., 203 S.W. 445, 448; Christopherson v. Reeves, 44 S.D. 634, 184 N.W. 1015; State v. Reeves, 44 S.D. 568, 184 N.W. 993, 998.

PERQUISITIO. Purchase. Acquisition by one's own act or agreement, and not by descent.

PERQUISITOR. In old English law. A purchaser; one who first acquired an estate to his family; one who acquired an estate by sale, by gift, or by any other method, except only that of descent. 2 Bl.Comm. 220.

PERSECUTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A following after; a pursuing at law; a suit or prosecution. Properly that kind of judicial proceeding before the prEetor which was called "extraordinary." In a general sense, any judicial- proceeding, including not only "actions," (actiones,) properly so called, but other proceedings also. Calvin.

PERSEQUI. Lat. In the civil law. To follow after; to pursue or claim in form of law. An action is called a "jus persequendi."

PERSON. A man considered according to the rank he holds in society, with all the right to which the place he holds entitles him, and the duties which it imposes. People v. R. Co., 134 N.Y. 506, 31 N.E. 873.

The word in its natural and usual signification includes women as well as men. Commonwealth v. Welosky, 276 Mass. 398, 177 N.E. 656.

Term may include artificial beings, as corporations, 1 Bla.Com. 123; 4 Bingh. 669; People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 23 N.Y. 242; quasi-corporations, Sedgw. Stat. & Const. L. 372; L. R. 5 App. Cas. 857; territorial corporations, Seymour v. School District, 53 Conn. 507, 3 A. 552; and foreign corporations, People v. McLean, 80 N.Y. 259; under statutes, forbidding the taking of property without due process of law and giving to all persons the equal protection of the laws, Smyth v. Ames, 18 S.Ct. 418, 169 U.S. 466, 42 L.Ed. 819; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 17 S.Ct. 255, 165 U.S. 150, 41 L.Ed. 666; concerning claims arising from Indian depredations, U. S. v. Transp. Co., 17 S.Ct. 206, 164 U.S. 686, 41 L.Ed. 599; relating to taxation and the revenue laws, People v. McLean, 80 N.Y. 254; to attachments, Bray v. Wallingford, 20 Conn. 416; usurious contracts, Philadelphia Loan Co. v. Towner, 13 Conn. 249; applying to limitation of actions, Olcott v. R. Co., 20 N.Y. 210, 75 Am.Dec. 393; North Mo. R. Co. v. Akers, 4 Kan. 453, 96 Am.Dec. 183; and concerning the admissibility as a witness of a party in his own behalf when the opposite party is a living person, La Farge v. Ins. Co., 22 N.Y. 352. A corporation is also a person under a penal statute; U. S. v. Amedy, 11 Wheat. 392, 6 L.Ed. 502. Corporations are "persons" as that word is used in the first clause of the XIVth Amendment; Covington & L. Turnp. Co. v. Sandford, 17 S.Ct. 198, 164 U.S. 578, 41 L.Ed. 560; Smyth v. Ames, 18 S.Ct. 418, 169 U.S. 466, 42 L.Ed. 819; People v. Fire Ass'n, 92 N.Y. 311, 44 Am.Rep. 380; U. S. v. Supply Co., 30 S.Ct. 15, 215 U.S. 50, 54 L.Ed. 87; contra, Central P. R. Co. v. Board, 60 Cal. 35. But a corporation of another state is not a "person" within the jurisdiction of the state until it has complied with the conditions of admission to do business in the state, Fire Ass'n of Phila. v.

New York, 7 S.Ct. 108, 119 U.S. 110, 30 L.Ed. 342; and a statutory requirement of such conditions is not in conflict with the XIVth Amendment; Pembina Consol. S. M. & M. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 8 S.Ct. 737, 125 U.S. 181, 189, 31 L.Ed. 650.

It may include partnerships. In re Julian, D. C.Pa., 22 F.Supp. 97, 99. Also firms. State ex rel. Joseph R. Peebles Sons Co. v. State Board of Pharmacy, 127 Ohio St. 513, 189 N.E. 447, 448.

"Persons" are of two kinds, natural and artificial. A natural person is a human being. Artificial persons include a collection or succession of natural persons forming a corporation; a collection of property to which the law attributes the capacity of having rights and duties. The latter class of artificial persons is recognized only to a limited extent in our law. Examples are the estate of a bankrupt or deceased person. Hogan v. Greenfield, 58 Wyo. 13, 122 P.2d 850, 853.

It has been held that when the word person is used in a legislative act, natural persons will be intended unless something appear in the context to show that it applies to artificial persons, Blair v. Worley, 1 Scam., Ill., 178; Appeal of Fox, 112 Pa. 337 ; 4 A. 149 ; but as a rule corporations will be considered persons within the statutes unless the intention of the legislature is manifestly to exclude them. Stribbling v. Bank, 5 Rand., Va., 132.

A county is a person in a legal sense, Lancaster Co. v. Trimble, 34 Neb. 752, 52 N.W. 711; but a sovereign is not; In re Fox, 52 N.Y. 535, 11 Am.Rep. 751; U. S. v. Fox, 94 U.S. 315, 24 L.Ed. 192, but contra within the meaning of a statute, providing a penalty for 'the fraudulent alteration of a public record with intent that any "person" be defrauded, Martin v. State, 24 Tex. 61; and within the meaning of a covenant for quiet and peaceful possession against all and every person or persons; Giddings v. Holter, 19 Mont. 263, 48 P. 8. An Indian is a person, U. S. v. Crook, 5 Dill. 459, Fed.Cas.No.14,891; and a slave was so considered, in so far, as to be capable of committing a riot in conjunction with white men, State v. Thackam, 1 Bay, S.C., 358. The estate of a decedent is a person, Billings v. State, 107 Ind. 54, 6 N.E. 914, 7 N.E. 763, 57 Am. Rep. 77; and where the statute makes the owner of a dog liable for injuries to any person, it includes the property of such person, Brewer v. Crosby, 11 Gray, Mass., 29; but where the statute provided damages for the bite of a dog which had previously bitten a person, it was held insufficient to show that the dog had previously bitten a goat, [1896] 2 Q.B. 109; a dog will not be included in the word in an act which authorizes a person to kill dogs running at large, Heisrodt v. Hackett, 34 Mich. 283, 22 Am.Rep. 529.

Where the statute prohibited any person from pursuing his usual vocation on the Lord's Day, it was held to apply to a judge holding court. Bass v. Irvin, 49 Ga. 436.

A child en ventre sa mere is not a person. Dietrich v. Northampton, 138 Mass. 14, 52 Am.Rep. 242; but an infant is so considered; Madden v. Springfield, 131 Mass. 441.

In the United States bankrupty act of 1898, it is provided that the word "persons" shall include corporations, except where otherwise specified, and officers, partnerships, and women, and, when used with reference to the commission of acts which are therein forbidden, shall include persons who are participants in the forbidden acts, and the agents, officers, and members of the board of directors or trustees, or their controlling bodies, of corporations. 11 U.S.C.A. § 1.

Persons are the subject of rights and duties; and, as a subject of a right, the person is the object of the correlative duty, and conversely. The subject of a right has been called by Professor Holland, the person of inherence ; the subject of a duty, the person of incidence. "Entitled" and "bound" are the terms in common use in English and for most purposes they are adequate. Every full citizen is a person; other human beings, namely, subjects who are not citizens, may be persons. But not every human being is necessarily a person, for a person is capable of rights and duties, and there may well be human beings having no legal rights, as was the case with slaves in English law. • • *

A person is such, not because he is human, but because rights and duties are ascribed to him. The person is the legal subject or substance of which the rights and duties are attributes. An individual human being considered as having such attributes is what lawyers call a natural person. Pollock, First Book of Jurispr. 110. Gray, Nature and Sources of Law, ch. IL

PERSONA. Lat.

In the civil law. Character, in virtue of which certain rights belong to a man and certain duties are imposed upon him. Thus one man may unite many characters, (personce,) as, for example, the characters of father and son, of master and servant. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 129.

In Ecclesiastical Law. The rector of a church instituted and inducted, for his own life, was called "persona mortalis;" and any collegiate or conventual body, to whom the church was forever appropriated, was termed "persona immortalis." Jacob.

PERSONA CONJUNCTA 2EQUIPARATUR INTERESSE PROPRIO. A personal connection [literally, a united person, union with a person] is equivalent to one's own interest; nearness of blood is as good a consideration as one's own interest. Bac.Max. 72, reg.

PERSONA DESIGNATA. A person pointed out or described as an individual, as opposed to a person ascertained as a member of a class, or as filling a particular character.

PERSONA ECCLESLE. The parson or personation of the church.

PERSONA EST HOMO CUM STATU QUODAM CONSIDERATUS. A person is a man considered with reference to a certain status. Heinecc. Elem. 1. 1, tit. 3, § 75.

PERSONA NON GRATA. In international law and diplomatic usage, a person not acceptable (for reasons peculiar to himself) to the court or government to which it is proposed to accredit him in the character of an ambassador or minister.

PERSONA REGIS MERGITUR PERSONA DUCIS. Jenk.Cent. 160. The person of duke merges in that of king.

PERSONA STANDI IN JUDICIO. Capacity of standing in court or in judgment; capacity to be a party to an action; capacity or ability to sue.

PERSONABLE. Having the rights and powers of a person; able to hold or maintain a plea in court; also capacity to take anything granted or given.

PERSONIE VICE FUNGITUR MUNICIPIUM ET DECURIA. Towns and boroughs act as if persons. Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend., N.Y., 103, 144.

PERSONAL. Appertaining to the person; belonging to an individual; limited to the person; having the nature or partaking of the qualities of human beings, or of movable property. In re Steimes' Estate, 150 Misc. 279, 270 N.Y.S. 339.

As to personal "Action," "Assets," "Chattels," "Contract," "Covenant," "Credit," "Demand," "Disability," "Franchise," "Injury," "Judgment,"

"Knowledge," "Liberty," "Notice," "Obligation," "Property," "Replevin," "Representatives," "Rights," "Security," "Service," "Servitude," "Statute," "Tax," "Tithes," "Tort," and "Warranty," see those titles.

PERSONAL Et tACTS. Articles associated with person, as property having more or less intimate relation to person of possessor; "effects" meaning movable or chattel property of any kind. Ettlinger v. Importers' & Exporters' Ins. Co. of New York, 138 Misc. 743, 247 N.Y.S. 260, 261.

Term when used in will, includes only such tangible property as attended the person, or such tangible property as is worn or carried about the person. In re Sorensen's Estate, 46 Cal.App.2d 35, 115 P.2d 241, 243.

PERSONAL LAW. As opposed to territorial law, is the law applicable to persons not subject to the law of the territory in which they reside.

It is only by permission ox the territorial law that personal law can exist at the present day; e. g., it applies to British subjects resident in the Levant and in other Mohammedan and barbarous countries. Under the Roman Empire, it had a very wide application. Brown.

PERSONAL LIABILITY. The liability of the stockholders in corporations, under certain statutes, by which they may be held individually responsible for the debts of the corporation, either to the extent of the par value of their, respective holdings of stock, or to twice that amount, or without limit, or otherwise, as the particular statute directs.

PERSONAL THINGS CANNOT BE DONE BY ANOTHER. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 14.

PERSONAL THINGS CANNOT BE GRANTED OVER. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 15.

PERSONAL THINGS DIE WITH THE PERSON. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 16.

PERSONALIA PERSONAM SEQUUNTUR. Personal things follow the person. Flanders v. Cross, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 516.

PERSONALIS ACTIO. Lat.

In the civil law. A personal action; an action against the person, (in personam.) Dig. 50, 16, 178, 2.

In old English law. A personal action. In this sense, the term was borrowed from the civil law by Bracton. The English form is constantly used as the designation of one of the chief divisions of civil actions.

PERSONALITER. In old English law. Personally; in person.

PERSONALITY. In modern civil law. The incidence of a law or statute upon persons, or that quality which makes it a personal law rather than a real law. "By the personality of laws, foreign jurists generally mean all laws which concern the condition, state, and capacity of persons." Story, Conn. Laws, § 16.

PERSONALTY. Personal property; movable property; chattels.

In old practice, an action was said to be in the personalty, where it was brought against the right person or the person against whom in law it lay. Old Nat.Brev. 92; Cowell.

Quasi personalty. Things which are movable in point of law, though fixed to things real, either actually, as emblements, (fructus industriales,) fixtures, etc.; or fictitiously, as chattels-real, leases for years, etc.

PERSONATE. In criminal law. To assume the person (character) of another, without his consent or knowledge, in order to deceive others, and, in such feigned character, to fraudulently do some act or gain some advantage, to the harm or prejudice of the person counterfeited. 2 East, P.C. 1010. To pass one's self off as another having a certain identity. Lane v. U. S., C.C.A.Ohio, 17 F.2d 923.

PERSONERO. In Spanish law. An attorney. So called because he represents the person of another, either in or out of court. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 5, 1. 1.

PERSONNE. Fr. A person. This term is applicable to men and women, or to either. Civ.Code Lat. art. 3556, par. 23.

PERSPICUA VERA NON SUNT PROBANDA. Co.Litt. 16. Plain truths need not be proved.

PERSUADE. To induce one by argument, entreaty, or expostulation into a determination, decision, conclusion, belief, or the like; to win over by an appeal to one's reason and feelings, as into doing or believing something; to bring oneself or another to belief, certainty or conviction; to argue into an opinion or procedure. La Page v. U. S., C.C.A.Minn., 156 A.L.R. 965, 146 F.2d 536, 538.

PERSUASION. The act of persuading; the act of influencing the mind by arguments or reasons offered, or by anything that moves the mind or passions, or inclines the will to a determination. Marx v. Threet, 131 Ala. 340, 30 So. 831. For "Fair Persuasion," see that title.

PERTAIN. To belong or relate to, whether by nature, appointment, or custom. People v. Chicago Theological Seminary, 174 Ill. 177, 51 N.E. 198.

PERTENENCIA. In Spanish law. The claim or right which one has to the property in anything; the territory which belongs to any one by way of jurisdiction or property; that which is accessory or consequent to a principal thing, and goes with the ownership of it. Escriche, Castillero v. United States, 2 Black. 17, 17 L.Ed. 360.

PERTICATA TERRIE. The fourth part of an acre. Cowell.

PERTICULAS. A pittance; a small portion of alms or victuals. Also certain poor scholars of the Isle of Man. Cowell.

PERTINENT. Applicable; relevant. Evidence is called "pertinent" when it is directed to the issue or matters in dispute, and legitimately tends to prove the allegations of the party offering it; otherwise it is called "impertinent." A pertinent hypothesis is one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue. Whitaker v. State, 106 Ala. 30, 17 So. 456; Vaughn v. State, 136 Tex.Cr.R. 455, 125 S.W.2d 568, 570.

PERTINENTS. In Scotch law. Appurtenances. "Parts and pertinents" are formal words in old deeds and charters. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, pp. 112, 118.

PERTURBATION. In the English ecclesiastical courts, a "suit for perturbation of seat" is the technical name for an action growing out of a disturbance or infringement of one's right to a pew or seat in a church. 2 Phillim.Ecc.Law, 1813.

PERTURBATRIX. A woman who breaks the peace.

PERVERSE VERDICT. A verdict whereby the jury refuse to follow the direction of the judge on a point of law. Callahan v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 161 Wis. 288, 154 N.W. 449, 452.

PERVISE, PARVISE. In old English law. The court or yard of the king's palace at Westminster. Also an afternoon exercise or moot for the instruction of students. Cowell; Blount.

PESA. A weight of two hundred and fifty-six pounds. Cowell.

PESAGE. In England. A toll charged for weighing avoirdupois goods other than wool. 2 Chit. Com.Law, 16.

PESQUISIDOR. In Spanish law. Coroner. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 1, § 3.

PESSIMI EXEMPLI. Lat. Of the worst example.

PESSONA. Mast of oaks, etc., or money taken for mast, or feeding hogs. Cowell.

PESSURABLE WARES. Merchandise which takes up a good deal of room in a ship. Cowell.

PETENS. Lat. In old English law. A demandant; the plaintiff in a real action. Bract. fols. 102, 106b.

PETER-PENCE. An ancient levy or tax of a penny on each house throughout England, paid to the pope. It was called "Peter-pence," because collected on the day of St. Peter, ad vincula; by the Saxons it was called "Romefeoh," "Romescot," and "Rome-pennying," because collected and sent to Rome; and, lastly, it was called "hearth money," because every dwelling-house was liable to it, and every religious house, the abbey of St. Albans alone excepted. Wharton.

PETIT. Fr. Small; minor; inconsiderable. Used in several compounds, and sometimes written "petty." People v. Sprado, 72 Cal.App. 582, 237 P. 1087, 1089.

As to petit "Jury," "Larceny," "Sergeanty," and "Treason," see those titles.

PETIT CAPE. A judicial writ, issued in the old actions for the recovery of land, requiring the sheriff to take possession of the estate, where the tenant, after having appeared in answer to the summons, made default in a subsequent stage of the proceedings.

PETITE ASSIZE. Used in contradistinction from the grand assize, which was a jury to decide on questions of property. Petite assize, a jury to decide on questions of possession. Britt. c. 42; Glan. lib. 2, cc. 6, 7.

PETITIO. Lat.

In the civil law. The plaintiff's statement of his cause of action in an action in rem. Calvin.

In old English law. Petition or demand; the count in a real action; the form of words in which a title to land was stated by the demandant, and which commenced with the word "peto." 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 176.

PETITIO PRINCIPII. In logic. Begging the question, which is the taking of a thing for true or for granted, and drawing conclusions from it as such, when it is really dubious, perhaps false, or at least wants to be proved, before any inferences ought to be drawn from it.

PETITION. A written address, embodying an application or prayer from the person or persons preferring it, to the power, body, or person to whom it is presented, for the exercise of his or their authority in the redress of some wrong, or the grant of some favor, privilege, or license. Enderson v. Hildenbrand, 52 N.D. 533, 204 N.W. 356; Benton Coal Mining Co. v. Industrial Commission, 321 Ill. 208, 151 N.E. 520, 522; In re L. M. Axle Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 3 F.2d 581, 582; State v. American Sugar Refining Co., 138 'La. 1005, 71 So. 137, 140.

In practice. An application made to a court ex-parte, or where there are no parties in opposition, praying for the exercise of the judicial powers of the court in relation to some matter which is not the subject for a suit or action, or for authority to do some act which requires the sanction of the court; as for the appointment of a guardian, for leave to sell trust property, etc.

The word "petition" is generally used in judicial pro--ceedings to describe an application in writing, in contradistinction to a motion, which may be viva voce. Bergen v. Jones, 4 Metc., Mass., 371. The principal distinction between motions and petitions lies in the fact that motions, though usually made in writing, may sometimes be made orally, while a petition is always in writing. So, also, motions can usually be made only by a party to the record, while petitions may in some cases be presented by persons not parties. Gibbs v. Ewing, 94 Fla. 236, 113 So. 730, 735.

In the practice of some of the states, the word "petition" is adopted as the name of that initiatory pleading in an action which is elsewhere called a "declaration" or "complaint."

In equity practice. An application in writing for an order of the court, stating the circumstanc,es upon which it is founded; a proceeding resorted to whenever the nature of the application to the court requires a fuller statement than can be conveniently made in a notice of motion. 1 Barb. Ch.Pr. 578.

PETITION DE DROIT. L. Fr. In English practice. A petition of right; a form of proceeding to obtain restitution from the crown of either real or personal property, being of use where the crown is in possession of any hereditaments or chattels; and the petitioner suggests such a right as controverts the title of the crown, grounded on facts disclosed in•the petition itself. 3 Bl.Comm. 256.

PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY. A paper filed in a court of bankruptcy, or with the clerk, by a debtor praying for the benefits of the bankruptcy act, or by creditors alleging the commission of an act of bankruptcy by their debtor and praying an adjudication of bankruptcy against him.

PETITION OF RIGHT. In English law. A proceeding in chancery by which a subject may recover property in the possession of the king. See Petition de Droit.

PETITION OF RIGHTS. A parliamentary declaration of the liberties of the people, assented to by King Charles I, in 1629. It is to be distinguished from the bill of rights, (1689), which has passed into a permanent constitutional statute. Brown.

PETITIONER. One who presents a petition to a court, officer, or legislative body. In legal proceedings begun by petition, the person against whom action or relief is prayed, or who opposes the prayer of the petition, is called the "respondent."

PETITIONING CREDITOR. The creditor at whose instance an adjudication of bankruptcy is made against a bankrupt.

PETITORY ACTION. A droitural action; that is, one in which the plaintiff seeks to establish and enforce, by an appropriate legal proceeding, his right of property, or his title, to the subject-matter in dispute; as distinguished from a possessory action, where the right to the possession is the point in litigation, and not the mere right of property. The term is chiefly used in admiralty. 1 Kent, Comm. 371; The Tilton, 5 Mason, 465, Fed.Cas.No.14,054.

In Louisiana, an action brought by an alleged owner out of possession against one having possession to determine ownership, in which plaintiff must recover on strength of his own title, not on weakness of defendant's title. Saucier v. Crichton, C.C.A.La., 147 F.2d 430, 433.

In Scotch law. Actions in which damages are sought.

PETO. Lat. In Roman law. I request. A common word by which a fideicommissum, or trust, was created in a will. Inst. 2, 24, 3.

PETRA. A stone weight. Cowell.

PETRONIAN LAW. See Lex.Petronia.

PETTIFOGGER. A lawyer who is employed in a small or mean business, or who carries on a disreputable business by unprincipled or dishonorable means.

PETTIFOGGING SHYSTER. This "combination of epithets every lawyer and citizen knows belongs to none but unscrupulous practitioners who disgrace their profession by doing mean work, and resort to sharp practice to do it." Bailey v. Kalamazoo Pub. Co., 40 Mich. 251, 256.

PETTY. Small, minor, of less or inconsiderable importance. The English form of "petit," and sometimes used instead of that word in such compounds as "petty jury," "petty larceny," and "petty treason." See Petit.

As to petty "Average," "Constable," and "Sessions," see those titles.

PETTY BAG OFFICE. In English law. An office in the court of chancery, for suits against attorneys and officers of the court, and for process and proceedings by extent on statutes, recognizances, ad quod damnum, and the like. Termes de la Ley.

PETTY OFFICERS. Inferior officers in the naval service, of various ranks and kinds, corresponding to the non-commissioned officers in the army. U. S. v. Fuller, 16 S.Ct. 386, 160 U.S. 593, 40 L.Ed. 549.

PEW. An inclosed seat in a church. O'Hear v. De Goesbriand, 33 Vt. 606, 80 Am.Dec. 653; Trustees of Third Presbyterian Congregation v. Andruss, 21 N.J.Law, 328; Gay v. Baker, 17 Mass. 435, 9 Am.Dec. 159.

PHARMACIST. One skilled in pharmacy; druggist. Webster.

Registered Pharmacist. One who has qualified by training, education, and experience and is so certified. Reppert v. Utterback, 206 Iowa 314, 217 N.W. 545.

PIPE LINE. A connected series of pipes for the transportation of oil, gas, or water.

PIPE ROLLS. These were the Great Rolls of the Exchequer and contained the account of the king's profits and rents in all the counties of England. They exist in a continuous series (676 rolls) from 1156 to 1833 (except 1216 and 1403). The Chancellor's Roll from 1255 to 1833 is a duplicate of the Pipe Rolls. A single roll of Henry I, but not complete, is extant. 2 Holdsw. Hist.E.L. 129. The Pipe Rolls are our earliest records; id. 138. They are said to be most instructive as to legal rules and institutions; Brunner, 2 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Amer. L. H. 24.

PIRACY. In criminal law. A robbery or forcible depredation on the high seas, without lawful authority, done animo furandi, in the spirit and intention of universal hostility. United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 610, 4 L.Ed. 471. This is the definition of this offense by the law of nations. 1 Kent, Comm. 183. And see Talbot v. Janson, 3 Dall. 152, 1 L.Ed. 540; U. S. v. The Ambrose Light, D.C.N.Y., 25 F. 408; Davison v. Seal-skins, 7 Fed.Cas. 192.

There is a distinction between the offense of piracy, as known to the law of nations, which is justiciable anywhere, and offenses created by statutes of particular nations, cognizable only before the municipal tribunals of such nations. Dole v. Insurance Co., 2 Cliff. 394, 418, Fed.Cas.No.3,966.

The term is also applied to the illicit reprinting or reproduction of a copyrighted book or print or to unlawful plagiarism from it.

PIRATA EST HOSTIS HUMAN! GENERIS. 3 Inst. 113. A pirate is an enemy of the human race.

PIRATE. A person who lives by piracy; one guilty of the crime of piracy. A sea-robber, who, to enrich himself, by subtlety or open force, setteth upon merchants and others trading by sea, despoiling them of their loading, and sometimes bereaving them of life and sinking their ships. Ridley, Civil & Ecc.Law, pt. 2, c. 1, § 3. One who acts solely on his own authority, without any commission or authority from a sovereign state, seizing by force, and appropriating to himself without discrimination, every vessel he meets with. Robbery on the high seas is piracy; but to constitute the offense the taking must be felonious. Consequently the quo animo may be inquired into. Davison v. Seal-skins, 2 Paine, 324, Fed.Cas. No.3,661.

Pirates are common sea-rovers, without any fixed place of residence, who acknowledge no sovereign and no law, and support themselves by pillage and depredations at sea; but there are instances wherein the word "pirata" has been formerly taken for a sea-captain. Spelman.

PIRATICALLY., A technical word which must always be used in an indictment for piracy. 3 Inst. 112.

PISCARY. The right of fishing. Thus, common of piscary is the right of fishing in waters belonging to another person.

PIT. In old Scotch law. An excavation or cavity in the earth in which women who were under sentence of death were drowned.

A cavity or hole in the ground, natural or artificial; a large hole from which some mineral deposit is dug or quarried, as a gravel pit, a stone pit. Walker v. Dwelle, 187 Iowa, 1384, 175 N.W. 964.

PIT AND GALLOWS. In Scotch law. A privilege of inflicting capital punishment for theft, given by King Malcolm, by which a woman could be drowned in a pit, (fossa,) or a man hanged on a gallows, (furca.) Bell.

PITCHING—PENCE. In old English law. Money, commonly a penny, paid for pitching or setting down every bag of corn or pack of goods in a fair or market. Cowell.

PITTANCE. A slight repast or refection of fish or flesh more than the common allowance; and the pittancer was the officer who distributed this at certain appointed festivals. Cowell.

PIX. A mode of testing coin. The ascertaining whether coin is of the proper standard is in England called "pixing" it; and there are occasions on which resort is had for this purpose to an ancient mode of inquisition called the "trial of the pix," before a jury of members of the Goldsmiths' Company. 2 Steph.Comm. 540, note.

PIX JURY. A jury consisting of the members of the corporation of the goldsmiths of the city of London, assembled upon an inquisition of very ancient date, called the "trial of the pix." Such juries were abolished in 1930.

PLACARD. An edict; a declaration; a manifesto. Also an advertisement or public notification.

PLACE. An old form of the word "pleas." Thus the "Court of Common Pleas" was sometimes called the "Court of Common Place."

PLACE. This word is a very indefinite term. It is applied to any locality, limited by boundaries, however large or however small. It may be used to designate a country, state, county, town, or a very small portion of a town. The extent of the locality designated by it must generally be determined by the connection in which it is used. Robinson v. State, 143 Miss. 247, 108 So. 903, 905; Hammell v. State, 198 Ind. 45, 152 N.E. 161, 163; State v. Cahalan, 204 Iowa, 410, 214 N.W. 612, 613. In its primary and most general sense means locality, situation, or site, and it is also used to designate an occupied situation or building. Burns v. McDaniel, Fla., 140 So. 314, 316.

PLACE LANDS. Lands granted in aid of a railroad company which are within certain limits on each side of the road, and which become instantly fixed by the adoption of the line of the road. There is a well-defined difference between place lands and "indemnity lands." See Indemnity. See Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N.D. 238, 46 N.W. 449.

PLACE OF CONTRACT. The place (country or state) in which a contract is made, and whose law must determine questions affecting the execution, validity, and construction of the contract. Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U.S. 412, 23 L.Ed. 245.

PLACE OF DELIVERY. The place where delivery is to be made of goods sold. If no place is specified in the contract, the articles sold must, in general, be delivered at the place where they are at the time of the sale. Hatch v. Standard Oil Co., 100 U.S. 134, 25 L.Ed. 554.

PLACE OF EMPLOYMENT. Within the safe place statutes, a place where active work, either temporary or permanent, is being conducted in connection with a business for profit, that is, where some process or operation related to such industry, trade or business is carried on and where any person is directly or indirectly employed by another. Padley v. Village of Lodi, 233 Wis. 661, 290 N.W. 136, 137.

PLACE WHERE. A phrase used in the older reports, being a literal translation of locus in quo (q. v.).

PLACEMAN. One who exercises a public employment, or fills a public station.

The distinction between an officer and a placeman is that the former must take an oath of office, the latter not. Worthy v. Barrett, 63 N.C. 199.

PLACER. In mining law. A superficial deposit of sand, gravel, or disintegrated rock, carrying one or more of the precious metals, along the course or under the bed of a water-course, ancient or current, or along the shore of the sea. Under the acts of congress, the term includes all forms of mineral deposits, except veins of quartz or other rock in place. 30 U.S.C.A. § 35. Montana Coal & Coke Co. v. Livingston, 21 Mont. 59, 52 P. 780; Gregory v. Pershbaker, 73 Cal. 109, 14 P. 401; Duffield v. San Francisco Chemical Co., C.C.A. Idaho, 205 F. 480, 484; San Francisco Chemical Co. v. Duffield, C.C.A.Wyo., 201 F. 830, 835.

A fine, mulct, or pecuniary punishment.

A pleading or plea. In this sense, the term was not confined to the defendant's answer to the declaration, but included all the pleadings in the cause, being nomen generalissimum. 1 Saund. 388, n. 6.

In the old reports and abridgments, "placitum" was the name of a paragraph or subdivision of a title or page where the point decided in a cause was set out separately. It is commonly abbreviated, "pl."

PLACITUM ALIUD PERSONALE, ALIUD REALE, ALIUD MIXTUM. Co.Litt. 284. Pleas [i. e., actions] are personal, real, and mixed.

PLACITUM FRACTUM. A day past or lost to the defendant. 1 Hen. I. c. 59.

PLACITUM NOMINATUM. The day appointed for a criminal to appear and plead and make his defense. Cowell.

PLAGIARISM. The act of appropriating the literary composition of another, or parts or pas sages of his writings, or the ideas or language of the same, and passing them off as the product of one's own mind.

To be liable for "plagiarism" it is not necessary to exactly duplicate another's literary work, it being sufficient if unfair use of such work is made by lifting of substantial portion thereof, but even an exact counter-part of another's work does not constitute "plagiarism" if such counterpart was arrived at independently. O'Rourke v. RKO Radio Pictures, D.C.Mass., 44 F.Supp. 480, 482, 483.

PLAGIARIST, or PLAGIARY. One who publishes the thoughts and writings of another as his. own.

PLAGIARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A manstealer; a kidnapper. Dig. 48, 15, 1; 4 Bl.Comm. 219.

PLAGIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Man-stealing; kidnapping. The offense of enticing away and stealing men, children, and slaves. Calvin. The persuading a slave to escape from his master, or the concealing or harboring him without the. knowledge of his master. Dig. 48, 15, 6.

PLAGUE. Pestilence; a contagious and malignant fever.

PLAIDEUR. Fr. An obsolete term for an attorney who pleaded the cause of his client; an advocate.

PLAINT. In civil law. A complaint; a form of action, particularly one for setting aside a testament alleged to be invalid. This word is the Eng lish equivalent of the Latin "querela."

In English practice. A private memorial tendered in open court to the judge, wherein the party injured sets forth his cause of action. A proceeding in inferior courts by which an action is. commenced without original writ 3 Bl.Comm_

373. This mode of proceeding is commonly adopted in cases of replevin. 3 Steph.Comm. 666.

PLAINTIFF. A person who brings an action; the party who complains or sues in a personal action and is so named on the record. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, Tex.Civ.App., 28 S.W. 458; Carmody v. Land, 207 La. 625, 21 So.2d 764, 768.

Plaintiff in error. The party who sues out a writ of error to review a judgment or other proceeding at law.

Use plaintiff. One for whose use (benefit) an action is brought in the name of another. Thus, where the assignee of a chose in action is not allowed to sue in his own name, the action would be entitled "A. B. (the assignor) for the use of C. D. (the assignee) against E. F." In this case, C. D. is called the "use plaintiff."

PLAN. A delineation; a design; a draft, a draft or form or representation; the representation of anything drawn on a plane, as a map or chart; a scheme; a sketch; also a method of action, procedure, or arrangement. Shainwald v. City of Portland, 153 Or. 167, 55 P.2d 1151, 1156; Jenney v. Des Moines, 103 Iowa, 347, 72 N.W. 550.

PLANE. Surface in which, if any two points are taken, straight line that joins them lies wholly in that surface. In re Vincent, Cust. & Pat.App., 40 F.2d 573, 574.

PLANT. The fixtures, tools, machinery, and apparatus which are necessary to carry on a trade or business. Wharton. Southern Bell Tel. Co. v. D'Alemberte, 39 Fla. 25, 21 So. 570; Sloss-Sheffield Steel Co. v. Mobley, 139 Ala. 425, 36 So. 181; Maxwell v. Wilmington Dental Mfg. Co., C.C.Del., 77 F. 941; State Public Utilities Commission v. Noble, 275 Ill. 121, 113 N.E. 910, 912; McKeon v. Proctor & Gamble Mfg. Co., 154 App.Div. 740, 139 N.Y.S. 805, 806; Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Wiggins, 198 Ala. 346, 73 So. 516, 517. An organized physical equipment to produce any desired result, or an operating unit. Otis Elevator Co. v. Arey-Hauser Co., D.C.Pa., 22 F.Supp. 4, 6.

PLANTATION. In English law. A colony; an original settlement in a new country. See 1 Bl. Comm. 107.

In American law. A farm; a large cultivated estate. Used chiefly in the southern states.

In North Carolina, "plantation" signifies the land a man owns which he is cultivating more or less in annual crops. Strictly, it designates the place planted; but in wills it is generally used to denote more than the inclosed and cultivated fields, and to take in the necessary woodland, and, indeed, commonly all the land forming the parcel or parcels under culture as one farm, or even what is worked by one set of hands. Stowe v. Davis, 32 N.C. 431.

PLAT, or PLOT. A map, or representation on paper, of a piece of land subdivided into lots, with streets, alleys, etc., usually drawn to a scale. McDaniel v. Mace, 47 Iowa, 510; Burke v. McCowen, 115 Cal. 481, 47 P. 367.

PLATA. Under Roumanian law, on the sale of a Roumanian ship, the owners become liable to the seamen only for repatriation at the expense of the ship, and "plata salariilor," or payment of salaries; the word "plata" meaning payment, and "salariilor" being the genitive plural of "salariu," which, like the English word "salary," means fixed compensation regularly paid. The Prahova, D.C.Cal., 38 F.Supp. 418, 425.

PLAY-DEBT. Debt contracted by gaming:

PLAZA. A Spanish word, meaning a public square in a city or town. Sachs v. Towanda, 79 Ill.App. 441; Kelly v. Town of Hayward, 192 Cal. 242, 219 P. 749.

PLEA. Common-law practice. A pleading; any one in the series of pleadings. More particularly, the first pleading on the part of the defendant. In the strictest sense, the answer which the defendant in an action at law makes to the plaintiff's declaration, and in which he sets up matter of fact as defense, thus distinguished from a demurrer, which interposes objections on grounds of law.

Equity. A special answer showing or relying upon one or more things as a cause why the suit should be either dismissed or delayed or barred. Mitf.Eq.P1. 219; Coop.Eq.P1. 223.

A short statement, in response to a bill in equity, of facts which, if inserted in the bill, would render it demurrable; while an answer is a complete statement of the defendant's case, and contains answers to any interrogatories the plaintiff may have administered. Hunt, Eq. pt. 1, c. 3.

Old English Law

A suit or action.

Thus, the power to "hold pleas" is the power to take cognizance of actions or suits; so "common pleas" are actions or suits between private persons. And this meaning of the word still appears in the modern declarations, where it is stated, e. g., that the defendant "has been summoned to answer the plaintiff in a plea of debt."

General

Affirmative plea. One which sets up a single fact, not appearing in the bill, or sets up a number of circumstances all tending to establish a single fact, which fact, if existing, destroys the complainant's case. Potts v. Potts, N.J.Ch., 42 A. 1055.

Anomalous plea. One which is partly affirmative and partly negative. Baldwin v. Elizabeth, 42 N.J.Eq. 11, 6 A. 275; Potts v, Potts, N.J.Ch., 42 A. 1055.

Bad plea. One which is unsound or insufficient in form or substance, or which .does not technically answer or correspond with the pleading which preceded it in the action.

Common pleas. Common causes or suits; civil actions brought and prosecuted between subjects or citizens, as distinguished from pleas of the crown or criminal cases.

Counter-plea. A plea to some matter incidental to the main object of the suit, and out of the direct line of pleadings. In the more ancient system of pleading, counter-plea was applied to what was, in effect, a replication to aid prayer, (q. v.;) that is, where a tenant for life or other limited interest in land, having an action brought against him in respect to the title to such land, prayed in aid of the lord or reversioner for his better defense, that which the demandant alleged against either request was called a "counter-plea." Cowell.

Dilatory pleas. See Dilatory.

Double plea. One having the technical fault of duplicity; one consisting of several distinct and independent matters alleged to the same point and requiring different answers.

False plea. A sham plea; (which title see infra.)

Foreign plea. A plea objecting to the jurisdiction of a judge, on the ground that he had not cognizance of the subject-matter of the suit. Cowell.

Negative plea. One which does not undertake to answer the various allegations of the bill, but specifically denies some particular fact or matter the existence of which is essential to entitle the complainant to any relief. Potts v. Potts, N.J. Ch., 42 A. 1056.

Peremptory pleas. "Pleas in bar" are so termed in contradistinction to that class of pleas called "dilatory pleas." The former, viz., peremptory pleas, are usually pleaded to the merits of the action, with the view of raising a material issue between the parties; while the latter class, viz., dilatory pleas, are generally pleaded with a view of retarding the plaintiff's proceedings, and not for the purpose of raising an issue upon which the parties may go to trial and settle the point in dispute. Peremptory pleas are also called "pleas in bar," while dilatory pleas are said to be in abatement only. Brown.

Plea in abatement. In practice. A plea which, without disputing justice of plaintiff's claim, objects to place, mode, or time of asserting it; it allows plaintiff to renew suit in another place or form, or at another time, and does not assume to answer action on its merits, or deny existence of particular cause of action on which plaintiff relies. Dickenson v. Hawes, 32 Ga.App. 173, 122 S.E. 811, 812; Harris v. North, 78 W.Va. 76, 88 S.E. 603, 604, 1 A.L.R. 356; Hurst v. Everett, C.C.N.C., 21 F. 221; Wilson v. Winchester & P. R. Co., C.C. W.Va., 82 F. 18.

Plea in bar. In practice. A plea which goes to bar the plaintiff's action; that is, to defeat it absolutely and entirely. 1 Burrill, Pr. 162; 3 Bl. Comm. 303; Rawson v. Knight, 71 Me. 102; Norton v. Winter, 1 Or. 48, 62 Am.Dec. 297; Wilson v. Knox County, 132 Mo. 387, 34 S.W. 45.

Plea in discharge. One which admits that the plaintiff had a cause of action, but shows that it was discharged by some subsequent or collateral matter, as, payment or accord and satisfaction. Nichols v. Cecil, 106 Tenn. 455, 61 S.W. 768.

Plea in reconvention. In the civil law. A plea which sets up new matter, not in defense to the action, but by way of cross-complaint, set-off, or counterclaim.

Plea of confession and avoidance. One which admits that plaintiff had a cause of action, but which avers that it has been discharged by some subsequent or collateral matter. De Lissa v. Fuller Coal and Mining Co., 59 Kan. 319, 52 P. 886, 888.

Plea of guilty. A confession of guilt in open court. Griffin v. State, 12 Ga.App. 615, 77 S.E. 1080, 1084; Stokes v. State, 122 Ark. 56, 182 S.W. 521; Accardi v. U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 15 F.2d 619, 621.

Plea of nolo contendere. One which has the same effect as a "plea of guilty" in so far as regards the proceedings on the indictment, and it is a confession only for the purposes of the criminal prosecution and does not bind the defendant in a civil suit for the same wrong. Schireson v. State Board of Medical Examiners of New Jersey, 129 N.J.L. 203, 28 A.2d 879, 881. See, also, Nolo Contendere.

Plea of release. One which admits the cause of action, but sets forth a release subsequently executed by the party authorized to release the claim. Landis v. Morrissey, 69 Cal. 83, 10 P. 258.

Plea side. The plea side of a court is that branch or department of the court which entertains or takes cognizance of civil actions and suits, as distinguished from its criminal or crown department. Thus the court of king's bench is said to have a plea side and a crown or criminal side; the one branch or department of it being devoted to the cognizance of civil actions, the other to criminal proceedings and matters peculiarly concerning the crown. So the court of exchequer is said to have a plea side and a crown side; the one being appropriated to civil actions, the other to matters of revenue. Brown.

Pleas in short by consent. Pleas which are intended to be nothing more than a mere outline, or sketch of the defense they respectively set up. Steele v. Walker, 115 Ala. 485, 21 So. 942, 943, 67 Am.St.Rep. 62.

Pleas of the crown. In English law. A phrase now employed to signify criminal causes, in which the king is a party. Formerly it signified royal causes for offenses of a greater magnitude than mere misdemeanors.

Pleas roll. In English practice. A record upon which are entered all the pleadings in a cause, in their regular order, and the issue.

Pure plea. One which relies wholly on some matter outside those referred to in the bill; as a plea of a release on a settled account.

Pleas not pure are so called in contradistinction to pure pleas; they are sometimes also denominated negative pleas. 4 Bouvier, Inst. n. 4275.

Sham plea. A false plea; a plea of false or fictitious matter, subtly drawn so as to entrap an opponent, or create delay. 3 Chit.Pr. 729, 730. A vexatious or false defense, resorted to under the old system of pleading for purposes of delay and annoyance. Steph.P1. 383.

Mr. Chitty defines sham pleas to be pleas so palpably and manifestly untrue that the court will assume them to be so ; pleas manifestly absurd. When answers or defenses admit of lawyer-like argument, such as courts should listen to, they are not "sham," in the sense of the statute. When it needs argument to prove that an answer or demurrer is frivolous, it is not frivolous, and should not be stricken off. To warrant this summary mode of disposing of a defense, the mere reading ,of the pleadings should be sufficient to disclose, without deliberation and without a doubt, that the defense is sham or irrelevant. Cottrill v. Cramer, 40 Wis. 559. A "sham plea" is one good on its face, but false in fact. In re Beam, 93 N.J.Eq. 593, 117 A. 613, 614. At common law a plea was considered sham when it was palpably or inherently false, and from the plain or conceded facts in the case must have been known to the party interposing it to be false. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes Barre & H. R. Co., 98 N.J.Law, 507, 120 A. 734, 735.

Special plea. A special kind of plea in 'bar, distinguished by this name from the general issue, and consisting usually of some new affirmative matter, though it may also be in the form of a traverse or denial. Steph.P1. 52, 162; Allen v. New Haven & N. Co., 49 Conn. 245.

Special plea in bar. One which advances new matter. It differs from the general, in this; that the latter denies some material allegation, but never advances new matter. Gould, Pl. c. 2, § 38.

PLEAD. To make, deliver, or file any pleading; to conduct the pleadings in a cause. To interpose any pleading in a suit which contains allegations of fact; in this sense the word is the antithesis of "demur." More particularly, to deliver in a formal manner the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's declaration, or to the indictment, as the case may be.

To appear as a pleader or advocate in a cause; to argue a cause in a court of justice. But this meaning of the word is not technical, but colloquial.

PLEAD A STATUTE. Pleading a statute is stating the facts which bring the case within it; and "counting" on it, in the strict language of pleading, is making express reference to it by apt terms to show the source of right relied on. McCullough v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. (Unof.) 543, 95 N.W. 31.

PLEAD ISSUABLY. This means to interpose such a plea as is calculated to raise a material issue, either of law or of fact.

PLEAD OVER. To pass over, or omit to notice, a material allegation in the last pleading of the opposite party; to pass by a defect in the pleading of the other party without taking advantage of it. In another sense, to plead the general issue, after one has interposed a demurrer or special plea which has been dismissed by a judgment of respondeat ouster, PLEAD TO THE MERITS. This is a phrase of long standing and accepted usage in the law, and distinguishes those pleas which answer the cause of action and on which a trial may be had from all pleas of a different character. Rahn v. Gunnison, 12 Wis. 529.

PLEADED. Alleged or averred, in form, in a judicial proceeding.

It more often refers to matter of defense, but not invariably. To say that matter in a declaration or replication is not well pleaded would not be deemed erroneous. Abbott.

PLEADER. A person whose business it Is to draw pleadings. Formerly, when pleading at common law was a highly technical and difficult art, there was a class of men known as "special pleaders not at the bar," who held a position intermediate between counsel and attorneys. The class is now almost extinct, and the term "pleaders" is generally applied, in England, to junior members of the common-law bar. Sweet.

Special pleader. In English practice. A person whose professional occupation is to give verbal or written opinions upon statements made verbally or in writing, and to draw pleadings, civil or criminal, and such practical proceedings as may be out of the usual course. 2 Chit.Pr. 42.

Special pleaders were not necessarily at the bar; but those that were not required to take out annual certificates under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, §§ 60, 63; Moz. & W.

PLEADING. The peculiar science or system of rules and principles, established in the common law, according to which the pleadings or responsive allegations of litigating parties are framed, with a view to preserve technical propriety and to produce a proper issue.

The process performed by the parties to a suit or action, in alternately presenting written statements of their contention, each responsive to that which precedes, and each serving to narrow the field of controversy, until there evolves a single point, affirmed on one side and denied on the other, called the "issue," upon which they then go to trial.

The act or step of interposing any one of the pleadings in a cause, but particularly one on the part of the defendant; and, in the strictest sense, one which sets up allegations of fact in defense to the action.

The name "a pleading" is also given to any one of the formal written statements of accusation or defense presented by the parties alternately in an action at law; the aggregate of such statements filed in any one cause' are termed "the pleadings."

The oral advocacy of a client's cause in court, by his barrister or counsel, is sometimes called "pleading;" but this is a popular, rather than technical, use.

Chancery Practice

It consists in making the formal written allegations or statements of the respective parties on the record to maintain the suit, or to defeat it, of which, when contested in matters of fact, they propose to offer proofs, and in matters of law to offer arguments to the court. Story, Eq.P1. § 4, note.

In General

Articulated pleading. The stating In separate paragraphs, [r] separately numbered, of each material fact of the petition. Newspaper Feature Service v. Southern Pub. Co., 140 La. 702, 73 So. 777.

Double pleading. This is not allowed either in the declaration or subsequent pleadings. Its meaning with respect to the former is that the declaration must not, in support of a single demand, allege several distinct matters, by any one of which that demand is sufficiently supported. With respect to the subsequent pleadings, the meaning is that none of them is to contain several distinct answers to that which preceded it; and the reason of the rule in each case is that such pleading tends to several issues in respect of a single claim. Wharton.

Special pleading. When the allegations (or "pleadings," as they are called) of the contending parties in an action are not of the general or ordinary form, but are of a more complex or special character, they are denominated "special pleadings;" and, when a defendant pleads a plea of this description, (i. e., a special plea,) he is said to plead specially, in opposition to pleading the general issue. These terms have given rise to the popular denomination of that science which, though properly called "pleading," is generally known by the name of "special pleading." Brown. The allegation of special or new matter in opposition or explanation of the last previous averments on the other side, as distinguished from a direct denial of matter previously alleged by the opposite party. Gould, Pl. c. 1, § 18; Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246, 4 L.Ed. 381; Com.Dig. Pleader (E 15) ; Steph.Pl., And. ed. 240, n. In popular language, the adroit and plausible advocacy of a client's case in court. Stimson, Law Gloss.

PLEADINGS. The formal allegations by the parties of their respective claims and defenses, for the judgment of the court. Smith v. Jacksonville Oil Mill Co., 21 Ga.App. 679, 94 S.E. 900, 901; Wilkinson v. Stone, 82 Okl. 296, 200 P. 196, 199; Treadgold v. Willard, 81 Or. 658, 160 P. 803, 805.

The individual allegations of the respective parties to an action at common law, proceeding from them alternately, in the order and under the distinctive names following: The plaintiff's declaration, the defendant's plea, the plaintiff's replication, the defendant's rejoinder, the plaintiff's surre joinder, the defendant's rebutter, the plaintiff's surrebutter; after which they have no distinctive names. Burrill.

The term "pleadings" has a technical and well-defined meaning. Pleadings are written allegations of what is affirmed on the one side, or denied on the other, disclosing to the court or jury having 'to try the cause the real matter in dispute between the parties. Desnoyer v. Hereux, 1 Minn. 17 (Gil. 1).

PLEBANUS. In old English ecclesiastical law. A rural dean. Cowell.

PLEBEIAN. One who is classed among the common people, as distinguished from the nobles.

PLEBEITY, or PLEBITY. The common or meaner sort of people; the plebeians.

PLEBEYOS. In Spanish law. Commons; those who exercise any trade, or who cultivate the soil. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 6, and note.

PLEBIANA. In old records. A mother church.

PLEBISCITE. In modern constitutional law, the name "plebiscite" has been given to a vote of the entire people, (that is, the aggregate of the enfranchised individuals composing a state or nation,) expressing their choice for or against a proposed law or enactment, submitted to them, and which, if adopted, will work a radical change in the constitution, or which is beyond the powers of the regular legislative body. The proceeding is extraordinary, and is generally revolutionary in its character; an example of which may be seen in the plebiscites submitted to the French people by Louis Napoleon, whereby the Second Empire was established. But the principle of the plebiscite has been incorporated in the modern Swiss constitution, (under the name of "referendum,") by which a revision of the constitution must be undertaken when demanded by the vote of fifty thousand Swiss citizens. Maine Popular Govt. 40, 96.

PLEBISCITUM. Lat. In Roman law. A law enacted by the plebs or commonalty, (that is, the citizens, with the exception of the patricians and senators,) at the request or on the proposition of a plebeian magistrate, such as a "tribune." Inst. 1, 2, 4.

PLEBS. Lat. In Roman law. The commonalty or citizens, exclusive of the patricians and senators. Inst. 1, 2, 4.

PLEDABLE. L. Fr. That may be brought or conducted; as an action or "plea," as it was formerly called. Britt. c. 32.

PLEDGE. In the law of bailment. A bailment of goods to a creditor as security for some debt or engagement. A bailment or delivery of goods by a debtor to his creditor, to be kept till the debt be discharged. Story, Bailm. § 7; Civ. Code La. art. 3133; 2 Kent, Comm. 577; Stearns v. Marsh, 4 Denio, N.Y., 229, 47 Am.Dec. 248; Sheridan v. Presas, 18 Misc. 180, 41 N.Y.S. 451; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N.Y. 507, 55 Am.Dec. 290; Gloucester Bank v. Worcester, 10 Pick., Mass., 531; Lilienthal v. Ballou, 125 Cal. 183, 57 P. 897.

The necessary elements to constitute a contract one of "pledge" are: Possession of the pledged property must pass from the pledgor to the pledgee; the legal title to the property must remain in the pledgor; and the pledgee must have a lien on the property for the payment of a debt or the performance of an obligation due him by the pledgor or some other person—while, in a "chattel mortgage," the legal title passes to the mortgagee subject to a defeasance. Rice v. Garnett, 17 Ala.App. 239, 84 So. 557, 558; Campbell v. Redwine Bros., 22 Ga.App. 455, 96 S.E. 347; Sneeden v. Nurnberger's Market, 192 N.C. 439, 135 S.E.

328, 330; McAndrews v. Idawa Gold Mining Co., 54 N.D. 734, 210 N.W. 514, 519, 51 A.L.R. 1123.

A bailment of personal property as security for a debt or other obligation. Thoen v. First Nat. Bank, 199 Minn. 47, 271 N.W. 111, 112; Travers v. Stevens, 108 Fla. 11, 145 So. 851, 854.

The specific article delivered to the creditor in security is also called a "pledge" or "pawn."

There is a clear distinction between mortgages and pledges. In a pledge the legal title remains in the pledgor ; in a mortgage it passes to the mortgagee. In a mortgage the mortgagee need not have possession; in a pledge the pledgee must have possession, though it be only constructive. In a mortgage, at common law, the property on nonpayment of the debt passes wholly to the mortgagee; in a pledge the property is sold, and only so much of the proceeds as will pay his debt passes to the pledgee. A mortgage is a conditional conveyance of property, which becomes absolute unless redeemed at a specified time. A pledge is not strictly a conveyance at all, nor need any day of redemption be appointed for it. A mortgagee can sell and deliver the thing mortgaged, subject only to the right of redemption. A pledgee cannot sell and deliver his pawn until the debt is due and payment denied. Bouvier.

There are two varieties of the contract of pledge known to the law of Louisiana, viz., pawn and antichresis ; the former relating to chattel securities, the latter to landed securities. Civ.Code La. art. 3134; and see those titles.

PLEDGEE. The party to whom goods are pledged, or delivered in pledge. Story, Bailm. § 287.

PLEDGERY. Suretyship, or an undertaking or answering for another. Gloucester Bank v. Worcester, 10 Pick. Mass., 531.

PLEDGES. In pleading. Those persons who became sureties for the prosecution of the suit. Their names were anciently appended at the foot of the declaration. In time it became purely a formal matter, because the plaintiff was no longer liable to be amerced for a false claim, and the fictitious persons John Doe and Richard Roe became the universal pledges, or they might be omitted altogether, 1 Tidd, Pr. 455; Archb. Civ. Pl. 171; or inserted at any time before judgment; they are now omitted.

PLEDGES TO RESTORE. In England, before the plaintiff in foreign attachment can issue execution against the property in the hands of the garnishee, he must find "pledges to restore," consisting of two householders, who enter into a recognizance for the restoration of the property, as a security for the protection of the defendant; for, as the plaintiff's debt is not proved in any stage of the proceedings, the court guards the rights of the absent defendant by taking security on his behalf, so that if he should afterwards disprove the plaintiff's claim he may obtain restitution of the property attached. Brand. For. Attachm. 93; Sweet.

PLEDGOR. The party delivering goods in pledge; the party pledging. Story, Bailm. § 287.

PLEGIABILIS. In old English law. That may be pledged; the subject of pledge or security. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 20, § 98.

PLEGII DE PROSEQUENDO. Pledges to prosecute with effect an action of replevin.

PLEGII DE RETORNO HABENDO. Pledges to return the subject of distress, should the right be determined against the party bringing the action of replevin. 3 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 422n.

PLEGIIS ACQUIETANDIS. A writ that anciently lay for a surety against him for whom he was surety, if he paid not the money at the day. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 137.

PLENA ;ETAS. Lat. In old English law. Full age.

PLENA ET CELERIS JUSTITIA FIAT PARTIBUS. 4 Inst. 67. Let full and speedy justice be done to the parties.

PLENA FORISFACTURA. A forfeiture of all that one possesses.

PLENA PROBATIO. In the civil law. A term used to signify full proof, (that is, proof by two witnesses,) in contradistinction to semi-plena probatio, which is only a presumption. Cod. 4, 19, 5.

PLENARTY. In English law. Fullness; a state of being full. A term applied to a benefice when full, or possessed by an incumbent. The opposite state to a vacation, or vacancy. Cowell.

PLENARY. Full, entire, complete, absolute, perfect, unqualified. Mashunkashey v. Mashunkashey, 191 Okl. 501, 134 P.2d 976, 979.

PLENARY CONFESSION. A full and complete confession. An admission dr confession, whether in civil or criminal law, is said to be "plenary" when it is, if believed, conclusive against the person making it. Best, Ev. 664; Rosc. Crim. Ev. 39.

PLENARY SUIT. One that proceeds on formal pleadings. Central Republic Bank and Trust Co. v. Caldwell, C.C.A.Mo., 58 F.2d 721.

In the ecclesiastical courts, (and in admiralty practice,) causes are divided into plenary and summary. The former are those in whose proceedings the order and solemnity of the law is required to be exactly observed, so that if there is the least departure from that order, or disregard of that solemnity, the whole proceedings are annulled. Summary causes are those in which it is unnecessary to pursue that order and solemnity. Brown.

PLENE. Lat. Completely; fully; sufficiently.

PLENE ADMINISTRAVIT. In practice. A plea by an executor or administrator that he has fully administered all the assets that have come to his hands, and that no assets remain out of which the plaintiff's claim could be satisfied.

PLENE ADMINISTRAVIT PRZETER. In practice. A plea by an executor or administrator that he has "fully administered" all the assets that have come to his hands, "except" assets to a certain amount, which are not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff. 1 Tidd, Pr. 644.

PLENUM DOMINIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Full ownership; the property in a thing united with the usufruct. Calvin.

PLEVIN. A warrant, or assurance.

PLEYTO. In Spanish law. The pleadings in a cause. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7.

PLIGHT. In old English law. An estate, with the habit and quality of the land; extending to a rent charge and to a possibility of dower. Co. Litt. 221b; Cowell.

PLOK-PENNIN. A kind of earnest used in public sales at Amsterdam. Wharton.

PLOTTAGE. A term used in appraising land values and particularly in eminent domain proceedings, to designate the additional value given to city lots by the fact that they are contiguous, which enables the owner to utilize them as large blocks of land. Erlanger v. New York Theatre Co., 206 App.Div. 148, 200 N.Y.S. 696, 698; People ex rel. Frederick Loeser & Co. v. Goldfogle, 220 App.Div. 326, 221 N.Y.S. 342, 346.

PLOW-ALMS. The ancient payment of a penny to the church from every plow-land. 1 Mon. Angl. 256.

PLOW-BOTE. An allowance of wood which tenants are entitled to, for repairing their plows and other implements of husbandry.

PLOW-LAND. A quantity of land "not of any certain content, but as much as a plow can, by course of husbandry, plow in a year." Co. Litt. 69a.

Tillable. Govier v. Brechler, 159 Wis. 157, 149 N.W. 740, 742.

PLOW-MONDAY. The Monday after twelfth-day.

PLOW-SILVER. Money formerly paid by some tenants, in lieu of service to plow the lord's lands.

PLUMBATURA. Lat. In the civil law. Soldering. Dig. 6, 1, 23, 5.

PLUMBER. A tradesman who furnishes, fits, and repairs gas, water and soil pipes, cisterns, tanks, baths, water closets, their fittings, and other sanitary and fire protection apparatus for a house or other building, including junctions to mains and sewers. Com. v. Dougherty, 156 Pa.Super. 520, 40 A.2d 902, 903; People v. Osborne, 149 Misc. 676, 269 N.Y.S. 409.

PLUMBUM. Lat. In the civil law. Lead. Dig. 50, 16, 242, 2.

PLUNDER, v. To take property from persons or places by open force, and this may be in course of a lawful war, or by unlawful hostility, as in the case of pirates or banditti. The term is also used to express the idea of taking property from a person or place, without just right, but not expressing the nature or quality of the wrong done. Carter v. Andrews, 16 Pick., Mass., 9; U. S. v. Stone, C.C.Tenn., 8 F. 246; U. S. v. Pitman, 27 Fed.Cas. 540.

PLUNDER, n. Personal property belonging to an enemy, captured and appropriated on land; booty. Also the act of seizing such property. See Booty; Prize.

PLUNDERAGE. In maritime law. The embezzlement of goods on board of a ship is so called.

PLURAL. Containing more than one; consisting of or designating two or more. Webster.

PLURAL MARRIAGE. See Marriage.

PLURALIS NUMERUS EST DUOBUS CONTENTUS. 1 Rolle, 476. The plural number is satisfied by two.

PLURALIST. One that holds more than one ecclesiastical benefice, with cure of souls.

PLURALITER. In the plural. 10 East, 158, arg.

PLURALITY. In the law of elections. The excess of the votes cast for one candidate over those cast for any other. Where there are only two candidates, he who receives the greater number of the votes cast is said to have a majority; when there are more than two competitors for the same office, the person who receives the greatest number of votes has a plurality, but he has not a majority unless he receives a greater number of votes than those cast for all his competitors combined, or, in other words, more than one-half of the total number of votes cast.

In ecclesiastical law, "plurality" means the holding two, three, or more benefices by the same incumbent; and he is called a "pluralist." Pluralities are now abolished, except in certain cases. 2 Steph.Comm. 691, 692.

PLURES COHIEREDES SUNT QUASI UNUM CORPUS PROPTER UNITATEM JURIS QUOD HABENT. Co. Litt. 163. Several co-heirs are, as it were, one body, by reason of the unity of right which they possess.

PLURES PARTICIPES SUNT QUASI UNUM CORPUS, IN EO QUOD UNUM JUS HABENT. Co. Litt. 164. Several parceners are as one body, in that they have one right.

PLURIES. Lat. Often; frequently. When an original and alias writ have been issued and proved ineffectual, a third writ, called a "pluries writ," may frequently be issued. It is to the same effect as the two former, except that it contains the words, "as we have often commanded you," ("sicut pluries prcecepimus,") after the usual commencement, "We command you." 3 Bl. Comm. 283; Archb. Pr. 585.

PLURIES FI. FA. A writ issued where other commands of the court have proved ineffectual. U. S. v. Bd of Dir., C.C.A.La., 229 F. 1, 3.

PLURIS PETITIO. Lat. In Scotch practice. A demand of more than is due. Bell.

PLUS EXEMPLA QUAM PECCATA NOCENT. Examples hurt more than crimes.

PLUS PECCAT AUTHOR QUAM ACTOR. The originator or instigator of a crime is a worse offender than the actual perpetrator of it. Applied to the crime of subornation of perjury. 5 Coke, 99a.

PLUS PETITIO. In Roman law. A phrase denoting the offense of claiming more than was just in one's pleadings. This more might be claimed in four different respects, viz.: (1) Re, i. e., in amount, (e. g., £50 for £5;) (2) loco, i. e., in place (e. g., delivery at some place more difficult to effect than the place specified;) (3) tempore, i. e., in time, (e. g., claiming payment on the 1st of August of what is not due till the 1st of September;) and (4) causa, e., in quality, (e. g., claiming a dozen of champagne, when the contract was only for a dozen of wine generally.) Prior to Justinian's time, this offense was in general fatal to the action; but, under the legislation of the emperors Zeno and Justinian, the offense (if re, loco, or causa) exposed the party to the payment of three times the damage, if any, sustained by the other side, and (if tempore) obliged him to postpone his action for double the time, and to pay the costs of his first action before commencing a second. Brown.

PLUS VALET CONSUETUDO QUAM CONCESSIO. Custom is more powerful than grant.

PLUS VALET UNUS OCULATUS TESTIS QUAM AURITI DECEM. One eye-witness is of more weight than ten ear-witnesses, [or those who speak from hearsay.] 4 Inst. 279.

PLUS VIDENT OCULI QUAM OCULUS. Several eyes see more than one. 4 Inst. 160.

PNEUMOCONIOSIS. A generic term including all lung diseases caused by dust particles of any sort. Genesco, Inc. v. Greeson, 125 S.E.2d 786, 789, 105 Ga.App. 798.

PO. LO. SUO. An old abbreviation for the words "ponit loco suo," (puts in his place,) used in warrants of attorney. Townsh. Pl. 431.

POACH. To steal game on a man's land.

POACHING. In English criminal law. The unlawful entry upon land for the purpose of taking or destroying game; the taking or destruction of game upon another's land, usually committed at night. Steph. Crim. Law 119, et seq.; 2 Steph. Comm. 82.

POBLADOR. In Spanish law. A colonizer; he who peoples; the founder of a colony.

POCKET. This word is used as an adjective in several compound legal phrases, carrying a meaning suggestive of, or analogous to, its signification as a pouch, bag, or secret receptacle. For these phrases, see "Borough," "Judgment," "Record," "Sheriff," and "Veto."

PLENA. Lat. Punishment; a penalty. Inst. 4, 6, 18, 19.

POD NET. See Pound Net.

PLENA AD PAUCOS, METUS AD OMNES PERVENIAT. If punishment be inflicted on a few, a dread comes to all.

P(ENA CORPORALIS. Corporal punishment.

PCENA EX DELICTO DEFUNCTI HIERES TENERI NON DEBET. The heir ought not to be bound by a penalty arising out of the wrongful act of the deceased. 2 Inst. 198.

PLENA NON POTEST, CULPA PERENNIS ERIT. Punishment cannot be, crime will be, perpetual. 21 Vin. Abr. 271.

PCENA PILLORALIS. In old English law. Punishment of the pillory. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 38, § 11.

PCENA SUOS TENERE DEBET ACTORES ET NON ALIOS. Punishment ought to bind the guilty, and not others. Bract. fol. 380b.

PLENA TOLLI POTEST, CULPA PERENNIS ERIT. The punishment can be removed, but the crime remains. 1 Park.Cr.Rep. (N.Y.) 241.

PCENZE POTIUS MOLLIENDZE QUAM EXASPARANDIE SUNT. 3 Inst. 220. Punishments should rather be softened than aggravated.

PENCE SINT RESTRINGEND1E. Punishments should be restrained. Jenk. Cent. 29.

PCENIE SUOS TENERE DEBET ACTORES ET NON ALIOS. Punishment ought to be inflicted upon the guilty, and not upon others. Bract 380b; Fleta, 1. 1, c. 38, § 12; 1. 4, c. 17, § 17.

PCENALIS. Lat. In the civil law. Penal; imposing a penalty; claiming or enforcing a penalty. Actiones pcenales, penal actions. Inst. 4, 6, 12.

PCENITENTIA. Lat. In the civil law. Repentance; reconsideration; changing one's mind; drawing back from an agreement already made, or rescinding it.

Locus pcenitentice. Room or place for repentance or reconsideration; an opportunity to withdraw from a negotiation before finally concluding the contract or agreement. Also, in criminal law, an opportunity afforded by the circumstances to a person who has formed an intention to kill or to commit another crime, giving him a chance to reconsider and relinquish his purpose.

POINDING. The process of the law of Scotland which answers to the distress of the English law. Poinding is of three kinds:

Real poinding or poinding of the ground. This is the action by which a creditor, having a security on the land of his debtor, is enabled to appropriate the rents of the land, and the goods of the debtor or his tenants found thereon, to the satisfaction of the debt.

Personal poinding. This consists in the seizure of the goods of the debtor, which are sold under the direction of a court of justice, and the net amount of the sales paid over to the creditor in satisfaction of his debt; or, if no purchaser appears, the goods themselves are delivered.

Poinding of stray cattle, committing depredations on corn, grass, or plantations, until satisfaction is made for the damage. Bell.

POINT. A distinct proposition or question of law arising or propounded in a case. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Tarver, Steele & Co., Tex.Civ. App., 295 S.W. 320, 323.

POINT RESERVED. When, in the progress of the trial of a cause, an important or difficult point of law is presented to the court, and the court is not certain of the decision that should be given, it may reserve the point, that is, decide it provisionally as it is asked by the party, but reserve its more mature consideration for the hearing on a motion for a new trial, when, if it shall appear that the first ruling was wrong, the verdict will be set aside. The point thus treated is technically called a "point reserved."

POINTS. The distinct propositions of law, or chief heads of argument, presented by a party in his paper-book, and relied upon on the argument of the cause. Also the marks used in punctuation. Duncan v. Kohler, 37 Minn. 379, 34 N.W. 594; Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Pierro, 6 Minn. 570 (Gil. 404).

POISON. In medical jurisprudence. A substance having an inherent deleterious property which renders it, when taken into the system, capable of destroying life. 2 Whart. & S. Med. Jur. § 1. A substance which, on being applied to the human body, internally or externally, is capable of destroying the action of the vital functions, or of placing the solids and fluids in such a state as to prevent the continuance of life. Wharton. Boswell v. State, 114 Ga. 40, 39 S.E. 897; United States Mut. Ace. Ass'n v. Newman, 84 Va. 52, 3 S.E. 805.

POLAR STAR RULE. The rule that the intent of the maker of a written document, as gathered from its four corners, shall prevail unless such intent conflicts with some statutory provision within the jurisdiction, or is against public policy. Hanks v. McDanell, 307 Ky. 243, 210 S.W.2d 784, 786.

POLE. A measure of length, equal to five yards and a half.

POLICE. The function of that branch of the administrative machinery of government which is charged with the preservation of public order and tranquillity, the promotion of the public health, safety, and morals, and the prevention, detection, and punishment of crimes. State v. Hine, 59 Conn. 50, 21 A. 1024, 10 L.R.A. 83; People v. Squire, 107 N.Y. 593, 14 N.E. 820, 1 Am.St.Rep. 893.

The police of a state, in a comprehensive sense, embraces its whole system of internal regulation, by which the state seeks not only to preserve the public order and to prevent offenses against the state, but also to establish for the intercourse of citizen with citizen those rules of good manners and good neighborhood which are calculated to prevent a conflict of rights, and to insure to each the uninterrupted enjoyment of his own, so far as is reasonably consistent with a like enjoyment of rights by others. Cooley, Const.Lim. *572. It is defined by Jeremy Bentham in his works: "Police is in general a system of precaution, either for the prevention of crime or of calamities. Its business may be distributed into eight distinct branches; (1) police for the prevention of offenses; (2) police for the prevention of calamities; (3) police for the prevention of epidemic diseases; (4) police of charity; (5) police of interior communications; (6) police of public amusements; (7) police for recent intelligence; (8) police for registration." Canal Com'rs v. Willamette Transp. Co., 6 Or. 222.

The term "police" has also been divided into "administrative police", which has for its object to maintain constantly public order in every part of the general administration, and "judiciary police" which is intended principally to prevent crimes by punishing the criminals. Its object is to punish crimes which the administrative police has not been able to prevent. Green v. City of Bennettsville, 197 S.C. 313, 15 S.E.2d 334, 337.

POLICE COURT. The name of a kind of inferior court in several of the states, which has a summary jurisdiction over minor offenses and misdemeanors of small consequence, and the powers of a committing magistrate in respect to more serious crimes, and, in some states, a limited jurisdiction for the trial of civil causes. In English law. Courts in which stipendiary magistrates, chosen from barristers of a certain standing, sit for the dispatch of business. Their general duties and powers are the same as those of the unpaid magistracy, except that one of them may usually act in cases which would require to be heard before two other justices. Wharton.

POLICE DE CHARGEMENT. Fr. In French law. A bill of lading. Ord. Mar. liv. 3, tit. 2.

POLICE JURY. In Louisiana. The governing bodies of the "parishes," which are political subdivisions of the state, comparable to counties in other states. National Liberty Ins. Co. of America v. Police Jury of Natchitoches Parish, 'C.C.A. La., 96 F.2d 261, 262.

POLICE JUSTICE. A magistrate charged exclusively with the duties incident to the common-law office of a conservator or justice of the peace; the prefix "police" serving merely to distinguish them from justices having also civil jurisdiction. Wenzler v. People, 58 N.Y. 530.

POLICE MAGISTRATE. An inferior judicial officer having jurisdiction of minor criminal offenses, breaches of police regulations, and the like; so called to distinguish them from magistrates who have jurisdiction in civil cases also, as justices of the peace. People v. Curley, 5 Colo. 416; McDermont v. Dinnie, 6 N.D. 278, 69 N.W. 295.

POLICE OFFICER. One of the staff of men employed in cities and towns to enforce the municipal police, i. e., the laws and ordinances for preserving the peace and good order of the community. Otherwise called "policeman."

POLICE POWER. The power vested in a state to establish laws and ordinances for the regulation and enforcement of its police as above defined. The power vested in the legislature to make, ordain, and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable laws, statutes, and ordinances, either with penalties or without, not repugnant to the constitution, as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of the commonwealth, and of the subjects of the same. Corn. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 85. An authority conferred by the American constitutional system upon the individual states, through which they are enabled to establish a special department of police; adopt such regulations as tend to prevent the commission of fraud, violence, or other offenses against the state; aid in the arrest of criminals; and secure generally the comfort, health, and prosperity of the state, by preserving the public order, preventing a conflict of rights in the common intercourse of the citizens, and insuring to each an uninterrupted enjoyment of all the privileges conferred upon him by the laws of his country. Lalor, Pol. Enc. s. v.

That inherent and plenary power in state over persons and property which enables the people to prohibit all things inimical to comfort, safety, health, and welfare of society. Drysdale v. Prudden, 195 N.C. 722, 143 S.E. 530, 536.

It is true that the legislation which secures to all protection in their rights, and the equal use and enjoyment of their property, embraces an almost infinite variety of subjects. Whatever affects the peace, good order, morals, and health of the community comes within its scope; and every one must use and enjoy his property subject to the restrictions which such legislation imposes. What is termed the "police power" of the state, which, from the language often used respecting it, one would suppose to be an undefined and irresponsible element in government, can only interfere with the conduct of individuals in their intercourse with each other, and in the use of their property, so far as may be required to secure these objects. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 145, 24 L.Ed. 77. For other definitions, see Slaughterhouse Cases, 16 Wall. 62, 21 L.Ed. 394; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 818, 25 L.Ed. 1079; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140, 62 Am.Dec. 625; People v. Steele, 231 Ill. 340, 83 N.E. 236, 14 L.R.A.,N.S., 361, 121 Am.St.Rep. 321; In re Clark, 65 Conn. 17, 31 A. 522, 28 L.R.A. 242; Mathews v. Board of Education, 127 Mich. 530, 86 N.W. 1036, 54 L.R.A. 736; In re Main, 162 Okl. 65, 19 P.2d 153, 156.

POLICE REGULATIONS. Laws of a state, or ordinances of a municipality, which have for their object the preservation and protection of public peace and good order, and of the health, morals, and security of the people. Ex parte Bourgeois, 60 Miss. 663, 45 Am.Rep. 420; Sonora v. Curtin, 137 Cal. 583, 70 P. 674; Roanoke Gas Co. v. Roanoke, 88 Va. 810, 14 S.E. 665.

POLICE SUPERVISION. In England, subjection to police supervision is where a criminal offender is subjected to the obligation of notifying the place of his residence and every change of his residence to the chief officer of police of the district, and of reporting himself once a month to the chief oficer or his substitute. Offenders subject to police supervision are popularly called "habitual criminals." Sweet.

POLICIES OF INSURANCE, COURT OF. A court established in pursuance of the statutes 43 Eliz. c. 12, and 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 23. Composed of the judge of the admiralty, the recorder of London, two doctors of the civil law, two common lawyers, and eight merchants; any three of whom, one being a civilian or a barrister, could determine in a summary way causes concerning policies of assurance in London, with an appeal to chancery. No longer in existence. 3 Bl.Comm. 74.

POLICY. The general principles by which a government is guided in its management of public affairs, or the legislature in its measures.

This term, as applied to a law, ordinance, or rule of law, denotes its general purpose or tendency considered as directed to the welfare or prosperity of the state or community.

In gaming. A species of "lottery" whereby the chance is determined by numbers; "numbers game" also being a lottery. People v. Hines, 258 App.Div. 466, 17 N.Y.S.2d 141, 142.

Policy of a statute, or legislature. As applied to a penal or prohibitive statute, means -the intention of discouraging conduct of a mischievous tendency. See L.R. 6 P.C. 134; 5 Barn. & Ald. 335; Pol. Cont. 235.

Policy of the law. By this phrase is understood the disposition of the law to discountenance certain classes of acts, transactions, or agreements, or to refuse them its sanction, because it considers them immoral, detrimental to the public welfare, subversive of good order, or otherwise contrary to the plan and purpose of civil regulations.

Public policy. That principle of the law which holds that no subject can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public or against the public good. 4 H. L. Cas. 1; Greenh. Pub. Pol. 2. The principles under which the freedom of contract or private dealings is restricted by law for the good of the community. Wharton. The term "policy," as applied to a statute, regulation, rule of law, course of action, or the like, refers to its probable effect, tendency, or object, considered with reference to the social or political well-being of the state. Thus, certain classes of acts are said to be "against public policy," when the law refuses to enforce or recognize them, on the ground that they have a mischievous tendency, so as to be injurious to the interests of the state, apart from illegality or immorality. Sweet Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H.L.Cas. 235; Smith v. Railroad Co., 115 Cal. 584, 47 P. 582. Workmen's Compensation Board of Kentucky v. Abbott, 212 Ky. 123, 278 S.W. 533, 536, 47 A.L.R. 789; Driver v. Smith, 89 N.J.Eq. 339, 104 A. 717, 725; Nashville Ry. & Light Co. v. Lawson, 144 Tenn. 78, 229 S.W. 741, 743; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Coates, 112 Tex. 267, 246 S.W. 356, 359;

People v. Herrin, 284 Ill. 368, 120 N.E. 274, 275; Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Moore, D. C.Or., 3 F.2d 652, 653.

"Public policy" is the community common sense and common conscience extended and applied throughout the state to matters of public morals, public health, public safety, public welfare, and the like; it is that general and well-settled public opinion relating to man's plain, palpable duty to his fellow men having due regard to all the circumstances of each particular relation and situation. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Kinney, 95 Ohio St. 64, 115 N.E. 505, 506, L.R.A.1917D, 641, Ann.Cas.1918B, 286. Public policy properly cognizable by courts is that derived or derivable by clear implication from its Constitution, statutes, and judicial decisions. Brown v. American Ry. Express Co., 128 S.C. 428, 123 S.E. 97, 98; In re Ralin's Estate, 316 Mo. 492, 291 S. W. 120, 122, 51 A.L.R. 877; Hogston v. Bell, 185 Ind. 536, 112 N.E. 883, 886; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hamburger, 174 Mich. 254, 140 N.W. 510, 512. "Public policy is a variable quantity; it must and does vary with the habits, capacities, and opportunities of the public." 36 Ch. Div. 359; Chaffee v. Farmers' Co-op. Elevator Co., 39 N. D. 585, 168 N.W. 616, 618.

POLICY OF INSURANCE. A mercantile instrument in writing, by which one party, in consideration of a premium, engages to indemnify another against a contingent loss, by making him a payment in compensation, whenever the event shall happen by which the loss is to accrue. 2 Steph. Comm. 172. Contract whereby insurer, in return for premiums, engages, on happening of designated event, to pay certain sum as provided. In re O'Neill's Estate, 143 Misc. 733, 255 N.Y.S. 767, 771.

The written instrument in which a contract of insurance is set forth, Civ. Code Cal. § 2586.

Blanket policy. A policy of fire insurance which contemplates that the risk is shifting, fluctuating, or varying, and is applied to a class of property rather than to any particular article or thing. Insurance Co. v. Baltimore Warehouse Co., 93 U.S. 541, 23 L.Ed. 868; Insurance Co. v. Landau, 62 N.J.Eq. 73, 49 A. 738.

The term "specific" as applied in insurance phraseology is frequently used in contrast with "blanket insurance" and denotes coverage of a particular piece of property or property at a specific location, as contrasted with blanket insurance which covers the same and other property in several different locations. Davis Yarn Co. v. Brooklyn Yarn Dye Co., 293 N.Y. 236, 56 N.E.2d 564, 571.

Class of life insurance policies. Those policies issued in the same calendar year, upon the lives of persons of the same age, and on the same plan of insurance. Miller v. New York Life Ins. Co., 179 Ky. 246, 200 S.W. 482, 484.

Endowment policy. In life insurance. A policy the amount of which is payable to the assured himself at the end of a fixed term of years, if he is then living, or to his heirs or a named beneficiary if he shall die sooner.

Floating policy. A policy of fire insurance not applicable to any specific described goods, but to any and all goods which may at the time of the fire be in a certain building.

Interest policy. One where the assured has a real, substantial, and assignable interest in the thing insured; as opposed to a wager policy.

Mixed policy. A policy of marine insurance in which not only the time is specified for which the risk is limited, but the voyage also is described by its local termini; as opposed to policies of insurance for a particular voyage, without any limits as to time, and also to purely time policies, in which there is no designation of local termini at all. .1V1ozley & Whitley. And see Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio, 340, 27 Am.Rep. 455.

Open policy. One in which the value of the subject insured is not fixed or agreed upon in the policy as between the assured and the underwriter, but is left to be estimated in case of loss. The term is opposed to "valued policy," in which the value of the subject insured is fixed for the purpose of the insurance, and expressed on the face of the policy. Mozley & Whitley. Riggs v. Fire Protection Ass'n, 61 S.C. 448, 39 S.E. 614; Cox v. Insurance Co., 3 Rich. Law, 331, 45 Am.Dec. 771; Insurance Co. v. Butler, 38 Ohio St. 128. But this term is also sometimes used in America to describe a policy in which an aggregate amount is expressed in the body of the policy, and the specific amounts and subjects are to be indorsed from time to time. London Assur. Corp. v. Paterson, 106 Ga. 538, 32 S.E. 650.

Paid-up policy. In life insurance. A policy on which no further payments are to be made in the way of annual premiums.

Policy loan. An advancement on life policy without a personal obligation on the part of the policy holder as to repayment. Board of Assessors of the Parish of Orleans v. New York Life Ins. Co., 30 S.Ct. 385, 216 U.S. 517, 54 L.Ed. 597.

Time policy. In fire insurance, one made for a defined and limited time, as, one year. In marine insurance, one made for a particular period of time, irrespective of the voyage or voyages upon which the vessel may be engaged during that period. Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio St. 339, 27 Am.Rep. 455; Greenleaf v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 37 Mo. 29.

Valued policy. One in which the value of the thing insured is settled by agreement between the parties and inserted in the policy. Riggs v. Insurance Co., 61 S.C. 448, 39 S.E. 614; Luce v. Insurance Co., 15 Fed.Cas. 1071.

A capitation tax; a tax of a specific sum levied upon each person within the jurisdiction of the taxing power and within a certain class (as, all males of a certain age, etc.) without reference to his property or lack of it. Southern Ry. Co. v. St. Clair County, 124 Ala. 491, 27 So. 23; Short v. State, 80 Md. 392, 31 A. 322, 29 L.R.A. 404; Marion Foundry Co. v. Landes, 112 Ohio St. 166, 147 N.E. 302, 304. Breedlove v. Suttles, Ga., 58 S.Ct. 205, 207, 302 U.S. 277, 82 L.Ed. 252.

POLLARDS. A foreign coin of base metal, prohibited by St. 27 Edw. I. c. 3, from being brought into the realm, on pain of forfeiture of life and goods. 4 Bl.Comm. 98. It was computed at two pollards for a sterling or penny. Dyer, 82b.

POLLENGERS. Trees which have been lopped; distinguished from timber-trees. Plowd. 649.

POLLICITATION. In the civil law. An offer not yet accepted by the person to whom it is made. Langd. Cont. § 1. See McCulloch v. Eagle Ins. Co., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 283.

POLLIGAR, POLYGAR. In Hindu law. The head of a village or district; also a military chieftain in the peninsula, answering to a hill zemindar in the northern circars. Wharton.

POLLING THE JURY. A practice whereby the jurors are asked individually whether they assented, and still assent, to the verdict. To poll a jury is to call the names of the persons who compose a jury and require each juror to declare what his verdict is before it is recorded. Silak v. Hudson & M. R. Co., 114 N.J.L. 428, 176 A. 674, 675.

POLLS. The place where electors cast in their votes. Adams v. Corwin, 118 Misc. 701, 195 N.Y.S. 41, 42.

Heads; individuals; persons singly considered. A challenge to the polls (in capita) is a challenge to the individual jurors composing the panel, or an exception to one or more particular jurors. 3 Bl.Comm. 358, 361.

POLLUTE. To corrupt or defile. Young v. State, 194 Ind. 221, 141 N.E. 309, 311.

POMACE WINE. Any product made by the addition of water and sugar to the pomace of grapes from which the juice has been partially expressed, and by fermenting the mixture until a fermented beverage is produced. United States v. Sixty Barrels of Wine, D.C.Mo., 225 F. 846, 848.

POLYANDRY. The civil condition of having more husbands than one to the same woman; a social order permitting plurality of husbands.

POLYGAMIA EST PLURIUM SIMUL VIRORUM UXORUMVE CO-NNUBIUM. 3 Inst. 88. Polygamy is the marriage with many husbands or wives at one time.

POLYGAMY. In criminal law. The offense of having several wives or husbands at the same time, or more than one wife or husband at the same time. 3 Inst. 88. And see Reynolds v. U. S., 98 U.S. 145, 25 L.Ed. 244; McBride v. Graeber, 16 Ga.App. 240, 85 S.E. 86, 89.

The offense committed by a layman in marrying while any previous wife is living and undivorced; as distinguished from bigamy in the sense of a breach of ecclesiastical law involved in any second marriage by a clerk.

Polygamy, or bigamy, shall consist in knowingly having a plurality of husbands or wives at the same time. Code Ga.1882, § 4530 (Pen.Code 1910, § 367).

A bigamist or polygamist is a man who, having contracted a bigamous or polygamous marriage, and become the husband at one time, of two or more wives, maintains that relation and status at the time when he offers to be registered as a voter (8 U.S.C.A. § 136); and this without reference to the question whether he was at any time guilty of the offense of bigamy or polygamy, or whether any prosecution for such offense was barred by the lapse of time; neither is it necessary that he should be guilty of polygamy under the first section of the act of March 22, 1882. Murphy v. Ramsey, 5 S.Ct. 747, 114 U.S. 16, 29 L.Ed. 47; Cannon v. U. S., 6 S.Ct. 278, 116 U.S. 55, 29 L.Ed. 561.

Bigamy literally means a second marriage distinguished from a third or other; while polygamy means many marriages,—implies more than two.

POLYGARCHY. A term sometimes used to denote a government of many or several; a government where the sovereignty is shared by several persons; a collegiate or divided executive.

POMARIUM. In old pleading. An apple tree; an orchard.

POND. A body of stagnant water without an outlet, larger than a puddle and smaller than a lake; or a like body of water with a small outlet. Webster. Rockland Water Co. v. Camden & R. Water Co., 80 Me. 544, 15 A. 785, 1 L.R.A. 388; Concord Mfg. Co. v. Robertson, 66 N.H. 1, 25 A. 718, 18 L.R.A. 679; Munn v. Board of Sup'rs of Greene County, 161 Iowa 26, 141 N.W. 711, 714; Humphreys-Mexia Co. v. Arseneaux, 116 Tex. 603, 297 S.W. 225, 229, 53 A.L.R. 1147.

A standing ditch cast by labor of man's hand, in his private grounds, for his private use, to serve his house and household with necessary waters; but a pool is a low plat of ground by nature, and is not cast by man's hand. Call.Sew. 103.

Great ponds. In Maine and Massachusetts, natural ponds having a superficial area of more than ten acres, and not appropriated by the proprietors to their private use prior to a certain date. Barrows v. McDermott, 73 Me. 441; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen (Mass.) 158.

Public pond. In New England, a great pond; a pond covering a superficial area of more than ten acres. Brastow v. Rockport Ice Co., 77 Me. 100; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen (Mass.) 170.

Private pond. A body of water wholly on the lands of a single owner, or of a single group of joint owners or tenants in common, which did not have any such connection with any public waters that fish could pass from one to the other. If pond was so connected with public waters that at time of high water, fish could go in and out, it was not "private pond" from which defendants could seine fish whether fish might go out same day or next season. State v. Lowder, 198 Ind. 234, 153 N.E. 399, 400.

PONDERANTUR TESTES, NON NUMERANTUR. Witnesses are weighed, not counted. 1 Starkie, Ev. 554; Best, Ev. p. 426, § 389; Bakeman v. Rose, 14 Wend. (N.Y.) 105, 109.

PONDUS. In old English law. Poundage; e., a duty paid to the crown according to the weight of merchandise, PONDUS REGIS. The king's weight; the standard weight appointed by the king. Cowell.

PONE. In English practice. An original writ formerly used for the purpose of removing suits from the court-baron or county court into the superior courts of common law. It was also the proper writ to remov6 all suits which were before the sheriff by writ of justices. But this writ is now in disuse, the writ of certiorari being the ordinary process by which at the present day a cause is removed from a county court into any superior court. Brown.

PONE PER VADIUM. In English practice. An obsolete writ to the sheriff to summon the defendant to appear and answer the plaintiff's suit, on his putting in sureties to prosecute. It was so called from the words of the writ, "pone per vadium et salvos plegios," "put by gage and safe pledges, A. B., the defendant."

PONENDIS IN ASSISIS. An old writ directing a sheriff to impanel a jury for an assize or real action.

PONENDUM IN BALLIUM. A writ commanding that a prisoner be bailed in cases bailable. Reg. Orig. 133.

PONENDUM SIGILLUM AD EXCEPTIONEM. A writ by which justices were required to put their seals to exceptions exhibited by a defendant against a plaintiff's evidence, verdict, or other proceedings, before them, according to the statute Westm. 2, (13 Edw. I. St. 1, c. 31).

PONERE. Lat. To put, place, lay, or set. Often used in the Latin terms and phrases of the old law.

PONIT SE SUPER PATRIAM. Lat. He puts himself upon the country. The defendant's plea of not guilty in a criminal action is recorded, in English practice, in these words, or in the abbreviated form "po. se."

PONTAGE. In old English law. Duty paid for the reparation of bridges; also a due to the lord of the fee for persons or merchandises that pass over rivers, bridges, etc. Cowell.

PONTIBUS REPARANDIS. An old writ directed to the sheriff, commanding him to charge one or more to repair a bridge.

POOL. A combination of persons or corporations engaged in the same business, or for the purpose of engaging in a particular business or commercial or speculative venture, where all contribute to a common fund, or place their holdings of a given stock or other security in the hands and control of a managing member or committee, with the object of eliminating competition as between the several members of the pool, or of establishing a monopoly or controlling prices or rates by the weight and power of their combined capital, or of raising or depressing prices on the stock market, or simply with a view to the successful conduct of an enterprise too great for the capital of any member individually, and on an agreement for the division of profits or losses among the members, either equally or pro rata. Also, a similar combination not embracing the idea of a pooled or contributed capital, but simply the elimination of destructive competition between the members by an agreement to share or divide the profits of a given business or venture, as, for example, a contract between two or more competing railroads to abstain from "rate wars" and (usually) to maintain fixed rates, and to divide their earnings from the transportation of freight in fixed proportions. Green v. Higham, 161 Mo. 333, 61 S.W. 798; Mollyneaux v. Wittenberg, 39 Neb. 547, 58 N.W. 205; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 195, 26 L.Ed. 377; American Biscuit Co. v. Klotz, C.C.La., 44 F. 725; U. S. v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 7 C.C.A. 15, 58 F. 65, 24 L.R.A. 73; Georgia Fruit Exchange v. Turnipseed, 9 Ala. App. 123, 62 So. 542, 546.

In various methods of gambling, a "pool" is a sum of money made up of the stakes contributed by various persons, the whole of which is then wagered as a stake on the event of a race, game, or other contest, and the winnings (if any) are divided among the contributors to the pool pro rata. Or it is a sum similarly made up by the contributions of several persons, each of whom then makes his guess or prediction as to the event of a future contest or hazard, the successful better taking the entire pool. Ex parte Powell, 43 Tex.Cr.R. 391, 66 S.W. 298; Com. v. Ferry, 146 Mass. 203, 15 N.E. 484; Lacey v. Palmer, 93 Va. 159, 24 S.E. 930, 31 L.R.A. 822, 57 Am.St.Rep. 795; People v. McCue, 87 App.Div. 72, 83 N.Y.S. 1088; Commonwealth v. Sullivan, 218 Mass. 281, 105 N.E. 895, Ann.Cas.1916B, 98.

A body of standing water, without a current or issue, accumulated in a natural basin or depression in the earth, and not artificially formed. Stephens v. State, 81 Tex.Cr.R. 177, 194 S.W. 400, 401. See Pond.

POOLING CONTRACTS. Agreements between competing railways for a division of the traffic, or for a pro rata distribution of their earnings united into a "pool" or common fund. 15 Fed. 667, note. See Pool.

POOLROOM. A room in which pools on races are sold. In another sense, a room where the game of pool is played. Town of Eros v. Powell, 137 La. 342, 68 So. 632, 634.

POOR. As used in law, this term denotes those who are so destitute of property or of the means of support, either from their own labor or the care of relatives, as to be a public charge, that is, dependent either on the charity of the general public or on maintenance at the expense of the public. The term is synonymous with "indigent persons" and "paupers." State v. Osawkee Tp., 14 Kan. 421, 19 Am.Rep. 99; In re Hoffen's Estate, 70 Wis. 522, 36 N.W. 407; Polk County v. Owen, 187 Iowa 220, 174 N.W. 99, 107.

POOR DEBTOR'S OATH. An oath allowed, in some jurisdictions, to a person who is arrested for debt. On swearing that he has not property enough to pay the debt, he is set at liberty.

POOR LAW. That part of the law which relates to the public or compulsory relief of paupers.

POOR RATE. In English law. A tax levied by parochial authorities for the relief of the poor.

POOR-LAW BOARD. The English official body appointed under St. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 109, passed in 1847, to take the place of the poor-law commissioners, under whose control the general management of the poor, and the funds for their relief throughout the country, had been for some years previously administered. The poor-law board is now superseded by the local government board, which was established in 1871 by St. 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70. 3 Steph.Comm. 49.

POOR-LAW GUARDIANS. See Guardians of the Poor.

POP SHOTS. The explosion of light charges of dynamite to break up large fragments of rock. Brede v. Minnesota Crushed Stone Co., 146 Minn. 406, 178 N.W. 820, 821.

POPE. The bishop of Rome, and supreme head of the Roman Catholic Church. 4 Steph.Comm. (7th Ed.) 168-185.

POPE NICHOLAS' TAXATION. The first fruits (primitice or annates) were the first year's profits of all the spiritual preferments in the kingdom according to a rate made by Walter, bishop of Norwich, in the time of Pope Innocent II., and afterwards advanced in value in the time of Pope Nicholas IV. This last valuation was begun A. D. 1288, and finished 1292, and is still preserved in the exchequer. The taxes were regulated by it till the survey made in the twenty-sixth year of Henry VIII. 2 Steph.Comm. 567.

POPERY. The religion of the Roman Catholic Church, comprehending doctrines and practices.

POPULACE, or POPULACY. The vulgar; the multitude.

POPULAR ACTION. An action for a statutory penalty or forfeiture, given to any such person or persons as will sue for it; an action given to the people in general. 3 Bl.Comm. 161.

POPULAR SENSE. In reference to the construction of a statute, this term means that sense which people conversant with the subject-matter with which the statute is dealing would attribute to it. 1 Exch.Div. 248; Westerlund v. Black Bear Mining Co., C.C.A.Colo., 203 F. 599, 605.

POPULISCITUM. Lat. In Roman law. A law enacted by the people; a law passed by an assembly of the Roman people, in the comitia centuriata, on the motion of a senator; differing from a plebiscitum, in that the latter was always proposed by one of the tribunes.

POPULUS. Lat. In Roman law. The people; the whole body of Roman citizens, including as well the patricians as the plebeians.

PORNOGRAPHIC. That which is of or pertaining to obscene literature; obscene; licentious. People on Complaint of Savery v. Gotham Book Mart, 158 Misc. 240, 285 N.Y.S. 563, 567.

PORRECTING. Producing for examination or taxation, as porrecting a bill of costs, by a proctor.

PORT. A place for the lading and unlading of the cargoes of vessels, and the collection of duties or customs upon imports and exports. A place, either on the seacoast or on a river, where ships stop for the purpose of loading and unloading, from whence they depart, and where they finish their voyages. Devato v. Barrels of Plumbago, D.C.N.Y., 20 F. 515; Petrel Guano Co. v. Jarnette, C.C.N.C., 45 F. 675.

While Rev.St. §1 4178, 4334 (46 U.S.C.A. 47, 287), declare that the word "port" may mean the place where a vessel is built, or where one or more of the owners reside, a "port," in ordinary significance, is a place where strips are accustomed to load and unload goods, or to take on and let off passengers, and where persons and merchandise are allowed to pass into and out of the realm, and implies that it is something more than a roadstead; therefore a place on the high seas, fixed by latitude and longitude, where vessels were to be met and provisioned and coaled, is not a port. Hamburg-American Steam Packet Co. v. United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 747, 759.

French Maritime Law

Burden, (of a vessel;) size and capacity.

General

Foreign port. One exclusively within the jurisdiction of a foreign nation, hence one without the United States. Bigley v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co., D.C.N.Y., 105 F. 74. But the term is also applied to a port in any state other than the state where the vessel belongs or her owner resides. The Canada, D.C.Or., 7 F. 124; The Lulu, 10 Wall. 200, 19 L.Ed. 906; Negus v. Simpson, 99 Mass. 393.

Trafikaktiebolaget Grangesbert Okelosund, C.C.A., 10 F.2d 129, 131; The Vigo, D.C. N.Y., 257 F. 586, 587; Dampskibs Aktieselskabet Jeanette Skinner v. Munson S. S. Line, C.C.A. N.Y., 20 F.2d 345, 347; Christianssand Shipping Co. v. Marshall, D.C.Pa., 22 F.2d 192, 194.

Port-greve. The chief magistrate of a sea-port town is sometimes so called.

Port of delivery. In maritime law. The port which is to be the terminus of any particular voyage, and where the vessel is to unlade or deliver her cargo, as distinguished from any port at which she may touch, during the voyage, for other purposes. The Two Catharines, 24 Fed. Cas. 429.

Port of departure. As used in the United States statutes requiring a ship to procure a bill of health from the consular officer at the place of departure, is not the last port at which the ship stops while bound for the United States, but the port from which she cleared. The Dago, 10 C.C.A. 224, 61 F. 986.

Port of destination. In maritime law and marine insurance, the term includes both ports which constitute the termini of the voyage, the home port and the foreign port to which the vessel is consigned as well as any usual stopping places for the receipt or discharge of cargo. Gookin v. New England Mut. Marine Ins. Co., 12 Gray, Mass., 501, 74 Am.Dec. 609.

Port of discharge, in a policy of marine insurance, means the place where the substantial part of the cargo is discharged, although there is an intent to complete the discharge at another basin. Bramhall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 510, 6 Am.Rep. 261.

Port of entry. One of the ports designated by law, at which a custom-house or revenue office is established for the execution of the laws imposing duties on vessels and importations of goods. Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164, 14 L.Ed. 889.

Port-reeve, or port-warden. An officer maintained in some ports to oversee the administration of the local regulations; a sort of harbor-master.

Port-risk. In marine insurance. A risk upon a vessel while lying in port, and before she has taken her departure upon another voyage. Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 71 N.Y. 459.

Port toll. The toll paid for bringing goods into a port.

PORTEOUS. In old Scotch practice. A roll or catalogue containing the names of indicted persons, delivered by the justice-clerk to the coroner, to be attached and arrested by him. Otherwise called the "Porteous Roll." Bell.

PORTER. In old English law, this title was given to an officer of the courts who carried a rod or staff before the justices.

A person who keeps a gate or door; as the door-keeper of the houses of parliament.

One who carries or conveys parcels, luggage, etc., particularly from one place to another in the same town.

PORTERAGE. A kind of duty formerly paid at the English custom-house to those who attended the water-side, and belonged to the package-office; but it is now abolished. Also the charge made for sending parcels.

PORTIO LEGITIMA. Lat. In the civil law. The birthright portion; that portion of an inheritance to which a given heir is entitled, and of which he cannot be deprived by the will of the decedent, without special cause, by virtue merely of his relationship to the testator.

PORTION. The share falling to a child from a parent's estate or the estate of any one bearing a similar relation. Lewis's Appeal, 108 Pa. 136; In re Miller's Will, 2 Lea, Tenn., 57; Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 857. An allotted part; a share, a parcel; a division in a distribution; a share of an estate or the like, received by gift or inheritance. Lecompte v. Davis' Ex'r, 285 Ky. 433, 148 S.W.2d 292, 295.

Portion is especially applied to payments made to younger children out of the funds comprised in their parents' marriage settlement, and in pursuance of the trusts thereof. Mozley & Whiteley.

PORTION DISPONIBLE. Fr. In French law. That part of a man's estate which he may bequeath to other persons than his natural heirs. A parent leaving one legitimate child may dispose of one-half only of his property; one leaving two, one-third only; and one leaving three or more, one-fourth only; and it matters not whether the disposition is inter vivos or by will.

PORTIONER.

Old English law. A minister who serves a benefice, together with others; so called because he has only a portion of the tithes or profits of the living; also an allowance which a vicar commonly has out of a rectory or impropriation. Cowell.

Scotch law. The proprietor of a small feu or portion of land. Bell.

PORTIONIBUS. Is properly employed to mean a portion of the tithes of one parish claimed by the rector of another parish. 4 CL & F. 1.

PORTIONIST. One who receives a portion; the allottee of a portion. One of two or more incumbents of the same ecclesiastical benefice.

PORTMEN. The burgesses of Ipswich and of the Cinque Ports were so called.

PORTMOTE. In old English law. A court held in ports or haven towns, and sometimes in inland towns also. Cowell; Blount.

PORTORIA. In the civil law. Duties paid in ports on merchandise. Taxes levied in old times at city gates. Tolls for passing over bridges.

PORTSALE. In old English law. An auction; a public sale of goods to the highest bidder; also a sale of fish as soon as it is brought into the haven. Cowell.

PORTSOKA, or PORTSOKEN. The suburbs of a city, or any place within its jurisdiction. Somner; Cowell.

PORTUS EST LOCUS IN QUO EXPORTANTUR IMPORTANTUR MERCES. 2 Inst. 148. A port is a place where goods are exported or imported.

POSITIVE. Laid down, enacted, or prescribed. Express or affirmative. Direct, absolute, explicit.

As to positive "Condition," "Fraud," "Proof," and "Servitude," see those titles.

POSITIVE EVIDENCE. Direct proof of the fact or point in issue; evidence which, if believed, establishes the truth or falsehood of a fact in issue, and does not arise from any presumption. It is distinguished from circumstantial evidence. 3 Bouv. Inst. no. 3057; Cooper v. Holmes, 71 Md. 20, 17 A. 711; Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush., Mass., 310, 52 Am.Dec. 711.

POSITIVE LAW. Law actually and specifically enacted or adopted by proper authority for the government of an organized jural society.

"A 'law,' in the sense in which that term is employed in jurisprudence, is enforced by a sovereign political authority. It is thus distinguished not only from all rules which, like the principles of morality and the so-called laws of honor and of fashion, are enforced by an indeterminate authority, but also from all rules enforced by a determinate authority which is either, on the one hand, superhuman, or, on the other hand, politically subordinate. In order to emphasize the fact that 'laws,' in the strict sense of the term, are thus authoritatively imposed, they are described as positive laws." Holl.Jur. 37.

POSITIVE WRONG. A wrongful act, wilfully committed. Padgett v. Missouri Motor Distributing Corporation, Mo., 177 S.W.2d 490, 492.

POSITIVI JURIS. Lat. Of positive law, "That was a rule positivi juris; I do not mean to say an unjust one." Lord Ellenborough, 12 East, 639.

POSITO UNO OPPOSITORUM, NEGATUR ALTERUM. One of two opposite positions being affirmed, the other is denied. 3 Rolle, 422.

POSSE. Lat. A possibility. A thing is said to be in posse when it may possibly be; in esse when it actually is. Guidry v. Caire, 181 La. 895, 160 So. 622.

POSSE COMITATUS. Lat. The power or force of the county. The entire population of a county above the age of fifteen, which a sheriff may summon to his assistance in certain cases; as to aid him in keeping the peace, in pursuing and arresting felons, etc. 1 Bl.Comm. 343; Com. v, Martin, 7 Pa.Dist.R. 224.

POSSESS. To occupy in person; to have in one's actual and physical control; to have the exclusive detention and control of; to have and hold as property; to have a just right to; to be master of; to own or be entitled to. Fuller v. Fuller, 84 Me. 475, 24 A. 946; Bingham's Adm'r v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 318, 244 S.W. 781, 785; Davis v. State, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 546, 278 S.W. 848, 849; Ex parte Okahara, 191 Cal. 353, 216 P. 614, 617; Melvin v. Scowley, 213 Ala. 414, 104 So. 817, 820; Nevin v. Louisville Trust Co., 258 Ky. 187, 79 S.W. 2d 688, 689.

POSSESSED. This word is applied to the right and enjoyment of a termor, or a person having a term, who is said to be possessed, and not seised. Bac.Tr. 335; Poph. 76; Dyer, 369.

"Possessed" is a variable term in the law, and has different meanings as it is used in different circumstances. It sometimes implies a temporary interest in lands; as we say a man is possessed, in contradistinction to being seised. It sometimes implies the corporal having; as we say a man is seised and possessed. But it sometimes implies no more than that one has a property in a thing; that he has it as owner; that it is his. Thompson v. Moran, 44 Mich. 603, 7 N.W. 180; In re Dillingham's Estate, 196 Cal. 525, 238 P. 367, 369; O'Connor v. Halpin, 166 Iowa, 101, 147 N.W. 185, 186; United States Trust Co. v. Gulick, 179 N.Y.S. 769, 771, 107 Misc. 316; Thomson v. Fidelity Trust Co., 268 Pa. 203, 110 A. 770, 773.

POSSESSIO. Lat.

Civil Law

That condition of fact under which one can exercise his power over a corporeal thing at his pleasure, to the exclusion of all others. This condition of fact is called "detention," and it forms the substance of possession in all its varieties. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 238.

"Possession," in the sense of "detention," is the actual exercise of such a power as the owner has a right to exercise. The term "possessio" occurs in the Roman jurists in various senses. There is possessio simply, and possessio civilis, and possessio naturalis. Possessio denoted, originally, bare detention. But this detention, under certain conditions, becomes a legal state, inasmuch as it leads to ownership, through usucapio. Accordingly, the word "possessio," which required no qualification so long as there was no other notion attached to possessio, requires such qualification when detention becomes a legal state. This detention, then, when it has the conditions necessary to usucapio, is called "possessio civilis;" and all other possessio as opposed to civilis is naturalis. Sandars, Just.Inst. 274. Wharton.

Old English law. Possession; seisin. The detention of a corporeal thing by means of a physical act and mental intent, aided by some support of right. Bract. fol. 38b.

General

Pedis possessio. A foothold; an actual possession of real property, implying either actual occupancy or enclosure and use. Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 690; Porter v. Kennedy, 1 McMul., S.C., 357.

Possessio bona fide. Possession in good faith. Possessio mala fide, possession in bad faith. A possessor bona fide is one who believes that no other person has a better right to the possession than himself. A possessor mala fide is one who knows that he is not entitled to the possession. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 243.

Possessio bonorum. In the civil law. The possession of goods. More commonly termed "bonorum possessio." (q. v.).

Possessio civilis. In Roman law. A legal possession, i. e., a possessing accompanied with the intention to be or to thereby become owner; and, as so understood, it was distinguished from "possessio naturalis," otherwise called "nuda detentio," which was a possessing without any such intention. Possessio civilis was the basis of usucapio or of longi temporis possessio, and was usually (but not necessarily) adverse possession. Brown.

Possessio fratris. The possession or seisin of a brother; that is, such possession of an estate by a brother as would entitle his sister of the whole blood to succeed him as heir, to the exclusion of a half-brother. Hence, derivatively, that doctrine of the older English law of descent which shut out the half-blood from the succession to estates; a doctrine which was abolished by the descent act, 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106. 1 Steph.Comm. 385; Broom, Max. 532.

Possessio longi temporis. See Usucapio.

Possessio naturalis. See Possessio Civilis.

POSSESSIO EST QUASI PEDIS POSITIO. Possession is, as it were, the position of the foot. 3 Co. 42.

POSSESSIO FRATRIS DE FEODO SIMPLICI FACIT SOROREM ESSE IUEREDEM. The brother's possession of an estate in fee-simple makes the sister to be heir. 3 Coke, 41; Broom, Max. 532.

POSSESSIO PACIFICA PER ANNOS 60 FACIT JUS. Peaceable possession for sixty years gives a right. Jenk. Cent. 26.

POSSESSION. The detention and control, or the manual or ideal custody, of anything which may be the subject of property, for one's use and enjoyment, either as owner as the proprietor of a qualified right in it, and either held personally or by another who exercises it in one's place and name. Act or state of possessing. That condition of facts under which one can exercise his power over a corporeal thing at his pleasure to the exclusion of all other persons. Starits v. Avery, 204 Iowa 401, 213 N.W. 769, 771; Schenk v. State, 106 Tex.Cr.R. 564, 293 S.W. 1101, 1102; State v. Compton, Mo.App., 297 S.W. 413, 414; Nevin v. Louisville Trust Co., 258 Ky. 187, 79 S.W.2d 688, 689.

In the older books, "possession" is sometimes used as the synonym of "seisin;" but, strictly speaking, they are entirely different terms. "The difference between possession and seisin is : Lessee for years is possessed, and yet the lessor is still seised; and therefore the terms of law are that of chattels a man is possessed, whereas in feoffments, gifts in tail, and leases for life he is described as 'seised.'" Noy. Max. 64.

"Possession" is used in some of the books in the sense of property. "A possession is an hereditament or chattel." Finch, Law, b. 2, c. 3.

Possession of liquor which is made unlawful is possession under some claim of right, control, or dominion, with knowledge of facts. Schwartz v. State, 192 Wis. 414, 212 N.W. 664, 665. Taking a drink of intoxicating liquor on invitation of owner thereof does not constitute criminal "possession." Colbaugh v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 15 F.2d 929, 931; State v. Williams, 117 Or. 238, 243 P. 563; Sizemore v. Commonwealth, 202 Ky. 273, 259 S.W. 337, 342; Brazeale v. State, 133 Miss. 171, 97 So. 525, 526; Harness v. State, 130 Miss. 673, 95 So. 64; State v. McAllister, 187 N.C. 400, 121 S.E. 739, 740; People v. Leslie, 239 Mich. 334, 214 N.W. 128.

Actual possession. Exists where the thing is in the immediate occupancy of the party. Simpson v. Blount, 14 N.C. 34; Field Furniture Co. v. Community Loan Co., 257 Ky. 825, 79 S.W.2d 211, 215.

Adverse possession. The actual, open, and notorious possession and enjoyment of real property, or of any estate lying in grant, continued for a certain length of time, held adversely and in denial and opposition to the title of another claimant, or under circumstances which indicate an assertion or color of right or title on the part of the person maintaining it, as against another person who is out of possession. Hall v. Lavat, 301 Mo. 675, 257 S.W. 108, 111; W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Richardson, Tex.Civ.App., 225 S.W. 816, 817; Baxter v. Girard Trust Co., 288 Pa. 256, 135 A. 620, 621, 49 A.L.R. 1011; Mendel v. Poland, 200 Mich. 571, 166 N.W. 910, 912.

Chose in possession. A thing (subject of personal property) in actual possession, as distinguished from a "chose in action," which is not presently in the owner's possession, but which he has a right to demand, receive, or recover by suit.

Civil possession. In modern civil law and in the law of Louisiana, that possession which exists when a person ceases to reside in a house or on the land which he occupied, or to detain the movable which he possessed, but without intending to abandon the possession. It is the detention of a thing by virtue of a just title and under the conviction of possessing as owner. Civ.Code La. art. 3429 et seq. A fiction resulting from the registry of the title of the original owner. Baldwin Lumber Co. v. Dalferes, 138 La. 507, 70 So. 493, 499; Maisonneuve v. Dalferes, 138 La. 527, 70 So. 500, 501.

Constructive possession. Possession not actual but assumed to exist, where one claims to hold by virtue of some title, without having the actual occupancy, as, where the owner of a tract of land, regularly laid out, is in possession of a part, he is constructively in possession of the whole. Fleming v. Maddox, 30 Iowa 241.

Corporeal possession. The continuing exercise of a claim to the exclusive use of a material thing. The elements of this possession are first, the mental attitude of the claimant, the intent to possess, to appropriate to oneself; and second, the effective realization of this attitude. All the authorities agree that an intent to exclude others must coexist with the external facts, and must be fulfilled in the external physical facts in order to constitute possession. State v. Wagoner, 123 Kan. 591, 256 P. 957, 958.

Derivative possession. The kind of possession of one who is in the lawful occupation or custody of the property, but not under a claim of title of his own, but under a right derived from another, as, for example, a tenant, bailee, licensee, etc.

Dispossession. The act of ousting or removing one from the possession of property previously held by him, which may be tortious and unlawful, as in the case of a forcible amotion, or in pursuance of law, as where a landlord "dispossesses" his tenant at the expiration of the term or for other cause by the aid of judicial process.

Estate in possession. An estate whereby a present interest passes to and resides in the tenant, not depending on any subsequent circumstance or contingency. 2 Bl.Comm. 163. An estate where the tenant is in actual pernancy, or receipt of the rents and other advantages arising therefrom. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 958, § 2322. Eberts v. Fisher, 44 Mich. 551, 7 N.W. 211; Sage v. Wheeler, 3 App.Div. 38, 37 N.Y.S. 1107.

Exclusive possession. See Exclusive Possession.

Hostile possession. This term, as applied to an occupant of real estate holding adversely, is not construed as implying actual enmity or ill will, but merely means that he claims to hold the possession in the character of an owner, and therefore denies all validity to claims set up by any and all other persons. Ballard v. Hansen, 33 Neb. 861, 51 N.W. 295; Mittet v. Hansen, 178 Wash. 541, 35 P.2d 93, 95.

Naked possession. The actual occupation of real estate, but without any apparent or colorable right to hold and continue such possession; spoken of as the lowest and most imperfect degree of title. 2 Bl.Comm. 195; Birdwell v. Burleson, 31 Tex.Civ.App. 31, 72 S.W. 446.

Natural possession. That by which a man detains a thing corporeally, as, by occupying a house, cultivating ground, or retaining a movable in possession; natural possession is also defined to be the corporeal detention of a thing which we possess as belonging to us, without any title to that possession or with a title which is void. Civ. Code La. arts. 3428, 3430. Railroad Co. v. Le Rosen, 52 La.Ann. 192, 26 So. 854.

Open possession. Possession of real property is said to be "open" when held without concealment or attempt at secrecy, or without being covered up in the name of a third person, or otherwise attempted to be withdrawn from sight, but in such a manner that any person interested can ascertain who is actually in possession by proper observation and inquiry. See Bass v. Pease, 79 Ill.App. 318

Peaceable possession. See Peaceable.

Pedal possession. In establishing title by adverse possession this means actual possession; that is, living upon or actually occupying the land, or placing improvements directly upon it. Schaeffer v. Williams, Tex., 208 S.W. 220, 224.

Possession money. In English law. The man whom the sheriff puts in possession of goods taken under a writ of fieri facias is entitled, while he continues so in possession, to a certain sum of money per diem, which is thence termed "possession money." The amount is 3s. 6d. per day if he is boarded, or 5s. per day if he is not boarded. Brown.

Possession, writ of. Where the judgment in an action of ejectment is for the delivery of the land claimed, or its possession, this writ is used to put the plaintiff in possession. It is in the nature of execution.

Quasi possession. Is to a right what possession is to a thing, it is the exercise or enjoyment of the right, not necessarily the continuous exercise, but such an exercise as shows an intention to exercise it at any time when desired. Sweet.

Scrambling possession. By this term is meant a struggle for possession on the land itself, not such a contest as is waged in the courts, or possession gained by an act of trespass, such as building a fence. Lobdell v. Keene, 85 Minn. 90, 88 N.W. 426.

Unity of possession. Joint possession of two rights by several titles, as where a lessee of land acquires the title in fee-simple, which extinguishes the lease. The term also describes one of the essential properties of a joint estate, each of the tenants having the entire possession as well of every parcel as of the whole. 2 Bl.Comm. 182.

Vacant possession. An estate which has been abandoned, vacated, or forsaken by the tenant. The abandonment must be complete in order to make the possession vacant, and, therefore, if the tenant have goods on the premises it will not be so considered. 2 Chitty, Bail. 177; 2 Stria. 1064.

POSSESSION IS A GOOD TITLE WHERE NO BETTER TITLE APPEARS. 20 Vin.Abr. 278.

POSSESSION IS NINE-TENTHS OF THE LAW. This adage is not to be taken as true to the full extent, so as to mean that the person in possession can only be ousted by one whose title is nine times better than his, but it places in a strong light the legal truth that every claimant must succeed by the strength of his own title, and not by the weakness of his antagonist's. Wharton.

POSSESSION VAUT TITRE. Fr. In English law, as in most systems of jurisprudence, the fact of possession raises a prima facie title or a presumption of the right of property in the thing possessed. In other words, the possession is as good as the title (about.) Brown.

POSSESSOR. One who possesses; one who has possession.

POSSESSOR BONA FIDE. He is a bona fide possessor who possesses as owner by virtue of an act sufficient in terms to transfer property, the defects of which he was ignorant of. He ceases to be a bona fide possessor from the moment these defects are made known to him, or are declared to him by a suit instituted for the recovery of the thing by the owner. Civ.Code La. art. 503.

POSSESSOR MALA FIDE. The possessor in bad faith is he who possesses as master, but who assumes this quality, when he well knows that he has no title to the thing, or that his title is vicious and defective. Civ.Code La. art. 3452.

POSSESSORY. Relating to possession; founded on possession; contemplating or claiming possession.

Possessory action. See next title.

Possessory claim. The title of a pre-emptor of public lands who has filed his declaratory statement but has not paid for the land. Enoch v. Spokane Falls & N. Ry. Co., 6 Wash. 393, 33 P. 966.

Possessory judgment. In Scotch practice. A judgment which entitles a person who has uninterruptedly been in possession for seven years to continue his possession until the question of right be decided in due course of law. Bell.

Possessory lien. A lien is possessory where the creditor has the right to hold possession of the specific property until satisfaction of the debt.

One which attaches to such articles of another's as may be at the time in the possession of the lienor, as, for example, an attorney's lien on the papers and documents of the client in his possession. Wood Sewing Mach. Co. v. Boutelle, 56 Vt. 570, 48 Am. Rep. 821.

POSSESSORY ACTION. An action which has for its immediate object to obtain or recover the actual possession of the subject-matter; as distinguished from an action which merely seeks to vindicate the plaintiff's title, or which involves the bare right only; the latter being called a "petitory" action.

An action founded on possession. Trespass for injuries to personal property is called a "possessory" action, because it lies only for a plaintiff who, at the moment of the injury complained of, was in actual or constructive, immediate, and exclusive possession. 1 Chit.Pl. 168, 169.

Admiralty practice. One which is brought to recover the possession of a vessel, had under a claim of title. The Tilton, 5 Mason, 465, Fed.Cas. No.14,054; 1 Kent, Comm. 371.

Louisiana. An action by which one claims to be maintained in the possession of an immovable property, or of a right upon or growing out of it, when he has been disturbed, or to be reinstated to that possession, when he has been divested or evicted. Code Prac.La. art. 6.

Old English law. A real action which had for its object the regaining possession of the freehold, of which the demandant or his ancestors had been unjustly deprived by the present tenant or possessor thereof.

Scotch law. An action for the vindication and recovery of the possession of heritable or movable goods; e. g., the action of molestation. Paters. Comp.

POSSIBILITAS. Lat. Possibility; a possibility. Possibilitas post dissolutionem executionis nunquam reviviscatur, a possibility will never be revived after the dissolution of its execution. 1 Rolle, 321. Post executionem status, lex non patitur possibilitatem, after the execution of an estate the law does not suffer a possibility. 3 Bulst. 108.

POSSIBILITY. An uncertain thing which may happen. A contingent interest in real or personal estate. Kinzie v. Winston, 14 Fed.Cas. 651; Bodenhamer v. Welch, 89 N.C. 78; Needles v. Needles, 7 Ohio St. 442, 70 Am.Dec. 85.

It is either near, (or ordinary,) as where an estate is limited to one after the death of another, or remote, (or extraordinary,) as where it is limited to a man, provided he marries a certain woman, and that she shall die and he shall marry another.

Bare possibility. The same as a "naked" possibility. See infra.

Naked possibility. A bare chance or expectation of acquiring a property or succeeding to an estate in the future, but without any present right in or to it which the law would recognize as an estate or interest. Rogers v. Felton, 98 Ky. 148, 32 S.W. 406.

Possibility coupled with an interest. An expectation recognized in law as an estate or interest, such as occurs in executory devises and shifting or springing uses: such a possibility may be sold or assigned.

Possibility of reverter. This term denotes no estate, but only a possibility to have the estate at a future time. Of such possibilities there are several kinds, of which two are usually denoted by the term under consideration, (1) the possibility that a common-law fee may return to the grantor by breach of a condition subject to which it was granted, (2) the possibility that a common-law fee other than a fee simple may revert to the grantor by the natural determination of the fee. Sorrels v. McNally, 89 Fla. 457, 105 So. 106, 109; Des Moines City Ry. Co. v. City of Des Moines, 183 Iowa, 1261, 159 N.W. 450, 452, L.R.A.1918D, 839; Trustees of Calvary Presbyterian Church of Buffalo v. Putnam, 221 App.Div. 502, 224 N.Y.S. 651, 654.

Possibility on a possibility. A remote possibility, as if a remainder be limited in particular to A.'s son John, or Edward, it is bad if he have no son of that name, for it is too remote a possibility that he should not only have a son, but a son of that particular name. 2 Coke, 51.

POSSIBLE. Capable of existing, happening, being, becoming or coming to pass; feasible, not contrary to nature of things; neither necessitated nor precluded; free to happen or not; contrasted with necessary and impossible. In another sense, the word denotes extreme improbability, without excluding the idea of feasibility. It is also sometimes equivalent to "practicable" or "reasonable," as in some cases where action is required to be taken "as soon as possible." Norris v. Elmdale Elevator Co., 216 Mich. 548, 185 N.W. 696, 698; Miller v. Southern Express Co., 99 S.C. 333, 83 S. E. 449, 451; National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Zirkovics, C.C.A.Mo., 251 F. 184, 189. Guidry v. Caire, 181 La. 895, 160 So. 622.

POST. Lat. After; occurring in a report or a text-book, is used to send the reader to a subsequent part of the book.

POST, n. A conveyance for letters or dispatches. The word is derived from "positi," the horses carrying the letters or dispatches being kept or placed at fixed stations. The word is also applied to the person who conveys the letters to the houses where he takes up and lays down his charge, and to the stages or distances between house and house. Hence the phrases, post-boy, post-horse, post-house, etc. Wharton.

A military establishment where a body of troops is permanently fixed. Caldwell's Case, 19 Wall. 268, 22 L.Ed. 114; a military post is synonymous with military station. U. S. v. Phisterer, 94 U.S. 219, 24 L.Ed. 116; Hines v. Mikell, C.C.A.S.C., 259 F. 28, 31.

A landmark. Cornelious v. State, 22 Ala.App. 150, 113 So. 475, 476; U. S. v. Sherman, C.C.A.S.D., 288 F. 497, 501.

POST, v. To bring to the notice or attention of the public by affixing to a post or wall, or putting up in some public place; to placard. City of Pittsburgh v. Pittsburgh Rys. Co., 259 Pa. 558, 103 A. 372, 373; Stanford v. State, 99 Tex.Cr.R. 111, 268 S.W. 161, 162; Iowa-Missouri Grain Co. v. Powers, 198 Iowa, 208, 196 N.W. 979, 980, 33 A.L.R. 1268.

POST-ACT. An after-act; an act done afterwards.

POST CONQUESTUM. After the Conquest. Words inserted in the king's title by King Edward I., and constantly used in the time of Edward III. Tomlins.

POST-DATE. To date an instrument as of a time later than that at which it is really made.

POST-DATED CHECK. One delivered prior to its date, generally payable at sight or on presentation on or after day of its date. It differs from an ordinary check by carrying on its face implied notice that there is no money presently on deposit available to meet it, but with implied assurance that such funds will exist when check becomes due. Lovell v. Eaton, 99 Vt. 255, 133 A. 742, 743; State v. Langer, 46 N.D. 462, 177 N.W. 408, 419.

POST DIEM. After the day; as, a plea of payment post diem, after the day when the money became due. Com.Dig. "Pleader," 2.

Old Practice. The return of a writ after the day assigned. A fee paid in such case. Cowell.

POST DISSEISIN. In English law. The name of a writ, which lies for him who, having recovered lands and tenements by force of a novel disseisin, is again disseised by a former disseisor. Jacob.

POST ENTRY. When goods are weighed or measured, and the merchant has got an account thereof at the custom-house, and finds his entry already made too small, he must make a post or additional entry for the surplusage, in the same manner as the first was done. As a merchant is always in time, prior to the clearing of the vessel, to make his post, he should take care not to overenter, to avoid as well the advance as the trouble of getting back the overplus. McCul.Dict.

POST EXCHANGE. A voluntary association of companies, detachments, or other army units at military posts, permitted by a special regulation of the War Department for the purpose of conducting for the benefit of the members of such units what is in effect a co-operative store and place of entertainment. Keane v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 272 F. 577, 578.

POST EXECUTIONEM STATUS LEX NON PATITUR POSSIBILITATEM. 3 Bulst. 108. After the execution of the estate the law suffers not a possibility.

POST FACTO. After the fact. See Ex Post Facto.

POST-FACTUM, or POSTFACTUM. An after-act; an act done afterwards; a post-act.

POST-FINE. In old conveyancing. A fine or sum of money, (otherwise called the "king's silver") formerly due on granting the licentia concordandi, or leave to agree, in levying a fine of lands. It amounted to three-twentieths of the supposed annual value of the land, or ten shillings for every five marks of land. 2 Bl.Comm. 350.

POST HAC. Lat. After this; after this time; hereafter.

POST LITEM MOTAM. Lat. After suit moved or commenced. Depositions in relation to the subject of a suit, made after litigation has commenced, are sometimes so termed. 1 Starkie, Ev. 319.

POST-MARK. A stamp or mark put on letters received at the post-office for transmission through the mails.

POST-MORTEM. After death. A term generally applied to an autopsy or examination of a dead body, to ascertain the cause of death, or to the inquisition for that purpose by the coroner. Wehle v. United States Mut. Acc. Ass'n, 11 Misc. Rep. 36, 31 N.Y.Supp. 865; Stephens v. People, 4 Parker Cr. R., N.Y., 475.

POST NATUS. Born afterwards. A term applied by old writers to a second or younger son. It is used in private international law to designate a person who was born after some historic event, (such as the American Revolution or the act of union between England and Scotland,) and whose rights or status will be governed or affected by the 'question of his birth before or after such event.

POST-NOTES. A species of bank-notes payable at a distant period, and not on demand.

They are a species of obligation resorted to by banks when the exchanges of the country, and especially of the banks, have become embarrassed by excessive speculations. Much concern is then felt for the country, and through the newspapers it is urged that post-notes be issued by the banks "for aiding domestic and foreign exchanges," as a "mode of relief," or a "remedy for the distress," and "to take the place of the southern and foreign exchanges." And so presently this is done. Post-notes are therefore intended to enter into the circulation of the country as a part of its medium of exchanges; the smaller ones for ordinary business, and the larger ones for heavier operations. They are intended to supply the place of demand notes, which the banks cannot afford to issue or reissue, to relieve the necessities of commerce or of the banks, or to avoid a compulsory suspension. They are under seal, or without seal, and at long or short dates, at more or less interest, or without interest, as the necessities of the bank may require. Appeal of Hogg, 22 Pa. 488.

POST-NUPTIAL. After marriage. Thus, an agreement entered into by a father after the marriage of his daughter, by which he engages to make a provision for her, would be termed a "post-nuptial agreement." Brown.

POST-NUPTIAL SETTLEMENT. A settlement made after marriage upon a wife or children; otherwise called a "voluntary" settlement. 2 Kent, Comm. 173.

POST-OBIT. (Lat.) An agreement by which the obligor borrows a certain sum of money and promises to pay a larger sum, exceeding the lawful rate of interest, upon the death of a person from whom he has some expectation, if the obligor be then living. Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 119; 6 Madd. 111; 5 Ves. 57; 19 Ves. 628.

POST OBIT BOND. A bond given by an expectant, to become due on the death of a person from whom he will have property. A bond or agreement given by a borrower of money, by which he undertakes to pay a larger sum, exceeding the legal rate of interest, on or after the death of a person from whom he has expectations, in case of surviving him. Crawford v. Russell, 62 Barb., N.Y., 92; Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 119.

POST-OFFICE. A bureau or department of government, or under governmental superintendence, whose office is to receive, transmit, and deliver letters, papers, and other mail-matter sent by post. Also the office established by government in any city or town for the local operations of the postal system, for the receipt and distribution of mail from other places, the forwarding of mail there deposited, the sale of postage stamps, etc.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT. The name of one of the departments of the executive branch of the government of the United States, which has charge of the transmission of the mails and the general postal business of the country.

POST-OFFICE ORDER. A letter of credit furnished by the government, at a small charge, to facilitate the transmission of money.

POST PROLEM SUSCITATAM. After issue born, (raised.) Co.Litt. 19b.

POST ROADS. The roads or highways, by land or sea, designated by law as the avenues over which the mails shall be transported. Railway Mail Service Cases, 13 Ct.C1. 204. A "post route,', on the other hand, is the appointed course or prescribed line of transportation of the mail. U. S. v. Kochersperger, 26 Fed.Cas. 803; Blackham v. Gresham, C.C.N.Y., 16 Fed. 611.

POST-TERMINAL SITTINGS. Sittings after-term. See Sittings.

POST TERMINUM. After term, or post-term. The return of a writ not only after the day assigned for its return, but after the term also, for which a fee was due. Cowell.

POST, WRIT OF ENTRY IN. In English law. An abolished writ given by statute of Marlbridge„ 52 Hen. III. c. 30, which provided that when the number of alienations or descents exceeded the usual degrees, a new writ should be allowed, without any mention of degrees at all.

POSTAGE. The fee charged by law for carrying letters, packets, and documents by the public mails.

POSTAGE STAMP. A ticket issued by govern: ment, to be attached to mail-matter, that repre: sents the postage or fee paid for the transmission of such matter through the public mails.

POSTAL. Relating to the mails; pertaining to the post-office.

POSTAL CURRENCY. During a brief period following soon after the commencement of the, civil war in the United States, when specie change. was scarce, postage stamps were popularly used as a substitute; and the first issues of paper representatives of parts of a dollar, issued by authority of congress, were called "postal currency.", This issue was soon merged in others of a more permanent character, for which the later and more appropriate name is "fractional currency." Abbott.

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITORIES. The act of congress of June 25, 1910, c. 386, 36 Stat. 814 (39 U.S.C.A. § 751 et seq.), created a board of trustees (the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury, and the attorney general) to establish such depositories. Deposits may be made by any person of ten years or over, in his or her name, or by a married woman in her own name and free from her husband's control. Deposits may be made of $1 or multiples thereof, and any person may purchase for 10 cents "postal savings stamps" and attach them to a card furnished for the purpose, and a card with ten stamps affixed will be accepted as a deposit of $1, or may be redeemed in cash. Interest at the rate of 2 per cent. a year is paid, but not on fractions of a dollar. No balance shall exceed $2,500.

Deposits may be withdrawn, in whole or in part, on demand. A depositor may surrender his deposit in sums of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100, and multiples of $100 and of $500, and receive United States bonds of corresponding denominations, bearing interest at 21/2 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after one year, and payable in gold at the end of twenty years.

By 39 U.S.C.A. § 766, "the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of the deposits."

POSTAL UNION. A treaty made at Berne in October, 1874, for the regulation of rates of postage and other matters connected with the post-office between England and various other countries. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. 22; 1 Hall.Int.L. 286. Several international conferences have since been held on the subject: Paris, 1878; Lisbon, 1885; Vienna, 1891; Washington, 1897; Rome, 1906.

POSTEA. In the common-law practice, a formal statement, indorsed on the nisi pries record, which gives an account of the proceedings at the trial of the action. Smith, Act. 167.

POSTED WATERS. In Vermont. Waters flowing through or lying upon inclosed or cultivated lands, which are preserved for the exclusive use of the owner or occupant by his posting notices (according to the statute) prohibiting all persons from shooting, trapping, or fishing thereon, under a prescribed penalty. See State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 617, 41 A. 1030, 43 L.R.A. 290, 67 Am.St.Rep. 695.

POSTERIORA DEROGANT PRIORIBUS. Posterior things derogate from things prior. 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 90.

POSTERIORES. Lat. This term was used by the Romans to denote the descendants in a direct line beyond the sixth degree.

POSTERIORITY. This is a word of comparison and relation in tenure, the correlative of which is the word "priority." Thus, a man who held lands or tenements of two lords was said to hold of his more ancient lord by priority, and of his less ancient lord by posteriority. Old Nat.Brev. 94. It has also a general application in law consistent with its etymological meaning, and, as so used, it is likewise opposed to priority. Brown.

POSTERITY. All the descendants of a person in a direct line to the remotest generation. Breckinridge v. Denny, 8 Bush (Ky.) 527.

POSTHUMOUS CHILD. One borne after the death of its father; or, when the Caesarean operation is performed, after that of the mother.

Quasi-posthumous child. In civil law. One who, born during the life of his grandfather or other male ascendant, was not his heir at the time he made his testament, but who by the death of his father became his heir in his lifetime. Inst. 2, 13, 2; Dig. 28, 3, 13.

POSTHUMUS PRO NATO HABETUR. A posthumous child is considered as though born, [at the parent's death.] Hall v. Hancock, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 258, 26 Am.Dec. 598.

POSTHUMOUS WORK. Work on which original copyright has been taken out by someone to whom literary property passed before publication. Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. v. Bryan, C.C.A.N.Y., 123 F.2d 697, 699.

POSTLIMINIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A doctrine or fiction of the law by which the restoration of a person to any status or right formerly possessed by him was considered as relating back to the time of his original loss or deprivation; particularly in the case of one who, having been taken prisoner in war, and having escaped and returned to Rome, was regarded, by the aid of this fiction, as having never been abroad, and was thereby reinstated in all his rights. Inst. 1, 12, 5.

The term is also applied, in international law, to the recapture of property taken by an enemy, and its consequent restoration to its original owner.

POSTLIMINIUM FINGIT EUM QUI CAPTOS EST IN CIVITATE SEMPER FUISSE. Postliminy feigns that he who has been captured has never left the state. Inst. 1, 12, 5; Dig. 49, 51.

POSTLIMINY. See Postliminium.

POSTMAN. A senior barrister in the court of exchequer, who has precedence in motions, so called from the place where he sits. 2 Bl.Comm. 28. A letter-carrier.

POSTMASTER. An officer of the United States, appointed to take charge of a local post-office and transact the business of receiving and forwarding the mails at that point, and such other business as is committed to him under the postal laws.

POSTMASTER GENERAL. The head of the post-office department. He is one of the president's cabinet.

POSTNATI. Those born after. See Post Natus.

POSTPONE. To put off; defer; delay; continue: adjourn; as when a hearing is postponed. Also to place after; to set below something else; as when an earlier lien is for some reason postponed to a later lien.

The word "postpone" carries with it the idea of deferring the doing of something or the taking effect of something until a future or later time. Gartner v. Roth, Cal., 157 P.2d 361, 363.

The word "postponement," in speaking of legal proceedings, is nearly equivalent to "continuance;" except that the former word is generally preferred when describing an adjournment of the cause to another day during the term, and the latter when the case goes over to another term. State v. Underwood, 76 Mo. 639; State v. Nathaniel, 52 La. Ann. 558, 26 So. 1008.

POSTREMO-GENITURE. Borough-English (q. v.).

POSTULATIO. Lat. Old English ecclesiastical law. A species of petition for transfer of a bishop.

Roman law. A request or petition. This was the name of the first step in a criminal prosecution, corresponding somewhat to "swearing out a warrant" in modern criminal law. The accuser appeared before the praetor, and stated his desire to institute criminal proceedings against a designated person, and prayed the authority of the magistrate therefor.

POSTULATIO ACTION'S. In Roman law. The demand of an action; the request made to the prietor by an actor or plaintiff for an action or formula of suit; corresponding with the application for a writ in old English practice. Or, as otherwise explained, the actor's asking of leave to institute his action, on appearance of the parties before the praetor. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 12.

POTABLE. Suitable for drinking; drinkable. State v. Mairs, Mo.App., 272 S.W. 992, 995; Huddleston v. State, 103 Tex.Cr.R. 108, 280 S.W. 218.

POT-DE-VIN. In French law. A sum of money frequently paid, at the moment of entering into a contract, beyond the price agreed upon. It differs from arrha, in this: that it is no part of the price of the thing sold, and that the person who has received it cannot, by returning double the amount, or the other party by losing what he has paid, rescind the contract. 18 Toullier, no. 52.

POTENTATE. A person who possesses great power or sway; a prince, sovereign, or monarch.

By the naturalization law of the United States, an alien is required to renounce all allegiance to any foreign "prince, potentate, or sovereign whatever."

POTENTIA. Lat. Possibility; power.

POTENTIA PROPINQUA. Common possibility. See Possibility.

POTENTIA DEBET SEQUI JUSTITIAM, NON ANTECEDERE. 3 Bulst. 199. Power ought to follow justice, not go before it.

POTENTIA EST DUPLEX, REMOTA ET PROPINQUA; ET POTENTIA REMOTISSIMA ET VANA EST QUIE NUNQUAM VENIT IN ACTUM. 11 Coke, 51. Possibility is of two kinds, remote and near; that which never comes into action is a power the most'remote and vain.

POTENTIA INUTILIS FRUSTRA EST. Useless power is to no purpose. Branch, Princ.

POTENTIA NON EST NISI AD BONUM. Power is not conferred but for the public good.

POTENTIAL. Existing in possibility but not in act; naturally and probably expected to come into existence at some future time, though not now existing; for example, the future product of grain or trees already planted, or the successive future installments or payments on a contract or engagement already made. Things having a "potential existence" may be the subject of mortgage, assignment, or sale. Campbell v. Grant Co., 36 Tex. Civ.App. 641, 82 S.W. 796; Dickey v. Waldo, 97 Mich. 255, 56 N.W. 608, 23 L.R.A 449; Long v. Hines, 40 Kan. 220, 19 P. 796, 10 Am.St.Rep. 192; Carter v. Rector, 88 Okl. 12, 210 P. 1035, 1037.

POTEST QUIS RENUNCIARE PRO SE ET SUIS JURI QUOD PRO SE INTRODUCTUM EST. Bract. 20. One may relinquish for himself and his heirs a right which was introduced for his own benefit.

POTESTAS. Lat. In the civil law. Power; authority; domination; empire. Imperium, or the jurisdiction of magistrates. The power of the father over his children, patria potestas. The authority of masters over their slaves. Inst. 1, 9, 12; Dig. 2, 1, 13, 1; Dig. 14, 1; Dig. 14, 4, 1, 4.

POTESTAS STRICTE INTERPRETATUR. A power is strictly interpreted. Jenk.Cent. p. 17, case 29, in marg.

POTESTAS SUPREMA SEIPSUM DISSOLVERE POTEST, LIGARE NON POTEST. Supreme power can dissolve [unloose] but cannot bind itself. Branch, Princ.; Bacon.

POTIOR EST CONDITIO DEFENDENTIS. Better is the condition of the defendant, [than that of the plaintiff.] Broom, Max. 740; Cowp. 343; Williams v. Ingell, 21 Pick., Mass., 289; White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick., Mass., 186, 187; Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 440, 9 Am.Rep. 45.

POTIOR EST CONDITIO POSSIDENTIS. Better is the condition of the possessor. Broom, Max. 215, n. 719; 6 Mass. 84; 21 Pick.,Mass., 140.

POTTS' FRACTURE. A fracture of the lower part of the fibula, accompanied with injury to the ankle joint, so that the foot is dislocated outward. Stockham v. Hall, 145 Kan. 291, 65 P.2d 348.

POTWALLOPER. A term formerly applied to voters in certain boroughs of England, where all who boil (wallop) a pot were entitled to vote. Webster.

POULTRY COUNTER. The name of a prison formerly existing in London. See Counter.

POUND. A place, inclosed by public authority, for the temporary detention of stray animals. Chenango County Humane Soc. v. Polmatier, 188 App.Div. 419, 177 N.Y.S. 101, 103.

A pound-overt is said to be one that is open overhead ; a pound-covert is one that is close, or covered over, such as a stable or other building.

"There is no more ancient institution in the country than the Village Pound. It is far older than the King's Bench, and probably older than the kingdom." Maine, Early Hist. of Inst., p. 263.

A measure of weight. The pound avoirdupois contains 7,000 grains; the pound troy 5,760 grains.

In New York, the unit or standard of weight from which all other weights shall be derived and ascertained, is declared to be the pound, of such magnitude that the weight of a cubic foot of distilled water, at its maximum density, weighed in a vacuum with brass weights, shall be equal to sixty-two and a half such pounds. 1 Rev.St.N.Y. p. 617, 8.

Name of a denomination of English money, containing twenty shillings. It was also used in the United States, in computing money, before the introduction of the federal coinage.

POUND BREACH. The act or offense of breaking a pound, for the purpose of taking out the cattle or goods impounded. 3 Bl.Comm. 12, 146; State v. Young, 18 N.H. 544.

POUND NET. A kind of fishing net also known as a "dutch" net and sometimes, formerly, as a "pod" net. N. Car. G. S. § 113-278; Hettrick v. Page, 82 N.C. 65; Rea v. Hampton, 7 S.E. 649, 101 N.C. 51, 9 Am.St.Rep. 21. It is a wall net with wings, and a leader, together with a pocket, bowl, pot, or pound, into which the fish are guided by the wings and the leader, which is an upright net extended in a straight line to the shore. The wings are in many cases a thousand yards in length. Cent. Dict.

POUND OF LAND. An uncertain quantity of land, said to be about fifty-two acres.

See Librata Terre.

POUNDAGE. Old English law. A subsidy to the value of twelve pence in the pound, granted to the king, of all manner of merchandise of every merchant, as well denizen as alien, either exported or imported. Cowell.

Practice. An allowance to the sheriff of so much in the pound upon the amount levied under an execution. Bowe v. Campbell, 2 Civ.Proc.R., N.Y., 234. The money which an owner of animals impounded must pay to obtain their release.

POUNDKEEPER. An officer charged with the care of a pound, and of animals confined there.

POUR ACQUIT. Fr. In French law. The formula which a creditor prefixes to his signature when he gives a receipt.

POUR APPUYER. For the support of, or "in the support of." Collins v. Collins, 193 So. 702, 703, 194 La. 446.

POUR APPUYER NOUVELLE DEMANDE. In support of his new action. Collins v. Collins, 194 La. 446, 193 So. 702, 703.

POUR COMPTE DE QUI IL APPARTIENT. Fr. For account of whom it may concern.

POUR FAIRE PROCLAIMER: L. Fr. An ancient writ addressed to the mayor or bailiff of a city or town, requiring him to make proclamation concerning nuisances, etc. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 176.

POUR SEISIR TERRES. L. Fr. An ancient writ whereby the crown seized the land which the wife of its deceased tenant, who held in capite, had for her dower, if she married without leave. It was grounded on the statute De Prcrrogativa Regis, 7 (17 Edw. II. St. 1, c. 4). It is abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24.

POURPARLER. Fr. In French law. The preliminary negotiations or bargainings which lead to a contract between the parties. As in English law, these form no part of the contract. when completed. The term is also used in this sense in international law and the practice of diplomacy.

POURPARTY. To make pourparty is to divide and sever the lands that fall to parceners, which, before partition, they held jointly and pro indiv*iso.* Cowell.

POURPRESTURE- An inclosure. Anything done to the nuisance or hurt of the public demesnes, or the highways, etc., by inclosure or building, endeavoring to make that private which ought to be public . The difference between a pour*presture* and a public nuisance is that pourpresture is an invasion of the jus privatum of the crown; but where the jus publicum is violated it is a nuisance. Skene makes three sorts of this offense: (1) Against the crown; (2) against the lord of the fee; (3) against a neighbor. 2 Inst. 38; 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 156.

POURSUIVANT. The king's messenger; a royal or state messenger. In the h,...alds' college, a functionary of lower rank than a herald, but discharging similar duties, called also "poursuivant at arms."

POURVEYANCE. In old English law. The providing corn, fuel, victuals, and other necessaries for the king's house. Cowell.

POURVEYOR, or PURVEYOR. A buyer; one who provided for the royal household.

POUSTIE. In Scotch law. Power. See Liege Poustie. A word formed from the Latin "potestas."

POVERTY AFFIDAVIT. An affidavit, made and filed by one of the parties to a suit, that he is not able to furnish security for the final costs. The use of the term is confined to a few states. Cole v. Hoeburg, 36 Kan. 263, 13 P. 275.

POWER. The right, ability, of faculty of doing something. Clifford v. Helvering, C.C.A.8, 105 F. 2d 586, 591. Authority to do any act which the grantor might himself lawfully perform. In re Morrison's Estate, 173 Misc. 503, 18 N.Y.S.2d 235, 241.

In a restricted sense a "power" is a liberty or authority reserved by, or limited to, a person to dispose of real or personal property, for his own benefit, or benefit of others, or enabling one person to dispose of interest which is vested in another. In re Vanatta's Estate, 99 N.J.Eq. 339, 131 A. 515, 518; Hupp v. Union Coal & Coke Co., 284 Pa. 529, 131 A. 364, 365; Security Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Ward, 10 Del.Ch. 408, 93 A. 385, 388.

Real property law. An authority to do some act in relation to real property, or to the creation or revocation of an estate therein, or a charge thereon, which the owner granting or reserving such power might himself perform for any purpose. Civ.Code Dak. § 298 (Comp.Laws N.D.1913, § 5383; Rev.Code S.D.1919, § 390) ; How.St.Mich. § 5591 (Comp.Laws 1929, § 12996).

"Power" is sometimes used in the same sense as "right," as when we speak of the powers of user and disposition which the owner of property has over it, but, strictly speaking, a power is that which creates a special or exceptional right, or enables a person to do something which he could not otherwise do. Sweet.

Technically, an authority by which one person enables another to do some act for him. 2 Lil. Abr. 339.

An authority enabling a person to dispose, through the medium of the statute of uses, of an interest, vested either in himself or in another person. Sugd. Powers, 82. An authority expressly reserved to a grantor, or expressly given to another, to be exercised over lands, etc., granted or conveyed at the time of the creation of such power. Watk.Conv. 157. A proviso, in a conveyance under the statute of uses, giving to the grantor or grantee, or a stranger, authority to revoke or alter by a subsequent act the estate first granted. 1 Steph.Comm. 505; Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N.H. 267, 13 Am.Rep. 23; Griffith v. Maxfield, 66 Ark. 513, 51 S.W. 832, Bouton v. Doty, 69 Conn. 531, 37 A. 1064; Law Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Jones, 103 Tenn. 245, 58 S.W. 219.

There is a clear distinction between a power and a trust, since "powers" are never imperative, but leave the act to be done at the will of the donee of the power, while "trusts" are always imperative, and are obligatory on the conscience of the trustee. People v. Kaiser, 306 Ill. 313, 137 N.E. 826, 828; Hirschmann v. Gantt, 136 S.C. 1, 134 S.E. 230, 231.

General

Appendant or appurtenant powers. Those existing where the donee of the power has an estate in the land and the power is to take effect wholly or in part out of that estate, and the estate created by its exercise affects the estate and interest of the donee of the power. Baker v. Wilmert, 288 Ill. 434, 123 N.E. 627, 629; Taylor v. Phillips, 147 Ga. 761, 95 S.E. 289.

Collateral powers. Those in which the donee of the power has no interest or estate in the land which is the subject of the power. Also called "naked powers." 2 Washb.R.P. 305; Baker v. Wilmert, 288 Ill. 434, 123 N.E. 627, 629.

Executive power. See Executive Power.

Exclusive power. See Exclusive Power.

General and special powers. A power is general when it authorizes the alienation in fee, by means of a conveyance, will, or charge, of the lands embraced in the power to any alienee whatsoever. It is special (1) when the persons or class of persons to whom the disposition of the lands under the power is to be made are designated, or (2) when the power authorizes the alienation, by means of a conveyance, will, or charge, of a particular estate or interest less than a fee. Coster v. Lorillard, 14 Wend. (N.Y.) 324; Thompson v. Garwood, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 305, 31 Am.Dec. 502.

General and special powers in trust. A general power is in trust when any person or class of persons other than the grantee of such power is designated as entitled to the proceeds or any portion of the proceeds or other benefits to result from the alienation. A special power is in trust (1) when the disposition or charge which it authorizes is limited to be made to any person or class of persons other than the holder of the power, or (2) when any person or class of persons other than the holder is designated as entitled to any benefit from the disposition or charge authorized by the power. Cutting v. Cutting, 20 Hun (N.Y.) 360; Dana v. Murray, 122 N.Y. 612, 26 N.E. 23; 60 Oki. St.Ann. §§ 191, 192.

Inherent powers. Those which are enjoyed by the possessors of natural right, without having been received from another. Such are the powers of a people to establish a form of government, of a father to control his children. Some of these are regulated and restricted in their exercise by law, but are not technically considered in the law as powers.

Ministerial powers. A phrase used in English conveyancing to denote powers given for the good, not of the donee himself exclusively, or of the donee himself necessarily at all, but for the good of several persons, including or not including the donee also. They are so called because the donee of them is as a minister or servant in his exercise of them. Brown.

Naked power. One which is simply collateral and without interest in the donee, which arises when, to a mere stranger, authority is given of disposing of an interest, in which he had not before, nor has by the instrument creating the power, any estate whatsoever. Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Caines Cas. (N.Y.) 15, 2 Am.Dec. 281; Hunt v. Ennis, 12 Fed.Cas. 915; Atzinger v. Berger, 151 Ky. 800, 152 S.W. 971, 972, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 622.

Power of revocation. A power which is to divest or abridge an, existing estate. Distinguished from those of appointment; but the distinction is of doubtful exactness, as every new appointment must divest or revoke a former use. Sanders, Uses 154.

Power of visitation. A power vested by the founder in an appointed visitor, or the trustees or governors of an institution, to regulate its internal affairs and to appoint professors, elect scholarships, officers, and the like. In re Norton, 97 Misc.Rep. 289, 161 N.Y.S. 710, 717.

Powers in gross. Those which give a donee of the power, who has an estate in the land, authority to create such estates only as will not attach on the interest limited to him or take effect out of his interest, but will take effect after donee's estate has terminated. Baker v. Wilmert, 288 Ill. 434, 123 N.E. 627; Taylor v. Phillips, 147 Ga. 761, 95 S.E. 289, 290.

Constitutional Law

The right to take action in respect to a particular subject-matter or class of matters, involving more or less of discretion, granted by the constitutions to the several departments or branches of the government, or reserved to the people. Powers in this sense are generally classified as legislative, executive, and judicial. See those titles.

Implied powers are such as are necessary to make available and carry into effect those powers which are expressly granted or conferred, and which must therefore be presumed to have been within the intention of the constitutional or legislative grant. First M. E. Church v. Dixon, 178 Ill. 260, 52 N.E. 887; In re Board of Com'rs of Cook County, 146 Minn. 103, 177 N.W. 1013, 1014; Skelly Oil Co. v. Pruitt & McCrory, 94 Okl. 232, 221 P. 709, 710; Citizens' Electric Illuminating Co. v. Lackawanna & W. V. Power Co., 255 Pa. 176, 99 A. 465, 467.

Law of Corporations

The right or capacity to act or be acted upon in a particular manner or in respect to a particular subject; as, the power to have a corporate seal, to sue and be sued, to make by-laws, to carry on a particular business or construct a given work. See Freligh v. Saugerties, 70 Hun, 589, 24 N.Y.S. 182; In re Lima & H. F. Ry. Co., 68 Hun, 252, 22 N.Y.S. 967.

For other compound terms, such as "Power of Appointment," "Power of Sale," etc., see the following titles.

POWER COUPLED WITH AN INTEREST. A right or power to do some act, together with an interest in the subject-matter on which the power is to be exercised. It is distinguished from a naked power, which is a mere authority to act, not accompanied by any interest of the donee in the subject-matter of the power. Arcweld Mfg. Co. v. Burney, 12 Wash.2d 212, 121 P.2d 350, 355.

Is it an interest in the subject on which the power is to be exercised, or is it an interest in that which is produced by the exercise of the power ? We hold it to be clear that the interest which can protect a power after the death of a person who creates it must be an interest in the thing itself. In other words, the power must be engrafted on an estate in the thing. The words themselves would seem to import this meaning. "A power coupled with an interest" is a power which accompanies or is connected with an interest. The power and the interest are united in the same person. But, if we are to understand by the word "interest" an interest in that which is to be produced by the exercise of the power, then they are never united. The power to produce the interest must be exercised, and by its exercise is extinguished. The power ceases when the interest commences, and therefore cannot, in accurate law language, be said to be "coupled" with it. And see Missouri v. Walker, 8 S.Ct. 929, 125 U.S. 339, 31 L.Ed. 769; Griffith v. Maxfield, 66 Ark. 513, 51 S.W. 832; Hunt v. Ennis, 12 Fed.Cas. 915; Chase Nat. Bank of New York v. Sayles, 11 F.2d 948, 957; Sphier v. Michael, 112 Or. 229, 229 P. 1100, 1101; Drake v. O'Brien, 99 W.Va. 582, 130 S.E. 276, 278.

POWER OF APPOINTMENT. A power or authority conferred by one person by deed or will upon another (called the "donee") to appoint, that is, to select and nominate, the person or persons who are to receive and enjoy an estate or an income therefrom or from a fund, after the testator's death, or the donee's death, or after the termination of an existing right or interest. Heinemann v. De Wolf, 25 R.I. 243, 55 A. 707; People v. Kaiser, 306 Ill. 313, 137 N.E. 826, 828.

The distinction between a "will" and a "power of appointment" is that a will concerns the estate of the testator, while an appointment under a power concerns that of the donor of the power. Thompson v. Pew, 214 Mass. 520, 102 N.E. 122, 125.

Powers are either : Collateral, which are given to strangers; i. e., to persons who have neither a present nor future estate or interest in the land. These are also called simply "collateral," or powers not coupled with an interest, or powers not being interests. Or they are powers relating to the land. These are called "appendant" or "appurtenant," because they strictly depend upon the estate limited to the person to whom they are given. Thus, where an estate for life is limited to a man, with a power to grant leases in possession, a lease granted under the power may operate wholly out of the life-estate of the party executing it, and must in every case have its operation out of his estate during his life. Such an estate must be created, which will attach on an interest actually vested in himself. Or they are called "in gross," if given to a person who had an interest in the estate at the execution of the deed creating the power, or to whom an estate is given by the deed, but which enabled him to create such estates only as will not attach on the interest limited to him. Of necessity, therefore, where a man seised in fee settles his estate on others, reserving to himself only a particular power, the power is in gross.

A power to a tenant for life to appoint the estate after his death among his children, a power to jointure a wife after his death, a power to raise a term of years to commence from his death, for securing younger children's portions, are all powers in gross. An important distinction is established between general and particular powers. By a general power we understand a right to appoint to whomsoever the donee pleases. By a particular power it is meant that the donee is restricted to some objects designated in the deed creating the power, as to his own children. Wharton.

A general power is beneficial when no person other than the grantee has, by the terms of its creation, any interest in its execution. A general power is in trust when any person or class of persons, other than the grantee of such power, is designated as entitled to the proceeds, or any portion of the proceeds, or other benefits to result from the alienation. Cutting v. Cutting, 20 Hun, N.Y., 364.

When a power of appointment among a class requires that each shall have a share, it is called a "distributive" or "non-exclusive" power ; when it authorizes, but does not direct, a selection of one or more to the exclusion of the others, it is called an "exclusive" power, and is also distributive; when it gives the power of appointing to a certain number of the class, but not to all, it is exclusive only, and not distributive. Leake, 389. A power authorizing the donee either to give the whole to one of a class or to give it equally among such of them as he may select (but not to give one a larger share than the others) is called a "mixed" power. Sugd.Powers, 448. Sweet.

POWER OF ATTORNEY. An instrument authorizing another to act as one's agent or attorney. A letter of attorney. Arcweld Mfg. Co. v. Burney, 12 Wash.2d 212, 121 P.2d 350, 354; Olive-Sternenberg Lumber Co. v. Gordon, Tex.Civ.App., 143 S.W.2d 694, 698. See Attorney.

POWER OF DISPOSITION. Every power of disposition is deemed absolute, by means of which the donee of such power is enabled in his life-time to dispose of the entire fee for his own benefit; and, where a general and beneficial power to devise the inheritance is given to a tenant for life or years, it is absolute, within the meaning of the statutes of some of the states. See Power of Appointment.

POWER OF SALE. A clause sometimes inserted in mortgages and deeds of trust, giving the mortgagee (or trustee) the right and power, on default in the payment of the debt secured, to advertise and sell the mortgaged property at public auction (but without resorting to a court for authority), satisfy the creditor out of the net proceeds, convey by deed to the purchaser, return the surplus, if any, to the mortgagor, and thereby divest the latter's estate entirely and without any subsequent right of redemption. Capron v. Attleborough Bank, 11 Gray (Mass.) 493; Appeal of Clark, 70 Conn. 195, 39 A. 155.

POYNDING. See Poinding.

POYNINGS' ACT. An act of parliament, made in Ireland, (10 Hen. VII. c. 22, A.D. 1495;) so called because Sir Edward Poynings was lieutenant there when it was made, whereby all general statutes before then made in England were declared of force in Ireland, which, before that time, they were not. 1 Broom & H.Comm. 112.

PRACTICABLE, PRACTICABLY. Practicable is that which may be done, practiced, or accomplished, that which is performable, feasible, possible; and the adverb practicably means in a practicable manner. Streeter v. Streeter, 43 Ill. 165; Lauck v. Reis, 310 Mo. 184, 274 S.W. 827, 832; Unverzagt v. Prestera, 339 Pa. 141, 13 A.2d 46, 48.

PRACTICAL. A practical construction of a constitution or statute is one determined not by judicial decision, but practice sanctioned by general consent. Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light, etc., Co., 36 Fla. 519, 18 So. 444, 29 L.R.A. 507, 51 Am.StRep. 44.

PRACTICE. Repeated or customary action; habitual performance; a succession of acts of similar kind; habit; custom; usage; application of science to the wants of men; the exercise of any profession. Marker v. Cleveland, 212 Mo.App. 467, 252 S.W. 95, 96; Columbia Life Ins. Co. v. Tousey, 152 Ky. 447, 153 S.W. 767, 768.

The form or mode or proceeding in courts of justice for the enforcement of rights or the redress of wrongs, as distinguished from the substantive law which gives the right or denounces the wrong. The form, manner, or order of instituting and conducting a suit or other judicial proceeding, through its successive stages to its end, in accordance with the rules and principles laid down by law or by the regulations and precedents of the courts. The term applies as well to the conduct of criminal actions as to civil suits, to proceedings in equity as well as at law, and to the defense as well as the prosecution of any proceeding. Wells Lamont Corp. v. Bowles, Em.App., 149 F.2d 364, 366.

Practice of a profession implies a continuing occupation, and a practitioner of veterinary science •is one who habitually held himself out to the public as such. Beaver Brook Resort Co. v. Stevens, 76 Colo. 133, 230 P. 121, 122.

It may include pleading, but is usually employed as excluding both pleading and evidence, and to designate all the incidental acts and steps in the course of bringing matters pleaded to trial and proof, and procuring and enforcing judgment on them.

Practice of law. Not limited to appearing in court, or advising and assisting in the conduct of litigation, but embracing the preparation of pleadings, and other papers incident to actions and special proceedings, conveyancing, the preparation of legal instruments of all kinds, and the giving of all legal advice to clients. State v. Chamberlain, 132 Wash. 520, 232 P. 337, 338. It embraces all advice to clients and all actions taken for them in matters connected with the law. Rhode Island Bar Ass'n v. Lesser, 68 R.I. 14, 26 A.2d 6, 7.

Practice of medicine. The discovery of the cause and nature of disease, and the administration of remedies, or the prescribing of treatment therefor. State v. Heffernan, 40 R.I. 121, 100 A. 55, 60. Statutes, regulating the "practice of medicine" and providing penalties for failure to comply therewith, include all who practice the art of healing, State v. Collins, 178 Iowa, 73, 159 N.W. 604, 607, and diagnosing, prescribing and treating ailments are constituent parts of "practice of medicine." People v. T. Wah Hing, 79 Cal.App. 286, 249 P. 229, 230.

PRACTICE COURT. In English law. A court attached to the court of king's bench, which heard and determined common matters of business and ordinary motions for writs of mandamus, prohihibition, etc. It was usually called the "bail court." It was held by one of the puisne justices of the king's bench.

PRAGMATIC SANCTION. In French law. A solemn ordinance or decree of a sovereign dealing with matters of primal importance and regarded as constituting a part of the fundamental law of the land. It originated in the .Byzantine Empire; in later European history it was especially used to designate an ordinance-of Charles VI, emperor of Germany, issued April, 1713, to settle the succession on his daughter, Maria Theresa. It was ratified by the Great Powers. On the death of the emperor, it was repudiated by Prussia, France and others, which led to the War of the Austrian Succession. Int. Encycl.

In the civil law. The answer given by the emperors on questions of law, when consulted by a corporation or the citizens of a province or of a municipality. Lec.El.Dr.Rom. § 53.

PRAGMATICA. In Spanish colonial law. An order emanating from the sovereign, and differing from a cedula only in form and in the mode of promulgation. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 93, note.

PRAIRIE. An extensive tract of level or rolling land, destitute of trees, covered with coarse grass, and usually characterized by a deep, fertile soil. Webster. Buxton v. Railroad Co., 58 Mo. 45; Brunell v. Hopkins, 42 Iowa, 429.

PRATIQUE. A license for the master of a ship to traffic in the ports of a given country, or with the inhabitants of a given port, upon the lifting of quarantine or production of a clean bill of health.

PRAXIS. Lat. Use; practice.

PRAXIS JUDICUM EST INTERPRES LEGUM. Hob. 96. The practice of the judges is the interpreter of the laws.

PRAY IN AID. In old English practice. To call upon for assistance. In real actions, the tenant might pray in aid or call for assistance of another, to help him to plead, because of the feebleness or imbecility of his own estate. 3 Bl.Comm. 300.

PRAYER. The request contained in a bill in equity that the court will grant the process, aid, or relief which the complainant desires. Also, by extension, the term is applied to that part of the bill which contains this request.

PRAYER OF PROCESS. A petition with which a bill in equity used to conclude, to the effect that a writ of subpoena might issue against the defendant to compel him to answer upon oath all the matters charged against him in the bill.

PREAMBLE. A clause at the beginning of a constitution or statute explanatory of the reasons for its enactment and the objects sought to be accomplished. Townsend v. State, 147 Ind. 624, 47 N.E. 19, 37 L.R.A. 294, 62 Am.St.Rep. 477; Fenner v. Luzerne County, 167 Pa. 632, 31 A. 862.

It is not essential part of act, and neither enlarges nor confers powers. Portland Van & Storage Co. v. Hoss, 139 Or. 434, 9 P.2d 122, 126, 81 A.L.R. 1136.

PREAPPOINTED EVIDENCE. The kind and degree of evidence prescribed in advance (as, by statute) as requisite for the proof of certain facts or the establishment of certain instruments. It is opposed to casual evidence, which is left to grow naturally out of the surrounding circumstances.

PREAUDIENCE. The right of being heard before another. A privilege belonging to the English bar, the members of which are entitled to be heard in their order, according to rank, beginning with the king's attorney general, and ending with barristers at large. 3 Steph.Comm. 387, note.

PREBEND. In English ecclesiastical law. A stipend granted in cathedral churches; also, but improperly, a prebendary. A simple prebend is merely a revenue; a prebend with dignity has some jurisdiction attached to it. The term "prebend" is generally confounded with "canonicate;" but there is a difference between them. The former is the stipend granted to an ecclesiastic in consideration of his officiating and serving in the church; whereas the canonicate is a mere title or spiritual quality which may exist independently of any stipend. 2 Steph.Comm. 674, note.

PREBENDARY. An ecclesiastical person serving on the staff of a cathedral, and receiving a stated allowance or stipend from the income or endowment of the cathedral, in compensation for his services.

PRECARIZE, or PRECES. Day-works which the tenants of certain manors were bound to give their lords in harvest time. Magna precaria was a great or general reaping day. Cowell.

PRECARIOUS. Liable to be returned or rendered up at the mere demand or request of another; hence held or retained only on sufferance or by permission; and by an extension of meaning, doubtful, uncertain, dangerous, very liable to break, fail, or terminate.

PRECARIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES. The circumstances of an executor are precarious, within the meaning and intent of a statute, only when his character and conduct present such evidence of improvidence or recklessness in the management of the trust-estate, or of his own, as in the opinion of prudent and discreet men endangers its security. Shields v. Shields, 60 Barb. (N.Y.) 56.

PRECARIOUS LOAN. A bailment by way of loan which is not to continue for any fixed time, but may be recalled at the mere will and pleasure of the lender.

PRECARIOUS POSSESSION. In modern civil law, possession is called "precarious" which one enjoys by the leave of another and during his pleasure. Civ.Code La. art. 3556, subd. 25.

PRECARIOUS RIGHT. The right which the owner of a thing transfers to another, to enjoy the same until it shall please the owner to revoke it.

PRECARIOUS TRADE. In international law. Such trade as may be carried on by a neutral between two belligerent powers by the mere sufferance of the latter.

PRECARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A convention whereby one allows another the use of a thing or the exercise of a right gratuitously till revocation. The bailee acquires thereby the lawful possession of the thing, except in certain cases. The bailor can redemand the thing at any time, even should he have allowed it to the bailee for a designated period. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 447.

PRECATORY. Having the nature of prayer, request, or entreaty; conveying or embodying a recommendation or advice or the expression of a wish, but not a positive command or direction. United States v. 15,883.55 Acres of Land in Spartanburg County, S. C., D.C.S.C., 40 F.Supp. 558, 561.

PRECATORY TRUST. A trust created by certain words, which are more like words of entreaty and permission than of command or certainty. Examples of such words, which the courts have held sufficient to constitute a trust, are "wish and request," "have fullest confidence," "heartily beseech," and the like. Rapalje & Lawrence. Keplinger v. Keplinger, 185 Ind. 81, 113 N.E. 292, 293; Simpson v. Corder, 185 Mo.App. 398, 170 S.W. 357, 358. Thomas v. Reynolds, 234 Ala. 212, 174 So. 753, 757.

PRECATORY WORDS. Words of entreaty, request, desire, wish, or recommendation, employed in wills, as distinguished from direct and imperative terms. 1 Williams, Ex'rs, 88, 89, and note; Pratt v. Miller, 23 Neb. 496, 37 N.W. 263; Wemme v. First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Portland, 110 Or. 179, 219 P. 618, 627.

PRECAUTION. Previous action; proven foresight; care previously employed to prevent mischief or to secure good result; or a measure taken beforehand; an active foresight designed to ward off possible evil or secure good results. Fegan v. Lykes Bros. S. S. Co., 198 La. 312, 3 So.2d 632, 635; Rincon v. Berg Co., Tex.Civ.App., 60 S. W.2d 811, 813.

PRECEDENCE, or PRECEDENCY. The act or state of going before; adjustment of place. The right of being first placed in a certain order.

PRECEDENCE, PATENT OF. In English law. A grant from the crown to such barristers as it thinks proper to honor with that mark of distinction, whereby they are entitled to such rank and preaudience as are assigned in their respective patents. 3 Steph.Comm. 274.

PRECEDENT. An adjudged case or decision of a court of justice, considered as furnishing an example or authority for an identical or similar case afterwards arising or a similar question of law.

It means that a principle of law actually presented to a court of authority for consideration and determination has, after due consideration, been declared to serve as a rule for future guidance in the same or analogous cases, but matters which merely lurk in the record and are not directly advanced or expressly decided are not precedents. Empire Square Realty Co. v. Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York, 43 N.Y.S.2d 470, 473, 181 Misc. 752; Kvos, Inc. v. Associated Press, 299 U.S. 269, 279, 57 S.Ct. 197, 81 L. Ed. 183.

A draught of a conveyance, settlement, will, pleading, bill, or other legal instrument, which is considered worthy to serve as a pattern for future instruments of the same nature.

PRECEDENT CONDITION. Such as must happen or be performed before an estate can vest or be enlarged. See Condition Precedent.

PRECEDENTS SUB SILENTIO. Silent uniform course of practice, uninterrupted though not supported by legal decisions. Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 226; Thompson v. Musser, 1 Dall. 464, 1 L. Ed. 222.

PRECEDENTS THAT PASS SUB SILENTIO ARE OF LITTLE OR NO AUTHORITY. 16 Vin. Abr. 499.

PRECEDING. Next before. Smith v. Gibson, 191 Ala. 305, 68 So. 143.

PRECEPARTIUM. The continuance of a suit by consent of both parties. Cowell.

PRECEPT. In English and American law. An order or direction, emanating from authority, to an officer or body of officers, commanding him or them to do some act within the scope of their powers. A commandment in writing, sent out by a justice of the peace or other like officer, for the bringing of a person or record before him. Cowell. The direction formerly issued by a sheriff to the proper returning officers of cities and boroughs within his jurisdiction for the election of members to'serve in parliament. 1 Bl.Comm. 178. The direction by the judges or commissioners of assize to the sheriff for the summoning a sufficient number of jurors. 3 Steph.Comm. 516. The direction issued by the clerk of the peace to the overseers of parishes for making out the jury lists. 3 Steph.Comm. 516, note.

Precept is not to be confined to civil proceedings, and is not of a more restricted meaning than "process." It includes warrants and processes in criminal as well as civil proceedings. Adams v. Vose, 1 Gray, Mass., 51, 58.

In old English criminal law. Instigation to commit a crime. Bract. fol. 138b; Cowell.
